The development of 13,860 homes during the Plan period is not sustainable. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on existing local communities by over-development, particularly for the villages between Guildford and the M25, including Ripley, Send and West Clandon. The services in these villages will be unable to cope with the level of development proposed. The proposed developments do not meet the needs of the local communities.

The strategic sites of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (A25) are in unsustainable locations. The former two sites do not benefit from railway stations within easy walking distance and bus services across rural villages are forever reducing. Residents will have few options, but to be reliant on motor vehicles. These sites are also unsuitable due to being unable to access sustainable transport. Furthermore, there are no plans to improve the infrastructure for Garlick's Arch in the Infrastructure Plan. Residents will be reliant on the car for transport. Greater consideration should be given to increasing the density of development in urban areas, such as Guildford, where more practical sustainable transport options can be provided.

The A3, M25 and the roads through the villages of Ripley, Send and Clandon already suffer from congestion. Further vehicle movements will result in even more acute congestion and greater pollution. Residents and the environment will suffer as a result.

I OBJECT to this Policy as the development proposed will not be sustainable (Policy S1)

The NPPF states that the presumption in favour of sustainable development “should be seen as a golden thread running through both plan-making and decision-taking.” As the first policy in the Plan, Policy S1 ought to set a clear framework. Instead, no definition of “sustainable development” is given. The policy also fails to set out any principles for applying sustainable development in practice to local planning decisions, which often have serious long-term impacts.

The policy states that it aims “to secure development that secures the economic, social and environmental conditions in the area”. This fails to recognize that economic growth, social justice and environmental protection often conflict. The policy does not say how each element is to be weighted or conflicts resolved. As a practical guide to the planning decision to be taken in the Plan period it is seriously deficient. The policy is likely to be used by developers to justify inappropriate developments on economic grounds. Under this policy, virtually any development will qualify as “sustainable”, in breach of the NPPF’s most important guideline.

Policy S1 is also seriously deficient in making no mention of the Green Belt. The Green Belt is a long term Government policy enshrined in primary legislation to protect green areas in perpetuity. The Green Belt is a living example of sustainable development in practice and is one of the most important factors affecting sustainable development in the area covered by the Plan and should be acknowledged in this policy. Policy S1 should include a commitment to protect the Green Belt from inappropriate development and to uphold Green Belt boundaries and protections. This would set at least one clear boundary to planning decisions. The Plan and the Council have treated the Green Belt as a developable land bank rather than as a constraint to development.

The commitment to approve planning applications “wherever possible” and “without delay” reveals the pro-development bias of the plan. Countervailing references to sustainability are so vague that the NPPF presumption in favour of sustainable development becomes a presumption in favour of any development at all.
This policy also ignores, as if they are inconvenient constraints, most of the 12 Core Planning Principles set out in NPPF paragraph 17.

The purpose of the planning system is to contribute to the achievement of sustainable development, as stated by National Planning Policy.

The development of 13,860 homes during the Plan period is not sustainable. The number of houses being proposed is absolutely disgusting. You are creating urban sprawl with no thought to the congestion that will be causes to the surrounding areas. The nearby M25 (have you seen the gridlock in the Heathrow direction daily?) and A3 are already badly congested as is the main road through Ripley. Increasing the number of cars so dramatically is actually downright dangerous and irresponsible. Having driven on the A3 in rush hour often, your plans are complete madness. Since nearly every household will be a 2 car household, this will add thousands of cars to our roads. The future generations deserve better - open spaces and less pollution.

Policy S1 gives no definition of “sustainable development”.
The promise “to secure development that secures the economic, social and environmental conditions in the area ”omits to recognise that economic growth, social justice and environmental protection often conflict. It does not say how each element is to be weighted or conflicts resolved. As a practical guide to the tough choices Councillors will face, it is useless. Under this policy, any development will qualify as “sustainable”, thereby failing to apply the NPPF’s most important guideline. The policy also fails to set out any principles for applying sustainable development in practice to local planning decisions, which often have serious long-term impacts.

There is a gap in Policy S1 with regard to Green Belt. As an inter-generational covenant (enshrined in primary legislation) to protect green areas in perpetuity, the Green Belt is a living example of sustainable development in practice. It is the envy of the world. Policy S1 should commit to uphold Green Belt boundaries and protections, setting at least one clear boundary to planning decisions. The plan’s contempt for Green Belt constraints is amply demonstrated in later policies.

The commitment to approve planning applications “wherever possible” and “without delay” reveals this draft plan’s pro-development bias. Countervailing references to sustainability are so vague that the NPPF presumption in favour of sustainable development becomes a presumption in favour of any development at all. This policy also ignores, as if they are inconvenient constraints, most of the Core Planning Principles set out in NPPF paragraph 17. In my view Policy S1 is a non-policy.

Policy S1 - Presumption in Favour of Sustainable Development

I object to GBC not using sustainable brownfield sites in Guildford town and all the villages in the borough, but the Greenbelt sites to create new towns of 2,000 houses. These sites are not sustainable, but will cause chaos to surrounding areas in terms of infrastructure, i.e. roads, parking, flooding.

1. I object to Policy S1 not offering sustainable development as regards roads and rail infrastructure which currently does not cope with demand, congestion on the A3 in particular, but also other A roads in the area such as the A247, the A246 and then there is the already overcrowded and slow train system for those currently living in the borough and needing to commute to London. No pre-emptive planning has been made to alleviate these real problems which will be much exacerbated by any large increases in housing.

I specifically want you to note the winding, narrow and dangerous route via the A247 through West Clandon which then drives people to use a short-cut the even narrower rural road, the Ripley Road, through East Clandon to and from the A3. This will be much exacerbated with the large increase in housing twinned with large increase in cars and travel.

1. Continuing with Policy S1 (Presumption in favour of Sustainable Development) I object that this is not being met and that GBC are contravening this when it is clear that no fixed plans are available to improve the provision of shops, medical facilities, schools in our immediate area (besides roads and rail already mentioned) to service us. If the GBC were serious about improving the infrastructure and sustainability of our communities, they would have secured plans and funding to ensure these facilities are available and not just at the behest and hoped-for goodwill from the developers. Further, how will developers be held accountable to their promises to build infrastructure? Stories are legion of developers reneging on commitments as the ‘money runs out’ even though vast profits will be made from turning agricultural and Green Belt land into highly valuable housing land.

1. I OBJECT to the local plan making East and West Horsley less sustainable. This is breach of para 7 and 9 NPPF and policy S1 of the proposed local plan. I object to this policy. The NPPF states that the presumption in favour of sustainable development “should be seen as a golden thread running through both Plan-making and decision-taking.” The policy calls for “development that secures the economic, social and environmental conditions in the area”.

As the first policy in the Plan, Policy S1 ought to set a clear framework. Instead there is no definition of “sustainable development” and no principles for balancing economic growth, social justice and environmental protection in practice to local Planning decisions are given. However, apparently, all excursions into the Green Belt constitute “sustainable development”. Policy S1 fails to recognize that economic growth, social justice and environmental protection often conflict. It is clear that economic growth has trumped the other considerations in breach of the NPPF’s requirements.

Policy S1 is seriously deficient in omitting any mention of the Green Belt. It should include a commitment to protect the Green Belt from inappropriate development and to uphold Green Belt boundaries and protections as required by the NPPF. This would set one clear boundary to Planning decisions. The Plan and the Council have treated the Green Belt as a developable land bank rather than as a constraint to development.

The commitment to approve Planning applications “wherever possible” and “without delay” seems to fly in the face of the NPPF presumption in favour of sustainable development and becomes a presumption in favour of any development at all. It also seems at odds with public statements from the Leader of the Council to the effect that including a site in the Plan does not mean that permission will be given for development.

The policy ignores the 12 Core Planning Principles set out in NPPF paragraph 17.

Strategy for location of development.

The destruction of the villages into which the existing inhabitants moved is wrong as it involves a complete change of the environment within which they live.

An increase in the size of Guildford makes a larger town, but does not alter the basic style of living of the people involved. This is a far more appropriate strategy for any development that the Borough needs to absorb.

The former two sites do not benefit from railway stations within easy walking distance and bus services across rural villages are forever reducing. Residents will have few options, but to be reliant on motor vehicles. These sites are just unsuitable due to being unable to access sustainable transport. Furthermore, there are no plans to improve the infrastructure for Garlick's Arch in the Infrastructure Plan. Residents will be reliant on the car for transport. Greater consideration should be given to increasing the density of development in urban areas, such as Guildford, where more practical sustainable transport options can be provided.

The A3, M25 and the roads through the villages of Ripley, Send and Clandon already suffer from congestion. Further vehicle movements will result in even more acute congestion and greater pollution. Residents and the environment will suffer as a result.
This representation and comments focus primarily on housing policies, including specialist housing. The plan contains strategic level policies and Policy S1 relates to the presumption in favour of sustainable development and is an overarching strategic policy compliant with the NPPF. It is welcomed that the Council will take a positive approach that reflects the presumption in favour of sustainable development. It is also supported that the Council will work proactively with applicants, jointly to find solutions that mean proposals can be approved wherever possible. This is a positive strategic policy within the local plan, reflecting national guidance, and it is noted in Paragraph 4.1.1 (of the Guildford Submission Local Plan) that “Local plans must plan positively to seek opportunities that meet the areas’ objectively assessed development needs and be flexible enough to adapt to rapid change”. Given the plan period of 20 years, the requirement for flexibility within planning policy to respond to changes is important and should be engrained throughout the plan.

I fear if these proposals are passed as is there will have a significant and negative impact which would lead to irrevocable damage. This is not about need but much more about greed and the council being blinded by the opportunity to increase income at the cost of all existing residents.

Policy S1: Presumption in Favour of Sustainable Development
The NRA support the presumption in favour of sustainable development and the commitment to work proactively with applicants to jointly find solutions that mean that proposals can be approved wherever possible; and to secure development that improves the economic, social and environmental conditions in the area. This approach being compliant with the National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF).
I was object to Policy S1 not offering sustainable development as regards roads and rail infrastructure which currently does not cope with demand, congestion on the A3 in particular, but also other A roads in the area such as the A247, the A246 and then there is the already overcrowded and slow train system for those already living in the borough and needing to commute to London. No pre-emptive planning has been made to alleviate these real problems which will be much exacerbated by large increases in housing.

I specifically want you to note the winding, narrow and dangerous route via the A247 through West Clandon which then drives people to use a cut-out with the even narrower rural road, the Ripley Road, through East Clandon to and from the A3. This will be much exacerbated with the large increase in housing twinned with large increase in cars and travel.

Continuing with Policy S1 (Presumption in favour of Sustainable Development) I object that this is not being met and that GBC are contravening this when it is clear that no fixed plans are available to improve the provision of shops, medical facilities, schools in our immediate area (besides roads and rail already mentioned) to service us. If the GBC were serious about improving the infrastructure and sustainability of our communities, they would have secured plans and funding to ensure these facilities are available and not just at the behest and hoped-for goodwill from the developers. Further, how will developers be held accountable to their promises to build infrastructure? Stories are legion of developers reneging on commitments as the ‘money runs out’ even though vast profits will be made from turning agricultural and Green Belt land into highly valuable housing land.

Strategic Policies: The strategic policies within the plan are sensible. Development must be sustainable and respect natural assets; it must also include some careful use of greenbelt land for the simple reason that there is not enough developable capacity in brownfield sites. Therefore support both Policy S1 "Sustainability" and Policy S2 "Housing number".

13,860 new houses proposed is not sustainable – it will damage local communities by over development, especially Ripley, Send and Clandon. The local communities don’t need these houses. Wisley Airfield (A35) and Garlick’s Arch (A43) have no railway stations and inadequate bus services, so almost every adult will have to have a car. The Plan has nothing to improve the infrastructure for Garlick's Arch.

The development should be in urban areas where there is sustainable transport.

The NPPF states that the presumption in favour of sustainable development “should be seen as a golden thread running through both plan-making and decision-taking.” Policy S1 ought to set a clear framework. No definition of “sustainable development” is given.

The policy also fails to set out any principles for applying sustainable development in practice to local planning decisions, which often have serious long-term impacts.

The promise “to secure development that secures the economic, social and environmental conditions in the area” omits to recognise that economic growth, social justice and environmental protection often conflict. It does not say how each element is to be weighted or conflicts resolved. As a practical guide to the tough choices Councillors will face, it is without value. Under this policy, any development will qualify as “sustainable”, thereby failing to apply the NPPF’s most important guideline.

The most gaping hole in Policy S1 is the Green Belt. As an inter-generational covenant (enshrined in primary legislation) to protect green areas in perpetuity, the Green Belt is a living example of sustainable development in practice. It is the envy of the world. Policy S1 should commit to uphold Green Belt boundaries and protections, setting at least one clear boundary to planning decisions. The plan’s contempt for Green Belt constraints is amply demonstrated in later policies.

The commitment to approve planning applications “wherever possible” and “without delay” reveals this draft plan’s pro-development bias. Countervailing references to sustainability are so vague that the NPPF presumption in favour of sustainable development becomes a presumption in favour of any development at all.

This policy also ignores, as if they are inconvenient constraints, most of the 12 Core Planning Principles set out in NPPF paragraph 17.3.

Whilst Gladman are in full agreement with the statement for the presumption in favour of sustainable development, we are concerned that the way the statement is expressed in policy S1 is simply a watering down of the policy as contained within paragraph 14 of the NPPF. We are unconvinced that a separate statement, beyond the NPPF is required, however if the Council wish to include the policy it should be as per the wording of the NPPF. At present therefore we do not consider the policy sound by virtue of it not being justified or consistent with the NPPF.

Zurich supports Policy S1 given it reflects the presumption in favour of sustainable development set out within the NPPF at paragraph 14.

Zurich particularly supports GBC’s commitment within Policy S1 to “…work proactively with applicants jointly to find solutions that mean proposals can be approved where possible, and to secure development that improves the economic, social and environmental conditions in the area”.

Gosden Hill and Blackwell Farm (both currently in the green belt) are called “urban extensions” surely a euphemism for urban sprawl? I OBJECT to this Policy as the development proposed will not be sustainable (Policy S1)

The NPPF states that the presumption in favour of sustainable development “should be seen as a golden thread running through both plan-making and decision-taking.” As the first policy in the Plan, Policy S1 ought to set a clear framework. Instead, no definition of “sustainable development” is given. The policy also fails to set out any principles for applying sustainable development in practice to local planning decisions, which often have serious long-term impacts.

The policy states that it aims “to secure development that secures the economic, social and environmental conditions in the area”. This fails to recognize that economic growth, social justice and environmental protection often conflict. The policy does not say how each element is to be weighted or conflicts resolved. As a practical guide to the planning decision to be taken in the Plan period it is seriously deficient. The policy is likely to be used by developers to justify inappropriate developments on economic grounds. Under this policy, virtually any development will qualify as “sustainable”, in breach of the NPPF’s most important guideline.

Policy S1 is also seriously deficient in making no mention of the Green Belt. The Green Belt is a long term Government policy enshrined in primary legislation to protect green areas in perpetuity. The Green Belt is a living example of sustainable development in practice and is one of the most important factors affecting sustainable development in the area covered by the Plan and should be acknowledged in this policy. Policy S1 should include a commitment to protect the Green Belt from inappropriate development and to uphold Green Belt boundaries and protections. This would set at least one clear boundary to planning decisions. The Plan and the Council have treated the Green Belt as a developable land bank rather than as a constraint to development.

The commitment to approve planning applications “wherever possible” and “without delay” reveals the pro-development bias of the plan. Countervailing references to sustainability are so vague that the NPPF presumption in favour of sustainable development becomes a presumption in favour of any development at all.

This policy also ignores, as if they are inconvenient constraints, most of the 12 Core Planning Principles set out in NPPF paragraph 17.

The purpose of the planning system is to contribute to the achievement of sustainable development, as stated by National Planning Policy.

The development of 13,860 homes during the Plan period is not sustainable. It will have a permanently detrimental impact existing local communities by over-development, particularly for the villages between Guildford and the M25, including Ripley, Send and West Clandon. The services in these villages will be unable to cope with the level of development proposed. The proposed developments do not meet the needs of the local communities.

The strategic sites of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (A25) are in unsustainable locations. The former two sites do not benefit from railway stations within easy walking distance and bus services across rural villages are forever reducing. Residents will have few options, but to be reliant on motor vehicles. These sites are also unsustainable due to being unable to access sustainable transport. Furthermore, there are no plans to improve the infrastructure for Garlick's Arch in the Infrastructure Plan. Residents will be reliant on the car for transport. Greater consideration should be given to increasing the density of development in urban areas, such as Guildford, where more practical sustainable transport options can be provided.

The A3, M25 and the roads through the villages of Ripley, Send and Clandon already suffer from congestion. Further vehicle movements will result in even more acute congestion and greater pollution. Residents and the environment will

GGG supports the change to paragraph 4.1.4 “Local Planning Authorities are encouraged to include a policy within their Local Plan that embraces the presumption in favour of sustainable development. Policy S1 meets this requirement and adopts the model wording suggested. When implementing Policy S1, local circumstances will be taken into account to respond to different opportunities for achieving sustainable development. In accordance with the NPPF, the presumption will not automatically apply to policies relating to sites protected under the Birds and Habitats Directives and/or designated as Sites of Special Scientific Interest (SSSIs), land designated as Green Belt, Local Green Space, the Surrey Hills Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty, designated heritage assets and locations identified as at risk of flooding.”

We are of the opinion in terms of clear policy that GBC have made a definitive statement to support the Green Belt. GGG is however disappointed that they have failed to put this policy into practice in forming this plan.

POLICY S1: PRESUMPTION IN FAVOUR OF SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT
Whilst the inclusion of Policy S1 relating to the presumption in favour of sustainable development within the Proposed Submission Local Plan is supported, the ability of this Policy to operate as intended is questionable. As these representations highlight, the Proposed Submission Local Plan seeks to designate land currently designated as Countryside Beyond the Green Belt as being within the Green Belt. Consistent with the text of paragraph 14 of the NPPF, criterion 3(b) of Policy S1 states that permission will be granted unless (inter alia) specific policies in the Framework indicate that development should be restricted. Footnote 9 of the NPPF provides sets out policies, including Green Belt, which restrict development.

If the whole of the Borough (other than settlements and allocations and a small area to the west of Ash and Tongham) is to be within the Green Belt then this severely restricts the opportunities to apply the presumption in favour of sustainable development. This is reinforced by paragraph 4.1.4 of the Proposed Submission Local Plan which states: “In accordance with the NPPF, the presumption will not automatically apply to policies relating to sites protected under the Birds and Habitats Directives and/or designated as Sites of Special Scientific Interest (SSSIs), land designated as Green Belt, Local Green Space, the Surrey Hills Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty, designated heritage assets and locations identified as at risk of flooding.” (Our emphasis)

1. Introduction and Background Information

1.1 PRP was formally appointed by Guildford Vision Group (GVG) in May 2017 to represent it in the submission of a detailed response to the regulation 19 consultation on the proposed submission Local Plan for Guildford Borough Council (GBC).

1.2 Guildford is a gap town and the focus of a number of particular problems. The town has confined road, rail and river corridors, topographical issues and a historic core, all of which add to the complexity of Guildford along with a major investment deficit in infrastructure.

1.3 GVG, which is comprised of people who have long resided in the borough, and who often have relevant professional expertise on planning matters, was established on 21st March 2012 at a public meeting with the aim of working towards a deliverable masterplan for Guildford. Initial activity analysed the state of the town centre and identified 17 issues. Several background documents are appended to this consultation response, including The History of GVG (appendix 1), and 'Who is GVG' (appendix 2).

1.4 GVG produced a document in 2013 entitled 'Guildford on the Way' (appendix 3) which serves as a helpful summary of the aims of the group and was supported by members of the public and included their contributions. This document was submitted as part of the response to the Guildford Local Plan Regulation 18 consultation in 2014 by both GVG and The Guildford Society.

1.5 GVG has identified 17 key issues related to the town centre which require addressing:

1. Road safety
2. Pollution
3. Traffic blight
4. Traffic management
5. Lack of pedestrianisation
6. Proper use of riverside
7. Flood prevention
8. Railway station
9. Bus station
10. Cycleways
11. Access and parking
12. Housing
13. Student accommodation
14. Business space
15. Social buildings
16. Arts & education provision
17. Leisure facilities From these 17 issues GVG has set itself six keys goals to transform

1.6 the town centre:
1. Wider pedestrianisation of the town centre
2. Exciting new public space and a reinvigorated riverside
3. Redirection of traffic away from the town centre
4. An integrated road and rail hub
5. More town centre housing
6. A new bridge for a better East-West link

1.7 Sustainable, environmental and infrastructure solutions can be forthcoming but only realistically with comprehensive, integrated and master planned solutions. The draft local plan fails to recognise or make a case for this, or any approach to capture and address any of the ‘17 issues’ GVG has identified.

1.8 GVG notes that, although Guildford has been one of the most economically successful towns over the past 30 years, this position is under threat from infrastructure deficit and a lack of commercial space and housing. GVG also notes the emerging desire, via LEPs and County Councils, to collaborate in an arc of towns around London, stretching from Cambridge via Oxford to Reading, Guildford and Ashford. This is a major opportunity for high tech businesses in particular to collaborate. Guildford, with the right vision and leadership, can build on its strengths, based on the University and the associated Research Park, to take advantage of this opportunity.

1.9 Town centres are subject to major challenges due to changing patterns of retailing, new transport possibilities e.g. autonomous cars, and the need to become far more environmentally benign. GVG believes the Plan is a missed opportunity to position Guildford town centre for the future.
1.10 In particular, land use for the whole of the town centre has not been considered effectively e.g. GVG is aware of several sites that may be subject to redevelopment in the planning horizon that are not in the Plan. Environmental factors are also inadequately covered e.g. District heating, power generation and flooding. Finally, traffic issues are not addressed nor the interchange between modes of transport.

1.11 The draft plan proposes a Guildford with a quantum leap in shopping space that will be inaccessible due to inadequate transport provision. New housing is scattered around the edges of the town centre with inadequate provision made for transport and other facilities. Proposed employment centres may exacerbate transport difficulties e.g. more cross-town commuting.

1.12 The GVG proposals provide an opportunity to build an environmentally friendly town centre, with the flexibility to optimise housing and commercial space.

1.13 A key ambition of GVG is to enable growth whilst delivering environmental quality for the community through a comprehensive, masterplan-led solution. The current draft Local Plan fundamentally fails to consider how this can be achieved in the town centre, and indeed the wider borough. These fundamental goals are central to this consultation response and are relevant to many of the specific policies being consulted on.

1.14 In 2016, GVG persuaded the council to commission a town centre masterplan, the first of its kind since 1943, through Allies and Morrison Urban Designers. However, GVG was concerned that the undisclosed brief did not require the masterplan to adequately address road and other infrastructure issues. Accordingly, GVG feels it has had limited value. In response to the perceived limitations of the masterplan and using professional town planners, GVG has commissioned and published its own masterplan for the entire town centre (appendix 4) in January 2017. This has received support through press, newsletters and social media and at a number of public events.

1.15 The National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF) is very clear on the role which town centres have to play in the growth of boroughs:

Local planning authorities should plan positively, to support town centres to generate local employment, promote beneficial competition within and between town centres, and create attractive, diverse places where people want to live, visit and work.

Local planning authorities should assess and plan to meet the needs of main town centre uses in full, in broadly the same way as for their housing and economic needs, adopting a town centre first’ approach and taking account of specific town centre policy.

1.16 It is considered that the draft plan presented by GBC has fundamentally failed to consider this most basic of planning principles and on this issue alone the Plan is unsound. There are a number of more specific planning policies on which GVG has comments. They are addressed in turn throughout this document.

1.17 This submission builds upon much of the previous work undertaken by GVG which has submitted representations on the previous consultations of the Local Plan in 2014 and 2016 (appendix 5).

1.18 The Regulation 19 consultation includes a significant amount of red-lined (amended) text and policies, each and many of which will, separately and in the context of the entire Local Plan, have some impact on other elements - particularly on the town centre and its crucial infrastructure. It also substantially alters the evidence base without any impact assessment on the Local Plan itself and on any unaltered policy and associated commentary. In its response GVG has attempted (to the best of its ability) to assist the Council to understand how the proposed submission draft Local Plan falls short of the requirement to be a forward-looking Plan that is balanced and sound.

1.19 The GVG Masterplan has been prepared to meet all stated criteria of the policies in the draft Local Plan, as well as meeting criteria to mitigate the 17 issues identified by the group. In addition, it has tested its masterplan to ensure that it is practical and deliverable. GVG has concerns, as detailed below, that the draft plan is not sound and will fail to be pass examination stage, with consequential impact on Guildford and its environs.
[Extract from GVG Masterplan - appendix 4]

1.21 Overall the draft Local Plan demonstrates reluctance by GBC to build new housing before infrastructure is provided. Whilst GVG understands this reluctance it does not demonstrate the forward thinking that is required for Guildford over the next 20 years. It does not provide solutions which GBC can begin to implement without fundamental reliance on external agencies (as is the case with much of the enabling infrastructure in the draft submission Local Plan). If the Plan is carried out as presented by GBC, there will be an increase in population in the wider borough with none of the associated increase in social or physical infrastructure that is required. The pressure that will be put on Guildford town centre from the growth of the borough, and indeed that of surrounding boroughs, will lead to excessive stress on the already failing infrastructure in the town.

1.22 Through properly masterplanning the town centre, alongside a fundamental redesign of the physical infrastructure, the GVG Plan is able to deliver substantial additional benefits over and above just housing growth including business space, environmental benefits, tourism, leisure power solutions, and flood defence.

1.23 GVG is therefore extremely concerned that the proper masterplanning of the town centre and the Area Action Plan for the town centre are not being prioritised alongside the Local Plan and instead being delayed until after potential adoption of what GVG would consider to be inconsistent policies.

1.24 The opportunity to deliver a world class town centre can be achieved but requires a coordinated approach with all interested parties, and in which the GVG Plan can play a part.

Local Plan Consultation 2. Requirements

2.1 Of the 12 Core Planning Principles set out in paragraph 17 of the National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF) the first clearly states that planning should:

Be genuinely plan-led, empowering local people to shape their surroundings, with succinct local and neighbourhood plans setting out a positive vision for the future of the area. Plans should be kept up to date, and be based on joint working and cooperation to address larger than local issues.

2.2 As a town, Guildford plays a much wider role than just providing for the immediate needs of those in the borough. Its sub-regional role means that the future of Guildford town centre will have significant bearing on those living within the much wider sub-regional area. The recent South East Missing Links Study 2016 identified the importance of South East Region towns collaborating over commercial activities to ensure the region continued to prosper as a vital economic engine for the country. Guildford is a key centre in the South East Region.

2.3 GVG has consistently attempted to engage with GBC to bring forward a comprehensive Plan for Guildford town centre which addresses the significant opportunities and constraints currently experienced in the town centre. The previous Allies and Morrison masterplan and updated Town Centre Regeneration Strategy fall significantly short of resolving these issues, even if there was an intention shown to adopt them in policy.

2.4 Paragraph 155 of the NPPF goes on to state that:

Early and meaningful engagement and collaboration with neighbourhoods, local organisations and businesses is essential. A wide section of the community should be proactively engaged, so that Local Plans, as far as possible, reflect a collective vision and a set of agreed priorities for the sustainable development of the area, including those contained in any neighbourhood plans that have been made.

2.5 The 17 issues as outlined previously represent the collective vision as set out in para 155 of the NPPF and that GVG consider itself to represent a wide section of the community. GVG has engaged with officers and senior staff within GBC via a series of meetings since its formation. For reasons that are unclear, the council has expressed only cursory interest with the details of the GVG Plan, and has studiously ignored reference to it in any communications and consultations. From 2012 to 2017 the message from the council has consistently been that they have been too busy with Local Plan issues to address the issues around the town centre (which is central to the GBC area!) or make officer time available.
Requests for collaboration and further information have been met with indifference over a dozen or so meetings with GBC and no information has been voluntarily supplied. Much of the information which GVG has reviewed has been obtained through Freedom of Information requests. GVG has been frustrated by the non-engagement of GBC. This is in direct contradiction to para 155 of the NPPF which forms a fundamental consideration in the development of the GBC Local Plan.

2.6 In examining the Local Plan the appointed inspector will need to consider the conformity with paragraph 182 of the NPPF which states:

The Local Plan will be examined by an independent inspector whose role is to assess whether the Plan has been prepared in accordance with the Duty to Cooperate, legal and procedural requirements, and whether it is sound. A local planning authority should submit a Plan for examination which it considers is “sound” – namely that it is:

• Positively prepared – the Plan should be prepared based on a strategy which seeks to meet objectively assessed development and infrastructure requirements, including unmet requirements from neighbouring authorities where it is reasonable to do so and consistent with achieving sustainable development;

• Justified – the Plan should be the most appropriate strategy, when considered against the reasonable alternatives, based on proportionate evidence;

• Effective – the Plan should be deliverable over its period and based on effective joint working on cross-boundary strategic priorities; and

• Consistent with national policy – the Plan should enable the delivery of sustainable development in accordance with the policies in the Framework. GVG is pro-growth and recognises and embraces the need for housing

2.7 but also considers that Guildford town centre should be regarded as key infrastructure for both the Borough and the wider region. It should be afforded a properly considered place and detailed plan in the Local Plan rather than matters being left to chance and piecemeal development. Delivery of housing in a quality environment should be equally as relevant to plan making.

2.8 It is the opinion of GVG that the proposed Local Plan in its current form cannot be considered as sound and it is with these criteria in mind that this response has been prepared against individual policies contained within the draft Local Plan. Similarly, it is against these same criteria against which the GVG Masterplan has been prepared.

2.9 The council previously undertook a regulation 18 consultation on the Plan in June 2014 to which the GVG provided a detailed response (appendix 5)

2.10 As per the Planning Practice Guidance (PPG) [Paragraph: 017 Reference ID: 12-017-20140306]

Regulation 18 of the Town and Country Planning (Local Planning) (England) Regulations 2012 sets out specific bodies or persons that a local planning authority must notify and invite representations from in developing its Local Plan. The local planning authority must take into account any representation made, and will need to set out how the main issues raised have been taken into account. It must also consult the Strategic Environmental Assessment consultation bodies on the information and level of detail to include in the sustainability appraisal report.

2.11 Overall, it is considered by GVG that previous consultation responses by it and other interested groups such as the Guildford Society have not been taken into account in the preparation of this regulation 19 draft plan. Accordingly it is considered that the basic conditions of plan making, as set out within regulation and government guidance, have not been complied with and the plan is unsound.

Statutory Duty to Co-operate

2.12 The Duty to Cooperate (DTC) Topic Paper which forms part of the evidence base is acknowledged. However there are some shortcomings as to how the council has sought to comply with the DTC as set out in the Localism Act 2011, and amended by the Planning and Compulsory Purchase Act 2004. The DTC is not a duty to agree but the NPPG is clear that... local planning authorities should make every effort to secure the necessary cooperation on strategic cross boundary matters before they submit their Local Plans for examination.

2.13 In addition to cooperation with surrounding local planning authorities, other bodies are subject to the DTC as set out in the Town and Country Planning (Local Planning) (England) Regulations 2012 as amended by the National Treatment Agency (Abolition) and the Health and Social Care Act 2012 (Consequential, Transitional and Saving Provisions) Order 2013.

2.14 These bodies are:

• the Environment Agency
• the Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission for England (known as Historic England)
• Natural England
• the Mayor of London
• the Civil Aviation Authority
• the Homes and Communities Agency
• each clinical commissioning group established under section 14D of the National Health Service Act 2006
• the National Health Service Commissioning Board
• the Office of Rail Regulation
• Transport for London
• each Integrated Transport Authority
• each highway authority within the meaning of section 1 of the Highways Act 1980 (including the Secretary of State, where the Secretary of State is the highways authority)
• the Marine Management Organisation.

2.15 Having reviewed the DTC Topic Paper and the policies contained within the draft Local plan, GVG believes there is a high level of ambiguity and uncertainty around the delivery of infrastructure to support the level of housing allocation and the impact this will have on the traffic in the town centre.

2.16 The Topic Paper references the Local Strategic Statement (LSS) produced by the Surrey Strategic Planning and Infrastructure Partnership. The memorandum of understanding appended to the Topic Paper demonstrates that it has been agreed by all local authorities in Surrey, but there is no reference to Highways England which controls the A3, the principal route through the borough. We presume that it has been removed because GBC has as yet failed to reach agreement with Highways England.

2.17 The PPG also sets out that:

Close cooperation between district local planning authorities and county councils in 2-tier local planning authority areas will be critical to ensure that both tiers are effective when planning for strategic matters such as minerals, waste, transport and education.

Paragraph: 014 Reference ID: 9-014-20140306 11
2.18 Communication between GVG and Surrey County Council suggests that this element of the DTC has not been satisfied either, particularly regarding transport infrastructure.

2.19 It is the opinion of GVG that the Statutory Duty to Cooperate has not been complied with and accordingly the draft Local Plan is unsound on this basis alone.

2.20 Irrespective of the DTC having failed, the draft Local Plan has no vision for the town, no plan for delivery, and sets a course for ad hoc development which will frustrate most of the Local Plan objectives as listed.

POLICY S1: Presumption in favour of sustainable development

3.1 As set out in the previous representations, GVG is actively pro-growth and supports well designed development as part of strategic solutions recognising the sub-regional role of Guildford.

3.2 At paragraph 4.1.4 additional text has been added to reasoned justification of policy S1 which suggests that the presumption in favour of sustainable development will not apply to sites listed under footnote 9 of paragraph 14 of the NPPF. This is clearly correct in policy terms but specifically for Guildford this would assume that the council employs a 'brownfield first' approach to achieving housing supply. GVG would agree with this as an approach, but this message is inconsistent in the Local Plan and not reflected in appropriate infrastructure or support.

GBC should be promoting the delivery of suitable brownfield sites early in the Plan process. More recognition is required to the alternative delivery strategies required should the main allocated sites not come forward or delivery rates be slower than anticipated.

3.3 GVG also recognises the historic failures of successive Councils in Guildford to plan proactively and comprehensively over decades. This has led to there being relatively little brownfield land that can be brought forward by the market in such a way as to: A) deliver as much development as it could were it masterplanned; and B) not place such a burden on historically poor and unresolved infrastructure as to constitute sustainable development. For this reason, as much as any other, GVG has been campaigning for proper joined up urban planning to bring about transformation, development and growth in a sustainable way in our core town centre. This approach could equally apply to the outlying residential estates in north-west and north Guildford, where GBC freeholds also predominate.

Loss of agricultural land

The plan will result in significant loss of agricultural land, including significant loss of land that is grade 3a quality and therefore classified as ‘best and most versatile’ in the national context. On this basis, the SA says that it is appropriate to predict significant negative effects. Agricultural growth may well be a priority for the UK following Brexit and it would seem sensible to avoid destroying valuable land providing employment and economic growth until the future is better understood. Investment in such areas would seem more appropriate at this time. A UK prime agricultural college sits very close to the proposed developments in the local plan (Merrist Wood) and some mention of it would seem logical and desirable with regard to these proposed developments.
I look forward to it, but object most strongly to the plans in their current form.

E. Policy S1 Presumption in favour of Sustainable Development– My Objections

The Plan now states: “the presumption in favour of sustainable development will not automatically apply to policies relating to sites protected under the Birds and Habitats Directives and/or designated as Sites of Special Scientific Interest (SSSIs), land designated as Green Belt, Local Green Space, the Surrey Hills Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty, designated heritage assets and locations identified as at risk of flooding.”

Gosden Hill and Blackwell Farm (both currently in the green belt) are called “urban extensions” surely a euphemism for urban sprawl? Garlick’s Arch and Burnt Common developments take land from the green belt to extend Ripley/Send. One of the important specific purposes of the green belt is to prevent urban sprawl.

2. Housing Number

The proposed housing target of 12,426 is based on assumptions which have not been made public and doubtless would not withstand public scrutiny. A much lower figure of 400 per annum has been proposed as adequate to meet Guildford's overall needs by an acknowledged professional analyst, Neil McDonald of NMSS.

The proposed policy is flawed and should be amended. In the last consultation 97% of responses were against the proposed policy.

My first comment is that I am deeply shocked to see that little or no attention has been paid to the comments made by a significant number of residents in the last consultation. The overwhelming local view that the Green Belt must be maintained at all costs, and that brown field sites should be used for a large part of the housing needs, has been completely ignored.

Once again the method of communicating to Home Owners and Occupiers is totally unacceptable. In January 2014, I had sent a suggestion of how the Borough might directly write to every Home Owner or Occupier so that they are fully aware of the proposals. This is because so many key people were not aware of the plan or the needed action. I had an email from the then Councillor in charge of the Local Plan agreeing that their consultation must be improved. This has not been done and so many people may be disenfranchised.

These points above show that the much needed democracy to progress such an important plan is destroying the credibility of the process.

Whilst I will leave official bodies, such as Parish Councils, to comment in more detail on the specific Policy Issues, I now set down my principal concerns.

First and foremost I object to the number of new homes proposed for the Borough. By every calculation this target would increase the population of the Borough at a rate higher than at the latest 10 year period as measured by the censuses. Furthermore this figure is totally unsustainable by any measure.
I strongly object to the use of the brown field sites for industrial or office development. There is no justification whatsoever to show that there will be an adequate demand for such space. Indeed it seems highly unlikely that such space would be able to be let or sold in our high cost area. Therefore the reassurances made by GBC officers, after the last consultation, to use brown field sites for housing have been ignored. This is of such importance that I find that this complete lack of attention to this point is insulting.

I object to the whole 2016 Local Plan since firstly the consultation process is undemocratic, secondly because much of the information is inaccurate or misleading, thirdly most of the plan has been shown to be unsustainable with inadequate addressing of the infrastructure needs, fourthly no convincing argument for "exceptional circumstances" has been made to wreck the Green Belt which is a vital feature of our Borough.

Safeguard Coaches' Response to Guildford's Revised Draft Local Plan

Introduction

Safeguard Coaches is an award-winning family-owned bus and coach business which has been based in Guildford for over 90 years. It operates 10 local buses (on Routes 4 and 5 to/from Park Barn and the Hospital) and 30 coaches and employs over 60 staff, approximately half of which work in Guildford.

Our Concerns

Safeguard Coaches accepts that some development will be required in Guildford and its environs. However, we are both surprised and concerned at the scale of development proposed in the draft Local Plan, given its present deficit of transport infrastructure and the barriers to easy movement created by the North Downs (Guildford is a 'gap' town), the River Wey and the main railway.

Guildford is a wonderful, historic and vibrant town with a potentially great future ahead of it. However, there is a widely-held view that the Town's Achilles heel is its road transport system which lacks adequate capacity and resilience because very little investment has been made despite the Town growing substantially over recent years. Consequently the Town suffers appalling traffic congestion which blights the Town's economy and people's enjoyment of the Town's amenities.

For Safeguard Coaches traffic congestion and the consequent lengthening, and unpredictability, of bus and coach journey times and the negative impact on customer experience is a major issue.

There has been a noticeable worsening in the situation since September 2015, particularly at peak hours, perhaps as a result of reduced fuel prices encouraging greater car use and increased numbers and length of car-borne home-to-school journeys.

Over the last 10 or so years the time to undertake a single trip (with appropriate recovery time at Guildford Bus Station) on our Route 4 and 5 local bus route {Town Centre-Hospital-Park Barn Westborough-Town Centre} has increased from 40 minutes to 52/53 minutes in peak hours, a 30% increase (the equivalent increase in off peak periods is 5 minutes or 12%). Average peak hour bus speeds are now as little as 8 mph (10 mph excluding recovery time at Guildford Bus Station).

We are in danger of entering a spiral of decline with yet more resources (hence costs) required but with bus patronage reducing (due to increased journey times, unreliability etc) with all the adverse consequences this will have for sustainable travel in and around Guildford.

Safeguard Coaches believes that the revised draft Local Plan pays insufficient attention to the much needed transport infrastructure upgrades meaning that further proposed development will put more pressure on the existing transport systems, particularly the local and strategic road network, creating major difficulties for public transport, hampering economic growth in the area and damaging small local businesses like ours.

Policy S2: Planning for the borough - our spatial development strategy

“4.1.6 Our preference is to focus growth in the most sustainable locations, making the best use of previously developed land (including in the Green Belt if appropriate). “

Need to be clear that in Green Belt openness is the determinant. Hence, previously develop open land should not be preferred.

“4.1.8 Whilst these sustainable locations are our preferred locations for new development, they are unable to accommodate all of the new development we need. We will therefore release allocated land for development in other areas. “
This policy sequence moves too readily to allocating green field sites and omits to encourage efficient use of previously allocated land or initiatives to assemble brownfield sites. This reflects weaknesses, until recently, in the Council’s own approach. There is a risk the policy as drafted will also encourage developers to turn too readily to greenfield sites rather than to engage in redevelopment initiatives.

There are errors in the development need identified and the harmful consequences of meeting need have not been weighed in an appropriate assessment.

“13,860 new homes,” The OAN on which this is based is exaggerated.

“4.1.10 This is a higher level of development than experienced in Guildford borough during the previous Local Plan period, and represents an increase in new homes and employment floor space in line with the aims of NPPF, NPPG, our Economic Strategy, and the best available information on the likely levels of development required by 2033.”

Constraints have not been applied arising from an assessment weighing meeting needs versus harm. Need is exaggerated.

“4.1.12 Table 1 shows a number of new homes that is greater than the figure in the policy. This is to build flexibility into the plan and demonstrate that our strategy is capable of delivering the target. Further details of these and other sites are provided in the site allocations policy of the Local Plan.”

It is inappropriate to designate more land than required given the constraints.

Monitoring Indicators

There is no indicator to track the location of development and the objective that overall brownfield land will be developed first.

Object: departures from Green Belt policy including purpose 5, housing figure based on inaccurate and flawed assessment of need

In line with our evidence and soundness comments, we do not support the revised figures for housing.

In line with our evidence and soundness comments and our previous response, we do not support the revised retail figures.

We welcome the realism that some sites will not be able to deliver until later in the plan period and the link to infrastructure. However, we do not accept that many of the sites in the SHLAA are appropriate for development.

Constraints have not been applied arising from an assessment weighing meeting needs versus harm. Need is exaggerated.
It is inappropriate to propose a large development buffer given the constraints.

More generally, it appears that the objectively assessed housing need appears to have outweighed any consideration of the damage that the plan does to Guildford’s existing Green Belt protection, particularly in the East of the Borough. Appropriate constraints to development, such as the need to retain Green Belt except in exceptional circumstances and the demands on existing infrastructure appear to have been completely overridden by housing need. There do not appear to be any circumstances under which the overall housing numbers would have been constrained, regardless of how high they were. I do not believe that is a correct interpretation of Government planning guidance.

I do not wish to argue that there should be no development on any part of the Borough’s (or indeed, West Horsley’s) Green Belt. I recognise that there is real pressure on the Borough to increase its housing provision in the face of a rising population, increasing birth rate and other demographic trends. However, it is the scale of development proposed in the immediate area that is unacceptable. Growth in the village of around 10% over the plan period, resulting in a release of one or two of the proposed Green Belt sites for development during the plan period would allow the village to grow organically and accommodate some much needed affordable housing. That would also balance the demands on the infrastructure, while going some way to accommodating housing need. However, proposals on this scale, all of which are scheduled in the plan’s first five years, will transform the face of the village forever and not for the better, which is why I wish to make a strong objection.

P26-27. The housing and retail targets are too high, see 3 above.

P29, Table 2. The town centre function must include provision for the everyday convenience-retail and service needs of local residents; our area to the SE of the centre has no “Local Centre” and so nowhere else where this function is provided.

Policy S2: The Plan as a whole is undermined by massive errors in the housing need figures. The housing need has been reduced from 693 per annum last year to 653 per annum, giving a total build over the period of the Plan of 13,893. On the one hand, a reduction of around 5% has minimal impact on concerns about the scale of the housing development’s enormous and negative impact on the Borough as a whole. Equally, I now understand that an over-inflated housing need figure has been used in the Plan. As this affects every aspect of this Draft Local Plan; this one particular renders the whole Plan unsustainable.

I object to the number of homes that the Plan intends to deliver over the 20 year period 2013-2033 (policy S2).

The annual target of 693 is significantly higher than the 652 that the Council proposed last year and disregards the constraints which should have been imposed by the high proportion of the borough’s designated Green Belt land and the capacity of the roads, schools, doctors, hospitals and other infrastructure to support such an increase in the population.

There is no further evidence provided as to why so many more houses are required.

The Society’s Annex 6 summary of areas identifies, in the same place for each LSOA, the built densities and the relative deprivation indices.

There are clearly areas of the Guildford Urban Area which would benefit from positive planning policies towards simultaneous densification and the creation of stronger communities and better infrastructure.

To a great extent the Reg19 Consultation Draft is silent on these areas (notably Park Barn, Westborough, Bellfields, Slyfield) where relative social deprivation is particularly poor on a local, regional and even national scale.

Figure 11 (below) shows that the Park Barn area is at approximately 20 dwellings per hectare, but that the relative deprivation (particularly for young people) is in the poorest 3% in the country.

These issues are not without solutions in the long term but the plan must facilitate development in new settlements that does not repeat spatial planning problems of the past and that the emerging Local Plan provides the policy support it can to enable a development-led solution in these areas.

Turning to the Housing target, we fully endorse the study, analysis and findings of Neil McDonald on behalf of GRA, and reject the GL Hearn SHMA in its approach, methodology (especially where this has not been provided for critical analysis), and findings.

The GL Hearn study is merely one professional opinion. It should not be read as a factual or empirically accurate forecast. GL Hearn’s report fails to demonstrate it is more than an educated guess and, in this case, the guess appears to be both poorly founded and wildly inaccurately formed.

GL Hearn has failed to understand the impact of Guildford’s University and wider further education institutions upon the overall demographic make-up of the Borough.

It is unfortunate that the ONS has failed us and the professionals in its own inability to screen for student communities and in the poor structuring of questions in the 2011 Census.

The measurement of inter-census immigration by reference to GP registrations, and the failure to recognise the effect of overseas students leaving their studies without deregistering from GP surgeries, has been completely missed.

The Society’s population analysis (part of the response to the 2014 Draft SHMA, annexed to the Society’s Reg18 Consultation response) highlighted the ineffectiveness of the question to students in Houses of Multiple Occupation (‘HMOs’) relating to non-term-time residence. There was only one area for the nominated head of household to record non-term-time address, where the HMO may have had three to ten students who were resident at the time of the census.

The Society has set out the following POSITION STATEMENT on housing:

Position Statement 1 - Housing

Whilst supportive of the stated intention, The Society is very nervous about the proposed structure of the Local Plan whereby land allocations are made at the outset, where timings are targeted towards infrastructure delivery, and where such control of the pipeline may not be controllable in that way over the course of the Plan.

The Society would like to see:
38.1. a constrained plan with a lower target housing number, an early review and frequent subsequent reviews to establish that there can be no development without the infrastructure;
38.2. allocation of several of the sites for future development beyond the plan period, but with the acceptance that, if the housing need requires AND the infrastructure has been put in place or is already committed, these sites could be brought forward within the plan period – otherwise they would serve (in accordance with NPPF) as identified sites for development beyond the plan period;
38.3. a clear process and commitment by the Council to collect and analyse local household formation rates and population flows to ensure that any distortive effects of the University’s transient population can be taken into account alongside specific structural shortcomings in our local economy’s employment base. This will ensure that the proposed plan reviews are objective and relevant, taking full account of the Office for National Statistics (‘ONS’) background data and local conditions;

38.4. the progressive improvement of key areas of the Evidence Base many parts of which remain incomplete, underwhelming, or simply ineffective and not fit for purpose (this applies particularly to the Settlement Profiles – in particular as it applies to the Guildford Urban Area – which should form part of a strong basis for land allocation decisions and regeneration plans in settlements across the Borough;

This Position Statement is at odds with the Council’s approach but is a pragmatic interpretation of the anticipated ability of the Council (in the context of planning legislation and regulation, and the unpredictability of interpretation of policies in practice).

Position Statement 2 – Housing Numbers

Whilst recognising the need for Guildford, where possible and subject to very real constraints, to provide sufficient housing to meet our needs, we do not have faith in the West Surrey SHMA (for Guildford, Waverley and Woking) prepared by GL Hearn for the combined commissioning authorities.

The Society has studied the SHMA, has observed the evidence, has read the analysis prepared for the Guildford Residents’ Associations (‘GRA’) by Neil McDonald (June 2016) and has studied the census and ONS data.

We have concluded that there is a very high likelihood that the SHMA substantially overstates the Objective Assessment of Need because:

The West Surrey SHMA shrinks from analysis of the underlying population data which show a statistical error in ONS estimates for Guildford far in excess of that for surrounding authority areas. Two charts below show an illustration of the population age ranges where the errors occur, and the corresponding population profiles. It is absolutely clear that GL Hearn has failed to question its data effectively and the Society believes it has made a serious error of professional judgement in its analysis for this important University Town:

The proposed ‘affordability uplift’ is flawed;

45.1. The (usually transient) student population needs to be separated out from the remainder of the population in order to ensure the Local Plan provides appropriately for both groups;
45.2. Housing estimates for economic growth are essentially double-counting and should be removed (or at least properly validated);
45.3. An adjustment is likely to need to be made in the near term depending upon the outcome of post-Brexit decisions (personal, economic and political);
45.4. Consequently, the Society believes our Objective Assessment of Need (‘OAN’) is in the region of 510 homes per year, and that this should be the basis of the Local Plan (with the proposed reviews and analytical approach proposed in Position Statement 1).

In the event the Local plan overstates the OAN, the existing shortfall of infrastructure will come under additional strain, the pressure to develop housing will probably outweigh any delay in or failure to commit funds to infrastructure, and planning policy does not allow for development to finance pre-existing deficiencies in infrastructure.

Housing Density

Using the CABE figures, and planning an urban extension or settlement to have, say, 50% Urban Village, 33% Garden Suburbs and 17% Suburban Semis would generate an overall density of circa 65dpH in masterplanned sites. A development of 1,800 homes would require a land take of around 28Ha and, with a concentrated village core, services (including buses) would become more viable – all the more so if this were concentrated around a new transportation hub such as a railway station.

With this in mind, an area the size of Bushy Hill could accommodate almost three times the number of homes, and a large portion of, say, Blackwell Farm and Gosden Hill Farm (notwithstanding our separate comments about these proposed allocations) could be retained and made a permanent Green Belt boundary and/or Sustainable Area of Natural Greenspace.

p) Whilst not strictly an amendment, Paragraph 4.1.6 looks out of place in a plan that does not include any substantial town centre allocations.

a. The Local Plan suggests 1,151 homes for an area of the town centre where the Guildford Vision Group has identified scope for 3,787 homes. The Local Plan allocates some sites, but is missing others. The almost complete absence of detail puts at risk the entire Local Plan.

q) The Guildford Society welcomes, on the one hand as it is a Green Belt site, the removal of the site at Flexford and Normandy from the plan; on the other hand, however, we are mystified as to why it is more appropriate to include development in the Green Belt at, say, Send, whilst removing a Green Belt site which includes land (deleted Policy A47) of which a substantial portion is within 500m of Wanborough Station, which would place it second only to Guildford Town Centre in the sequential test in Policy E2(Note that this station is not included in newly provided Appendix A1). This suggests that the Council sees sites accessing the already-congested A3 as superior for development to a site meeting its needs for available land.

r) We note at 4.1.9 that North Street is now included as a Strategic Site.

s) In Policy S2 we note the deletion of the jobs forecast, the reduction in proposed office space from 47,200 to 43,700 sqm (GVG’s town centre plan envisages 51,000 sqm of new offices and civic space, although it does propose to demolish some office areas to achieve this). We note there is a proposed reduction in industrial land allocation by at least a Hectare.

t) In Policy S2 – Annual Housing Target, we note the increased back-loading of housing provision and the explanation for this. We do not see a connection between the Infrastructure Delivery Plan and the propensity to deliver housing in this ‘contingent’ plan (see (a) above). This is surely an omission in such a contingent plan, where there should be a detailed timescale for the provision of infrastructure, against which a timeline for housing delivery should be mapped out.

u) From the housing numbers, we can see these rising from 450pa to 850pa over the fifteen-year period 2019 to 2034, totalling 9,810 homes. The total stated target for the plan period is 12,426 homes. Mathematically, this leaves 2,616 homes to be delivered in the four years from 2015 to 2018 inclusive – an average of 653 homes per year. From the 2015-2016 Monitoring Report, completions in recent years (including 2015, where there was a shortfall of 265 homes) were:

Paragraph 4.1.9a notes that ‘strategic greenfield sites...[are] dependent upon the delivery of necessary infrastructure expected to occur towards the end of the plan period’ (the emphasis is ours).

w) There is no such requirement cited in the plan for town centre infrastructure, and Table 1 (Paragraph 4.1.12 has been deleted so we cannot see where the Council anticipate its development will actually occur). Please see our comments with regard to the serious shortcomings of the SHMA and the Objective Assessment of Need.

y) Paragraph 4.1.9b says that the Council is demonstrating a rolling five-year supply but the deletion of Table 1 does nothing much to demonstrate explicit supply throughout the plan. It is, therefore, far from clear where the crucial evidence is for the rolling five year supply in the short term. If not a clearly-produced table such as has been deleted, there should be at least a clear diagram showing a broad-brush picture of how the housing target will be delivered over time.

z) At 4.1.11 the plan points to further details of sites key to delivering the strategy, and yet these policies do not include timetables that would then give confidence of the delivery of both homes and infrastructure (together with economic, environmental and social gains – Paragraph 4.1.2a) in accordance with the Annual Housing Target.

aa) Every document in the Key Evidence box has been amended and the Housing Needs Assessment deleted.

POLICY S2 – Borough Wide Strategy

We object to Policy S2 on a number of grounds.

1. Almost every element of the Plan is predicated on the OAN adopted as the housing number. We believe this number to have been seriously overstated before the referendum but it is utterly without foundation now.

1. It is unreasonable to embark on the most extensive transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. The scale of the development proposed increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. The first line of the policy states that it will make provision for 13,860 dwellings or 693 p.a. over the period 2013-2033. The number given in Table 1 is 13652 for the 2018-2033 period or 910 p.a. and this is said to be an overprovision to demonstrate that the “target” can be met. The numbers given in the policy as targets for each of the years 2018-2033 add to 10,395 or 693 p.a. an apparent shortfall of 3,465 against the provision stated in the first line of the policy, or perhaps 2,200 allowing for those that will be built in the period 2013-2017. There are references in the evidence base documents to the possible need to make up shortfalls in Woking’s provision and the “Sustainability Assessment” carried out for the Council came up with a preferred figure of 15,860 houses. This is very confusing.

1. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The Plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get Planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

1. The Plan in general and this policy in particular do not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London’s commuter belt. In this area the demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited. The increase in the supply of housing in Guildford will simply result in a shift of population into the area. “Affordability” is not a fixed sum but is dependent on market prices. The Plan will not reduce prices or increase affordability except at the margins.

1. This policy does not take proper account of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. We believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints and that this has not happened. This approach differs from the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan is based on the assumption that “growth is good”. More consumption, more congestion, more Green Belt being taken-this is not a sustainable strategy.

1. The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon, Ripley and Send in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm will put severe strain on the road infrastructure in and around West Clandon which will be unable to cope. The proposed A3 slip roads at Burnt Common will make matters much worse. The edge of urban Guildford will be moved much closer to West Clandon. It will be built on Green Belt land which was to safeguard the countryside from encroachment and check the sprawl of large built up areas.

1. The Plan is out of balance in proposing 65% of housing on the Green Belt and 36% in the three wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon and Horsley. These are rural areas whose identities will be greatly and detrimentally changed by these proposals.

I OBJECT to the fact that 70% of the proposed 13,860 houses are targeted at the Green Belt strung along the A3 which will destroy the open amenity of the borough and produce gridlock on the A3 and surrounding roads including the A247 which are all already at 100% capacity.

I OBJECT to the complete failure of GBC to identify sufficient brownfield sites within the urban area which should be targeted first for development before the open countryside and the Green Belt and the failure to include the Town Centre Masterplan 2015 within the plan.

1. Introduction

1.01 Tibbalds Planning and Urban Design is the appointed planning consultant acting on behalf of Send Parish Council. These representations relate to the June/July 2017 consultation of the Proposed Submission version of the Local Plan: Strategy and Sites document, which is open for consultation until Monday 24 July 2017. Representations made by the Parish Council to the Local Plan consultation which took place in 2016 are assumed to remain valid.

1.02 This statement challenges the level of proposed housing provision in the parish, and focuses specifically on draft housing, employment and transport allocations in Send, Send Marsh and Burnt Common. It sets out objections to the following issues, designations, and allocations:

• Send Business Centre – inset from the Green Belt;
• Send Business Centre – designation changed from “Locally Significant Employment Site” to “Strategic Employment Site”;
• Site A58 – Land around Burnt Common warehouse – “Strategic Employment Site” providing a minimum of 7,000sqm employment floorspace;
• Site A42 – Clockbarn Nursery, Tannery Lane, Send – 60 homes;
• Site A43 – Garlick’s Arch (travellers and showpeople)

2. Proposed Allocations for Housing Provision

2.01 During the previous consultation in 2016, Send Parish Council set out that it considered the proposed level of housing provision to be unsound due to the number of allocated homes being significantly greater than the identified need. Table 1 of Policy S2 set out the planned delivery of housing between 2018 and 2033. Sufficient allocations were made to deliver 13,652 homes in this period; an average of 910 dwellings per annum (dpa), or 131% of the requirement identified in the SHMA. Paragraph 4.1.12 of the Proposed Submission Local Plan (2016) acknowledged that the number of homes set out in table 1 is greater than the number of homes required by policy S2 and that this is deliberate in order to build in flexibility. This, however, was well beyond the objectively assessed need of 693 dpa or 10,395 dwellings over the course of the plan period.

2.02 Send Parish were concerned that this resulted in the allocation of sites that were not suitable for development.

2.03 The proposed modifications rely on updated information in respect of housing need in the form of an addendum to the West Surrey SHMA. This has resulted in a reduced requirement; the objectively assessed need has fallen to 654 dpa. As a result, the proposed modifications remove some allocations and reduce the capacity of others. Whilst flexibility remains in the sites listed in the Site Allocations section of the plan, this appears to be at a more acceptable level of 9%.

2.04 However, Send parish specifically has not seen any reduction in the demands made upon it to deliver the housing needs of the borough and, in fact, the number of dwellings proposed in the plan has increased. Send parish also sees changes in respect of employment provision, and consequential changes to the green belt. These matters are dealt with in sections 4, 5 and 6 below. Distribution of housing 2.05 Send Parish Council also made comments during the 2016 consultation regarding the distribution of housing with reference to the 2014 Settlement Hierarchy document. There is no further evidence presented in respect of the Settlement Hierarchy in this consultation. Equally, nothing has materially changed in the settlements of Send and Send Marsh / Burnt Common that would warrant an update and, therefore, these comments remain relevant.

4. Green Belt Boundary

4.01 Send Parish Council object to the following alteration to the Green Belt boundary:

• The insetting of the Send Business Centre and adjacent field from the Green Belt.

The reasons for the objection are set out below.

4.02 The 2014 draft version of the Guildford Local Plan proposed to inset the Send Business Centre from the Green Belt. This proposed insetting of the Business Centre from the Green Belt was included at this time on the basis that it formed a logical extension to the two site allocations located on Tannery Lane. These allocations were as follows:

• Site Allocation 67 – Tannery House and land adjacent to Tannery Lane – B1 employment uses;
• Site Allocation 75 – Land at Tannery Lane, Send (including Clockbarn Nurseries) – C3 uses, 215 homes.

The proposed Site Allocation 67 would have enabled an extension to the adjacent Send Business Centre. During consultation on the 2014 draft Local Plan, Send Parish Council made representations in respect of Allocation 75.
4.03 After consulting on the Local Plan in July 2014, the Council drafted an updated version of the Local Plan. This draft version was submitted for consultation in Summer 2016. In this version of the Guildford Local Plan, the proposal to inset Send Business Centre was removed and the Green Belt washed over the site.

4.04 The Tannery Lane allocation (Site Allocation 67) was removed due to its location within high sensitivity Green Belt. The allocation at Send Business Centre was also removed [see paragraph 4.38 of GBC Topic Paper: Green Belt & Countryside for further details]. In addition to this, residential Site Allocation 75 was also removed from the draft Local Plan, replaced by Site A42. Site A42 allocated 45 homes on the site of Clockbarn Nurseries, a much smaller site than had previously formed Site Allocation 75.

4.05 Despite these reasons for removing the proposal to inset Send Business Centre from the Green Belt, the 2017 draft version of the Guildford Local Plan once again proposes to inset the site from the Green Belt. The area proposed to be inset from the Green Belt is significantly larger than the existing extent of Send Business Centre. In addition to the existing site of Send Business Centre, the area to be inset also includes the Business Centre car park and the adjacent undeveloped site previous proposed in the draft 2014 Local Plan as employment land Site Allocation 67.

4.06 Send Parish Council feel that the proposed insetting of Send Business Centre from the Green Belt is unjustified. Firstly, it is unreasonable to expect that the high sensitivity of the Green Belt in this location has altered since the Tannery House site allocation was removed from the 2016 draft local plan for this very reason. In addition to this, the River Wey Navigation Corridor, which sits adjacent to the Business Centre, is designated as a Conservation Area. The openness of this conservation area, and the setting of the River Wey within the Green Belt is an important feature of this high sensitivity Green Belt. Nothing has changed in the last year to the nature of either the Green Belt or the River Wey Navigation, thus it is not immediately clear why Guildford Borough Council have overlooked the ‘high sensitivity’ Green Belt designation in order to inset Send Business Centre and the adjoining land from the Green Belt.

4.07 Secondly, the Green Belt and Countryside Topic paper published as part of the evidence base for 2017 draft version of Guildford Local Plan states that the “unique nature of [Send Business Centre] and the existing infrastructure in place means it is considered appropriate for development”.

4.08 However, Send Business Centre is a small collection of buildings which enjoys a rural setting alongside the River Wey. It has consistently been regarded as contributing to the openness of the green belt by virtue of the designation washing over it. The existing infrastructure in place at Send Business Centre represents that typical of a Green Belt setting, namely single track roads with passing places and no pedestrian or cycling infrastructure. This does not constitute infrastructure ready to support an area inset from the Green Belt that, following removal from the Green Belt designation, will not be subject to the same restrictions as are currently in place.

4.09 No evidence is provided in the literature accompanying the 2017 draft local plan that justifies removing the Send Business Centre and adjacent land from its Green Belt designation. The Parish Council considers removing this area from the Green Belt an unsustainable precedent and could pave the way for significant inappropriate development in a rural area of high sensitivity Green Belt.

4.10 The proposed insetting of Send Business Centre and adjacent land is directly linked to the proposed change of designation of the Business Centre from “Locally Significant Employment Site” to “Strategic Employment Site”. Send Parish Council’s representations regarding this change of designation are laid out in Section 5.

4.11 Changes sought to make the Local Plan sound

- Remove proposals to inset Send Business Centre and adjacent land from the Green Belt. Restore the green belt wash over Send Business Centre.

8. Summary of Proposed Changes and Conclusions

8.01 In summary, Send Parish consider the following changes to be necessary to make the Proposed Submission Local Plan sound:

- Remove proposals to inset Send Business Centre and adjacent land from the Green Belt.
• Remove the proposal to change the designation of Send Business Centre from Locally Significant Employment Site to Strategic Employment Site;
• Remove the proposal to enlarge Send Business Centre by insetting Centre and adjacent land from Green Belt.
• Provide an upper limit for the amount of employment floorspace to be created within Policy A58 – Land around Burnt Common warehouse.
• Maintain existing designation of Send Business Centre as Locally Significantly Employment Site.
• Remove Allocation A42.
• Reconsider the suitability of the Garlick’s Arch site for travelling showpeople given the site allocates a number of homes that is below the policy threshold.

8.02 Send Parish Council are pleased to have the opportunity to respond to the draft Local Plan and request that they are informed of any future consultation events.

Policy S2: Borough Wide Strategy

Response: WHPC Objects to the borough housing targets set out in Policy S2.

The policy sets out an objective of adding 13,860 new homes to Guildford Borough over the 2013-2033 period of the Proposed Submission Local Plan, equating to an annual build of 693 new homes per annum (NOTE: the tabulated Annual Housing Target list in the Policy totals only 10,495 homes).

WHPC has serious concerns about the enormous scale of this building programme, which represents a net increase of 25% in the housing stock of Guildford Borough, a remarkable rate of increase for a borough in the English Home Counties. The growth rate differs substantially from that projected by the Office of National Statistics (ONS) which projects a population increase of some 15% for Guildford Borough over the same period.

WHPC has analysed the Land Availability Assessment (LAA) February 2016, and has identified a disproportionate bias in the location of homes proposed for Guildford's Green Belt villages. The results of the analysis are summarised in the histogram and pie charts below. The data for these charts is drawn from all the development sites detailed in the LAA and/or the Sites table in the Draft Local Plan.

The histogram shows the grossly disproportionate 35% growth proposed for West Horsley, compared to other parts of the Borough.

The two Pie Charts show by location the number of homes that will be built in the first 5 years of the Plan period and then over the full fifteen year period. The number of dwellings proposed for development on Green Belt land at 8,202 is extremely high (65% of the total no of homes set out on DLP pages 123 to 126), with 45% of these proposed dwellings to be built east of Guildford.

1. Introduction

The Parish Council OBJECTS to the Proposed Submission Draft Local Plan: strategies and sites June 2017

West Horsley Parish Council (WHPC) has reviewed the Proposed Submission Draft Local Plan: strategies and sites, published by Guildford Borough Council (GBC) for a 6 week public consultation to 24th July.

The Parish Council’s primary objections are to

(i) proposals for new Green Belt boundaries within the existing area of Metropolitan Green Belt and the ‘insetting’ of several villages from the Green Belt, including West Horsley and East Horsley.

(ii) the use of an unconstrained OAN figure of 654 homes per annum throughout the Plan Period.

(ii) the unsustainable characteristics of proposed development sites A37, A38, A39, A40.

The Proposed Submission Local Plan 2017 pack of consultation documents contains no proposals for provision of infrastructure for the proposed development Sites in West and East Horsley

(iv) the unsoundness of the Local Plan in many of its proposed policies and the flawed evidence base upon which policies are being promoted.

WHPC requires that the objections and comments contained in both this and our 17th July 2016 Submission are submitted to the Planning Inspector appointed by the Secretary of State to review the Guildford Borough Submission Draft Local Plan: strategies and sites following this Regulation 19 Consultation. The Parish Council will appoint and retain a representative or representatives to speak on its behalf at the Examination in Public of the Submission Local Plan.

The Parish Council also reserves its right to join with other parish councils to put forward their objections and case against many aspects of the Submission Local Plan at the Examination in Public when held by the Planning Inspector.

This submission focuses on changes made to the Regulation 19 Proposed Submission Draft Local Plan 2016. In the case of Sites A37-40, changes are minimal, thus ignoring the high volume of serious objections submitted by the majority of residents of the Horsleys to those Site proposals. The Removal of Site A41 from the Plan is welcomed.

The Proposed Submission Draft Plan Policies put greater emphasis on the need for adequate facilities and infrastructure to underpin development. However, this is not reflected in any new wording or proposals for the Horsley sites, thus leaving local objections unaddressed. This failure to address objective responses by residents and the Parish Council, curtails the plan’s usefulness as a sensible and respected planning tool at a site level and further adds to its lack of credibility with residents. The Plan fails to mention most of the known sustainability issues and infrastructure constraints affecting the Horsley sites, including public transport, traffic, road safety, shops, parking, schooling, medical facilities, sewage and flooding/surface drainage.

Section 2 sets out the Parish Council’s comments on and objections to the revisions to proposed Plan Policies. These are set down in tabular form alongside WHPC’s 2016 Consultation comments.

Section 3 focuses on the widespread criticism and concern expressed, not just by many West Horsley residents, but by the thousands of objectors to the proposed Local Plan at every Consultation since 2013. The dominant theme of objections since 2013 remains one of too many homes being proposed for building in the Green Belt.

The number of new homes has been promoted by the West Surrey SHMA and Objectively Assessed Number (OAN) prepared under a contract awarded by Guildford Borough Council to G L Hearn. GBC’s refusal, in response to many requests (FoI and other) to release details of the methodology and assumptions used by G L Hearn, on alleged commercial confidentiality grounds has been blatantly obstructive, falling far short of the requirements of NPPF Plan Making paras 155 and 157 in particular.
Along with a number of other parish councils, WHPC decided in 2016 to contribute financial assistance to Guildford Residents Association (GRA) to enable the appointment of Neil McDonald to undertake a critical review of the West Surrey SHMA and the OAN recommended by G L Hearn. Neil McDonald’s 2016 Review Report which uncovered errors in GL Hearns work, has been followed in May-June 2017 by a further Review of Hearn’s 2017 Addendum to the West Surrey SHMA.

McDonald’s Review of this Addendum to the West Surrey SHMA has revealed serious issues with Hearn’s data interpretation, resulting in an OAN that is too high. MOST SIGNIFICANTLY the Office for National Statistics endorses Neil McDonald’s findings.

Neil McDonald’s Review of the Addendum to the West Surrey SHMA is reproduced in entirety (with GRA permission) in Section 3.

2. Parish Council comments on Sites, Amended Policies and Strategies

a) West Horsley Sites A37, A38, A40 and A41 and East Horsley Site A39

Lack of infrastructure / poor sustainability

WHPC and its appointed Planning Consultant put forward their reasoning in the Parish Council’s Submission Report on the 2016 Consultation, that the selection of these Sites in Green Belt locations without ‘exceptional circumstances’ having been proven, fails to satisfy the requirements of NPPF chapter 9.

Further, the sustainability of all the Sites was seriously questioned and found wanting, particularly in terms of the distance of each from Horsley station, shops, schools, medical centre, library and other services. The absence of a regular daily bus service through those parts of West Horsley that contain the Sites, was identified as a further factor that will generate considerable car use by residents of the proposed new homes on Sites A38, A39 and A40.

Referring to Table C of the AECOM Sustainability Appraisal SA Report Update June 2017, the Parish Council takes issue with a number of the Site Appraisal performance criteria, e.g. the distance from a Site to a Railway Station being measured on a straight-line basis. This is a nonsense for Sites A38 and A40, i.e. unless crows are going to buy / reside in the dwellings and fly to the station!

For Site A38 the distance to a Secondary School is categorised ‘Orange’ (less than 2km) yet A38 is further from a secondary school than Sites A39 and A40, both of which are categorised ‘red’ (more than 2km),

The Land Availability Assessment 2016 review of each of Sites A38, A39 and A40 includes the following statement (or similar) on Utilities:

Utilities

In response to the consultation on the draft Local Plan (2014), Thames Water advised that current wastewater network in this area is unlikely to be able to support the demand anticipated from this development. Drainage infrastructure is likely to be required to ensure sufficient capacity is brought forward ahead of the development. In the first instance, a drainage strategy would be required from the developer to determine the exact impact on the infrastructure and the significance of the infrastructure to support the development. Thames Water will work the planned housing into their investment programme only once a site has planning permission.

Wastewater treatment provision will therefore be a delivery restraint for the proposed dwellings on this Site. WHPC met with Thames Water in May 2017 who confirmed that there were capacity issues at Ripley Sewage Treatment Works.

As a further and timely reminder of the lack of facilities in West Horsley (North and South), Appendix XII Greenbelt & Countryside Study Settlement Hierarchy is reproduced on the next page as a Summary Table with the Settlements shown in ranking order, rather than as the somewhat confusing alphabetical listing in the original Evidence document. Villages proposed for insetting from the Green Belt are highlighted in light red. West Horsley is ranked well down at 17th but regardless of that position was targeted (note: not selected) to receive more new dwellings than any other village, before the sustainability of each site and the cumulative impact on East and West Horsley had been properly, if ever, considered.

Though two sites have been dropped from West Horsley since the initial Local Plan Consultations were started in 2013, the Parish Council, along with many of the village’s residents, has a strong belief that a proper evaluation of sustainability has been fudged, simply to allow the remaining West Horsley Sites into the Submission Local Plan in a desperate attempt to producing a Plan that is able to deliver a sufficient number of homes in the first 5 years, i.e. 2019 to

Local Plan first 5 years Housing Supply - comment

With the very obvious lack of infrastructure in West Horsley, recognised by the Parish Council and residents but seemingly not or simply ignored by GBC’s Local Plan Team, the deliverability of all 255 homes planned for Sites A38 and A40, as stated in 2017 LAA Addendum by 2024 in the Plan Period’s first 5 years is seriously questioned. Why? The housebuilders who hold the option on both Sites will adopt a steady building development programme which involves the release of new homes in Phases that match the house build rate to what the market can take, without depressing the prices of the various house types that will be offered. The new homes will not be cheap and that includes so-called affordable units which will be priced at 80% of the local market average. West Horsley Parish Council will be surprised if each site releases more than 15 units per annum for sale. Thus an 8 -9 years long building programme is highly likely, if realistic housebuilding market criteria are applied to Sites A38 and A40.

Access to and beneficial use of the Green Belt, NPPF para 81

Collectively, the three sites in West Horsley North fail to meet NPPF paragraph 81’s encouragement of providing access to and beneficial use of the Green Belt and its amenity and recreation value. This has been an outstanding success story in the Horsleys. Assets, to name just a few, include a dense public footpath network visited and used by many walkers from Greater London, parish parks, sports fields, a caravanning & campsite of international standard, Britain’s newest rural opera theatre ‘Theatre in the Woods’ and the now, since the Local Plan process commenced, popular Olympics cycle route. These examples of positive planning stem from a Local Plan that protects the Green Belt, maintains its openness and beauty and avoids urbanisation and traffic congestion. Sites A38 to 40 are aggressively hostile to openness and the character of the area, with a density of new housing that is completely inappropriate, being greater than anywhere in the locality at present.

Proposed housing delivery trajectory 2019 to 2034 - illustrated

The housing delivery figures set out in LAA Addendum 2017 (page 8) have been plotted as two pie-charts, shown on the next page, the key purpose of which is to illustrate very openly the very large percentage of housing proposed for Sites in the Green Belt. No exceptional circumstances or reasoned justification is put forward by Guildford Borough on a Site by Site basis.

A Histogram follows the pie-charts illustrating the housing figures from the 2016 and 2017 Consultation Local Plans for
(i) the Guildford town and urban Area (ii) Ash & Tongham (iii) the Eastern Rural area and (iv) the western rural area.
The histogram illustrates how the Rural Areas are disproportionateness targeted for new homes, all of which are proposed on Green Belt Sites without any justification being put forward.

Land Availability Assessment Addendum 2017 - Corrections

i) Site A37 and its entry in the LAA Addendum 2017 is incorrect. The Bell & Colvill planning approval is for 9 homes, not 6 as listed.

ii) It is not understood how in the Housing Trajectory – Sites with provision and phasing table on page 8, on the 3rd line Outstanding capacity (Commenced) figures are filled in for the years for years 11 to 15 of the Plan Period.

[see table on attached document]
East Horsley District and Local Centres – Station Parade and Bishopsmead

Station Parade and Bishopsmead are explicitly identified as being suitable for “main town centre uses” which include amongst other uses “cinemas, drive-through restaurants, night clubs, casinos and bingo halls”. Clearly such uses are unsuitable and must be excluded from the proposed Local Plan by statements in Policies E8 and E9

[see charts on attached document]

S1 – Presumption in favour of sustainable development

Object strongly

Policy wording is flagrantly open, unenforceable and ignores the requirements of NPPF paras 7, 8, 10 and 17 in particular.

OBJECTS

No change in Policy wording.

2016 comment remains

S2 – Borough Wide Strategy: Planning for the Borough – Spatial development strategy

Object strongly

WHPC objects to the borough housing targets of 25% increase in houses (against an ONS growth projection of 15%). Proposals is a 35% increase in village housing stock

OBJECTS

Policy redrafted and drop in housing provision to 12,426 homes for Plan Period 2015-2034.

The housing target proposed, of 12,466 is based on assumptions that have not been made public and includes flaws that have not been corrected in the modified SHMA (verified by professional analyst Neil MacDonald of NMSS who concluded that an annual housing figure of 400 per year would meet Guildford's overall need). The phased approach (more homes built towards the end of the plan period) is appropriate in order to permit necessary infrastructure.

Urban Development

The Trust supports higher density development in the urban area where there is existing infrastructure, although that should of course avoid over intensification. Guidelines should avoid spoiling the environment and causing congestion but much can embrace fresh thinking on urban life including pedestrianisation, cycling lanes, home zones and underground parking.

The Tyting Society is a Residents Association (RA) representing 88 local households. It is a member of the Guildford Residents Association (GRA), which represents 26 RAs and 4 Parish Councils. The Tyting Society endorses the response and objections that the GRA is providing to this current consultation.

The Tyting Society is also a member of CPRE. We support CPRE’s objections to the high level of housing building and that the constraints such as Green Belt and lack of adequate infrastructure have not ben taken into account.

We have two specific objections to the draft Local Plan

Level of House building

We object to the average annual target of 693 houses planned to be built over the period until 2033. The evidence for this is not soundly based lacking transparency and credibility. There are also significant infrastructure constraints that need to be recognised today and not at some ill defined moment in the future.

Excessive Level of House building

We object to the average annual target of 654 houses planned to be built over the period until 2034. The evidence in the Guildford Addendum Report (March 2017) is not soundly based. This high number is modelled from the demographic needs within the Borough representing some 85% of the overall projected increase.

The new evidence from GRA’s independent expert shows there is an over estimate of population growth of about 40%. The GBC proposal will result in needless loss of Green Belt and increased congestion.

I object to the large number of houses proposed for the Horsleys. Guildford Borough Council has not demonstrated the need for an extra 35% in West Horsley which is greater than any other area in the borough. The surveys undertaken by the parish council have not demonstrated either the need or the desire for an expansion of West Horsley.

2.I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

1. The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

2. The Housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

3. The Housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any commonsense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

5 GBC have not followed correct process. There are significant changes in the sites suggested including slipping in new sites by the ‘back door’ The proposals for the housing requirements have gone up and down in recent years and it is not acceptable to try to use regulation 19 rather than the full consultation to which I object.

Overall, it is acknowledged that the Guildford Local Plan has made a significant attempt to identify sufficient land to meet the full objectively assessed housing need for the Borough for the entire plan period. In particular, the Plan makes provision for the delivery of 13,860 new homes between 2013 and 2033. This is equivalent to 693 new homes a year. In addition, the Plan identifies land to deliver about 1,984 new homes as a buffer to ensure early provision, flexibility of delivery and the deliverability of the housing requirement. This will make a significant contribution to housing provision in the Housing Market Area, and is commended. However, the Council would like to make the following detailed comments:

• Paragraph 47 of the National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF) emphasises that local authorities should use their evidence base to ensure that their Local Plans meet the full objectively assessed needs for market and affordable housing in the housing market area. Paragraph 179 goes on to say that joint working should enable local planning authorities to work together to meet development requirements which cannot wholly be met within their own areas. Overall, it is acknowledged that the Guildford Local Plan has made significant attempt to identify sufficient land to meet the full objectively assessed housing need for the Borough for the entire plan period based on the addendum Strategic Housing Market assessment undertaken by your Council. In particular, the Plan makes provision for the delivery of 12,426 new homes between 2014 and 2034. It is noted that the original figure in the West Surrey SHMA is 13,860 new homes. This is equivalent to 654 new homes a year. In addition, the Plan identifies land as buffer to ensure early provision, flexibility of delivery and the deliverability of the housing requirement. This will make a significant contribution to housing provision in the Housing Market Area, and is commended.

However, the Council would like to make the following detailed comments:

• Paragraph 47 of the National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF) emphasises that local authorities should use their evidence base to ensure that their Local Plans meet the full objectively assessed needs for market and affordable housing in the housing market area. Paragraph 179 goes on to say that joint working should enable local planning authorities to work together to meet development requirements which cannot wholly be met within their own areas. It is therefore expected that Guildford Borough Council will use the Local Plan process to meet the unmet housing need arising from Woking Borough. The Council is aware of the information that Guildford Borough Council has provided to demonstrate that the unmet need from Woking cannot be met in Guildford. Once this evidence is agreed at the Examination, the Council is willing to cooperate with Guildford and Waverley Borough Councils to find ways of how the unmet need in the Housing Market Area can be addressed. Waverley Borough Council has just been through their Local Plan Examination and the unmet need from Woking was a key topic for discussion. It is recognised that discussions have already started between the three authorities on this particular issue and it is envisaged that this will continue. The three authorities should also monitor housing delivery against their housing requirements to see whether any measures will be necessary to facilitate housing delivery.

Do you consider this section of the document; complies with the Duty to Cooperate? ( No ), is Sound? ( No ), is Legally Compliant? ( No )

I object to policy S2 the Borough Wide Strategy and the commitment to build 13,860 homes based on the Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) 2015 prepared by GL Hearn. The OAN “objectively assessed need” figure in the SHMA of 693 homes a year is far too high! I am very surprised and concerned that GBC have adopted the OAN of 13,860 homes as the housing target without any application of constraints as required under the National Planning Policy Framework and the National Planning Policy Guidance. The scale of the housing number proposed, inevitably increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole. Other local planning authorities appear to take a more balanced view in their approach to planning. The Woking Core Strategy 2012 applies a constraint of 50% from the 594 new homes identified in their own SHMA. “It should be noted that local evidence (Strategic Housing Market Assessment - SHMA) highlights a need for an additional 499 new affordable homes every year in the Borough and a total of 594 new homes every year when taking into account demand. Given the level of environmental constraints present in the Borough, it is considered that the provision of an average of 292 dwellings per annum represents a reasonable level of housing growth for Woking and is deliverable.” Historically GBC have correctly applied constraints on housing numbers to protect the Green Belt. The Surrey Structure Plan 1994 advocated a general slowing down in the rates of development “because of the environmental constraints which exist in the County, including Green Belt”. This slowing down was reflected in the requirement that Guildford Borough should accommodate a net increase of 3,800 dwellings between 1991 and 2006. This was a lower rate of development than in previous years. It is interesting to note that the Structure Plan at that time expected sufficient land to arise within the urban areas to accommodate this requirement. However it would appear that today GBC have effectively ignored the real potential of the urban area to provide for housing. At the same time GBC have adopted a radically different approach to the policy of the Council over the last 20/30 years and are now ignoring government policy in relation to the Green Belt. A detailed and comprehensive professional review of the SHMA dated June 2016 by NMSS an independent expert firm dealing with housing and demographics procured by Guildford Residents Association (GRA) has concluded that the OAN figure should be revised down from 693 homes per annum to 510 homes per annum. The 41 page report by NMSS which can be found on the GRA website entitled “A Review of the West Surrey SHMA as it relates to the Objectively Assessed Housing Needs of Guildford”. It was a real community effort. It was paid for by over separate 20 Guildford Residents Associations and Local Parish Councils none of whom were convinced that the SHMA report procured and presented by GBC was accurate or transparent or accessible in a meaningful way. So they clubbed together and collected contributions from many hundreds of Guildford residents to try to find out the truth of the housing need figure presented in the Local Plan. The NMSS report includes detailed analysis and financial modelling and was prepared by Neil McDonald. He is an independent adviser and commentator on housing demographics. He works with local authorities and others on the estimation of housing need and related issues. He was a civil servant and policy adviser to Ministers for over 30 years, the last 10 advising on housing and planning issues within the Department of Communities and Local Government. His 7 years as a Director at DCLG included a posting as Director, Planning Policy and a period as Chief Executive of the National Housing and Planning Advice Unit. NMSS found that the SHMA used in the Local Plan incorrectly adds extra homes to its basic demographic projection to allow for improving affordability of housing, increased student numbers and economic growth. The report found that none of these additions were justified based on the evidence presented within the SHMA. The report concluded amongst other matters that: “The affordability of housing in Guildford is no worse than in other Surrey districts and boosting supply beyond the demographic OAN would not result in a noticeable improvement in affordability but simply in more people moving to the area.” There are reasons for believing that the SHMA’s estimate of the number of homes needed for students may be too high and that an adequate provision for students is already included in the demographic OAN. The report advises that the Council should commission a separate student housing need figure for Guildford given the distorting effect of students on our overall OAN. It envisages that, once this exercise is undertaken, improved accuracy means the overall OAN would be likely to reduce still further. The SHMA seeks to estimate the number of homes needed to support employment growth using employment rate assumptions that are inconsistent with the employment forecasts. This produces misleading results. An analysis of the Cambridge Econometrics and Oxford Economics forecasts using employment or economic activity rate assumptions consistent with the forecasts suggests that in neither case is there a need to provide more housing than suggested by the demographic analysis. Indeed, in both cases a smaller population growth (and hence fewer homes) could support the jobs growth that is forecast. A further independent report was procured in 2016 by the Campaign for the Protection of Rural England CPRE from Richard Bate of Green Balance, an independent consultancy with expertise in demographic and housing matters to carry out a review of the GL Hearn SHMAThe report by Green Balance runs to 37 pages and its findings are that the OAN for homes in Guildford should be reduced from 693 per annum to 481 because:

1. the vacancy rate figures should be taken from local government annual records rather than from the 2011 Census. This would reduce vacancy rates to 2.9% in Guildford.
2. there should be no increase for affordability above basic demographic change.
3. there should be no increase for Student housing and it was considered unrealistic that the University should be allowed to exert such substantial pressure on the domestic housing market.
4. the use of employment-led forecasts should be abandoned using purely household projections instead which are more reliable as a form of prediction.

Two completely independent expert reports are surprisingly consistent in their findings.

The SHMA is based on pre-Brexit projections for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards. It is unacceptable that demographic and economic model assumptions have been withheld by GBC and cannot be checked making the process unaccountable. The figure of 13,860 new homes is unsubstantiated. The SHMA is based on pre-Brexit projections for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards. It is unacceptable that demographic and economic model assumptions have been withheld by GBC and cannot be checked making the process unaccountable.

The figure of 13,860 new homes is unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinised by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. Both the National Planning Policy Framework and National Planning Policy Guidance provide a clear policy direction that the overall housing target should be reduced by a variety of constraints to take account of protected wildlife areas (e.g. Thames Basin Heath SPA), landscape areas (Surrey Hills AONB), Green Belt, flood risk and significant infrastructure constraints, all of which apply to Guildford. This local plan and the SHMA number have completely ignored these factors. I have corrected this omission below. Infrastructure policies should be planned at the same time as Local Plans but in this case they have effectively been left out and are not sufficiently developed. The Framework also makes clear that, once established, Green Belt boundaries should only be altered in exceptional circumstances, through the preparation or review of the Local Plan. Unmet housing need (including for traveller sites) is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt and other harm to constitute the “very special circumstances” justifying inappropriate development on a site within the Green Belt.

4.1.9a The figures set out in the Annual Housing Target table sum to a total of 12,426 homes. This is lower than the total supply of homes identified in the Land Availability Assessment as having potential to be delivered over the plan period. This buffer builds flexibility into the plan and demonstrates that our strategy is capable of delivering the target. It also adopts a phased target that gradually increases over time rather than the same annualised target of 654 homes each year. This is due to the likely rate of delivery, particularly on the strategic greenfield sites, which is dependent upon the delivery of necessary infrastructure expected to occur towards the end of the plan period.

Buffers are already built into the housing number; this figure should therefore be reduced.

Land identified includes a very large percentage within Greenbelt; this should be removed rather than included to act as buffer that is not needed. Deliverability is dependent on a number of factors in addition to whether the landowner would like development (including access).

Access for Blackwell Farm is over AONB and there are serious traffic and pollution issues all of which make it difficult to see how this land can be considered 100% deliverable?

I am pleased to see the phased delivery but object to additional targets outside the plan period, for reasons, which have been explained. When Manor Park was removed from Greenbelt, it was with a caveat that no further land would be taken out during the period of the plan. This has been overturned and any importance given to the permanence of Greenbelt, ignored.

| 4.1.9b | I do not understand how the buffer is calculated, especially when it has been built in for different reasons throughout the SHMA too. Given that Guildford seeks to meet an OAN that is more than 20% too high in the first place it is difficult to understand an additional 20% buffer can be justified? | Object |
| 4.1.4 KEY EVIDENCE | Refers to the addendum, in which it states that the reduction in housing will not have an impact on the results of the traffic study and that in scenario 5, no significant impact will be seen providing the RIS works are carried out. It notes that without the RIS works impact will be severe. This is NOT true for the B3000 in Compton which will be severely impacted by increased traffic levels whether the A3 is improved / altered or not. In fact it will see MORE traffic if the A3 is improved as more traffic will use the B3000 to reach the A3. As the B3000 is likely to be recommended for an AQMA, it is important that this is highlighted and accounted for in the plan. The traffic modeling also underestimated traffic levels and hence it may NOT be true to say that changes in site allocation will reduce impact on traffic, although it may do. The traffic modeling should be done again, with the sites that will go forward and should input the suggestions by Mouchel to get more accurate readings. My understanding is that areas were split into zones and traffic modeled within the immediate zone. Blackwell Farm was in a zone of its own and hence the impact on Puttenham or Compton may not be properly reflected. Likewise, major routes such as the A3, A31, A281, A25, A320 etc would all be affected by development outside Guildford (ie Dunsfold, Object & Omission |

First past the post

The hearing for the Waverley plan appeared to adopt a first past the post strategy, whereby Woking decided to protect its Greenbelt and hence declared it would not meet its OAN and the Inspector appears to have decided that this should be split between the two remaining authorities, who each have constraints of their own? Surely each should be considered on its own merits and constraints, otherwise the last one to touch base could end up with everyone else's unmet need, irrespective of whether it makes sense or not?

The development of nearly 14,000 homes over a 20 year period is unsustainable without a complete loss of character to those centres included within the proposed extensions to various urban areas and villages. This policy does not appear to recognise these existing regions simply do not have the necessary road and other infrastructure capable of coping with expansions on this scale or magnitude and is therefore unsustainable. This excessive development appears skewed towards the northern sector of the borough. While Woking and Waverley are willing to apply constraints to their housing growth, Guildford is not and the uniqueness of villages such as Clandon, Ripley and Send appear destined to be enmeshed in an urban sprawl.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
We are writing to express our grave concerns about the revised Local Plan for Guildford that has now gone out to public consultation. That we need more homes, particularly of the right kind is undeniable. The first challenge for planners is to formulate realistic targets that local people can understand and be persuaded to accept with a fair degree of confidence as at least being both reasonable and sustainable.

GBC is proposing the total housing need can now be revised downwards from 693 to 659 per annum i.e. a reduction of 4.9%. Such precise figures imply specific calculations have been deployed against clear assumptions. However there is a complete reluctance to explain the thinking and methodology that has underpinned such an analysis. In any professional, technical or scientific document that goes out for peer scrutiny, there is a pre-requirement to provide some account of underlying principles used in reaching a particular conclusion. Otherwise the validity of the result must be considered suspect, flawed or inaccurate. This now has to be the view that any rational person must take over the figure of 659 new homes p.a. It is further reinforced when an independent analysis undertaken by GRA has concluded 404 houses p.a would meet Guildford’s projected needs. There is a 38.7% discrepancy, which should set alarm bells ringing! Perhaps as a university town, the statistics can easily be distorted by the inclusion of student numbers whose residency is at best transient and should not be included in any assessment of housing need for the borough.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

I am concerned about the implications of the Housing and Planning Act 2016 - particularly Section 150 and Planning in Principle. Planning matters such as detailed traffic assessment and sustainability are not being covered by the site selection for the Local Plan and are being left to the planning application stage. Under “Permission in Principle” it seems that these matters will be beyond public scrutiny and comment. Traffic assessments will be carried out by developers with a view to proving acceptability. Scrutiny by local residents is highly valuable in ensuring probity in the planning process.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
I object

51. Guildford Borough Council has no mandate to pursue such an aggressive growth strategy which uses an artificially inflated “housing target”. Constraints such as Green Belt and infrastructure have not been applied. I have commented on the SHMA earlier in my letter.

52. Why has Guildford Borough Council failed to apply constraints when it is happy to suggest that it values environment and separation of settlements?

I quote from the Strategy and Sites document:

“2.2.4 Guildford has its origins growing up where the River Wey flows through the North Downs ridge. This constrains development and creates a clear sense of separation between the town and outlying settlements, protecting the highly valued environment that is a distinctive part of the borough’s character.”

I OBJECT to GBC withholding from residents their consultant’s and sub-consultant’s calculations of housing need, which is what is driving this whole issue. It would appear that even some individual councillors are not privy to the calculations or how the total has been reached but are blindly accepting a figure produced without workings or explanation. There are strong grounds for believing that GBC, aided and abetted by their consultants, have overstated by a wide margin what the figure should be. There are also grounds for believing that the numbers have been exaggerated as a result of pressure from developers. As the grabbing of Green Belt land is predicated on the need for a particular number of houses, a good starting point would have been to get the number right and to show transparently how it was reached.

Other submissions will provide supporting statistics and there are authoritative figures online to show the escalation of housing need in Guildford Borough has been about 0.5% per year for the last ten years. The draft plan provides no proper data which proves that it is increasing significantly more at the moment or that in future years it will rise by so much more. Guildford’s projected number in the last draft local plan was challenged by the Office of National Statistics which is a more reliable source since it is not driven by developers. Since the current set of figures was published other underlying data has changed; for example it was too late to take into account the effects on housing demand of changes to the population which could arise from Brexit. Nor has GBC applied the normal constraints to their maximum projections. For a proper professional assessment of housing numbers I refer the reader to the submission from Andrew Procter on behalf of the Save Send Action group.

I OBJECT to the combined total of 2000 (Wisley) + 485 (Send) + 2000 (Gosden Hill) + 1850 (Blackwell Farm) houses all alongside a short stretch of the A3 between the M25 and the university. To concentrate 6335 of the borough’s assessed need for housing of 13860, that is close to half of it, in such a small area of the borough is by any standards unreasonable. If GBC wants to build this number of houses, which has more to do with developer pressure than properly calculated need, it should spread them more evenly throughout the borough, which it is manifestly failing to do. This would help to alleviate excessive traffic congestion and pollution which is a certain consequence of GBC’s current proposals.

Applied specifically to Send, although it is the largest village in the borough it should not have to take a significantly higher proportion of new houses than the borough overall. It should also not have to take a significantly higher proportion of new houses on account of its current size which arises as a result of a disproportionate volume of housing previously being located in Send, Send Marsh and Burnt Common. When the Wimpy Estate of several hundred houses (Linden Road, Maple Road and all adjacent “tree” roads) was built in Send some 40 or more years ago it represented a massive increase in the size of Send Marsh which increase at the time was disproportionate to the size of the village and its amenities. A further massive increase now, which relates numbers proposed to numbers existing, compounds the offence. It would be more equitable to say that as Send accepted a very large number previously, it should not be expected to do so again.

The housing number calculations also have to take into account the constraints, in particular those resulting from the Green Belt. I therefore repeat the points made in paragraph 11 above which cannot be over emphasised. The NPPF states that in their local plans local authorities are required to meet objectively assessed housing needs “as far as is consistent with the policies set out in this Framework” . The policies referred to include Section 9 - Protection of the Green Belt. The Court of Appeal has clarified the interpretation of this by stating categorically that there may be nothing very special about a housing shortfall in an area which has very little undeveloped land outside the Green Belt.

The key question is not “is there a shortfall in housing land supply?” You have to ask “have special circumstances been demonstrated to outweigh the Green Belt objection?” And such circumstances are not demonstrated simply because there is a less than five year supply of housing land. Special circumstances will not exist unless the potential harm to the Green Belt is clearly outweighed by other considerations. Given the large amount of Green Belt in Guildford Borough, the council can legitimately argue that it does not have to match the housing targets of boroughs with less Green Belt.

1. I OBJECT to the Local Plan because Guildford Borough Council (GBC) has no mandate to destroy areas of the Green. The overwhelming majority of Guildford Councillors who voted for the Local Plan reneged on specific promises they made when seeking election to preserve the Green Belt. Conservative Councillors stood in the name of the Conservative Party whose official policy was and still is to preserve the Green Belt. This policy has been reaffirmed regularly. Guildford Councillors are therefore acting both unethically and ultra vires.

1. I OBJECT to the Local Plan because it does not reflect "localism" or "local decision making". It begs the question why any self-respecting councillor would choose to vote for the Plan, still less support it through public statements, when they know full well that they are not representing the wishes or expectations of electors who put them into office, that is local. It is a dereliction of democratic duty to squander hundreds of thousands of pounds of residents' money on such an ill conceived project which runs manifestly contrary to local opinion. Every councillor who voted for it should be considering their position and answerable for the money they have wasted.
1. OBJECT to the Local Plan on procedural Two of the sites in Send, Garlick's Arch and Send Hill, were not variations based on the earlier draft plan but completely new sites. Both should therefore have enjoyed a full new consultation under Regulation 18. This opportunity has been denied residents. In the case of Garlick's Arch, which is a very large site, this was introduced into the Local Plan absolutely at the last minute. GBC effectively sprung a surprise on everybody by producing it out of a hat having given no indication, as late as two weeks before publication, that it was even being considered. This quite definitely needed to go to a full Regulation 18 public consultation and GBC is in breach of administrative law in failing to do so.

1. OBJECT to the Local Plan because on so many issues the evidence base is questionable, defective, or totally The many examples of this are set out in great detail in the submission from Andrew Procter on behalf of the Save Send Action Group to which the reader is referred.

S2 Borough Wide Strategy.

Object.

Over 80% of Guildford borough land is situated in the Green Belt and the Proposed Submission Local Plan (LP) housing numbers fail to take into account allowable constraints on new builds in the borough, caused by the green belt. Due to such a high housing target, over the plan period, the only way such large housing numbers can be accommodated is by taking too much land out of the Green Belt. A smaller housing target could have protected the Green Belt and been allowable under NPPF constraints based on the high proportion of Green Belt in the borough. Effingham Parish Council objects to the housing target – it is too high.

In addition, it is necessary to review the Strategic Housing Market Availability Assessment (SHMAA) concerning:

1. The part of the housing target driven by economic growth. Is this housing target still appropriate for the borough following the referendum result and the expected slower growth in the future? Given that an average of 125 new builds per year are due to economic growth this figure needs reviewing.
2. Whether student figures for the University of Surrey are still appropriate? Following the referendum result student numbers at the university are expected to decline as students from Europe are now expected to have to pay the full fee Russell Group universities are predicting a decline in student numbers from Europe in the future due to the higher fees.
3. EPC regards the 14% housing buffer to be higher than necessary and should be reduced. The 14% buffer is forcing GBC to identify sites in the green belt that would not be needed if there were no, or a lower, buffer.

Over 80% of Guildford borough land is situated in the Green Belt and the Proposed Submission Local Plan (LP) housing numbers fail to take into account allowable constraints on new builds in the borough, caused by the green belt. Due to such a high housing target, over the plan period, the only way such large housing numbers can be accommodated is by taking too much land out of the Green Belt. A smaller housing target could have protected the Green Belt and been allowable under NPPF constraints based on the high proportion of Green Belt in the borough. Effingham Parish Council objects to the housing target - it is too high.

In addition, it is necessary to review the Strategic Housing Market Availability Assessment (SHMAA) concerning:

I object to the projected plan for new north facing slip roads to/from Send March/Burnt Common. The A247 from Old Woking through to Clandon is already over crowded with cars, etc, and this can only be exacerbated by increased traffic from all the new projected housing areas, ie A25, A35 A43, A43 and A44 a total of 4,484 houses, the majority of which will have at least one car. The Send, Send Marsh, Burnt Common and Ripley along with the A3 and the M25 are already very heavily used by traffic coming to and from Woking and Guildford. When these become congested for whatever reason, the problem is greatly exacerbated. On a regular basis it can take me up to five minutes to get out of my small road. The A247 is not a road that can be widened due to the housing on both sides of the road and is already subject to severe gridlocks during rush hours and school times.

I feel that little thought has been given to the preferences of local inhabitants and while I can understand that affordable housing is necessary for many people I do not feel that country villages with poor transport facilities, overfull schools, considerable lack of medical facilities and constant traffic problems is the right way forward.

I look forward to your comments.

POLICY S2 - The 654 homes per year (total 12,426) number of homes the Plan intends to provide over the 19’ year period 2015— 2034. I understand that the target for housing has been reduced from 693 to 654 per year, but it is still much too high and does not take into account any of the constraints which should have been imposed due to the high proportion of the borough's designated Green Belt and the capacity of the roads, schools, doctors and other infrastructure to support such an increase in population. I object to the recalculation of assessed need for housing and other development and the grossly disproportionate impact of the Local plan's proposals on the more northerly communities of the borough.

Re: Sites numbered:

A25 – Gosden Hill
A43 and A43a – Land at Burnt Common – known as Garlick's Arch
A35 – Former Wisley Airfield in the revised draft local plan.

I would like to object to the inclusion of these sites in the draft local plan for the following reasons:

1. The number of houses needed in the Borough was changed between the first and second issues of the draft plan indicating that there is considerable uncertainty in this figure and the basis and method of calculation. In view of the recent EU referendum vote and its impact on future immigration, the number of houses required is likely to reduce further. With smaller house numbers the need for any loss of the Greenbelt should be reassessed as 'special circumstances' necessary for reclassification have not been established.

2. Sites 43 & 43a were introduced at the last minute and there has been insufficient time for consultation before its inclusion in the draft plan.

3. Wisley/Ripley/Send/Burnt Common/Send Marsh is a semi-rural area and development on this large scale will lead to urbanisation and permanently change the nature of the area. In particular this could provide the starting link in connecting Guildford to the M25.

4. These developments place a disproportionate burden on the north east of the Borough.

5. Traffic will increase significantly and the access and exit roads to and from the A3 are too narrow to cope with the resultant increase in traffic - particularly at peak hours.

6. Other infrastructure. Is there adequate power, drainage and sewage provision for industrial development and is there sufficient school, medical and similar provisions for domestic expansion?

7. Light and sound pollution.

   The area enjoys fairly dark skies for its proximity to London. Any additional development will add to the light pollution unless provisions are made to ensure strict control of any additional lighting. Please consult Guildford Astronomical Society.

   It already suffers from noise pollution from the A3. Traffic noise pollution seems inevitable if development proceeds.

   If included in the plan, provision should be made for strict control of noise and light pollution emanating from the site – particularly at nighttime.

8. The sites contain a substantial number of trees many of which are quite mature and must make a significant contribution to the Borough's carbon reduction target. It seems perversive that planning permissions have been refused because of the impact on the individual trees whilst the wholesale destruction of woods seems inevitable if these sites are included.

   It seems difficult to reconcile these two extreme positions.

   If included in the plan preservation orders should be placed on appropriate trees as a minimum requirement.

In terms of the housing requirement element of the policy we consider the figure to be unsound because it is unjustified. We are not persuaded that it fully reflects the objectively assessed need over the plan period.

The plan will make provision for 13,860 homes over the period 2013-2033. This is an average of 693 dwellings per annum (dpa) over the 20 year life of the plan.

We have considered the West Surrey SHMA of September 2015 and the Guildford SHMA Summary Report of October 2015. In general we consider this to provide a very robust assessment of the future housing needs of Guildford. The report very clearly explains the method that has been followed and the justification for the various adjustments. We would take issue on two aspects of the assessment. We concede, however, that the effects of these issues on the overall OAN may be quite limited. The overall conclusion that the OAN is 693 dpa seems reasonable.

We support the use of the DCLG 2012-based household projections as providing a sound starting point (see Key Messages on page 56 of the main SHMA report). This would be in keeping with the advice in the NPPG. Comparison with the latest DCLG 2014-based household projections which were published on the 12 July 2016 shows little movement in the underlying demographic component of the assessment.

We also agree that it would be sensible to adjust for the 2013 Mid-Year Estimates while retaining the 2012-based Headship Rates (see table 20 on page 66 of the main SHMA report). This results in a starting point figure of 517 dpa for Guildford (table 20 of the main SHMA).

We note however, that the new 2014-based projections show that 12,000 households could form between 2013-2033 compared to 10,000 or so projected by the 2012-projections (see DCLG Live Table 406: Household projections by district, England, 1991- 2039). This would suggest a new starting point of 600 households per annum. The difference may not be material since the adjustments made by the Council to the basic demographic projection would lift the level of supply to 693 dpa. Nevertheless, it is possible that the new 2014-based projections are suggesting a higher starting point for Guildford. This should be considered by the Council.

12 year migration trend

The HBF strongly endorses the decision not to apply a 12 year migration trend. We are becoming very concerned by the growing use of a 12 year migration trend elsewhere in the wider south east of England. As the SHMA Summary Report for Guildford argues on page 5, the problem with this scenario is that it would fail to account for changes in the age structure over time. These are changes captured by the latest 2011 Census and reflected in the new projections produced by the ONS and DCLG. The 2012 SNPP is likely to be more robust.

Unattributable Population Change (UPC)

We strongly support the decision not to adjust for UPC (page 6 of the summary SHMA for Guildford). It is unclear if UPC is related to migration, and the discrepancy may be because the way that the ONS measured migration was less robust in the past than now. A UPC adjustment for more recent data would be inappropriate.

London Migration
We welcome very much the Council’s acknowledgement of the potential impact of migration from and into London, including the Mayor of London’s own migration assumptions underpinning the new London Plan (adopted in 2015). As the SHMA explains the new London Plan was based on the 2011-interim household projections but assumed a 5% increase in out-migration and 3% decrease in inward migration (i.e. fewer younger people moving to London).

The Council has modelled a scenario that reflects these assumptions and this results in a starting point figure of 568 households per annum. While we accept that there is great uncertainty associated with the migration dynamics with London (see paragraph 2.9 of the SHMA summary), we consider that this will exert an effect on Guildford owing to the affordability problems in London. Relatively affluent households will be able to buy more space in Guildford than they can afford in London. Housing delivery in London is also averaging at only half of what is needed, and while Guildford is not responsible for this poor performance, the fact is that the dearth of supply may increase an outward migratory tendency that Guildford would be wise to prepare for.

For this reason we consider that it would be sensible to plan on the basis of the London migration scenario set out in Table 25 of the main SHMA: namely 568 dwellings per annum (table 25, page 72). We consider that the London migration scenario should be used as the basis for the demographic starting point to which the other adjustments should be made (affordable housing need, students, market signals).

It is interesting that this London migration scenario is closer to the new 2014-based household projection of 600 hpa. This suggests that the baseline demographic need before any other adjustments are made, may well be about 570-600 dpa.

Economic needs

As recommended by the NPPG we support the modelling by the Council to ensure that its new housing supply aligns with the employment needs of the Borough. This is a welcome and necessary measure. We note that the analysis has concluded that to support the projected growth in jobs in Guilford would require a housing supply of 637 dpa compared to the 517 dpa indicative figure in the trend-based projections (see paragraph 3.7 of the summary SHMA). The Council has concluded that the demographic need is around 120 dwellings lower than the forecast economic need and so has increased the housing need to 637 dpa (paragraph 3.7 of the SHMA summary).

We note that the adjusted figure of 637 dpa corresponds more closely to the new 2014-based household projection of 600 hpa. This suggests that an OAN figure that was any lower than the 600 dpa suggested by the DCLG 2014 projections would probably be flawed.

Affordable housing need

We support the uplift that has been made to cater for the affordable housing needs of the HMA. This results in an uplift of 59 dpa for the HMA, of which 20 dpa would be required in Guildford (paragraph 3.16 of the SHMA summary).

Student housing

The assessment of student needs is a very welcome and valuable part of the OAN assessment. The HBF has become very concerned by the failure of many authorities with higher education institutions to assess the projected growth of student bodies. This is because institutional needs are generally assumed to remain constant by the DCLG household projections. Therefore, a failure to account for a planned expansion of the student body could result in an under-counting of future housing needs. The SHMA avoids this by including an allowance for the growth of student numbers and a calculation of how this may impact on the need for C3 homes.
This is a most welcome and necessary adjustment. We support the approach taken and the adjustment that has been made to account for the growth of the student body. The adjustment adds a further 25 dpa to the demographic projection (paragraph 3.20 of the summary SHMA).

We refer to the Local Plans Expert Group’s discussion of this issue following the Government’s announcement in 2012 that C2 use class dwellings could be counted towards the housing completions. It invites the Government to clarify its advice on assessing institutional needs.

Market signals

We observe and support the adjustment for market signals. An adjustment for market signals is warranted in Guilford where the affordability to earnings ratios are extreme. The Council has made this adjustment by adjusting the household formation rates for the 25-34 age group. This results in a further addition of 11 dwellings per year. This is one way of accounting for market signals. The LPEG report has recommended an alternative approach, which if followed in Guildford, would require a 25% uplift to be made the baseline demographic projections because the lower quartile house price to lower quartile income ratio is 10.92 (paragraph 3.33 of the SHMA summary). However, the LPEG recommendation is made in the context of a far more simplified approach to the calculation of the OAN which removes the need for many of the adjustments currently suggested by the NPPG. In the case of Guildford we note that effect of the other adjustments made by the Council for employment, affordable housing, and for students would cancel out the effect of the 25% uplift which if applied to the base need of 517 dpa would only add 129 more dwellings per annum. This would result in a figure of just 646 dpa which is lower than the recommended OAN of 693 dpa.

Backlog

The NPPG invites local authorities to consider how past performance will have affected the household projections. As the NPPG states “formation rates may have been suppressed historically by under-supply and worsening affordability of housing” (NPPG, ID 2a-015-20140306).

Page 19 of the Viability Study illustrates the number of net completions achieved since 2006/7. Net completions in the period prior to this new Local Plan (2006 – 2013) were generally poor compared to the South East Plan’s annual average monitoring figure of 422 dpa. The SEP figure was achieved only once in 2007/2008. Although we recognise that the green belt review implicit in the SEP figure was the subject of a legal challenge and subsequently deleted, this was not necessarily the case with the SEP housing target for Guildford. In any case, this is the only benchmark available against which to assess performance unless one used whichever DCLG household projection was current at the time (all of which would have pointed to much higher levels of need). Table 3.1 shows that the average figure for the period was 250 completions per year. This figure is very much lower than any of the DCLG household projections so it is possible to infer that had completions been in line with the SEP then the DCLG household projections may have been higher.

The purpose of drawing attention to this is to lend further weight to our argument that the Council would be wise to plan on the basis of its London migration scenario since the baseline DCLG projections is likely to provide an under-estimation of future needs.

Conclusion

The HBF is broadly very supportive of the assessment made. We consider this to provide a realistic assessment of the future housing needs of the Borough. The only quibble we have is in the treatment of migration with London. We consider that there is a good case to substitute the London Migration scenario figure of 568 dpa instead of the 2012 SNPP based figure of 517 dpa as the initial starting point figure. This results in a difference of 51 dpa (see also paragraph 4.33 of the Duty to Cooperate Topic Paper). This should be rounded down to 50 dpa. After factoring in the other adjustments, the overall OAN should be increased by 50 dpa to 743 dpa. A requirement of 740 dpa (rounded down) should be considered.

We recognise that in using this increased initial starting point this would not necessarily that has require the same increase for employment that has been made (120 dpa) except that it would be sensible to keep the same upward adjustment for employment as people moving from London to Guildford will probably still be employed in London – i.e. the adjustment for employment is necessary for those who will need to live and work in Guildford, not necessarily to cater for those living in the borough but commuting to London.

I object to this policy. The housing number of 13,860 homes is excessive and the SHMA, from which the number is derived, seriously flawed, as demonstrated by critiques submitted by Guildford Residents Association and by Cllr David Reeve. In any event housing numbers and the employment land requirement need to be revised in the light of Brexit which reliable forecasters show will slow economic activity below levels previously expected.

The OAN has become the housing target because it is regarded as deliverable because, contrary to the NPPF, Green Belt (other than AONB) has not been regarded as a constraint, but rather as a bank of developable land, with 65% of the proposed homes being on Green Belt. The NPPF requires that established Green Belt boundaries should be changed only in exceptional circumstances and recommends, in the interests of sustainability, channelling development towards urban areas inside the Green Belt boundary, towards towns and villages inset within the Green Belt or towards locations beyond the outer Green Belt boundary. Proposing 65% of housing on the Green Belt is not consistent with this.

Also, it is clear that the lack of infrastructure, especially in the villages where individual developments will not be large enough to generate significant infrastructure, has not been properly taken into account in assessing the housing target.

The revised OAN is too high. The proposed 22% increase in housing stock is double the 10.4% ONS projection for population growth over the plan period. The provision for students still seems unrealistically high as most will not stay in the Borough after graduation and the economic growth assumptions post-Brexit seem over optimistic.

No account has been taken of the special status of the Metropolitan Green Belt in limiting the ability of Guildford to meet its OAN. The Green Belt land proposed for development is predominantly in the land closest to London, in the north east of the Borough, of crucial importance in limiting the sprawl of the London conurbation.

The development proposed is proportionately (around 50%) too much concentrated on Green Belt sites in a small area in the north east of the Borough. Brownfield sites, particularly in the town centre, should take a greater proportion of the housing. With the growth of on-line sales, some of the area proposed for retail in the town centre should be used for housing.

We object to this policy on the basis that the strategic numbers vary from the calculations in Appendix 3, indicating that additional and independent calculations need to be completed. This is needed to confirm that such a large discrepancy above the national average is conclusively proven prior to acceptance of these figures.

It is also identified in Appendix 4 that there are insufficient skilled tradesmen in the area to complete the task of meeting housing numbers in this and adjoining Boroughs.

This policy is unsound as a basic Principle.

It is our assessment that the plan, in the round, presents a level of development for the borough that is unsustainable in its present format. Specifically, the plan fails to provide sufficient infrastructure to deal, in a sustainable manner, with Traffic, Water, Sewage, Air and Noise Pollution requirements. In broad terms when infrastructure is addressed in the plan the relevant references make such provision ‘generally optional’, encouraging mitigation measures as opposed to requiring the provision of specifically identified infrastructure, which is required to provide a realistic solution to the problems caused by the level of development set out in the Plan.
For instance, in relation to highways requirements associated with specific land allocations, road proposals in the plan have not been properly tested by or to Highways England requirements as set out in the Design Manual for Roads and Bridges. A specific example of this can be found in respect of the Gosden Hill land allocation: An allocation for development was turned down in the 1980s on this site, due to chronic lack of infrastructure, noting as an example [left] an extract from the GBC objection to the Gosden Site proposal, in which the council specifically noted the offer of a four way intersection but still found the allocation of a smaller section of the current proposed allocation unacceptable. This decision was supported by the local plan inspector at that time, and again in 2003. It would be reasonable to conclude that traffic levels have increased somewhat since 1984 and yet the current proposals for the Gosden Hill allocation makes only a passing reference to junction improvements south bound and make no provision or requirement for the all ways junction proposed in 1984, leaving all north bound traffic to travel south through the community of Burpham. NPPG paragraph 152 states “Local planning authorities should seek opportunities to achieve each of the economic, social and environmental dimensions of sustainable development, and net gains across all three. Significant adverse impacts on any of these dimensions should be avoided and, wherever possible, alternative options which reduce or eliminate such impacts should be pursued.” The failure to provide an all ways junction fails this basic principle. It is also worth noting the Council successfully challenged the Gosden Hill allocation in the former South East Plan on sustainability grounds in the High Court. There is nothing within the current proposals to suggest adequate levels of infrastructure will now be provided [see our separate detailed comments on Policy A25]. Therefore the proposal remains unsustainable and should be removed.

Notwithstanding the lack of sustainability, the plan’s ‘trajectory’ has failed to follow statutory process in that the introduction of new policies and background documents has occurred after closure of Regulation 18 and the Regulation 19 stages. No completed draft plan has ever been displayed to the public for consultation at Reg 19.

The housing number within the table above,
450*2 + 500*3 + 550+600+700*3+800+810+850*3 does not calculate to 12,426 but 9,810 another indication that the Housing Numbers are fundamentally flawed.
Raw SHMA data has not been displayed to the public, contrary to the principles of open government [see closing comments at the base of this document]. The numerical data are not statistically sustainable. We therefore question the final figures in this policy.

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN Ire not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

I OBJECT to all strategic sites proposed in the draft Plan to be built in the Green Belt.

1. I object to the identification and allocation of sites in this plan without regard to Green Belt, infrastructure or other constraints. The plan says that “allocating these sites does not grant planning permission for development.” However, each of the sites will be removed from the Green Belt and will be available in principle for development and non-Green Belt uses. The inclusion of these sites without detailed site by site justification shows contempt for the thousands of detailed comments the Council have received about individual sites ever since the Issues and Options consultation in 2013. The plan has hardly changed since the Council received 20,000 objections to its first draft plan in 2014. The Inspector considering the plan may conclude that the consultation has not been properly conducted.

2. The housing needs assessment is flawed in various respects and overstates housing need. In addition since it was produced, the referendum Brexit decision has almost certainly reduced future housing need and rendered the previous assessment seriously out of date. As a result any assessment of Green Belt sites which took place to consider whether “exceptional circumstances” existed to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt was based on false premises and should be reconsidered.

3. Having determined housing need the Council was entitled to consider constraints before determining the housing number. I believe that as Ill as being entitled to do this the Council was required to give proper consideration to constraints. The scarcity of sites outside the Green Belt as Ill as infrastructure (most notable roads) considerations all represented constraints which should have been taken into account in determining the final housing number. Accordingly in this regard our objection to the allocation of Green Belt sites is twofold. First I believe constraints should have been applied. Secondly I believe the Council did not properly consider constraints and that their decision making process was flawed and thus subject to being set aside by the Inspector.

4. Even if having properly applied constraints there is a need to develop in the Green Belt then specific Green Belt sites should not be included in the plan unless “exceptional circumstances” for development are proven in relation to that specific site, as stipulated repeatedly in the NPPF. The Green Belt should trump short-term considerations such as perceived housing need, as case law has established. There needs to be a specific balancing exercise conducted on each Green Belt site weighing the harm to the Green Belt against the very special circumstances which are argued in favour of development at that particular site. There is no evidence this has been done. Instead the council have appeared to say that having chosen a housing needs figure and decided it cannot be met without building on Green Belt then there is no need for any further consideration and any convenient Green Belt site can be allocated for building at will.

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.
The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. double counting. It has not been produced in a transparent form with openness about the data used by the Guildford Borough SHMA consultant, G L Hearn, and sub-consultants used. It needs separate reports for issues in the SHMA which are relevant for Guildford only, such as the large number of international students attending the University of Surrey. The housing figure needs to be based on sound evidence.
Constraints need to be applied which are appropriate for Guildford.

Para. 4.1.5: It is written in this paragraph: “Our development strategy for the plan period is based on national planning policy, with recognition of environmental constraints and the availability and viability of land for development.”

However, environmental constraints have not been applied as given in NPPF para.14 and footnote 9 as follows:
“……sites protected under the Birds and Habitats Directives and/or designated as Sites of Special Scientific Interest; land designated as Green Belt, Local Green Space, an Area of assets; and locations at risk of flooding or coastal erosion”.

The housing figure has not been adjusted to allow for constraints. Indeed avoidance of development on areas prone to flooding, for example, has meant instead more housing in the Green Belt, which is in itself a constraint.

The Minister of State, Brandon Lewis has stated: “We have repeatedly made clear that demand for housing alone will not change Green Belt boundaries.”

Guildford is a congested gap town with steep hills rising up on either side and surrounded on three sides by AONB and Green Belt. Its many villages are served by narrow country lanes. Traffic is a serious environmental constraint for Guildford because of its topography, setting and heritage. Expensive infrastructure to widen the A3 will bring further environmental impacts such as noise and over the plan period yet more traffic to cope with the extra 13,860 houses.
Narrow lanes cannot be widened without demolishing homes, destroying landscape and the character of village settings.

Constraints should be properly applied to lower the housing figure.

Para. 4.1.6: An over-abundance of retail on land which could be developed with housing is being proposed, in spite of the decline in retail and its uncertain future. Some housing is needed in villages, but policies which in effect allow unlimited growth are destructive to the Green Belt and to the character of villages.

Para. 4.1.7: Wording is needed in this paragraph and in the Local Plan to ensure that Rural Exception housing is for those with a connection to the village who need affordable housing.

Para. 4.1.8 Constraints should be taken into account in this paragraph.

3.1 SPATIAL VISION

3rd para

The reduction in housing units for this plan period still necessitates three large developments to be built on the Green Belt, plus an increase to 2,000 houses within and around villages, some now inset from the Green Belt, based on a housing figure using flawed data.

The huge increase in traffic that will be caused by these developments on main roads which have reached full capacity and on local roads and lanes not built for heavy traffic, has been acknowledged, but the infrastructure solutions proposed in the Local Plan 2016 will not be sufficient to prevent congestion at peak periods. (SCC Traffic model – SHAR 2031 traffic forecast).

I object to the housing figure in the Local Plan for the above reasons

8th para, 2nd sentence

The large amount of retail has been reduced by a comparatively small amount of 9% to 41,000 sq.m. with some extra housing units added. Evidence as to the need for this amount of retail needs analysing carefully and the data used checked, particularly as retail is being adversely affected by the fast moving and increasing trend for online shopping. Consequently reports by consultants can be out of date.

Instead the Town Centre could be regenerated with housing, which would bring vibrancy to the town, stimulating Guildford’s economy by supporting leisure and eating places, and also the shops in the High St, the primary shopping street, along with its connecting passages.

I object to the over-large amount of retail proposed for the reasons above.

It is written that: “The transport strategy and Local Plan policies will be aligned to encourage residents, employees and visitors to use alternative modes of transport especially through the town”.

It has been found that residents living in the town, 23% (GTAMS March 2015), were the largest group crossing the town, (ie from residential areas to hospitals, clinics, schools, after school activities, evening classes, leisure centre, sports grounds, University of Surrey, Surrey Research Park, cathedral, churches, colleges, out of town shopping, supermarkets, offices, railway stations, parks and so on.) It needs to be outlined whether public transport can be provided for residents and how they can be persuaded to use it. Some residential areas do not have a bus service and others have an infrequent service. (Buses are also an extra expense for those who own cars.)

I object to the loss of a central bus station, which gives the option of crossing town by changing buses.

A round town ‘Hop on, Hop off’ bus travelling to all sides of the town centre, stopping at the railway and bus station, would make all parts of the town centre more accessible. Such a bus would benefit residents, visitors and shops.

For the reasons above and to be taken in conjunction with my response to the 2016 Local Plan consultation, I object to the Spatial Vision.

POLICY S2 Box: Planning for the borough – our spatial development strategy

(1) The data used by G L Hearn Consultants to produce the 2017 Objectively Assessed Need (OAN) figure in the West Surrey Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) has not taken into account the report by Neil McDonald, an independent expert, which shows that the majority of students of the University of Surrey do not stay and live in Guildford, and do not raise families in Guildford, but move elsewhere to live.

The latest OAN figure written in the 2017 Local Plan is based on unsound data.
The revised figure does not apply constraints to the lower the housing number. Applying constraints to individual sites, means that if one site is restricted for flood reasons, etc, to fulfil the housing number, housing to replace it may be built in another restricted area such as the Green Belt, which is no longer being protected under Exceptional Circumstances from development.

See comment under Spatial Vision 8th para, 2nd sentence regarding retail expansion in the town centre.

I object to Policy S2 for the reasons above

General observations

When I have attended Council meetings at Millmead on particular issues of concern to me, I have always been impressed by the quality of debate and general conduct of the meeting. The publications distributed about developments and activities in Guildford are also very positive and well received but despite this I regret to say that I do not have the complete confidence and faith in you, the Council, that I think I should. Nor do I have the feeling that you are on the same wave length in these matters as most of the people you represent. This probably stems from the way these planning issues are perceived. I well understand the complexities involved which in the main are dealt with very well but there is still some element that is missing. For example

1. There is no explanation of why so much housing capacity is required in this area and who it is for.
2. There are no artist's impressions of how a development might look or any idea given of what an "affordable house" looks like
3. What is a traveller's pitch?
4. Are there any conditions attached to the allocation of travellers pitches?
5. How are they to be managed?
6. Residents should feel confident that the Council representing them properly reflect the feelings of the public
7. The villages in Surrey are a huge asset which development on the scale proposed in this local plan will change them into small townships many of which will be linked with ribbon development thus changing the character of the area for ever.

I am sorry if this sounds very negative but perhaps there is some value for you to know how someone feels about things.

We object to the proposal to build 13,860 homes in the Borough over the period of the Plan for the following reasons:

• The figures are from the SHMA but we are not privy to the calculations used to derive the required housing need of 693 dwellings per annum (dpa). The consultants who prepared the SHMA claim intellectual ownership and, despite FoI requests, the details remain hidden. We are told to trust the model because many other local authorities use it, a specious argument. GBC have presumably taken the report on trust which suggests a degree of naivety. There is significant concern, too, that the consultants’ website indicates an agenda that is clearly pro development.

• The OAN is 693 dpa but there is no Housing Target within the Plan. GBC seem to suggest the two are the same, that the OAN is deliverable and cannot be gainsaid. However, we understand that deliverability may be affected by various constraints. How can we be asked to approve a plan that does not actually propose a realistic target number that takes all constraints into account?

• An independent report by NMSS, commissioned by Guildford Residents’ Association (GRA), has arrived at a much lower OAN of 510 dpa. This report finds that the SHMA inflates the OAN due to

1. a) failure to correct historical data
2. b) issues with the way student needs are considered
3. c) flaws in the estimation of homes needed to support job growth.

• Other boroughs such as Woking and Waverley have applied constraints to overall housing growth, Guildford has not. There seems to have been little effort to protect the character of either urban or rural aspects of Guildford, already a very congested gap town. The unique identities of villages like Send, Ripley and Clandon are threatened with being lost as a result.

• There is a disproportionate level of expansion in the northern part of the Borough. This will impinge particularly on Burpham which would cease to be a definable village and diminish to just the name of an area within the urban sprawl of Guildford. The planned development of Gosden Hill Farm offers the second largest number of homes, a new railway station, a Park and Ride, shops and primary/secondary schools, all situated in the Green Belt that includes an area of ancient woodland.

It is our contention that these deficiencies render the Local Plan unsound.

Six weeks is insufficient for most people to fight their way through thousands of pages to ascertain the aims and objectives of GBC and prepare a reasoned and informed response.

- The documentation is appalling. The language used is infelicitous to say the least and the presentation is poor; the use of white font on coloured background will have caused problems for visually impaired people.
- The website is cumbersome to navigate.
- The sheer volume of documentation is overwhelming – a literary equivalent of traversing the Himalayas. I would guess many people did not make it beyond the foothills. At the very least, some kind of summary as to the intentions of GBC should have been provided.
- Transport and infrastructure documents were released at the last minute and are incomplete.

I can understand the need for economic development but it should not be at any price. This Plan seems to focus on expansion regardless of the harm done to the existing community. There are serious issues with regard to current infrastructure deficiencies which have not been addressed. They will not be solved by burying acres of Green Belt under houses and requiring the developers to pay for infrastructure in the faint hope that the rest of us might benefit.

A sound and sustainable Local Plan should surely have one major outcome – that most residents on reading the proposals can say “This Plan will do something to improve my quality of life.” On that ground alone, this Plan fails.

I have read the responses submitted by the Burpham Neighbourhood Forum, the Guildford Residents’ Association and the Campaign to Protect Rural England and am in agreement with them.
I note the housing need has been reduced from 693 to 653 per annum, a reduction of around 5%. As last year, there is a significant reluctance to elaborate on the calculations and assumptions that underpin this figure. An independent and open analysis of the housing need figure undertaken by a respected national expert has arrived at a much reduced figure of 404 homes per annum. That is a difference of nearly 40% - statistically extremely significant.

There is no doubt that more homes are needed - so long as they are of the right kind, providing for public sector workers, first time buyers and older people wanting to downsize, not the developer preferred money-grubbing high end of the market housing. However, the housing need figure must be realistic and its raison d'etre transparent. This is not the case and I therefore object to this policy.

The draft Plan sets out at Policy SS2 a spatial development strategy; effectively, what type of development, how much of it, and where will it go. In respect of housing, Policy SS2 plans for 13,860 new homes over the Plan period (2013-2033). This equates to an average of 693 net new dwellings a year, and would meet Guildford Borough’s objectively assessed housing need (OAN) within its administrative area.

Guildford Borough Council considers that, in fact, the Plan will meet the OAN with flexibility. The total potential provision of new homes across the plan period (including completions since 2013 and outstanding capacity) is 15,844. This provides 1,984 homes as a buffer. This is not planned over provision, but rather, flexibility that helps to guard against the policies in the plan becoming out of date by failing to deliver a five-year supply of available housing sites.

Guildford Borough Council does however make clear in the supporting documentation that it is unable to help with addressing unmet housing needs from within its own Housing Market Area. Rushmoor Borough Council is supportive of Guildford Borough’s commitment to meet its OAN within its administrative boundary.

In terms of the availability of housing sites, an interesting statistic to note is that 89% of Guildford Borough falls within the Metropolitan Green Belt. The Plan sets out in Policy SS2 a spatial hierarchy, which identifies a brownfield first policy including, where appropriate, previously developed land in the Green Belt. The following spatial options are then considered to be the most sustainable locations:
Guildford Borough contains some “Countryside Beyond the Green Belt”, although this notation covers only 2% of the Borough, and is located in the west of the Borough near Ash and Tongham. Mindful of the hierarchy set out in paragraph 4.3 above, and the need to identify enough land to deliver an average of 693 new dwelling a year, the draft Plan contains several housing allocations that fall on land that is subject to this designation.

Policy A29 is the most significant of these allocations, identifying land for approximately 1200 homes around Ash and Tongham. A map showing the distribution of the sites that comprise this allocation is shown at Appendix 1 of this report. In addition to this, there are two other smaller allocations (A27: Warren Farm, Ash Green and A28: Land to the east of White Lane, Ash Green) of 120 units in total, 629 homes with planning permission (net outstanding) and 124 completions since the base date of 2013. In the wider Ash and Tongham area, taking into account completions, permissions and Local Plan allocations, this equals 2,057 homes to be delivered by 2033.

In terms of any potential cross boundary impacts of this development, whilst it is located close to the boundary with Rushmoor Borough, mindful of the constraints noted above, Guildford Borough Council has very limited opportunities to accommodate its objectively assessed housing need. The draft Plan contains a number of other strategic housing allocations, including land at former Wisley Airfield (2,100 homes), Slyfield Regeneration Project (1,000 homes), Gosden Hill Farm (2,000 homes), and Blackwell Farm (1,800 homes). In addition, there are a number of other allocations of around 100 units. Importantly, the evidence supporting the Plan has had to review the function of land within the Green Belt, and facilitate some land releases from it, in order to achieve the scale of residential development required to meet Guildford’s OAN.

Rushmoor Borough Council is supportive of Guildford’s approach of “leaving no stone unturned” in seeking to meet its housing need. This is positive in as much as it is not asking Rushmoor to help meet its housing needs, and in this respect, at this point in time, both authorities can be said to satisfy the “duty to cooperate” on the cross boundary strategic issue of meeting housing needs.

Policy S2 (Borough Wide Strategy) contains reference to the identification of 43 permanent pitches for Gypsies and Travellers and 6 permanent plots for Travelling Showpeople within Guildford Borough by 2017. A requirement for additional pitches and plots beyond 2017 is also recognised.

Guildford Borough Council is committed to meeting its identified needs for travellers within its administrative boundary in the first instance, which is important to Rushmoor Borough mindful of the fact that even though our Boroughs adjoin, we are cited in a different County. It is noted that in order to meet these needs, as well as some individual site allocations, such as at Sendmarsh and Effingham, the draft Plan requires in Policy H1 (Homes for all) that traveller accommodation should be provided on development sites of 500 homes or more. However, on land around Ash and Tongham, the individual housing sites that together comprise the allocation are individually less than 500 units, hence the policy requirement to provide traveller sites will not apply in this location. In this context, Rushmoor is supportive of the policy approach to planning for travellers as set out in the draft Local Plan.

I object to the SHMA figure of 693 houses per annum. That figure remains unsubstantiated. The south east is a magnet for people and any amount of development would remain insufficient. So – if you don’t build the houses, then people can’t move into this already overcrowded part of the country!

I object to the disproportionate allocation of housing in this particular part of the borough. Indeed, over 23% of the Plan’s new housing is proposed in the immediate localities of Ockham, Ripley, Send and the Horsleys (of which 65% is allocated to FWA/TFM, an area that at present has only 0.3% of the population of GBC).

I would urge GBC to review areas of already developed land. The land around the Law Courts and Surrey Police headquarters is an obvious example where the buildings are unattractive and land is poorly used. Land at the Research Park and University is similarly not well used. Surface parking for instance could be decked, and interspersed with a mix of residential homes to rent or buy. The Plan does not explore these options in any detail. These sites should be looked at to maximise housing opportunities, enhance the built environment and improve land use – but without simply building higher.

The Local Plan does stress the need for protection of the Green Belt and I would restate the very high value local people place on this. So with these competing demands I welcome the ‘brownfield first’ approach to building, such as the regeneration project at Slyfield. Green Belt land, particularly where it abuts AONB, is particularly sensitive. I would highlight in particular the planned development at Blackwell Farm and the impact on the AONB and the Green Belt. I would draw particular attention to the statement in the NPPF where it says, “Green Belt boundaries should only be altered in exceptional circumstances”. I do not feel that this case has yet been made. However, there may have to be some Green Belt encroachment where there is local support in order to meet local housing need.

I congratulate Guildford Borough Council on producing a much improved Local Plan with a positive approach to the future of Guildford. We need more homes. We must drive developers and those that own land to maximise brownfield development and thus to protect the countryside as far as possible. As I have done before, I will continue to lobby Government for vital investment in infrastructure as, without this money, the number of homes we can build will be constrained.

I object to A25 and A35 with the creation of up to 4000 homes. This increase in population will create a huge burden on local services and I question why this area should be used to meet more than its fair share of the new housing quota GBC need to build. Every evening the A3 is solid with traffic queuing to reach Guildford. This would worsen if the houses proposed are built. Such an increase in population would also lead to excessive traffic on subsidiary roads, including Send Road which regularly grinds to a standstill following RTAs on the M25 or A3. We cannot support the loss of working hours etc this would cause and the subsequent affect on the local economy not to mention quality of life.

As the Mole Valley MP with a number of Guildford Wards in my Constituency I must acknowledge the great effort made by many thousands of Guildford Borough residents in contacting the Council and objecting to the latest draft of the Local Plan. This diligence on the part of people determined to protect the unique environment in which they live and work is heartening and encouraging to me as someone who has long campaigned on and fought for Green Belt protection. The proportion of protected land in these wards is of considerable significance.

I will not be addressing in great detail those many individual sites and proposals contained within the draft Local Plan which are highly contentious. I have read many submissions from constituents which do this perfectly effectively and I endorse and agree with these objections. The accumulation of these objections produces a picture in which residents of the Mole Valley Wards of Guildford Borough are united in opposition to what is proposed in the draft Local Plan - if any resident has written in support of the current draft I am not aware of this! I submit that a Plan which has drawn such an utterly negative response, even compared to the much revised 2014 draft, cannot be legitimate and must be withdrawn and reworked.

A reworked Plan would not simply be a matter of slightly altering some boundaries or numbers - at this stage it must constitute a wholesale realignment of thinking and direction of travel on the part of Guildford Borough Council. Central to this would be the Council acknowledging that the present figures for predicted future housing need, around which much of this Local Plan hinges, are currently too high and in light of the particular situation in Guildford Borough (the prevalence of Green Belt land) they must fight as hard as is needed to have these numbers brought down. In this they would have my full support and that of the huge majority of concerned residents.

The approach to the plan should be to proceed on the acceptance that it has proved possible to persuade the Government Inspectors and hence the Government that because of the protections on such a huge proportion of Guildford Borough a lower target of housing numbers is acceptable. I personally believe and hope that the new leadership or GBC is more open, more receptive to new ideas and more creative than that which came before and that it is with the capacity or the council to craft a genuinely successful plan - but only if lessons are learnt and a genuine acceptance of the need for a change or direction guides council thinking from this point onwards.

I object to this policy.

The proposed housing target is a more than doubling of the target since the Local Plan adopted in 2003 and is not supported by the evidence.

According to the 2012 Based SNPP, taking into account natural causes (births and deaths) and movement within the UK, the population of Guildford is projected to decline over the next twenty years. The entire increase in population is due to net international migration of which, according to the ONS, 57% are overseas students who would normally be expected to return home or move away from Guildford on completion of their studies.

Moreover the Household Projections are distorted by the very high proportion of young people in the population of Guildford due to the fact that (1) Guildford is a university town and (2) the permanent address of students is taken as being their term time address. Students are therefore taken as permanent residents of Guildford whereas in reality they move away from Guildford on completion of their studies. According to the Alumni Team at the University of Surrey, only 9% of former students live within the GU postcode.

LAND TO THE WEST OF SNELGATE COTTAGES, OLD EPSOM ROAD, EAST CLANDON, SURREY

The site is in the ownership of Clandon Regis Golf Club, the land is surplus to the Golf Club’s requirements, and save for any proposed development scheme maintaining a reasonable buffer between it and the Golf Course, the proposal would not have any negative impact on the Golf Course.

Policy H1

In particular, H1 (9) seeks to make provision for self-build plots and custom housebuilding plots on smaller sites, yet the policy seems to focus and encourage more the provision self-build on strategic housing sites of 100 units and above, where a 5% allocation is sought.

It is contended, that more emphasis should be placed on facilitating self-build and custom housing provision of smaller sites coming forward for self-build housing.

Policy H3

Rural Exception Homes makes no provision for self-build housing as a way of securing starter homes on small sustainable sites in close proximity to existing settlement boundaries.

Site Description and character.

The site is located within the Green Belt, outside any Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty or Area of Great Landscape Value. The site is also outside the East Clandon Conservation Area. Whilst the Council have produced a Green Belt & Countryside Study as part of its evidence base for the Draft Local Plan, the application site is not identified in the study as being of any strategic value.

The site is within close proximity to the existing settlement boundary, and directly adjacent to a line of cottages known as Snelgate Cottages which front on to the Old Epsom Road, and which run parallel to the new Epsom Road.

[Image]

[Image]

The site is also behind a tree screen. The Snelgate Cottages, which number a row of 12 cottages, are located 90m from the settlement boundary and the Conservation Area of East Clandon.

The cottages, whilst pleasant in character, are of no historic merit and hence were not included in the Clandon Conservation Area.
The site itself is covered by shrubs and trees of very limited quality. The few mature trees that are present, are mainly around the edges of the site and could easily be retained as part of any redevelopment of the site.

Access
The site does not have a formal access point, although there is a pavement that runs for almost the entire length of the site’s frontage onto Old Epsom Road. The site has a frontage onto the Old Epsom Road of 80m, although the overall width of the site is 116m.

Sustainability
It is considered that the site is a well located, sustainable site for a small residential development and one that is well located to the existing local transport services that serve East Clandon. There are bus stops in close proximity to the site along Epsom Road, which connect to Guildford, Epsom and Leatherhead. The site is in close proximity to the village, with its local church, parish hall and local pub. Schools can be found in the neighbouring villages of West Clandon and West Horsley. West Clandon train station is a mainline station with connections to Waterloo and Guildford.

Deliverability
The site is in one ownership, no third-party land is required to achieve appropriate access for the development and there are no known constraints to the development of the site. The site could come forward and be developed within the next five years.

Economic Benefits
The site measures 0.5 hectares and is surplus to Clandon Regis Golf Club’s requirements.

The Golf Club opened in 1994 in 170 acres of land and hosts professional golfing events. However, the decline in the popularity of golf in recent years, has had a knock on effect on the number of annual memberships.

At the same time, increased costs of running the business, maintaining the extensive land holding, coupled with the general poor weather conditions experienced in recent times, has put a strain on the club’s resources. The redevelopment of this 0.5 hectare site, would enable the Club to generate a capital sum that could be invested back into the Golf Course business ensuring that it has the necessary funds to continue.

The Proposal
The indicative plan attached to this submission shows how the site could be sensitively developed with a low-density housing scheme. Sketch Plan SK01 shows a slightly more intense scheme that utilises the sites potential with housing to the rear of the site, thus making best use of the land.

[Sketch 1]

The scheme shows how a proposal of 14 dwellings, made up of 2 and 3 bedroom semi-detached and detached houses, could be achieved on the site.

The proposal would have a density of 7dph, and would include a buffer zone between the application site and the Golf Course.

The proposal would provide affordable housing at 35%, in line with current affordable housing policy, and would equate to 5 affordable dwellings provided on site.

Alternatively, and in line with the recently published Housing White Paper and the Government’s commitment to the Right to Build legislation, the site could be re-developed for self-build and custom build homes.

Consultation with East Clandon Parish Council
An initial approach to East Clandon Parish Council (meeting held 2nd February 2017) regarding the promotion of the site for housing, has proved relatively positive.
The Parish Council felt the site could accommodate a small housing scheme of smaller units and affordable housing. However, the Parish Council felt they needed more detailed information on the design, density and layout of the scheme, as well as more information on the affordable housing element of the scheme, to then consult with the wider parish members before the Parish Council could formally comment on the proposal.

Conclusion

In light of the site’s sustainability and the benefits the proposal could bring to the local area, it is hoped that the site will be included in the Site Allocations document that will accompany the Draft Local Plan.

Policy S2: Borough Wide Strategy

The West Surrey SHMA found that the housing shortfall in the borough was much greater than expected. It concluded that:

“Taking account of these adjusted household formation rates for younger households and adjustment for student growth, the SHMA draws the following conclusions on the overall need for housing across the HMA to be at 1,729 dwellings per annum with need in Guildford at 693 dpa.”

To make up for this shortfall, the plan makes provision for 13,860 new homes which would average 924 dwellings per annum. This is a higher level of development than experienced in Guildford borough during the previous Local Plan period and higher than the assessed need to build flexibility into the plan. The Annual Housing Targets set within this policy average out over the 15 year period at the required 693dpa but delivery is back-loaded to the latter years of the plan. Over the first five years a target of just 2,950 has been set which equates to a delivery of 590dpa. This is considerably less than the assessed need and therefore contrary to the requirements set out in paragraphs 47 to 49 of the NPPF.

• We consider that to comply with the requirements for a deliverable five year supply of housing land, the Council should promote additional sustainable smaller sites on the edges of existing settlements that would be deliverable in years one to five of the Local Plan

To meet the anticipated housing targets in the plan the Council should keep open the option of further sites coming forward within the plan period. We welcome the fact that the level of provision set out in the policy for each year is not set as a ceiling. There is no guarantee that every site identified for residential development will be developed over the life of the plan period and housing delivery should be subject to annual review. Further sites should not be ruled out for residential development should they come forward and be found acceptable in planning terms.
We support the provision of more employment accommodation. The Loseley Estate currently has a range of buildings under its control that are in active employment use.
We bring to the Council’s attention land that has the potential to make an active contribution towards housing provision and infrastructure provision in the Borough.

These sites are known as:
- Land Adjacent to Mount Brown, Artington (Possible Residential Use);
- The paddock adj. Sheiling (Possible Residential Use - possibly 100% affordable);
- Land adjacent to Artington Park and Ride (Extension to Park and Ride);

I am actually becoming heartily sick of writing with my objections, and I guess the council as a whole hope that this will mean I and many others like me will give up and go away. I objected with many others to size of the previous plans and your answer? To make an even bigger proposal for development. If this is what you plan, you must by law go through a full and proper process, not short cut the system and try to sneak things through in a way which is totally invalid and I object to the way in which this has been done.

I object to the number of houses you are proposing in our area and in others in the Borough. As far as I can gather, the number of homes the Council are planning to build in our area over the next few years far exceeds the need and would stretch the infrastructure and facilities to breaking point. It appears to be based on a report that none of us are allowed to see. Didn't we as council tax payers actually pay for this? Just because other authorities used this company to determine the need does not make it right or accurate. Let us see the basis of their figures as the secrecy surrounding it suggests they may well be unfounded.

I object to plans to build large new conurbations at Wisley Airfield, Gosden Hill and Blackwell Farm as I believe that the need for such large numbers of housing is based on an inaccurate, flawed or no longer relevant projections, and does not protect our local environment.

When are our elected representatives going to listen to what we are saying?
What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

I wish to strongly object to your so called revised Local Plan.

After all the time and effort I and thousands of people in the Guildford Area have been presented with a plan, which is almost a duplicate of the original plan and I wonder why GBC had to rent facilities in Guildford to present the plan only to restate your original thoughts, despite the objections.

The Gosden Hill Farm site, Wisley, Garlick's Arch, Send Marsh, Burnt Common and Ripley will produce thousands of extra homes and vehicles without the road infrastructure to support it. The A3 in particular is full to capacity already.

I have to say the consultants you employed do not appreciate the current traffic difficulties that currently exist. With the extra housing it would gridlock our villages and no one would get any benefits. The infrastructure of services including Hospitals would also be overwhelmed.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

The Plan is flawed in places and confused.

GBC has totally failed to implement the Guidance set out in the NPPF with regard to using Greenbelt land for any development. In recent correspondence dated the 28th June 2016 the Minister Brandon Lewis said inter alia ‘The Government has put in place the strongest protections for the Green Belt. The Framework (NPPF) makes it clear that inappropriate development may be allowed only where very special circumstances exist, and that Green Belt boundaries should be adjusted only in exceptional circumstances, through the Local Plan process and with the support of local people. We have been repeatedly clear that demand for housing alone will not change Green Belt boundaries’

Other guidance has emanated from the Dept. for instance one numerous occasions GBC has had cause to appear before the Planning Inspectorate in respect of land set aside for the Travelling Communities Sites in Normandy were dealt with by way of temporary and personal permissions being given to allow GBC to come up with alternative and suitable sites. In respect of Palm Nurseries a further application was called in by the Minister who made it clear that no further development on the land was acceptable because the land was greenbelt, meeting all of the greenbelt standards but in particular openness.

Recent decisions on the question of sites in Normandy and Flexford are set out below for your ease of reference

1. It is clear from the Plan that an assumption was made from the start that Guildford needed to expand as a Regional Centre and as such the Brownfield sites in the town should be allocated to Commercial and Retail use. That assumption then turned into a presumption that it would need to build on the Green Belt to meet its housing target.

This presumption has led to building on the Green Belt becoming the main focus for development of housing. The Town Centre Plan is incomplete the funding for infrastructure falls far short of what is required to bring about such large scale development and yet the ‘balancing exercise’ of exercising constraints on the building proposed has purportedly been done.

They as such have not followed the NPPF with regard to the Greenbelt as constraint appears not to have been exercised in this regard by any measure. The question of ‘exceptionality’ or ‘very special circumstances has not been addressed in respect of any of the sites removing land from greenbelt, either by way of increasing ‘settlement boundaries’ insetting’ or allocating green belt sites to housing. Neither has it been addressed when removing land from urban development areas to create new green belt.

1. There appears to be no Heritage Site Assessment rather a MERE LIST OF Grade 1 and 11 listed buildings accessible (in theory) from Surrey County Council’s website. Indeed I found the information almost impossible to find and I am a retired lawyer! I would say that this would be necessary in order to consider any development proposals it is not sufficient to just raise this issue at Planning Permission stage (NPPF 126).

GBC hopes to remain an historic county town and be a centre for technological industry at the same time. In order achieve this it would need to have a top quality medium rise (8-10 story) technological centre, with workplaces, retail, leisure and flats, in an area offset from the town centre, Slyfield or somewhere similar. This would enable people to live and work sustainably.

The historic town centre should be preserved for retail, tourism, housing, particularly more one and two bedroom flats, and leisure. It would be cost-effective and sustainable, as there would be less need for expensive upgrades to transport infrastructure, as people would not be travelling in so much from the villages. The Town Centre would be transformed from being a ‘ghost town’ to one living and breathing with residents enjoying the arts, theatre, restaurant and cafe culture.

Taller buildings in Guildford will have to come, if not in this Plan, then in the next, or the one after.

This would leave the important Green Belt countryside available for farming, wildlife, tourism and leisure. Guildford is as much defined by its historical centre as it is by its greenbelt countryside and the greenbelt should be as carefully preserved as the historic town it surrounds. Much of Guildford history is found in its greenbelt countryside but the Borough Council seem unaware of this. In respect of Normandy and Flexford a very comprehensive assessment was provided as part of the Parish Council response but there is no reference ito it in the plan other than to highlight an area on Policy page A46 which is considered to be of High Archaeological Potential. Certainly no account appears to have been taken of it, One such property ‘Glaziers’ Grade 11 is within 25 metres of the proposed site at A46.

1. A further fundamental flaw is the amount of infrastructure improvement required to deliver the Plan, much of which is unfunded. Some improvements are dependent on external providers, the Highways Agency, Surrey County Council and Network Rail, who may have different priorities. I applaud GBC for attempting to tackle the problems that Guildford has with its transport infrastructure. I am not sure how successful they will prove to be. Guildford is by nature a ‘Gap Town’, a route centre constrained by its geography. Many of the ideas for improvement of major pinch points cannot be delivered either because of this reason or because to do so would require land in an AONB or possible demolition of Heritage property. Further some of the proposals will simply not alleviate the problem

2. Another fundamental flaw is the amount of extra infrastructure developers are expected to fund. The bulk of these costs incurred by developers will be passed on to property buyers, driving house prices higher. A recent example of this type of development is found in the neighbouring Town of Aldershot. (13/P00108) There the developer has been made responsible for schools community facilities offices etc and the like. The 3850 properties that will be sold start at £395000 for 2 bed accommodation. 2 bed properties in Aldershot are presently £169,000 to £200,000

The plan is not sound in other places. I would draw your attention to:

Duty to co-operate

I can see no evidence that GBC have co-operated fully with Rushmoor Borough Council and Surrey Heath Borough Council. Both the Aldershot Urban Extension (AUE) in Rushmoor and the Princess Royal Barracks (PB) in Surrey Heath will impact on GBC’s transport strategy and housing numbers. Although both Authorities are mentioned, both in the Transport Strategy and the West Surrey SHMA, it is not clear where data concerning these sites has been fed into either Transport or Housing policies.

Duty to Consult  The plan is presented using at times impenetrable language and with confusing contradictory information (eg Settlement Hierarchy and Sustainability report for Normandy Flexford see later)

It is inconsistent in approach for instance see A49. The policy fails to acknowledge that present occupation is temporary and personal only. That the SOS has indicated already this is not an appropriate use of the greenbelt. The Borough has also failed to provide in its policy statement despite having done so in other A Policy documents ‘and must remain in perpetuity as Traveller accommodation whilst there remains an identified need for Traveller accommodation in the borough’.

One can only speculate that this is because they are aware they have failed to enforce the personal permission aspect of the present occupation knowing that the sites have been occupied mainly by eastern European workers who are not members of the travelling community but are mere sub lessees. The point is that it is impossible to find this provision elsewhere and one is left floundering on the question of how to respond and properly object. The Evidence base has changed frequently without highlighting and there are masses of it

The amount and complexity of the documentation is such that it is not appropriate at this stage to allocate the minimum recommended time to the consultation process of just 6 weeks, especially as for Normandy and Flexford the changes have only been suggested in this plan and not mentioned in previous consultation. Indeed I say that in respect of all of the changes at Normandy and Flexford this consultation should be a S118 consultation not a S19 one

Late inclusion of Policies A43 and A46 and Insetting in Normandy and in Flexford

These sites were not included in the last version of the Plan. They were not announced until April 2016. This is the first time residents have been able to comment on them, and have had very little time to consider their responses. GBC have been aware of A46 since 2014. Cllr Paul Spooner had the opportunity to engage with Normandy residents on A46 when he addressed Normandy residents in April 2016, but chose not to take it. The NPPF is quite clear that there should be early and meaningful engagements with residents.

During the last consultation the vagary of the maps made it impossible to respond to the proposal to ‘inset ‘the present homes in Normandy and Flexford to the extent that area has been altered, because it was simply not clear. The Parish Council complained of that but no effort was made to respond and the summary prepared by the GBC of the objections was not full and complete

Failure to meet the principles of the NPPF
There are places where the GBC Submission Local Plan does not meet the principles set out in the NPPF and these are dealt with below in context.

In particular, GBC have not met either its own policies on Biodiversity, found in Policy 14, nor those of the NPPF paragraph 14. There will be a significant net loss of Biodiversity if this Plan goes ahead in full.

Paragraph 119 NPPF is also disregarded with its guidance that “the presumption in favour of sustainable development (paragraph 14) does not apply where development requiring assessment under the Birds or Habitats Directives, is being considered, planned or determined”. Guildford surely needs to recognise this strategic policy in view of its close proximity to the Thames Basin Heaths.

The GBC Spatial Vision states "Over 250ha, equivalent to more than 350 football pitches, will be provided in perpetuity for the use of residents and visitors. This space will also support and improve the borough’s biodiversity". This is disingenuous. GBC plans to use 467ha of land that is either farmland or other green space for building. Against this it is creating 249.8ha of mixed use Suitable Alternative Greenspace (SANG) a net loss 218.2 ha of fields and other green space.

THE EVIDENCE BASE

You ask if the evidence base is adequate, up-to-date and relevant. I have objections to parts of the three documents below.

I also object to the fact that it seems apparent there is no Heritage Sites Assessment (as referred to above), there being 22 such sites in the Administrative area of Normandy. There are also 4 sites of Archaeological potential one of which is of National importance and another still under examination.

- Transport Strategy and Settlement Hierarchy & Settlement Profiles

In the GBC Transport Strategy I object to;

Local Roads Network Strategy.

Major external developments have not been sufficiently accounted for, leading to flaws in the strategy on Local Roads in the West of the Borough. The AUE, 3,850 homes, and PRB, 1,200 homes, are already under development and significant traffic flows to and from Guildford will result. The AUE is predicated on many residents using the car. Local Roads affected will be the A323, A331, B3411 and also the A31. To this is to be added 1,300 homes in Ash and 1,100 in Normandy. The effect on these local roads will be severe. One has to question whether the additional traffic anticipated by the development in AUE and PRB would lead to gridlock as there are already too many problems experienced on the A323 and A31.

Improvements to the A323 and to Westwood Lane are insufficient and delivery is too late. Judging from the sum to be spent, £6.6m, improvements will be minor. LRN9 -LRN 13 and LRN 18-LRN19 will deliver improvements between 2017 and 2026. The A323 is especially vulnerable, being a narrow A road with no opportunity to widen it along its length. Large queues already form at peak time at junctions. The planned improvements will be delivered well after the first commuters travel from the AUE and PRB to Guildford.

There will be resulting pollution and longer journeys, frustration for motorists and inconvenience and potentially health issues from traffic pollution for villagers. GBC has not produced a strategy that deals with the quantum leap in commuters from the new developments in West of the Borough and external developments.

More Information in Annex A

- AM4 delivery 2020 - 2024.
The Christmas Pie Trail runs from Wood Street to Farnham. The surface is unmade and unlit. It is muddy in winter and narrow where it passes through woods. There is little scope for lighting and improving the surface at the Wood Street end, as it runs through Broad Street and Backside Commons, which are both SNCIs. It is unsuitable for year round travel.

I object to the housing target in the SHMA

I would have liked to have been able to understand how the housing target is calculated. Requests have been made under FIA for information about the modelling etc but this is not to hand in time for the Consultation process.

I accept that the owner of the model that calculates housing need wishes to protect their intellectual property. I do not believe that GBC should accept the findings of the model just because other Authorities have. I would have liked to have seen the input that GBC submitted for the model. A summary of the test scripts run by the developer to show that the model delivers correct results should have been made available to the Borough Council and to those of us who are in a position to check it.

There have been a number of alternative studies carried out, entirely due to the fact that the GBC have refused to work openly with the community on this issue. The GBC used public funds to commission the work of GL Hearn yet failed to put in place proper checks to allow them to comply with their duties. On that basis I would urge you to rely instead on the study produced by ‘Green Balance’ instructed by Compton Worplesdon Parish Councils and by the CPRE

I do not accept and OBJECT STRONGLY that the numbers produced are an accurate reflection of a truly objective housing need in the Borough

To what extent have GBC engaged with Rushmoor and Surrey Heath? The AUE is 500m from the Guildford border. Have the AUE and PRB been taken into account when calculating the housing numbers, especially as they are intended in part for people who work in Guildford?

Furthermore I object strongly to the treatment of the students from the University of Surrey. Surrey University have failed to deliver promises to house their students in accommodation built on their extensive land holdings. Manor Farm was removed from the Greenbelt in 2003 with a promise to do so and GBC seems to think it is acceptable to agree they should only house 60% of their students on site. Given Guildford almost traditional role as ‘domatory town’ it should be 100%. There is plenty of room for development. Instead considerable ground is wasted both at the university and on Manor Farm for open car parking

I object to the flawed nature of the Settlement Hierarchy and Settlement Profiles in respect of Wider Normandy

The Administrative Area of Normandy is made up of five hamlets, of which Normandy is one.

The Settlement Hierarchy and Settlement Profiles;

- Confuse Normandy with Wider Normandy (referred to rather quaintly as Greater Normandy by GBC)
- Ignore two of the hamlets, Willey Green and Pinewoods
- Consider Flexford to be part of Normandy, although they have been informed that this is not the case
- Consider Normandy and Flexford as being one settlement when it suits their case, and as two when not
- Claim that Normandy would benefit from shops, with no proof. How up-to-date is any evidence that GBC are using? Is it pre-superfast Broadband? Why have they ignored the reported result of the Household survey carried out for Normandy PC
- There are 10 errors/omissions in the Settlement Profile for Normandy/Flexford. For example; GBC state that we have one SNCI in Normandy when there are eight: a Scheduled Ancient Monument of National Importance which lies partly in Flexford is omitted.

I object to the fact that there is no Heritage Sites Assessment even though there are 22 Grade 11 listed buildings in the area 8 of which are sites on the curtilage of Site 46. One of these was occupied till his death by John Cobbett

There are also 2 sites of high archaeological potential and a site of National importance (mentioned above). More information in Annex B

Policy S2 Borough Wide Strategy and Spatial Vision

The need to provide for the housing, employment and infrastructure needs of the Borough is understood and supported, which is important in ensuring the quality of life and availability of life chances for all of the Boroughs current and future residents, but given that the effect of this on the environment and quality of life within the Borough, care needs to be taken to ensure that the level of provision is no more than is necessary to meet those needs. Hence Pirbright Parish Council would ask for the housing and other proposals set out within the Plan be further reviewed to ensure that:

- the level of housing and other development proposed is no more than is necessary to meet the needs of the Borough (and the demographic model giving rise to the housing forecasts is fully tested);
- that the scale and location of housing and other development proposed is the most sustainable possible in terms of its location and distribution;
- should ideally be concentrated within and around the main towns to reduce the need for car travel and promote sustainable patterns movement using pedestrian, cycle, bus and rail;
- that preference is given to brownfield sites where they are sustainably located and would otherwise be acceptable;
- should have regard to the need to protect the character and quality of the Borough.

The housing numbers that have been suggested have not been substantiated as requested and therefore most of the suggested development sites should be removed. I am not saying no development but it has to be in line with the facilities and infrastructure that exists. Words to imply that infrastructure will be improved with absolutely no detail or time schedules is quite unacceptable.

I object to removal of Send and other villages from the green belt. This can only be done in exceptional circumstances according to law, for which none exist in this area. Urban development is not an exceptional circumstance, nor is lining the pockets of developers. Any weakening or exceptions made to green belt protection will lead to its ultimate demise, and once it is gone there is no going back. The green belt must be protected in its entirety in perpetuity as the law intended.
Developers avoid brown-field sites as the location may be less desirable and cost of development can be higher, resulting in a lower rate of return. There are many such sites in the Borough which it should be mandatory to develop before any other sites are even considered.

I will be accused of not wanting development in ‘my own back yard’, but my concerns are more far reaching than my local area. I believe the south east of England is at capacity, and want to see vision and innovation in development practice for the future good of all. Our elected representatives at all levels must conduct themselves with due diligence and integrity, for the long term future of all.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Attached documents:
It is noted that policy S2, Planning for the borough – our spatial development strategy, of the Local Plan, intends to meet a housing need equivalent to a level of 654 dwellings per annum. This is the figure set out in the Land Availability Assessment (LAA) Addendum (June 2017).

However, it is not the figure set out in the Final West Surrey SHMA (September/October 2015), which identified an overall need for housing over the 2013-33 period for Guildford of 693 homes per annum. This document was prepared by GL Hearn on behalf of Guildford, Waverley and Woking Borough Councils jointly.

Runnymede Borough Council is concerned that Guildford is not proposing to meet its full OAN, with consideration therefore having to be given to the question as to whether the Plan is unsound on that basis, notwithstanding that there has been some joint working with Waverley and Woking in pursuit of the Duty to Co-operate.

Moreover, as Runnymede is not yet in a position to be able to confirm that it is able to meet its own housing needs in its emerging Local Plan, ‘Runnymede 2035’, this Council will continue to request assistance concerning this matter from Guildford (and, indeed, from other Local Planning Authority areas).

Representation on Policy S2: Borough Wide Strategy & Table 1 – Proposed Delivery between 2018 -2033

Introduction

This representation relates to the Guildford Borough Proposed Submission Local Plan Strategies and Sites document. Representations were previously submitted at the Regulation 18 stage in November 2013 in relation to the Guildford Borough Local Plan Strategy and Sites Issues and Options document and in September 2014 at the Draft Plan stage.

In terms of Local Plan preparation, the Guildford Borough Draft Local Plan: strategy and sites document (2014) set out the Council’s preferred options for growth. Our client’s site at land south of New Pond Road, Farncombe was identified as part of a residential allocation (number 80) within the Draft Local Plan. It was also proposed that the land be removed from the Green Belt and the Green Belt boundary re-aligned.

The 2014 Draft Plan contained the following reference:

“4.113 In accordance with national policy, Green Belt boundaries need to follow defensible lines that are easily recognisable and likely to be permanent. This includes for instance roads, railway lines, woodlands and hedgerows. We have reviewed and followed the recommendations of the GBCS with the following amendments…:

Farncombe: we have identified a development site that adjoins the settlement of Farncombe and land reserved for future development in Waverley Borough Council’s Local Plan 2002. We will continue to work together to progress this land over the plan period”.

The previously proposed draft allocation comprised of three main parcels of land. The furthest west is the site that is the subject of this representation (Countryside Properties land). To the east is land associated with New Pond Cottage and
New Pond Farm. The furthest east is land promoted by Black Onyx on behalf of the Podger Estate. Countryside Properties are cooperating with those with an interest in the land.

Deliverability

Paragraph 14 of the NPPF emphasises that:

“At the heart of the National Planning Policy Framework is a presumption in favour of sustainable development, which should be seen as a golden thread running through both plan-making and decision taking.

For plan-making this means that:

local planning authorities should positively seek opportunities to meet the development needs of their area,

For Local Plans:

- Any adverse impacts of doing so would significantly and demonstrably outweigh the benefits, when assessed against the policies in this Framework taken as a whole, or
- Specific policies in this framework indicate that development should be restricted…”

Paragraph 47 of the National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF) focuses on the requirement of Local Planning Authorities to significantly boost the supply of housing.

The footnotes associated with paragraph 47 of the NPPF states that for a site to be deliverable, it needs to be available, in a suitable location and viable. It is required that a site is achievable and that there is a realistic prospect of it coming forward in the next five years.

Countryside Properties confirms that the land south of New Pond Road can be delivered within the first five years of the adoption of the Guildford Borough Local Plan and contribute around 90 dwellings to the Borough’s 5 year housing land supply with an estimated average construction rate of about 30 dwellings per annum.

Local Authorities are required to work together to ensure that housing requirements across the whole Housing Market Area are addressed.

The Council identifies the key pieces of evidence base relevant to housing as being:

- West Surrey Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA)
- Green Belt and Countryside Study (GBCS)
- Land Availability Assessment (LAA)

SHMA

The final joint West Surrey SHMA (September 2015) indicated that the objectively assessed housing need (OAN) for Guildford borough is 693 homes per year, or 13,860 dwellings over the Plan period (2013-2033). The annual figure consists of a demographic requirement of 517 homes with an uplift of 25 homes for student growth, 120 homes for economic growth and 31 homes to address market signals and affordability issues (paragraph 4.3 of the Housing Delivery Topic Paper [HDTP]).

The HDTP states (paragraph 4.4142) that the Council consider it can meet the OAN with flexibility. The total potential provision of new homes across the plan period (including completions since 2013 and outstanding capacity) is 15,844. This is identified as including a buffer of 1,984 dwellings, rather than over-provision. Clearly, not all sites will come forward as expected during the plan period. Furthermore, we believe that in reality the Council lacks the housing supply buffer it claims to exist. We set out further below that we also consider that there are serious deficiencies in the SHMA in terms of the overall OAN identified, and that we consider the actual housing requirement figure to be higher.
 Whilst Waverley is currently progressing its Local Plan, which aims to meet its OAN, there is currently unmet need arising within the HMA from Woking Borough Council. It has an adopted housing requirement of 292 dwellings per annum (2010 – 2027) against an OAN of 517. There is therefore a shortfall of 225 homes per year between 2013 and 2027, a total of 3,150 homes (paragraph 4.4 of the Housing Delivery Topic Paper).

NLP – Review and Critique of the West Surrey SHMA

NLP have prepared a review and critique of the West Surrey SHMA. Below we set out the key findings of the assessment. The full report is attached in Section 2 Appendix 1 of our representations.

Paragraph 3.5 of the NLP report refers to the fact that the SHMA models three alternative demographic scenarios as sensitives to the 2012 SNPP (para 4.62)

- a 12 year migration trend,
- a scenario which makes an unattributable population change (UPC) adjustment; and finally
- a scenario which takes into account the London migration patterns planned for in the adopted London Plan (2015).

However, the SHMA discounts the outcomes of these scenarios and concludes on the 2012 SNPP scenario as the demographic starting point for the West Surrey HMA. NLP considered this approach to be wrong.

NLP also concluded that the SHMA fails to properly consider the issue of London migration. It points out that the housing targets within the Adopted London Plan (2015) are based on a ‘central variant’ population projection produced by the Greater London Authority (GLA) which assumed migratory outflows from London will increase by 5% and inflows to London will fall by 3% compared with recent trends over the recessionary period (i.e. those that have informed the 2012-based SNPP). These assumptions have formed the basis for the London Plan, with the Examination Inspector ‘signing off’ these assumptions, inferring that they are likely to happen (paragraph 3.8).

Paragraph 3.9 states that:

“The London Plan (2015) deviates from national projections and, as this assumption influences migration at a national level, this needs to be taken into account. West Surrey’s location within the wider South East means that any assumptions around fewer people moving to London and more people leaving London (some of which to West Surrey) will result in increased population growth and housing need within the HMA as a whole. This will be of most significance to Guildford where historically there has been substantial out migration from Guildford Borough to London. As London is not planning to meet the needs of all of the migrants to London as is currently modelled within the 2012 SNPP, Guildford will have to consider how it will accommodate its current residents who will not be planned for in London. When these assumptions are applied in the London Migration scenario, Guildford has a housing need of 568 per annum (Table 25 of the SHMA), compared to 517 per annum under the 2012 SNPP scenario. Taking into account the London migration assumptions inherent within the adopted London Plan (2015), Guildford needs to plan for 51 extra dwellings every year, over the plan period this is more than 1,000 homes. For consistency across the HMA, the outcome of this scenario for the HMA as a whole is an additional 60 units per annum over the plan period”.

The above finding is very significant. It demonstrates that over the course of the plan period Guildford would need to find provision for an additional 1,020 dwellings, and that across the HMA as a whole, a further 1,200 dwellings will need to be provided.

The use of different economic scenarios has been questioned by NLP (paragraph 3.21). It has pointed out that a different economic scenario has been used to determine associated housing need in Waverley (recent trends / the LPA’s economic strategy, whereas the economic scenario used for Woking and Guildford is based upon forecasts. As a consequence, the employment growth assumptions are not being made consistently across the HMA.
There is a clear danger that the use of different economic scenarios might result in the failure to ensure that the total number of jobs and their associated housing needs across the HMA are adequately provided for.

NLP states (paragraph 3.25) that it does not consider that the SHMA has suitably addressed the need for a market signals uplift in West Surrey and its adjustment is not compliant with the requirements of the PPG. It reports:

“...To make an uplift for market signals, the SHMA runs a sensitivity scenario to the demographic-led projections whereby the household formation rates amongst the 25-34 age group improves, such that rates return to their 2001 level by 2033 (para 7.53), i.e. it is assumed that more people in this age group will form their own households rather than living with their parents or in house shares. The SHMA concludes that making this adjustment to headship rates would result in the need for an additional 98 dpa on the demographic-led needs or 100 dpa on the economic-led needs (Tables 53-55). In either case this represents a 7% increase/uplift on the starting point across the HMA to address market signals. The SHMA appears to conclude (para 7.58) that this level of uplift is reasonable and would secure an improvement in affordability”.

Reference is made (paragraph 3.30) to the Eastleigh Planning Inspector concluding that a modest uplift of 10% is a reasonable proxy for quantifying an increase demographic based needs to take account of ‘modest’ negatively performing market signals. Whereas, more recently the Canterbury Inspector accepted a 20% uplift for ‘more than modest’ market signals pressure. This represents a more appropriate starting point for considering uplift according to NLP.

It is pointed out in paragraph 3.31 that:

“Based on the cost of housing indicators (house prices, rental values and lower quartile affordability measures), as summarised below in Table 3.2, the market signals pressures in West Surrey are well in excess of those identified in Eastleigh and Canterbury in different respects”.

The report suggests that affordable housing needs equate to an annual housing requirement of 3,106 dwellings per annum to meet affordable housing need in full across the HMA. Whilst it is recognised that delivery of that quantum of housing is unrealistic, the SHMA fails to provide any uplift at all for affordable housing (paragraph 3.39). This is considered to be an incorrect approach. Particularly given that the SHMA is silent upon how the affordability gap might otherwise be narrowed.

Paragraph 4.20 makes mention of the fact that:

“..Paragraph 47 of the NPPF requires that full OAN for market and affordable housing should be met in the HMA, as far as consistent with the policies set out in the Framework. As it stands Guildford are not complying with this requirement because it has not been evidenced that the unmet needs of Woking will be met entirely in Waverley as a result of Guildford taking on none of Woking’s unmet housing needs. Paragraph 14 of the NPPF requires that Local Plans should meet OAN, with sufficient flexibility to adapt to rapid change, unless “any adverse impacts of doing so would significantly and demonstrably outweigh the benefits”. It is not clear from the Guildford SA that this tilted balancing exercise has been undertaken. There is insufficient evidence to show that Guildford meeting even some of Woking’s unmet housing needs would be so significantly and demonstrably outweighed by the negative impacts of doing so. Indeed, the SA itself falls short of concluding that Guildford could fundamentally do no more than its own OAN. It sets out (para 8.2.2 sub-bullet (viii)) its own conclusion that “It is far from clear that Guildford is relatively unconstrained / suited for growth above OAN in the sub-regional context. This is the finding of the SA work...”; being far from clear cannot be equated to ‘significantly and demonstrably’ outweighing benefits”

In paragraph 5.2 the NLP report concludes that the SHMA significantly underestimates the true scale of housing need in West Surrey and an OAN in excess of 1,729 dpa across the HMA is justified.

Other Considerations

There are a number of constraints which the Council took on board with regard when it sought to determine its ability to accommodate the OAN. This includes:

• The Thames Basins Heaths Special Protection Area (SPA) which covers the northern parts of our borough,
• The Surrey Hills Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty (AONB) which covers the southern half of the borough,
• The Metropolitan Green Belt which covers 89 per cent of the borough,
• Flood risk across the borough, and which is high within areas of the town centre,
• Infrastructure capacity where appropriate mitigation is not possible.

Reference is made in paragraph 4.19 of the Housing Delivery Topic Paper to the fact that the southern half of the borough is designated as part of the Surrey Hills Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty (AONB) and that the NPPF affords this land the highest status of protection (paragraph 115).

There is a current commitment by Natural England to undertake an AONB boundary review. A study has been undertaken by landscape consultants Hankinson Duckett Associates, through Surrey County Council, reviewing the Surrey Landscape Character Assessment and looking for candidate areas within the AGLV that contribute to natural beauty. The study identifies a number of recommended additional areas of Surrey Hills AONB and one secondary potential additional Area of Surrey Hills AONB within Guildford borough. However, a review of the AONB will need to consider both areas for inclusion and deletion in order to be considered robust.

In paragraph 4.21 of the Housing Delivery Topic Paper the Council refers to the fact that it has:

“…sought to strengthen the level of protection afforded to the AONB within the Proposed Submission Local Plan. In accordance with the NPPF, we are not proposing any major development unless there is a strong and over-riding justification for doing so. As a result of this, the plan no longer proposes to allocate a site for 100 homes on the edge of Farncombe, at New Pond Road which is located in the AONB”.

Paragraphs 115 and 116 of the NPPF are particularly relevant in terms of the AONB

“Great weight should be given to conserving landscape and scenic beauty in National Parks, the Broads and Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty, which have the highest status of protection in relation to landscape and scenic beauty. The conservation of wildlife and cultural heritage are important considerations in all these areas, and should be given great weight in National Parks and the Broads” (paragraph 115).

“Planning permission should be refused for major developments in these designated areas except in exceptional circumstances and where it can be demonstrated they are in the public interest. Consideration of such applications should include an assessment of:

• the need for the development, including in terms of any national considerations, and the impact of permitting it, or refusing it, upon the local economy;
• the cost of, and scope for, developing elsewhere outside the designated area, or meeting the need for it in some other way; and
• any detrimental effect on the environment, the landscape and recreational opportunities, and the extent to which that could be moderated” (paragraph 116).

Evidently at the previous stage of the Draft Local Plan the Council considered that the proposed allocation of our client’s site in an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty (AONB) was justified due to the overriding need to meet the overall housing requirement, and due to the fact that development of the site was not deemed harmful to the overall protection of the Surrey Hills AONB. This position is reinforced by the work conducted by Barton Willmore on behalf of Countryside Properties and included in the site specific representation.

The Council has dropped the proposed allocation in the Pre Submission Local Plan on the basis that it is able to deliver its overall housing requirement without the need to utilise any AONB land. However, as we have indicated above, we do not believe this to be the case as we consider the actual housing requirement figure to be significantly higher than specified in the OAN.

It is the case that the Thames Basin Heath SPA covers a large area across the northern part of the Borough, and the Surrey Hills AONB stretches across its southern parts. It is clearly appropriate for these to be afforded great protection. However, in relation to the latter, reference should be made to the forthcoming AONB Boundaries Review to be undertaken by Natural England. This will need to consider not only what other sites might merit AONB status, but also which sites might no longer warrant such status. This will ensure that it is the most valuable landscape that is afforded the strongest protection.
Urban Capacity Proposals

Guildford town centre is identified in paragraph 4.37 of the HDTP as being likely to be a source of housing supply that will deliver 1,172 dwellings to 2033, with a further 1,570 dwellings being delivered over the wider Guildford urban area (paragraph 4.41).

Guildford’s housing delivery rate has been poor in recent years. Over the recent 7 year period between 2008/9 and 2014/15, housing completions only averaged 202 dwellings per annum. Given this, it seems unrealistic to assume that sites in and around Guildford Town Centre will deliver substantial quantities of housing completions. Whilst it is entirely appropriate for the Council to seek to bolster residential accommodation in and around Guildford Town Centre, any allocations and assumptions concerning future housing land supply must be realistic and based upon likely market demand, rather than on aspirations alone. Furthermore, there are a number of technical and financial constraints, not least flood risk from the River Wey, but also ownership, access and viability (including CIL), which are also likely to impede early delivery.

The unanimous rejection in June 2016 by the Council’s Planning Committee of the £150 million Solum proposal to redevelop Guildford’s railway station and construct a new residential quarter of 445 apartments casts further doubt upon whether the delivery of significant amounts of new town centre housing provision is realistic.

We have submitted a separate representation in respect of proposed housing site allocation Policy A46 (land to the south of Normandy and north of Flexford). We note that the Council states in paragraph 4.130 that:

“…The site is deliverable and is able to deliver more homes in the earlier years than other individual strategic sites, and complete prior to those sites. The quantum of homes provided on this site is needed to contribute towards the OAN – the absence of this site would leave little overall flexibility. As set out above it is important that where sustainable to do so, we seek to boost significantly the supply of housing in the first five years. The delivery of this site is not dependent on A3 infrastructure timescales, and can start to deliver within the first five years following adoption of the Local Plan”.

We believe that there are other better sites, including land at New Pond Road, Farncombe (see our separate site based representation in Section 3) that are better able to contribute towards the OAN and 5 year housing land supply. We do not consider that the development of the Normandy site, which has been identified as being located in a red (high) sensitivity land parcel represents an appropriate strategic housing allocation site. It is apparent that the Council’s motivation for the allocation is that it will deliver a high quantum of housing on a single site, and that sustainability considerations have been put to one side.

Windfalls

The Land Availability Assessment (February 2016) seeks in Appendix D to justify the inclusion of 625 dwellings over the plan period as windfall. The windfall allowance being 50 homes per year in years 6-10 and 11-15, and 25 homes in years 1-5. However, the justification for this seems to be largely based upon the recent rate of prior approvals. We do not consider that this provides any sound justification for the proposed windfall allowance. Clearly, there has been a rush of applications to convert offices to residential accommodation in the recent past, but suitable sites are likely to dry up relatively quickly. Furthermore, garden land developments are likely to contribute less towards the windfall allowance than was the case in the past.

Housing Delivery

The following table in the HDTP (paragraph 4.169) shows that housing completion rates over the last decade have been low. It also demonstrates a record of under delivery of new homes against the OAN, leading to a significant backlog accruing over a short period of time.

<thead>
<tr>

</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2006/07</td>
<td>357</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2007/08</td>
<td>478</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
The envisaged housing backlog at the point of adoption is 2019 dwellings (HDTP, paragraph 4.156). It is stated in the following paragraph that:

"4.157 Neighbouring authorities cannot meet this backlog, and it cannot be met in the first five years of the plan without significant harm to the Green Belt, and other harm (as considered in the Sustainability Appraisal, Option 5). It can however be met within the first 10 years from adoption, and this is considered the most sustainable approach to development within the borough, whilst not restricting development coming forward earlier, anticipating that accrued backlog will not be met until year 2027/28".

The Council argues in the HDTP that it would be unreasonable for it to deliver a 5 year housing supply that addresses the current housing backlog, and also provides a 20% buffer to the supply:

"4.171 To take this deficit, plus an additional year’s supply (693, 20% buffer) would require provision of 2712 homes. Add to this the five year requirement (693*5 = 3465) in this period, and this totals a required provision of 6177 homes over a five year period (1235 per year). This is not possible to achieve during this period (2018/19- 2022/2023) without significant harm to the Green Belt and other harm. This would require development of many high sensitivity Green Belt sites, which we do not consider a reasonable option. As set out, the SA has considered an option that seeks to maximise early delivery (option 5)."

Given the acknowledged fact that housing delivery will be weak in the early years of the Plan period, it will be important to bring forward smaller and medium sized sites such as the site at New Pond Road, Farncombe rather than being dependent upon much larger sites such as proposed housing allocation A46 at Normandy / Flexford, which will need to deliver major new infrastructure. This is demonstrated by the Table below which forms part of Policy S2. It shows that it will take until the late 2020’s before housing delivery rates rise significantly above the OAN target of 696 dpa.

Summary and Conclusions

The housing target proposed to meet Guildford’s housing needs based upon the OAN figure identified in the Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) is inadequate. The NLP report produced for our client has highlighted the following key deficiencies, which suggest that the OAN needs to be increased:

- In-migration from London indicates that more than 1,000 dwellings will be required in Guildford and up to 1,200 dwellings across the West Surrey HMA;
- At least a 20% uplift is required to the initial demographic requirement to take account of market signals;
- No uplift has been made to take account of the very high affordable housing requirement that has been identified; and

Consequently, we consider that ‘Table 1 – Planned delivery between 2018 and 2033’ is deficient in terms of the identified components of housing supply for the reasons set out above. Furthermore, it fails to ensure that the Local Plan delivers a 5 year housing land supply from the outset.

In the case of ‘Normandy and Flexford village expansion (Policy A46) which is identified in the table for 1,100 dwellings, we have submitted separate representations explaining why we consider this to be an unsustainable housing allocation. We have also submitted additional representations in respect of the following proposed housing allocations: A38, A41, A44 & A47.

The identified housing land supply is unlikely to be fully deliverable due to the substantive infrastructure requirements relating to a significant number of proposed housing allocation sites.

As a consequence of the necessity to bring about a step change in housing delivery rates, the Council will need to ensure that it makes provision for necessary Green Belt revisions and the allocation of sites, such as the land to the south of New Pond Road, Farncombe, which can deliver 90 dwellings as part of one of the Council’s preferred allocations in the Draft Local Plan (Regulation 18) in 2014.

Test of Soundness

In view of the above considerations, we consider that the Local Plan is not sound, because it is not ‘consistent with national policy, as it fails to ensure that a 5 year housing land supply is provided from the start of the Plan, it also fails to identify how the wider needs of the Housing Market Area (HMA) will be addressed, and finally its OAN fails to make provision for all relevant housing needs. It is not compliant with the duty to co-operate. It will also not be ‘justified’, or ‘effective’, as it does not represent the most appropriate strategy, when considered against the reasonable alternatives, and there is doubt over its deliverability.

Proposed Changes

The following amendments are proposed:

1. The Plan should identify a 5 year housing land supply from the outset, to which our client’s site at New Pond Road, Farncombe can make a contribution.
2. The Plan needs to specify how the wider unmet needs of the Housing Market Area are being addressed; and
3. The OAN needs to be increased to take account of in-migration from London, market signals and the affordable housing demand.

In response to the latest draft local plan I comment as follows:-

I object to the latest draft of the local plan which I believe is not fit for purpose.

I object to the lack of transparency in the calculation of the housing numbers. A "secret" formula prepared by property professionals whose interest is in a increasing housing market is not to be relied on without proper scrutiny. This is particularly relevant in the context of the country leaving the EU and changing demand.

I object to the Plan being developed around offers from developers rather than a structured view of how the borough should develop.

I object to GBC's lack of commitment to recognise that that Guildford's location in the green belt presents the need for significant constraints to their policies to limit growth policies and housing numbers to protect the green belt. Housing need is not considered as "special circumstances" to utilise the green belt.

I object to the focus on growth assumptions that focus on regional growth rather than local need.

I object to the proportion of housing proposed in the green belt. By planning just for local need, utilising green belt constraints, using land proposed for retail and industrial uses (where there is no proven demand) it should be possible to present a plan based on the premise that all local housing can be accommodated without using the greenbelt.

I object to the large scale developments proposed and in particular at Wisley, Burpham and Hogs Back. These proposals cut through the green belt along the A3 corridor, and Wisley in particular is just unsustainable.

Having said that if all other options for saving greenbelt land are exhausted then an urban expansion of Guildford's boundaries seems the more logical and sustainable way forward. Whilst I believe the scale of developments along the A3 are inappropriate and far to large I don't understand why Lord Onslow's proposal at Merrow is not included, at least in part. I suspect big business is sponsoring the other sites and has influenced the Council. If all efforts to avoid green belt development had been exhausted and there remained a local need then a small proportion of the Burpham development and a small proportion of Lord Onslow's Merrow proposal would at least have a chance of being sustainable and could provide an appropriate mix of smaller unit size housing.

I do not believe the Council's promise that development will be limited if the relevant infrastructure is not provided. The current infrastructure can't cope with existing need and there are no firm or deliverable plans to add extra capacity. The National Highways schemes are already well back in the plan and there can be no certainty that the funding will ever arrive for whatever the improvement proposals are.
On a more local level I object you the late introduction of Garlic Arch based on infrastructure "bribes" whereby junctions to the A3 trunk road are offered in exchange for designating green belt land for housing. There are no studies to show the impact on the local road network and no commitment by the highway agencies to support the proposal. Garlic Arch which is agricultural greenbelt land and has ancient woodland, flooding and environmental pollution issues given its proximity to the A3 is not appropriate as a housing site. The site sits between two parishes but it will have the impact of doubling the size of Send Marsh and Burnt Common and changing the rural nature of the villages for ever.

The more logical option of utilising the Burnt Common site, proposed in the last local plan, has been removed. Although the scale and uses that had previously been proposed were inappropriate the Burnt Common site could be considered as having some areas of brown field and therefore makes a far more logical option. Garlic's Arch site should be removed from the plan.

I object to the proposal for a four way junction to the A3 without impact studies on Send and surrounding areas. However safeguarding the land makes sense but this does not mean we have to sacrifice large areas for green belt to "pay" for it. Garlic's Arch is an inappropriate site and GBC should look at their own planning refusal on a part of the site only two years ago for the reasons.

I object to the proposal to remove green belt from the western end of the borough, particularly along the A3, whilst adding it at the eastern end (Councillor Spooner's Parish).

I object to the blanket removal of villages from the green belt. The protection afforded currently does not mean that appropriate infill development can occur but it does allow respect for the fact that the surrounding areas are greenbelt. The removal of greenbelt status from villages will over time change the character of villages to wholly urban environments. Further open spaces within villages need protection, e.g. Send Marsh Green, which currently is protected by greenbelt status.

I believe that behind this draft of the local plan there is a political objective of driving growth at the expense of the green belt. GBC are not supporting the majority view of residents by fighting to protect the green belt but rather responding to national political incentives and developers interests.

Whilst perhaps this version of the local plan might be considered a minor improvement on the last one, once again the Council has failed to put a convincing draft local plan together at considerable expense to the rate payer. GBC need to listen to the people who live in the borough and reissue the draft local plan indicating they are prepared to fight for the borough not responding to regional or national blanket policies.

Although the cost of producing these unacceptable plans is no doubt vast, please try again.

1. B) The sites at Wisley Airfield, Garlic Arch and Burpham would each result in vast increases in population numbers which would result in unbearable strains on local services. Rush hour trains are grossly overcrowded and the roads, particularly around Guildford are usually at a standstill during the mornings and evenings and the Royal Surrey Hospital has almost reached full capacity. Many local schools would be totally unable to accept extra pupils with each needing sizeable extension work.

1. C) Much of this land is currently arable and if lost would result in the need for yet more food imports - hardly desirable in view of increased import costs resulting from the country’s EU departure.

I am writing in response to your invitation to comment on the Guildford Borough Proposed Submission Local Plan.

I believe that the numbers which you derived for the Objectively Assessed Housing Need (OAN) and the SHMA have been inflated either in error, or in pursuit of the aims of GBC to expand the borough in an aggressive manner. The requirements of the National Planning Policy do not result in the need to use a population forecast which is in excess of those issued for Guildford by the Office of National Statistics. I realise that the Evidence Base documents are not the subject of this consultation. However, since Policy S2 is based on forecast population numbers which are unsound, I object to Policy S2.

I wish to object to the 2016 version of the GBC Draft Local Plan as, even though we are told the 2014 version has been redrafted after 'listening to the people', I cannot see evidence of this. I also object to the PR film at the online form link, claiming to 'represent the people' as it does not. It represents the University of Surrey, the Royal Surrey Hospital and the GBC Executive and has no representation at all for the rural areas of the Borough, therefore is a biased PR exercise. (I wish the above to be recorded as objections).

I also wish it to be noted that the objections below are not to be taken solely as site location objections if sites are mentioned, but general objections to the draft Local Plan.

Policy S2 - Borough Wide Strategy

I object to GBC using SHMA housing figure which are almost double those of Woking and Waverly. I object to these figures as they were prepared by consultants with a property interests, G L Hearn, and the calculation has not been scrutinised by GBC an independent body. Who are all these homes for? Not local people but a nett SE England 'migration’. There is no generic evidence to back this up but we are told ‘GBC has faith in it’.

Once again I am writing to complain about your thoughtless Local Plan, how can you be so irresponsible, you have not thought it through, just like the EU.

Horsley and Ockham currently have thousands of visitors every week coming here to enjoy our countryside in the Green Belt, we have local hotels, conference centres, a caravan and camping site, not to mention the millions of cyclists who visit our country lanes every year. We do not have room for all of them as well as a huge percentage of Surreys new houses and the SANGS Site will not help, with access via Green Lane it will make things worse.

Why do I need 2600 new houses all within a one mile radius of my house and with no new facilities for medical, schools, etc. The sewage in Green Lane already overflows on a regular basis. Parking in East Horsley is impossible on Wednesday and Saturday mornings.

The area is an AONB with so many historic buildings, Wisley and National Trust properties.

WHAT ARE YOU THINKING ...... HAVE YOU EVER BEEN TO OCKHAM?

Policy S.2 Borough Wide Strategy

It is difficult for anyone to predict at this stage what the impact of the Brexit decision will be. What we do know is that most of Guildford should be highly protected from development thanks to long established planning policies such as the Green Belt which are defined and understood by the general public as permanent. It appears that this is not the intention in the draft Local Plan. 44% of the nationally important countryside within the Surrey Hills AONB lies within the Green Belt and about 75% of the area of the borough is further protected by the Thames Basin Heath SPA. Other land such as Registered Commons and Ancient Woodland are also not available for development.

CPRE objects to a draft local plan which calls for an increase in the number of residential dwellings by a quarter. This requirement for a housing figure of 13,860 dwellings is based on the West Surrey Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) prepared by GL Hearn for GBC which is shown to be flawed. Green Balance has prepared for CPRE a review of this document for Guildford, Waverley and Woking Districts which maintains that the annual housing figure upon which the Borough Wide Strategy is based for Guildford is far too high. This renders the whole Local Plan for the District unsound.

GBC has not been able to prepare in time an acceptable plan for the Town Centre and the urban area of Guildford, causing undue emphasis to be switched to building on Green Belt countryside around the town. It is in our view unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an uncertain housing target which may well prove increasingly unreliable. CPRE OBJECTION.

It is in our view essential to reconsider the proposals made regarding the priority given to retail and office development, which we believe to be overstated, rather than to housing at an appropriate density on brownfield sites in the town. We question the allowance for the provision of other business employment land such as warehousing. It seems to us that retailing is undergoing a transformation illustrated by the loss of Austin Reid and BHS, the incursion of Aldi, M&S foodshops at rail and petrol stations, and on line purchasing and delivery of all kinds.

We maintain that the gap town of Guildford is a “special case” and should be recognised as such from a planning viewpoint because of its widely protected countryside which should be an ongoing constraint on development and preclude major structural change along the lines proposed. We feel obliged to emphasise again the permanence of the Green Belt, the Surrey Hills AONB and the SPA in this district. CPRE OBJECTION.

CPRE objects to the amended policy S2. It is disappointing that the OAN selected is still so high and that no constraints have been applied as required under the NPPF and NPPG. This contrasts with the Woking Core Strategy which has selected a constraint of no less than 50%. It appears that the draft local plan for Guildford has deliberately chosen to ignore the huge opposition of the public to loss of the Green Belt and of other open countryside to housing development. The Council has not given sufficient priority either to the potential for housing and flat development on brownfield sites in the urban part of Guildford, and has not insisted that the University of Surrey honours its commitments to build much more student accommodation on their campuses. CPRE agrees that it is more realistic to follow a phased approach towards development as plan fulfillment will have to depend on infrastructure provision. It is unrealistic to talk about the need to meet rapid change as required by the NPPF since planning ahead is virtually impossible when so many of the requirements for development to be successful depend on elements over which the Council has little or no control.

CPRE remains as concerned as ever about the background to this Guildford Borough consultation which is overshadowed by the EU referendum decision and the recent national election with its as yet unsettled political and economic outcome. It is of course impossible to predict the likely impact of the BREXIT negotiations on a wide range of issues including migration, agriculture, climate change, and other policies regarding economic, environmental and social matters. The fact that the whole of the South East is however subject to water stress remains a constant background to decision-making.
It is very difficult to draw up a local plan when so many decisions depend on independent bodies such as Natural England, Highways England, Thames Water, and the Environment Agency. One also has to add to this list other uncertainties relating to Network Rail, the franchise companies which operate within the Guildford area, and the as yet unresolved future development of both Gatwick and Heathrow airports.

All will be influenced by government budgeting, interest rates, and other factors outside local council control. We also have to take into account the involvement of a new Housing and Planning Minister in this sector. The involvement of Surrey County Council adds a further dimension.

CPRE has already made clear that the ‘Objectively Assessed Need’ (OAN) figure proposed for housing in the draft 2016 version of the GB Local Plan was in our view far too high and was based on inaccurate data that needed further analysis and review involving up to date statistics. The revised proposal now made in the draft 2017 document remains in our view unacceptable. In addition to the work already submitted by Green Balance for CPRE Surrey, CPRE wishes to draw attention to the further analysis by Neil McDonald issued in April 2017 regarding “Waverley Borough Council in response to Inspector’s Questions”, and to the “Review of GL Hearn’s Guildford Addendum to the West Surrey SHMA” in June 2017 which confirm our views.

CPRE feels obliged to repeat our earlier request that a more careful consideration is made of the many widespread and serious constraints on development within the Borough, and the need to observe Green Belt policy which requires that the countryside around the town of Guildford and its villages is protected and enhanced rather than undermined by inappropriate urban extensions, large housing sites and widespread “inserting” in Green Belt villages.

CPRE has also to add to this objection the way in which a number of new proposals relating to Garlick’s Arch, Burnt Common and Godsen Hill have appeared for late consideration, which have not been reviewed previously at the regulation 18 stage. We are particularly concerned about the harm which will be done to the Green Belt by ribbon development along the A3 and the associated impact to traffic in Burpham, Merrow, West Clandon, the Horsleys, Send and Ripley.

CPRE has concentrated its comments and objections in this latest consultation on the issues that most affect the countryside and the Wey Navigation, but feels obliged to point out that we have major reservations about the proposals made for the development of Guildford as a whole. We cannot agree that “rapid change” as required by NPPF, can be envisaged along the lines proposed without a breakdown in road infrastructure. This is especially true with regard to the A3, but also applies to the access routes to Guildford from Cranleigh/Dunsfold (A281/B2128), Farnham (A31), Godalming (A3100), Rushmoor/Aldershot (A323), and Woking (A320). It is apparent that a major issue is the limited funding resources available in this road development context from Highways England, Surrey County Council and Guildford Borough Council itself. There appears to be an over reliance on developers for funding that is influencing decision-making and leading to unsustainable “solutions” at for example Dunsfold, Wisley and elsewhere.

Plans for new railway stations near Guildford and the North Downs line to Gatwick remain largely aspirational at this stage. CPRE supports in principle the new station at Park Barn in proximity to the hospital for obvious reasons. However, the case for a station at Merrow is not so clear cut, especially as Clandon and London Road stations are comparatively nearby.

CPRE recognizes that there is a need for affordable housing in Guildford but believes that this shortfall could be largely overcome if the University of Surrey would give priority to the building on their campuses of the multiple occupancy accommodation for students they have promised. This would free up cheaper priced housing already located within the town and incidentally lead to an increase in tax income for the Council. It is apparent that housing development in Guildford Borough is directed towards supplying larger more expensive dwellings which give a higher return on investment than the provision of lower cost houses. CPRE maintains that priority should be given to the development of brownfield sites for housing which could include land now allocated for surface parking in some urban locations.

The CPRE London Green Belt Council (LGBC) have expressed their objection to the proposed development at Blackwell Farm by the University of Surrey on the grounds of the permanence of the Green Belt and that “exceptional circumstances” do not apply for an additional boundary revision to be made beyond that agreed for the Manor Farm campus in 2003. Their involvement indicates the concern of those who support the Metropolitan Green Belt which was created for the benefit of London inhabitants just as much as for those of Surrey and Guildford. The statement in the Corporate Plan that Guildford is “on London’s doorstep” is hardly reassuring to those in CPRE who do not wish the environment of Guildford put under threat by an attempt to go for economic expansion rather than limit its ambitions to “smart growth” which does not endanger the countryside by the development of rural villages through Green Belt erosion. LGBG has also expressed concern about Green Belt intrusion at Gosden Hill and Three Farms Meadows at the former Wisley airfield site.

SUMMARY LIST OF MAJOR OBJECTIONS

- Green Belt:

CPRE is disappointed that the GBC draft local plan continues to insist on further Green Belt erosion. The recent decision made by the Secretary of State (S of S) in this context does not appear to have been taken into account. This decision relates to the dismissal of an appeal at Benfleet, Castle Point in Essex in a letter dated 21st April 2017 (APP/M1520/A/14/2216062). The decision involves a council that does not have a 5 year supply of deliverable housing sites. Whereas the Inspector’s view was that the appeal should be allowed under NPPG, the S of S ruled that it is national policy that personal circumstances and unmet need are unlikely to clearly outweigh harm to the Green Belt, and any other harm, so as to establish “very special circumstances” justifying a boundary review. He therefore disagreed with the Inspector’s view that this is NPPG “guidance” and as a result of his decision, a “policy” has now been established in this context which is directly relevant to Guildford.

- Town Centre Capacity:

CPRE has already made clear that it considers this draft Guildford Local Plan unsound because no complete proposal or Master Plan for the Town Centre, or for the development of the urban area, has been made available. This is still required so that a coherent assessment can be made of the priority given in terms of the extent and type of housing development proposed, its density and location. Town and countryside should be considered in parallel in order for a sound plan to be established. CPRE maintains that not enough brownfield sites have been set aside in the town for housing accommodation. Issues relating to bus services within the town and to and from communities in the surrounding countryside remain largely unresolved.

- Reviews of Objectively Assessed Need (OAN):

It is CPRE’s view that the over estimation of housing need makes the draft Local Plan unsound. Green Balance has already submitted a critical review of the GLH Hearn West Surrey Strategic Housing Market Assessment for Guildford, Waverley and Woking. Now Neil McDonald has issued two further studies relating to Waverley (September 2016) and Guildford (April 2017) which question further the soundness of the draft plan submitted. CPRE believes that the focus of attention on building in the Green Belt countryside has been caused by too high an OAN figure and a refusal to allocate sufficient priority to the supply of affordable housing and flats in the town because building development in this category has been sidelined in favour of office, business and retail growth rather than given the attention it deserves. In particular CPRE maintains that more emphasis should have been placed on the use of brownfield sites within the town for higher density housing and the University should supply more accommodation for students on its campuses.

CPRE is particularly concerned about the wide use and large areas of surface car parking in the town which appear to be a waste of valuable space where multi storey or underground parking should be more often considered. The hospital indicated at one stage that the use of multi storey parking was being planned by them but this still remains outstanding. Car parking at the University campuses and the Research Park could be better employed either for multi storey use or under buildings for student or office accommodation. The HQ for the WWF on Brewery Road in Woking is an example of what can be done successfully in the centre of a town and near the river if good architecture is employed. A range of valuable sites of this kind exist and should be investigated in consultation with the Wey Navigation as they are needed in this context. We are disappointed that the proposals for underground parking at Bright’s Hill have been scaled back. This sustainable location is within easy walking distance of the town centre and car parking could we believe be provided underground because of the chalk geology.

Other heritage towns in this country and particularly in the EU recognize the importance of providing underground parking for new development. Priority at Guildford is given to the under utilised Onslow Park & Ride at the University next to land where a commitment to restrict traffic was made which has not been kept. Surely, it is necessary to look again at how we are using precious land space in the town for surface parking so that erosion of the Green Belt is cut back in our countryside.

These developments will inevitably lead to a merging of all the areas which are at present separate entities, Wisley Airfield, Ripley including Garlick's Arch to Send and on to Clandon and Burpham. We wish to remain villages - we all live here because they are villages. The development is far too concentrated in this part of the borough and GBC has made it a feature of their plan with larger numbers than other Borough Councils in Surrey. I therefore object to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2) and the SHMA figure of 693 houses per year as being too high (Appendix D).

WBDRA along with many other Residents Associations and Local Interest Groups in Guildford OBJECTS to the proposed SHMA figures.

We were present at the first public meeting where consultants G L Hearn announced their SHMA findings to a stunned and shocked audience. Their methodology and resultant housing numbers seemed to have been based on the flimsiest of evidence, totally ignoring the high population of transient students in the borough and failing to address known statistical predictions about population movements and the local Housing market.

The slightly modified SHMA figure now offered by GBC has been the subject of much debate and challenge since its publication and GBC have steadfastly refused to publish the bases of calculation for their figure of 690+ homes to be built per annum

No constraints appear to have been applied such as Flood Plain, Green Belt infrastructure limitations etc etc)

OBJECTIONS TO 2016 GUILDFORD DRAFT LOCAL PLAN

West Clandon Parish Council welcomes the opportunity to comment on the consultation draft Guildford Local Plan. We have a number of objections to the draft plan.

In particular we consider the consultation process to be flawed. We note that the Summer 2016 edition of "About Guildford" (published by the Council) on page 5 states that "... the Plan rejects any schemes that would have a detrimental impact on the green belt." This is demonstrably untrue and we consider this to be a deliberate untruth which compromises the consultation process. We would ask that this untruth be corrected and the consultation period restarted after the correction has been given the same distribution as the original statement. (We assume the document was delivered to most houses in the Borough.) We reserve the right to argue before the inspector that the consultation process was flawed and ineffective because of this.

General comments

We have serious, general objections to the plan which are summarized below as well as being expanded upon in our comments on numbered policies in the draft plan.

- In common with many others we do not believe the housing figure has been properly calculated and we believe it overstates housing need. The Council has prevented Councillors or others from properly considering the SHMA by refusing to make public the basis on which it was drawn up.
- The housing figure, when properly recalculated, should be subject to constraints to reflect Guildford's circumstances, including in particular the Green Belt and road infrastructure. National policy permits such constraints to be applied and it is inappropriate not to consider the need to do this.
- We do not believe the draft plan accords with the NPPF policies on protecting the Green Belt.
- Exceptional circumstances need to be shown to justify removing areas from the Green Belt and this has not been done. The housing need number is not itself a very special circumstance justifying an indiscriminate removal of sites from the Green Belt. Having properly calculated a housing needs number, constraints should be applied to it to reflect the Green Belt and AONB. Each proposed Green Belt site then needs to be considered on its own merits. The benefits of the proposed development need to be identified together with the harm to the Green Belt. Only if there are exceptional circumstances and following a proper balancing exercise demonstrating that these exceptional circumstances outweigh the harm to the Green Belt can the proposal proceed. The draft plan does not demonstrate that this has been done. Even once a housing number has been calculated it cannot be used to justify taking land out of the Green Belt on a wholesale basis.
- Stronger assurances should be included in the plan that development can only commence when required infrastructure improvements have been secured.
- The A247 through Clandon is overburdened by traffic already and is unsuitable as an A road in any event. In parts it is too narrow for two lorries to pass and lorries routinely mount the pavement at speed in a dangerous fashion. We believe the plan should include proposals to provide other routes for traffic to take traffic away from the A247.
• We object to the Gosden Hill prop. We do not believe very exceptional circumstances have been shown to justify taking this site out of the Green Belt. Even if the Gosden Hill development were to remain in the plan we believe the boundary should be explicitly drawn so as to prevent it being visible from West Clandon. In addition development should be conditional on the A3 improvements and new railway station.
• We object to the Garlick’s Arch proposal. This site was removed from consideration before the previous draft of the plan was issued. We do not understand how this site has been brought back into the plan. We do not believe exceptional circumstances have been shown to justify taking this site out of the Green Belt. The site was not discussed in the Green Belt and Countryside study and there seems to have been no consideration of the justification for removing it from the Green Belt.

General Comment on Policies

The status of the text which accompanies each policy box is not clear. If the accompanying text does not have the force of policy a number of the policies (i.e. the text in blue) are so vague and general that they commit the Council to very little.

Do you consider this section of the document; complies with the Duty to Cooperate? ( ), is Sound? ( ), is Legally Compliant? ( )

POLICY S2 – Borough Wide Strategy

We object to Policy S2 on a number of grounds.

1. The housing number of 13,860 new homes is excessive. The number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

1. The number is in any event based on an arbitrary and inappropriate Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. Rushmoor is excluded in spite of it being easily reached from Guildford town centre. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any commonsense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton, Haslemere, Reigate and Redhill and Basingstoke but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

1. These concerns have been raised repeatedly since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinize it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” as a Housing market Area reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guildford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

1. The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs numb. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. We have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

1. The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

1. The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,8 So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN were not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

1. The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London’s commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

1. This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. We believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brownfield sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

1. The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

1. The Plan is out of balance in proposing 36% of all new housing in the three wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon and Horsley. These are currently rural areas whose identities will be greatly and detrimentally changed by these proposals.

Further, I object to the fact that no real economic or housing demand factors have been provided by the borough planners contravention of the NPPF’s requirement for the planning authority to provide meaningful consultation.

OBJECT to the proposed SHMA figures – which have been challenged in “A Review of the West Surrey SHMA as it relates to the Objectively Assessed Housing Needs of Guildford” by Neil McDonald dated June 2016. Updated June 2017, as attached. In accordance with para 166 of the NPPF the appropriate constraints MUST be applied by the Borough Council. In the dwelling stock estimates by local authority district: 2001 – 2015 (DCLG) the amount of new houses in Guildford has increased on average 250 per year far shorter than objectively assessed housing need figure contained in the draft local plan.

We object to policy S2 the Borough Wide Strategy and the commitment to build 13,860 homes based on the Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) 2015 prepared by GL Hearn. The OAN “objectively assessed need” figure in the SHMA of 693 homes a year is far too high. We are very surprised and concerned that GBC have adopted the OAN of 13,860 homes as the housing target without any application of constraints as required under the National Planning Policy Framework and the National Planning Policy Guidance. The scale of the housing number proposed, inevitably increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole. Other local planning authorities appear to take a more balanced view in their approach to planning. The Woking Core Strategy 2012 applies a constraint of 50% from the 594 new homes identified in their own SHMA. “It should be noted that local evidence (Strategic Housing Market Assessment - SHMA) highlights a need for an additional 499 new affordable homes every year in the Borough and a total of 594 new homes every year when taking into account demand. Given the level of environmental constraints present in the Borough, it is considered that the provision of an average of 292 dwellings per annum represents a reasonable level of housing growth for Woking and is deliverable.” Historically GBC have correctly applied constraints on housing numbers to protect the Green Belt. The Surrey Structure Plan 1994 advocated a general slowing down in the rates of development “because of the environmental constraints which exist in the County, including Green Belt”. This slowing down was reflected in the requirement that Guildford Borough should accommodate a net increase of 3,800 dwellings between 1991 and 2006. This was a lower rate of development than in previous years. It is interesting to note that the Structure Plan at that time expected sufficient land to arise within the urban areas to accommodate this requirement. However it would appear that today GBC have effectively ignored the real potential of the urban area to provide for housing. At the same time GBC have adopted a radically different approach to the policy of the Council over the last 20/30 years and are now ignoring government policy in relation to the Green Belt. A detailed and comprehensive professional review of the SHMA dated June 2016 by NMSS an independent expert firm dealing with housing and demographics procured by Guildford Residents Association (GRA) has concluded that the OAN figure should be revised down from 693 homes per annum to 510 homes per annum. The 41 page report by NMSS which can be found on the GRA website entitled “A Review of the West Surrey SHMA as it relates to the Objectively Assessed Housing Needs of Guildford”. It was a real community effort. It was paid for by over separate 20 Guildford Residents Associations and Local Parish Councils none of whom were convinced that the SHMA report procured and presented by GBC was accurate or transparent or accessible in a meaningful way. So they clubbed together and collected contributions from many hundreds of Guildford residents to try to find out the truth of the housing need figure presented in the Local Plan. The NMSS report includes detailed analysis and financial modelling and was prepared by Neil McDonald who we were lucky to find. He is a niche consultant with the right skills and a national reputation. An independent adviser and commentator on housing demographics. He works with local authorities and others on the estimation of housing need and related issues. He was a civil servant and policy adviser to Ministers for over 30 years, the last 10 advising on housing and planning issues within the Department of Communities and Local Government. His 7 years as a Director at DCLG included a posting as Director, Planning Policy and a period as Chief Executive of the National Housing and Planning Advice Unit. NMSS found that the SHMA used in the Local Plan incorrectly adds extra homes to its basic demographic projection to allow for improving affordability of housing, increased student numbers and economic growth. The report found that none of these additions were justified based on the evidence presented within the SHMA. The report concluded amongst other matters that:

The affordability of housing in Guildford is no worse than in other Surrey districts and boosting supply beyond the demographic OAN would not result in a noticeable improvement in affordability but simply in more people moving to the area. There are reasons for believing that the SHMA’s estimate of the number of homes needed for students may be too high and that an adequate provision for students is already included in the demographic OAN. The report advises that the Council should commission a separate student housing need figure for Guildford given the distorting effect of students on our overall OAN. It envisages that, once this exercise is undertaken, improved accuracy means the overall OAN would be likely to reduce still further.

The SHMA seeks to estimate the number of homes needed to support employment growth using employment rate assumptions that are inconsistent with the employment forecasts. This produces misleading results. An analysis of the Cambridge Econometrics and Oxford Economics forecasts using employment or economic activity rate assumptions consistent with the forecasts suggests that in neither case is there a need to provide more housing than suggested by the demographic analysis. Indeed, in both cases a smaller population growth (and hence fewer homes) could support the jobs growth that is forecast. A further independent report was procured in 2016 by the Campaign for the Protection of Rural England CPRE from Richard Bate of Green Balance, an independent consultancy with expertise in demographic and housing matters to carry out a review of the GL Hearn SHMA. The report by Green Balance runs to 37 pages and its findings are that the OAN for homes in Guildford should be reduced from 693 per annum to 481 because: 1. the vacancy rate figures should be taken from local government annual records rather than from the 2011 Census. This would reduce vacancy rates to 2.9% in Guildford. 2. there should be no increase for affordability above basic demographic change. 3. there should be no increase for Student housing and it was considered unrealistic that the University should be allowed to exert such substantial pressure on the domestic housing market. 4. the use of employment-led forecasts should be abandoned using purely household projections instead which are more reliable as a form of prediction. Two completely independent expert reports are surprisingly consistent in their findings. In broad terms a figure of approximately 500 homes per annum would appear to be a correct estimate of OAN for Guildford. However, this is before constraints are applied to arrive at an acceptable housing target. A further study is attached which is included within this section by reference. It is unacceptable that demographic and economic model assumptions have been withheld by GBC and cannot be checked making the process unaccountable. The figure of 13,860 new homes is unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinised by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. Both the National Planning Policy Framework and National Planning Policy Guidance provide a clear policy direction that the overall housing target should be reduced by a variety of constraints to take account of protected wildlife areas (e.g. Thames Basin Heath SPA), landscape areas (Surrey Hills AONB), Green Belt, flood risk and significant infrastructure constraints, all of which apply to Guildford. This local plan and the SHMA number have completely ignored these factors. WE have corrected this omission below. Infrastructure policies should be planned at the same time as Local Plans but in this case they have effectively been left out and are not sufficiently developed. The Framework also makes clear that, once established, Green Belt boundaries should only be altered in exceptional circumstances, through the preparation or review of the Local Plan. Unmet housing need (including for traveller sites) is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt and other harm to constitute the “very special circumstances” justifying inappropriate development on a site within the Green Belt. Appendix: Report prepared by David Reeve in relation to the SHMA (attached as this is a separate document but included within this section by reference). THE NEED TO APPLY CONSTRAINTSMinisterial guidance in relation to building on the Green Belt is clear: 1. “the single issue of unmet need - is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt and other harm to constitute the “very special circumstances” justifying inappropriate development in the Green Belt” - Nick Boles to Sir Paul Beresford MP 7th February 2014. 2. “we were always very clear that we would maintain key protections for the countryside, and, in particular, for the Green Belt. The Framework makes it clear that a Green Belt boundary may be altered only in exceptional circumstances and reiterates the importance and permanence of the Green Belt” – Nick Boles to Sir Michael Pitt, Planning Inspectorate 3rd March 2014. 3. “Planning Guidance, updated in March 2014, also states that unmet housing need is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt to constitute the very special circumstances justifying inappropriate development within the Green Belt” – Nick Boles to Sir Paul Beresford MP 18th June 2014. 70% of the sites put forward in the Local Plan are in the Green Belt which flies in the face of current government planning policy. The National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF), National Planning Policy Guidance and case law make it clear that Green Belt is an absolute constraint on housing supply. Exceptional circumstances need to be shown to adjust boundaries.
Other constraints under the NPPF include assessments of sustainability, strategic flood risk assessment, physical constraints on land use and infrastructure constraints (this can include road congestion, schools, drains, power supply and medical requirements). Constraints should be applied to the Objectively Assessed Housing Need (OAN). However this itself is overstated and should be reduced from 693 per annum to 500. In view of the comments above it would appear logical to apply CONSTRAINTS in line with government policy to a corrected OAN of approximately 50% to account for the fact that 89% of the borough is in the permanent Green Belt and development is not supported by adequate major infrastructure. This reduction is in line with the constraints percentage of 50% applied by Woking Borough Council.
This would result in a more acceptable and practically achievable HOUSING TARGET of 250 homes per annum which over a 20-year period would be 5,000 homes. All of these homes could be built in the existing urban brownfield areas of the borough and would in part satisfy the 20,000 objections made by residents to the 2014 draft plan and also relieve the additional problems of inadequate infrastructure. It would also mean that there is currently 8.5 years supply of housing (2131/250) which is made up of existing permissions granted (1,518) and completions made (613) during 2013/
2015. (Monitoring Report by GBC 2015) Whilst we have many significant objections to the GBC Local Plan we applaud the policy statement by GBC in their Monitoring Report, “We will continue to monitor the use of previously developed land, and continue to identify as many opportunities as possible for redevelopment of previously developed land.” We believe it will be to the benefit of all residents if GBC can apply themselves vigorously to this endeavour in order to protect the Green Belt.

I accept that provision must be made for new housing, in particular for young people and others who need an affordable housing solution. But I don’t think the Draft Local Plan is the answer. The majority of the proposed new housing (65%) is slated for Green Belt land. I find this totally unacceptable and I do not believe that GBC has properly and fully investigated the available brown field and other sites for this development.

Finally, I object to the undemocratic process that has produced this plan. We have just had a referendum on this country’s membership of the European Union. Whether one is in favour of leaving or remaining, it was right to give the electorate a direct say in such a momentous decision.

Yet a decision of this magnitude, which has far-reaching implications on local life, should not be in the hands of a few elected officials.

So GBC, do the right thing. Accept that a majority of the electorate are against it. Hold a poll to confirm that this is the case. Accept that the plan is flawed and think again.

I strongly object to the fact that there are many brownfield sites in Surrey and Greater London that could be used to build homes and these should be used first and foremost.

1. POLICY S2

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous since 2014. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.
It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

Guildford Borough Council have a duty to the residents to protect the environment, to protect green belt land, to protect residents and their families. This fails in every area. There is no case for taking villages such as Send, Ripley, Burnt Common and part of West Clandon out of the Green Belt. There is no case to extend the University if it impacts on residents in the area. The roads in this area are over flowing with traffic and at times is almost at a standstill. To protect put in policies that mean people can not enjoy the Countryside, can not sit in their gardens because of noise pollution is not compliance.

The housing target is a complete invention, with no evidence demonstrated of the need for it in such numbers. All additional housing should be associated with urban areas i.e. Guildford. Any additions to the villages should be very restrained and small in number and size. The number should be restricted to the local plans put forward by individual villages and parishes. The proposal of a new town on Wisley airfield should be dismissed, as it has been already by GBC planning, as completely unacceptable in all regards - for the many reasons put forward in the objections by GBC landing themselves.

I wish to add my voice to the increasing number who feel the Local Plan needs extensive further amendment.

In view of flawed new evidence, Guildford’s proposal for more than 12,426 homes (plus a buffer of 1,155 homes) is excessive and will result in needless loss of Green Belt and green character, and increased congestion, that cannot be justified in our already heavily constrained borough.

S2 I object to the number of new homes proposed 13860 is well beyond the actual "need" in the Borough. There may be a "demand" for more houses, (many people would love to live in the so-far, "leafy," will-be “concreted-over” Surrey,) but this is an excessive number, reached by GBC sub-contracting to a company who sub-contracted again, thereby being able to claim that the results of their surveys were their own "intellectual property" and therefore not available to either the Councillors or the general public ( even after requests under the FOI Act).

That the Scrutiny Committee of the GBC did not discuss or even have access to these documents is appalling. It is immoral, if not illegal to withhold this information, because, without it, no one can know why the number of houses is so large. What is more, the companies employed are connected to the construction industry and therefore are likely to benefit from development around Guildford.

* Expansion should be constrained to protect the character of town and country in our congested gap town;
* It is unacceptable that, unlike other places, Guildford is choosing not to constrain its overall housing growth;
* Allowing Green Belt development to pay for transport schemes will simply generate yet more traffic from more homes, fuelling congestion;
* Brownfield opportunities are being ignored – we need homes in the centre (not 40% more shops), much more accommodation on campus for students, and homes for the elderly to free up family houses;

POLICY S2: Borough Wide Strategy – I object

The housing requirements proposed under policy S2 flow from the flawed Strategic Housing Market Assessment produced by the remote consultants GL Hearn, now a subsidiary of Capita Real Estate, whose main business is concerned with property development. Contracting out the estimation of housing requirements to property developers is akin to asking foxes to design chicken coops; it ensures that the results are highly compromised because of conflict of interest. The SHMA is consequently flawed, principally because a) it over-estimates future migration trends; and b) its assessment of housing requirements is subjectively inflated over even such high demographics, without proper disclosure of methodology.

In addition, this policy has totally ignored the following key requirements from paragraph 17 of the NPPF:

- “take account of the different roles and character of different areas, promoting the vitality of our urban areas, protecting the Green Belts around them”
- “recognising the intrinsic character and beauty of the countryside and supporting thriving communities within it”
- “contribute to conserving and enhancing the natural environment and reducing pollution“
- “encourage the effective use of land by reusing land that has been previously developed (brownfield land) provided it is not of high environmental value”
- “conserve heritage assets in a manner appropriate to their significance“
- “actively manage patterns of growth to make the fullest possible use of public transport walking and cycling and focus significant development on locations which can be made sustainable“.

Removing West Horsley and other rural villages from the Green Belt by ‘insetting’ them, and expanding the boundaries of the settlement areas into neighbouring green fields (i.e. reducing the Green Belt) does NOT protect the Green Belt. Nor does it give adequate recognition to the intrinsic character and beauty of the countryside.

Nor, by giving developers the option of building more cheaply on green fields does it encourage the effective use of land by reusing land that has been previously developed (brownfield land). By turning West Horsley into a rural town, it does not conserve the heritage assets of West Horsley. By encouraging 35% more houses in a rural village without intrinsic employment, rather than brownfield urban sites, it does not make fullest possible use of public transport, walking and cycling within the Borough.

But the cardinal disregard of the NPPF paragraph 17 is in terms of its requirement:

“empowering local people to shape their surroundings”

It is obvious from the degree of protest that there has been throughout Guildford Borough to the previous (2014) Draft Local Plan and the preceding ‘Issues and Options’ ‘consultation’ that local people wish to shape their surroundings in ways that are entirely different from that which is projected by the Draft Local Plan. As strong evidence of the lack of empowerment, West Horsley Parish has already twice recently provided democratically robust opinion on the way they wish to shape their surroundings and that shaping involves minimal development. The West Horsley Parish Plan1 of 2008/9, compiled under the auspices of the West Horsley Parish Council and collating the opinions of those households responding to a questionnaire (430, or 38% of all in the parish), begins its section on the ‘Environment’: ‘This section achieved the most clear-cut answer of all. All but one respondent values the rural character of the village.’ Furthermore, under ‘Housing and Planning’, the results of the questionnaire showed that: ‘A large majority (337) of respondents believe that West Horsley should not be one of the village settlements identified for meeting new housing requirements’. With the background that nine sites in West Horsley had been suggested in the GDF process for possible development, ‘over half of respondents (180) consider that no area, either inside or outside the current settlement area, is appropriate for development of the village’. ‘Of the respondents who answered more than zero area as appropriate for development most believed that any development should have an emphasis on affordable and sheltered housing and be distributed over more than one site. There was little support for any development of commercial facilities’. ‘Confirming the majority opinion for zero area of development, almost exactly half of respondents (128) considered that West Horsley can currently accommodate no additional dwellings.’

The 2015 Emerging Neighbourhood Plan of West Horsley2 essentially confirmed these majority sentiments. Again evidenced by a comprehensive survey of residents for the Neighbourhood Plan itself, together with the results of research by West Horsley Parish Council and Surrey County Council, Policy 2 of the emerging Neighbourhood Plan is: “The emerging Neighbourhood Plan provisionally provides for the development of between 40 and 75 new homes within the area covered by West Horsley Parish Council, between 2016 and 2031”. This is consistent with Policy 1 which states: “We will ensure that the village maintains its rural and open style, architectural heritage and special atmosphere and character and we will resist the urbanisation of the village. Specifically we will protect, conserve and, where appropriate, improve: ? The designated Green Belt status ? Open spaces, parkland, green space, trees and hedges ? The open aspect and strategic natural spaces along East Lane, The Street, Ripley Lane, the A246 (Epsom Road), Long Reach and Ockham Road North, which reinforce the village’s rural nature”. In addition: “When asked about where new housing development should take place, only 3.4% suggested that the designated Green Belt should be considered.”

In stark contrast, the GBC Draft Local Plan entails the addition of 385 extra homes within West Horsley, an increase of approximately 35%; and the addition of 533 homes within East and West Horsley parishes together, most of it outside the current Settlement Area, and therefore in the current Green Belt. Over the whole of Guildford Borough the new plan proposes some 13,860 houses, of which almost two-thirds are on current Green Belt. The imbalance makes a mockery of the supposed Policy P2 (“Green Belt”) which states ‘We will continue to protect the Metropolitan Green Belt, as shown on the proposals map, against inappropriate development’. It is illuminating to contrast this revised statement with that in the previous policy #10 of the 2014 draft Local Plan; this stated: ‘We will continue to protect the Metropolitan Green Belt against inappropriate development in accordance with national planning policy to maintain its openness and open character’. A better paraphrase of the current version would be: GBC proposes to make use of the openness of the Green Belt for easier development now; in the future it may protect what is left of the Green Belt. This is despite the massive objections to the degree of Green Belt development proposed in 2014. For West Horsley the proposed development is entirely against the opinions expressed within the Parish Plan. The NPPF requirement to empower local people to shape their surroundings has been paid merely lip service by GBC. Although the old South East Plan3 has purportedly been abolished, a conceited crow of the Conservative Borough councillors in their manifesto when seeking election just a short time ago, it is apparent that the SE Plan’s designation of Guildford as a ‘centre for significant change’ still dominates the approaches of GBC. This blinkered, autocratic, patronic approach completely ignores the wishes of the local population. There appears to be a pride amongst GBC and many Borough Councillors that ignoring democratically-expressed wishes is somehow ‘strong governance’, and that this virility is laudable. Although it has issued manifold purported ‘consultation’ documents and ‘topic papers’ with colourful balloons all over their covers, GBC has patently ignored most of the critical comments that have been returned by residents: the council has taken not a jot of notice of popular petitions. That is not proper empowerment of local people. This is not ‘meaningful engagement and collaboration with neighbourhoods, local organisations’ (NPPF 155); it has been collaboration with solely growth-minded businesses. How can key requirements of the NPPF be ignored in such a blatant fashion?

Pertinent here are the words from the Ministerial Foreword to the NPPF which encourages local participation in planning: ‘This should be a collective enterprise. Yet, in recent years, planning has tended to exclude, rather than to include, people and communities. In part, this has been a result of targets being imposed, and decisions taken, by bodies remote from them. Dismantling the unaccountable regional apparatus and introducing neighbourhood planning addresses this. In part, people have been put off from getting involved because planning policy itself has become so elaborate and forbidding – the preserve of specialists, rather than people in communities’.
If these words are to have any meaning in this context then local views on the benefits of local immigration should be taken into account in producing the SHMA and housing target. The specialists in Capita Real Estate themselves pronounce that their estimates of future housing ‘need’ are objective: they seem to be unaware that their approach is based on a particular viewpoint of how economic growth occurs, or how the balance between economic growth and other factors should be weighted. The predominance of Capita Real Estate in churning out these assessments, being the apparent market-leaders selected by Local Planning Authorities amongst contractors, is a dangerous concentration of national planning power in what is essentially a biased company with no interest in protecting the countryside, Green Belt or other. It is perhaps no coincidence, but also no consolation, that the scale of attack on the Green Belt envisaged in this draft Local Plan for Guildford Borough is not unique within the nation: the Campaign to Protect Rural England estimates that over 219,000 houses are now proposed to be built on Green Belt land across England. The original, inspired, far-sighted purposes of Green Belt, that has been, and is, valued by so many of past and present generations is rapidly being destroyed; if this trend continues future generations will not be able to value Green Belt because it will have disappeared, and their lives will be the worse for that. As with choice of Pegasus Group to perform the ‘Green Belt and Countryside Study’, another flawed document in the Guildford Borough ‘evidence’ base, every commercial, or ‘professional’, incentive, of Capita Real Estate is to promote development, as is easily ascertained from their website. People in communities can assess the migration trends that they want for their localities: these would be as objective, and no more subjective, than the development-biased view of Capita Real Estate specialists.

The increase in the number of homes (by past correlation almost exactly equivalent to increase in population) proposed for Guildford Borough in the draft Local Plan represents an increase of about 25% over the 17 years of its duration. This is equivalent to a compounding annual increase in homes of 1.32%. For those with short-sighted ambitions that may not sound much, but if such a rate of increase were to be maintained over future generations (a perspective that the NPPF insists upon when considering sustainability) then a simple calculation indicates that the Borough population would increase by nearly 40% in one generation (25 years) and almost double in 2 generations (50 years). It would increase by an order of magnitude (i.e. a factor of 10) in only 7 generations. Recall the definition of sustainable development: achieving growth while “ensuring that better lives for ourselves don’t mean worse lives for future generations”. There is no limit on the number of generations that is to be considered in this premise. Indeed, Councillor Paul Spooner professes in the Foreword to the draft Local Plan: “The borough of Guildford is a very special, beautiful place for all who live and work here. We want to keep it this way for generations to come.”, whilst endorsing development proposals that can only lead towards one outcome in less than a few generations at most: a dense urban sprawl interspersing just a few remnant open spaces. Before this draft plan can be submitted it is incumbent upon Guildford Borough Council to demonstrate, with hard evidence, just how the proposed Local Plan will ensure improvements to the lives of the majority of current residents, or indeed how a majority of future residents will have improved lives over those of current residents ‘for generations to come’. At face value the daily life of an average current resident will deteriorate as a direct result of the extra crowding that will ensue. If widespread improvements to daily life cannot be proven, the development cannot be considered ‘sustainable’ and the plan will therefore be contrary to the NPPF. The provision for all future generations mirrors that envisaged in the NPPF for the Green Belt: an essential characteristic of the Green Belt is its ‘permanence’ (NPPF, 79). Even the draft Local Plan makes this point in policy P2 (4.3.11): ‘The main aim of Green Belt is to prevent urban sprawl by keeping land permanently open’. GBC surely appreciate the meaning of ‘permanently’, which can only imply that they are deliberately ignoring this issue: one cannot keep land permanently open by locating 65% of new development on it.

Paragraph 159 from the National Planning Policy Framework requires the Strategic Housing Market Assessment to identify the housing that the local population is likely to need over the plan period which meets household and population projections, taking account of migration and demographic change. The problem for this task is that projection of migration is extremely uncertain at the moment. This is particularly important because, as noted by the report for GBC by Edge Analytics in 2013, international migration has been a large proportion of population growth in Guildford Borough over the past decade, increasing over the past few years, especially since 2009. About half of the increase in population predicted for the SHMA regions is attributed to migration (paragraph 4.16; see also figure 9 of the previous draft SHMA). That the housing ‘need’ is indeed a very subjective quantity is clearly evident from the document ‘Guildford borough. How many new homes? Background paper, October 2013’. That document gave 11 estimates of housing ‘need’ for the borough, each based on different premises. Figure 18 of that report gives a summary plot of the estimates of yearly housing ‘requirements’ over the next 20 years, which makes 2 points crystal clear:
• The large spread in the distribution of estimates of annual ‘need’, and therefore how subjective the figure is. There is no ‘right’ housing number for the local plan as the Lead Member for Planning and Governance so naively thought at the time: estimates of ‘need’ will be a function of the respective priorities subjectively placed by individuals upon factors such as business development, staffing requirements, migration, adequacy of infrastructure, permanent sanctity of the Greenbelt, political considerations in Westminster etc.
• How large the GL Hearn / Capita Real Estate estimate of ‘need’ is compared with most of the others.

Given the subjectivity, it takes the biscuit that GL Hearn / Capita Real Estate specialists should have criticised the prior output of Edge Analytics specialists (section 4.7 and Table 12 of previous draft SHMA), who, in turn, themselves criticised the first draft produced by GBC specialist(s), adding into the mix the specialism that only the POPGROUP computer programme can provide. Is this not the perfect example of how planning has become the ‘preserve of specialists rather than local populace’?

Even Capita Real Estate's 2015 SHMA report itself considers sensitivities about its preference for the proposal of 517 dwellings per annum for Guildford Borough that range from 239 to 744, a ratio of 3:1. Such uncertainty in figures implies a very weak basis for calling circumstances sufficiently exceptional that the boundaries of the Green Belt must be altered.

Returning to the issue of migration, stated Government policy for the past 6 years has been to reduce national net immigration numbers down from ‘hundreds of thousands’ to ‘tens of thousands’. The new Secretary of State for Exiting the European Union, the Rt. Hon. David Davis, is also committed to modifying the principle of freedom of movement of people within the EU and so honouring a key persuasion of the majority of the national population that voted for ‘Leave’ in the recent referendum on whether the UK remains within the EU. A main reason why the 'Leave' result occurred from the referendum is because a majority of the indigenous population is exasperated with politicians pursuing policies that crowd increased numbers of people into their surroundings and result in a deterioration in their quality of life. A reduction in EU migration will surely result if a reduction in the free movement of EU citizens into the UK is negotiated in the near future: such an outcome is highly likely and therefore immigration is more likely to full more than that projected by Capita Real Estate in future years. Estimates of the numbers of homes required for net immigrants in Guildford Borough should reflect the strong possibility of these migration reductions and be themselves correspondingly reduced: the assumption by Capita Real Estate of only a small decline in international immigration to the Borough must be a worst case scenario. A factor of 1/10 (say 10,000/100,000) in migration is more appropriate. Intuitively a policy of no net migration might be more widely supported by the local population, despite it being labelled ‘inappropriate’ according to the Capita Real Estate ‘specialists’. It is pertinent that net total migration into Guildford Borough is only predicted to be positive because of international migration: without foreign immigration, net migration into the Borough would be significantly negative (net internal migration efflux of 500 to 1000 persons per annum according to figure 15 of the SHMA). Such an efflux would approximately cancel the natural growth of the Borough's current population, leading to zero extra housing requirement.

Migration does not equate to housing ‘need’: by definition it is extra to indigenous need. Migration should be catered for in terms of housing plans only if that migration is generally and democratically seen to be of positive benefit to the local community, in both economic and social terms. The question of economic benefit from migration is a hotly contested subject. Although studies show that, initially, immigrant young working people make a positive contribution to the economy, over the longer term immigration is a net drain on the public purse (to the tune of £95 billion nationally over 1995-2011)4. Given a weak, possibly non-existent net benefit from inward migration, compared with the definite degradation of their environment and daily lives, it is a confident bet that most residents would opt for a lower quantity.

It is also quite uncertain that the large-scale immigration proposed in the draft plan will erase the differences in life expectancy that have identified between affluent and non-affluent areas in the Borough: such differences may indeed be exacerbated by the influx. Population growth, by itself, is no guarantor of increasing wealth per capita5. Capital- and knowledge-intensive postindustrial societies sustain the highest growth rates: these are not necessarily associated with large population growth rates.

In other words the future ‘need’ for housing is anybody’s estimate; it is a very subjective entity, dependent upon the bias of the estimator: Capita Real Estate has erred on the high side given their predilection towards development. To predict and provide for such a large housing number could well be a self-fulfilling prophesy, but producing little benefit to, and more likely a negative effect on, the borough’s economy, let alone its social cohesion.
With the bullish estimates of net international immigration included in its initial demographic projections, Capita Real Estate predict a population increase of 15% for Guildford (21,179; SHMA table 13). But Capita Real Estate then further amplifies housing requirements (SHMA, 10:38, figure 63), such that housing would increase by 25% over the current number of homes in the Borough over the period of the plan. But, historically and generally, numbers of houses are tightly correlated to populations, so, contrary to the token logic, Guildford Borough population would grow by about the same 25%. Consider that the population of the whole UK is projected to grow by only ca. 11% over the same period (growth from 64m to 73m over the 25 years from 2013 to 2037, proportioned to a common 20 year time period). In other words Capita Real Estate are recommending that Guildford Borough cater for housing a population growth that is over twice as large as the national average! So a borough which provides some of the most beautiful scenery in the UK (certainly in the over-populated South-East), and which comprises 89% Green Belt on which the Government places great importance, is to take more than twice its share of the national population growth! This is perverse.

Key within that perversity are the factors that increase the annual extra housing requirement up from 517 to 693 (SHMA, 10:38, figure 63): Student Growth Impact (25); Improving Affordability (31); Supporting Economic Growth (120). The additive nature of these amendments is naïve, and did not the historical population growth include any student growth or support for economic growth? Will not the extra, extra population growth, from 15% to 25%, require even more houses to account for the factors of affordability and economic growth? Or will the affordability and economic growth be diluted by being spread across that extra, extra population growth? Guildford resident Lewis Carroll would have appreciated such logic, and the draft Local Plan might well be entitled “13,860 Alices Through the Looking Glass”.

Building more houses to improve affordability is equally naïve. It is often stated that increased house building will lead to lower prices that will be more affordable by the local population: this is fallacious. The mechanisms of house prices are complex, but to a large extent they are governed by the availability of money for potential buyers; at the moment with very low interest rates, mortgages are cheap and prices have risen as a consequence. Such low interest rates are unlikely to continue for much longer. In addition, there is effectively an infinite market for housing in the borough given its current attractiveness and current national immigration numbers: build more houses, such that their prices drop infinitesimally, and more migration will occur to fill them and sustain the prices. The process is self-defeating and would lead to exponentially increasing housing numbers. Simon Jenkins wrote perceptively on these topics when the NPPF regime was first imposed. It is noteworthy and reprehensible that Capita Real Estate is not open about, nor gives proper justifications for, these hikes in housing numbers, even despite a Freedom of Information request.

Even more perverse, 65% of this inflated local growth is proposed by GBC to be located in the Green Belt, which implies that Green Belt growth in Guildford Borough will be far greater than 25%. West Horsley is proposed to be most severely affected, to suffer a 35% growth. Has anyone at GBC seriously considered the implications of that sort of expansion in a rural village: another 35% school places required; another 35% cars on the roads, constricted in many places by continual roadworks as the network attempts to cope; another 35% patients and medical staff at surgeries; another 35% passengers crowding onto already over-crowded trains; another 35% pressure on sensitive natural areas? Over the 20 years daily life being constantly disrupted by the development.

This is not sustainable. Already, as GBC themselves admit, ‘This growing population places pressure on our existing infrastructure and services like roads and schools. The demand for school places is high and access to amenities such as open spaces struggles to keep pace with Guildford borough’s popularity. Travel demand is concentrated in certain parts of the borough, creating high levels of congestion during peak times.’ These are factors that should have been included in the Sustainability Appraisal by AECOM Infrastructure & Environment UK Limited, rather than the restricted selection of 18 issues given in its paragraph 4.2. This firm is a subsidiary of AECOM, a worldwide group making money from development, whose headquarters are located in Los Angeles, USA, again hardly describable as local champions of empowerment for local people in accordance with the supposed spirit of the NPPF! Incidentally just how competent is AECOM Infrastructure & Environment UK Limited given that its accounts were overdue at Companies House on 18 July 2016 (the last day of public consultation)?

Furthermore, despite the proposed extra housing, there will almost inevitably be continuing shortages during this 20 years as the extra urbanization of the Green Belt will have a magnetic effect. It is naïve to imagine that a massive building programme of ‘mixed housing’ will bring down prices as a consequence. So, unless GBC learns a lesson, there is more likelihood of the pursuit of growth continuing and even acceleration beyond that period. Given how much extra development is proposed in this 2016 draft Local Plan compared with that of 2003, how long might it be before another revision of the plan is called for and further erosion of the Green Belt ensues?

1) Revised figures for future population growth: I object to those produced by GL Hearn[1]

The GL Hearn Addendum report identifies a need for 12,426 homes in Guildford Borough between 2015-34, equivalent to 654 dwellings per annum. This is 17% above the starting point demographic projections.

So in 3 years GL Hearn has managed to change its ‘objectively based’ estimate of how many homes per annum are required for Guildford from 652 in 2014 to 693 in 2016 and back to 654 in 2017. And what has happened during that period to cause the changes in these superficially accurate estimates? Why, the UK has decided to exit the European Union with the intention of reducing freedom of movement and therefore inward migration. Goodness knows how much the Council taxpayers of the Borough have had to pay GL Hearn for the expertise which has gone into increasing over the 3 years the estimate by that extra 2 homes per annum, with a slight wobble in between.

But in truth the exercise is an expensive charade. There is no ‘objectivity’ in estimating future numbers. Estimates of future trends by individuals, or even individual organisations, are always subjective and consequently usually turn out to be wrong. In fact, it has been demonstrated in many different fields that the average values chosen by many different individuals or organisations, even inexpert ones, can outperform single expert opinions.

“Wisdom-of-the-crowds research[2] routinely attributes the superiority of crowd averages over individual judgments to the elimination of individual noise an explanation that assumes independence of the individual judgments from each other. Thus the crowd tends to make its best decisions if it is made up of diverse opinions and ideologies.”

No exercise of gauging crowd estimates of required homes has been officially organised, although over 30,000 objections to GBC’s 2016 draft Local Plan might have provided some evidence that it has estimated very much on the high side. Of course the charge of self-interested NIMBYism might be levied on those objections, so let us instead take as a source for multiple and heterogeneous estimates of housing requirements a document published by GBC itself, even though it was nearly 4 years ago: “How many new homes? A background paper” by GBC October 2013[3]. Although from one, let us charitably say unbiased, publisher it did at least use various different methodologies to estimate housing need. From the Executive Summary:

“The options look at the future need for homes between 2011 and 2031 from three different perspectives, official CLG projections, demographic trend based, job-led and dwelling-led data. We have used projections to generate these options, as they are the best available evidence” (my italics).

These 3 different approaches, each with multiple sub-options, led to estimates of housing requirements per annum of: (a) 704, 415-474; (b) 591-674, 181-226; (c) 358-426, 572-655, 464-540; (d) 312, 322, 1066.

In the above there are 17 estimates (taking the upper and lower limits of each range as separate estimates) of required homes per annum over 2011-2031. They range from 181 to 1066. The mean of the estimates is 507 and the median (as many estimates below as above) is 474. For a pictorial view of the numbers, below is a full distribution of estimates from ‘How many homes?’, also showing the estimates from GL Hearn of 2014, 2016 and 2017.

[Chart]

As an indication of how high is the latest GL Hearn addendum estimate of 654, it falls into the uppermost quartile of the normal distribution fitted to the 17 GBC estimates in ‘How many homes?’ And yet GBC prefer this higher number from the development biased GL Hearn consultancy; possibly because those numbers are consistent with its own expansive development schemes? Of course the exercise of estimating the required number of homes cannot be treated in terms of just statistics, but neither should it just be relinquished to a single development-dependent organisation, however expert, in 3 closely spaced years; naturally that organisation would be expected to, and did, provide self-consistent numbers in order not to ‘save face’, even despite contra-indications from many other people and organisations. For particular example, the consultant commissioned by West Horsley Parish Council, Neil McDonald, possessing equal, if not greater, expertise than GL Hearn, has examined[4] the latter’s addendum figures and also found that they overstate the future trends in Guildford population. In particular he states:

“It seems probable that the under-recording of out migration has continued after 2011. This has major implications. In particular, the ONS’s 2015 population estimate for Guildford may over-estimate the district’s population and DCLG’s 2014-based population projection may overstate the likely increase in housing by a substantial margin. An alternative calculation making plausible adjustments to the estimated outflows in the period 2001-15 would reduce the demographically-based estimate of the number of homes needed from 558 homes a year 2015-34 to 404.”

International immigration comprises a key component of the population changes in Guildford. In 2014/15 it was almost 2/3. It is noteworthy that GL Hearn are content to consider that the effect of Brexit on reducing immigration to Guildford Borough is already subsumed within the ONS projections of future population growth.

I OBJECT to the use of a housing number based on an opaque methodology that has been shown to be flawed by two separate studies (Cllr David Reeve's analysis of July 2016 and the independent NMSS report commissioned by the Guildford Residents Association of June 2016) and that has then been applied without any constraints to justify an unacceptably high level of housing in the Green Belt.

POLICY S2 – Borough Wide Strategy

I OBJECT. I have 5 objections to the proposal to build 13,860 new homes:

1. The number is based on pre-Brexit projections for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously. "4

1. The number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any commonsense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half the people who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent districts of Rushmoor and Mole Valley, minutes from Guildford town, are outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere. Unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and is part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council have failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so the housing numbers

1. NPPF paragraph 14
2. The most widely accepted definition is the 1987 United Nations one from the Brundtland Report: “
   Development that meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own ”
3. Including: “empowering local people to shape their surroundings… Take account of the different roles and character of different areas… protecting the Green Belts around them… recognizing the intrinsic character and beauty of the countryside and supporting thriving communities within it… Support the transition to a low carbon future… Contribute to conserving and enhancing the natural environment and reducing pollution… Encourage the effective use of land by reusing land that has previously been developed (brownfield land)… Conserve heritage assets… Actively manage patterns of growth to make the fullest use of public transport and cycling and focus significant development on locations which can be made sustainable.”
4. At the time of writing, about £8billion (40%) has been wiped off the value of the UK’s top 4 housebuilders alone.

derived from it are unreliable. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county (none in Mole Valley, for instance). This highly lopsided distribution is unexplained.

1. The figure of 13,860 new homes is unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinised by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA.5 The Council say we should trust the contractors’ model because it is used by a large number of other local authorities. Wide usage, however, does not confer objectivity. Guildford’s OAN would fail the basic transparency test even if the methodology used were a universally admired ‘gold standard’. But it is not: it belongs to consultants whose website openly proclaim their pro-development agenda,6 provoking reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. External experts and members of the public have provided detailed critiques of the model. Its most fatal flaw, however, is that it has not been disclosed – not even to the authors of the plan, who have taken it on trust. This is irrational and unsound.

2. The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The plan fails to set a Housing Target of new homes to be built, or explain how this relates to the “Objectively Assessed Number” (OAN) for housing need. Elsewhere, the Council have said that the two are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted, but in the same breath say that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability.7 Despite the NPPF, the plan fails to address these constraints. In any case, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permission, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how can anything else be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a Housing Target that takes normal constraints and adjustments credibly into account, and which leaves the Council to set one at any level without further consultation. Even if the OAN were not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

1. It is irrational to embark on a radical transformation of the borough without a clear Housing Target. Most of Guildford borough is theoretically protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the existing number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

Council has failed to seek its disclosure. • 13,860 figure confuses the OAN with a housing target. No definite housing target given, leaving too much scope for the Council to make one up. I can’t understand how we’re being consulted when we don’t know how many houses the Council want to build, taking all the contraints into account. • Figures based on a Housing Market Area that ignores 2 neighbouring districts (Rushmoor and Mole Valley) and is much too small, since most people commute or travel far outside the Area to shop or study. This distorts the figures: no reason why Guildford needs to build nearly twice as many large housing estates as the rest of Surrey put together, or half of all sites over 100 units. • High numbers involved would transform character of the borough from mainly rural/Green Belt to urban, creating a corridor of development out of London as per Woking or Croydon.

I object to the disproportionate distribution of houses across Guildford Borough, by far, the North East has taken an unsustainable number, in an area where country lanes are narrow and volume of traffic now using through routes makes roads gridlocked at rush hour.

I object to the methodology of drawing up the plan. Guildford Borough employs consultants who allegedly have planning expertise but have done so without taking account of Surrey County Council highway planners’ views, or the costs involved in improving the infrastructure, currently out side their financial capability.

The methodology is also flawed as this plan has been formulated without regard to village Neighbourhood plans. Surely, logic would suggest planning is best formed by a bottom up approach, not top down.

Firstly I OBJECT to the enormous amount of paperwork involved in this second draft Local Plan – total overload and to make it worse we have only been given a mere 6 weeks to read it with no consultation period during the most busy period of the year. No doubt what you were hoping for…………..

It is therefore highly unlikely that you will get the amount of responses that Guildford deserves as we are all fed up having to write and re-write and then there are the so called “hard to reach groups” you have talked about in the past. As from my experience so far, the majority of residents do not even know what the Local Plan is and have certainly not read it so will not be making informed comments on the issues that may well affect them and their families in the future.

These “hard to reach groups” still exist and will likely not be responding:

- the young and busy working people.
- the elderly who live alone and have no support from family or neighbours.
- those with limited IT skills – not owning a computer for access to information.
- ethnic groups - those with limited English language skills.

The destruction of swathes of Green Belt and open countryside when brownfield sites in the current urban envelope are available is wholly contrary to the NPPF guidelines. I object to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2).

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing units being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from that of all the other Borough Councils in Surrey. No justification is given for this differentiation.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. This number needs to be revised downwards.

The critiques of the Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) submitted by Councillor Reeve and by the Guildford Residents’ Association provide compelling justification for materially reducing the proposed number.

As a result of the juxtaposition of Guildford with Woking, Guildford residents are effectively being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the fact that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. The Plan also ignores the fact that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of this unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). This would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban. The needed housing should be provided by concentrating development on urban brown field sites and by increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighbouring towns merging into one another.

The strategy adopted in the Plan represents disproportionate development in the north east of the borough as a result of the allocation of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Currently these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough and are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. This would result in the coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. In short, the Plan is unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

I object to the fact that in Policy S2 the reduction in numbers is mostly in the area of Normandy/Flexford. As a consequence the burden of development falls even more disproportionately on the East of the borough.

1. POLICY S2

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London’s commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

The number is based on EU projections for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, due to our exit. The area is artificial, and so are the housing numbers artificially high.

It is not clear why Waverley is included in the SHMA and not say Mole Valley. Guildford borough is unique and should be treated as such. These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council have failed to seek good data.

No public consultation on the SHMA and no scrutiny. The method has not been disclosed therefore one one knows whether the numbers are completely fabricated. This is not a good basis for our Local Plan.

University Student housing should not be counted in the SHMA.

Most of Guildford borough is meant to be protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). This would be a major and irreversible change, a largely rural borough into a suburban one like Woking, if residents wanted to live in Woking we would, its cheaper and has lower house prices. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London’s commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.
This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

1. The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

2. The Housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

3. The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any commonsense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. The housing target proposed, of 12,426 is based on assumptions that have not been made public and includes flaws that have not been corrected in the modified SHMA (verified by professional analyst Neil MacDonald of NMSS who concluded that an annual housing figure of 400 per year would meet Guildford's overall need). The phased approach (more homes built towards the end of the plan period) is appropriate in order to permit necessary infrastructure but open-ended targets where an unknown figure is held back until after the plan period is not a reduction but a postponement and does not allow for optimal planning or transparency.

When assessing the need for development in the local rural areas I want to know how the council proposes to determine whether there is true local need. Under the last local plan the only housing development allowed in the villages was supposed to be for people within the parish. The recent social housing development in new road Gomshall has been mostly filled with people from outside the parish. How does the proposed local plan address this and what assurances have we that self interest on the part of planning officials will not take precedence.

The whole plan is based on the premise that growth and expansion of business and population is a desirable objective for Guildford; I strongly disagree with this as if it is achieved it will change the character of the borough from that of a busy market town to that of city. Residents of Guildford have chosen to live in the former, not the latter. I therefore do not accept the excessive figure for the estimated housing need.

The plan proposed puts too much emphasis on expanding retail capacity within the town at the expense of allocating town sites to housing development. The need for retail premises is in decline due to online shopping, and housing development should be built at high density on town sites in order to preserve the green belt.

In conclusion I do not see the borough council to be acting in the best interests of their electorate in the draft plan as they will be destroying the environment and character of the area in which we have chosen to live. Indeed much of what is proposed seems to be in the best interests of property developers, and there seems to be little regard for the views of residents expressed in the previous consultation.

S2 Unfair concentration of housing development and overturning of Green Belt sites to the west of Guildford. Once again, it seems that the villages to the west of Guildford are the target of GBC's development plans and I object to an apparent uneven policy of distribution within the Borough.

Lord Onslow's proposal to develop 1000 new homes, a new school and sports facilities on Clandon Golf Course, Merrow is an excellent and practicable idea and it is curious that it is absent from the overall draft Plan. The site is well served by a good road system, with excellent access to the A3/A25/M25 thus avoiding the need to circumnavigate the congested roads of central Guildford. The schools on that side of Guildford (St. Peter's, George Abbot, Howard of Effingham) are popular and would benefit from an additional secondary school in the area. It's a win/win idea for Lord Onslow's proposal.

The Local Area Definition

Guildford Area only defined as Waverley and Woking as well as Guildford – Guildford entwined will be hit by other implications from Rushmoor and the further to the west. Much of this passes through Guildford in the rush hours. These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data.

The OAN / SHMA Process is flawed

The Local Plan evidence base should be open to scrutiny. How can we scrutinise the OAN on 693, when the assumptions and calculations underlying the result are hidden. The Council propose we should trust them, as the contractors’ model is used by a large number of other local authorities.

Widespread usage in no circumstances mean it is right for Guildford, and Guildford itself has some rather special circumstances, being that it is dominated by the University of Surrey. The Office of National Statistics acknowledge this, yet no mention is made of the implications of the massive and temporary resident student population on the long term population forecasts underlying the model.

Brexit has made the large immigration assumptions used in the SHMA rather suspect too.

For reasons I do not understand Guildford Borough Council failed to scrutinize the SHMA, and recently altered the petitioning rules in March 2016 to avoid a full public petition on the matter going into debate.

The hidden model belongs to consultants G L Hearn, whose website openly proclaim their pro-development agenda, leading me to the reasonable suspicion that the figures are not right.

This lack of debate and closed process, undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask us, the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN were not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.
Outside Analysis

Guildford Resident Association commissioned a critique of the housing number “A Review of the West Surrey SHMA as it relates to the Objectively Assessed Housing Needs of Guildford” by Neil McDonald dated June 2016. This suggests the target should be 510 per year (before constraints) rather than the 693 which appears to be set and applied.

The Campaign for Rural England has also done a critique exercise they will be submitting, which we believe leads to a similar conclusion on numbers.

Constraints should be applied

Constraints are fully justified and need to be applied in accordance with para 166 of the NPPF.

- The borough has major traffic and access problems,
- The town is gridlocked in rush hours
- The A3 is gridlocked in rush hours
- Minor roads are overloaded
- Most of Guildford borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA).

Guildford residents cannot take such a large increase in housing target on trust but that is what we are being asked to do. As the number is not explained it is difficult to argue with.

SHMA is Pre Brexit

Even the 510 would be substantially low if Brexit implies a limit on international migration, as international migration is driving the majority of the population rise.

The University Impact

The University has approximately 14000 FTE students, half of whom live off-campus. This means that around 7000 students live in the town centre, occupying homes that could be made available for University staff and other key workers.

The housing need has to be completely rethought in light of the student impact. There is no policy for students and I feel - as outlined below - this is a serious omission, with nearly 1 in 5 of the Guildford Town population being a student.

Let’s begin with the history, and previous promised. The University has been woeful in meeting its promises made in 2003 to build one student accommodation place for each extra full time place. I specifically refer to the University of Surrey’s agreement to build 4790 student residences, and 300 staff residences to support its expansion in the Manor Park Development Brief (MPDB) in 2003. To date only around 1665 residences and 30 staff houses have been built, while the University has expanded by 5850 full time students (SHMA Appendix C).

Over the same period it has expanded by around 6000 students, placing a huge burden on infrastructure, and forcing the population out of the town as the student move in.

In the same 2003 Local Plan – the University committed to 60% of full time students on site. It currently admits to 54%, but with 11523 (under and post graduate) full time students (SHMA appendix C) and only 5100 accommodation units (SHMA Appendix C) this is calculated 44% on site. The current University Estates Plan of 2009 states clearly the University only plans for 42%. This is a direct breech of that 2003 agreement. We note the slight fall after 2011 is more likely to do with the introduction of student grants, than a plan reduction by the University as stated in SHMA Appendix C.

Increase Students on Site. We note that other councils such as Oxford which have a similar scale University challenge have solved this creatively, by seeking agreements for student numbers between 80 and 85% on site. OBC motivate the University colleges by effectively blocking any development until this is agreed and adhered to.
I therefore believe that the proposal of 60% of students is wholly insufficient. Guildford needs a policy to ensure that the University accommodates 85% per cent of its students on its existing campuses. This policy would quickly free up 1000+ houses currently denied to the residents due to the advantages of high returns offered in renting to Students by privet landlords. These properties would be in the town centre, close to the University and railway station, where they are sustainable and needed. An easy win.

If this were to happen a natural result would be fewer traffic movements, and fewer problems with students parking in residential areas. Students living on campus are less likely to bring cars. (In parts of Ashenden there are four cars per student house) NB In 2003, the University promised that Manor Park would be a “world-class car-free campus”.

Under a 2004 Section 106 agreement (Section 15), Hazel Farm will be released by the University to provide housing for Guildford once 2,500 units have been built on Manor Park. Whilst the site cannot be used for family housing (because of its proximity to Whitmore Common SPA), Natural England would allow the site to be used as a care home. This usage would seem appropriate given the ageing population often cited as being a reason for population growth, and it would help towards Guildford’s housing supply numbers.

This is all good. Also

Seven out of the top-10-ranking US universities accommodate more than 86% of students on campus - Harvard has 98%.

Oxford City Council’s Local Plan includes a policy which limits the number of students in the private housing market to 6,000 out of a student population expected to reach 40,000 in the near future.

The University has ample space on its Manor Park and Stag Hill campuses to provide this accommodation.

Student preference is an argument that the University has used in order not to build its student housing, however the majority of students attending Oxford University are not given the option to live in shared accommodation in town, and this does not prevent them wanting to go there.

Many students actively want to live on campus and want the security of knowing that they have a roof over their heads for three years. The student halls are filled every year. A number of students, for example in Onslow Village, would have preferred to remain on campus, but say they were unable to do so.

Object - All original objections remain

A modified target of 12426 houses still does not reflect local need or conditions. Conversely changing the target based on a SHMA document which remains unexplained adds to the accusation that the number is made up, rather than calculated based on a clear set of assumptions. Guildford is a town of 70000 residents, and we have a University of 14000 students. Under any definition that is a monopoly. The affect this has had on the town, and housing is dramatic. Guildford residents association (GRA) have employed a professional analyst (Neil MacDonald), and I would defer to his report and conclusions, on numbers and lack of transparency. In response to your Draft local plan, requiring responses by 18/07/2016, I must strongly object to the proposed development on Blackwell Farm.

Greenbelt should be a last resort

There are plenty of brownfield sites that can be developed to provide a proportionate quantity of extra housing capacity, if strategically planned for the long term. Building on greenfield sites should be a last resort only when all brownfield sites are exhausted.

Building on greenfield sites because there are insufficient brownfield sites available as a tactical short term option is not a good enough reason to take greenfield.

Any perceived lack of immediately available brownfield sites is due to a historic lack of strategic planning and a continued lack of long term strategic planning. What is being proposed is an excessive tactical build to make up for these short comings.

The plan needs to fit the land becoming available, not the land fitting the available plan. Reduce the target numbers of new home to only what can be built without taking green field.

I object to the commitment to build 12,426 homes (Policy S2 (1)), based on the Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) 2017 prepared by GL Hearn. The objectively assessed need (OAN) figure of 12,426 has been inflated and does not apply any of the constraints required under the NPPF and the National Planning Policy Guidance.

Inflated OAN

The Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) modelling has been found to be unreliable. A detailed, professional review of the Guildford and West Surrey SHMA, undertaken in June 2017 by NMSS on behalf of the Guildford Residents Association and Parish Councils has shown that the demographic and economic need figures put forward are fundamentally flawed. The NMSS analysis highlights a large gap between projections and census figures in Guildford and identifies under recording of students moving away as the most plausible explanation. It concludes that if this recording error is corrected by making plausible adjustments for the outflow of students in the period 2001-15, this would reduce the demographically-based estimate of the number of homes needed from 558 homes a year during 2015-34 to 404 per annum[1].

Failure to apply constraints

According to the INRIX 2016 Traffic Scorecard[2], Guildford is the town with the worst traffic congestion in the UK, and its congestion is worse than many major cities, such as Glasgow, Cardiff, Liverpool, Bristol, and Southampton, making it the sixth worst congestion hotspot in the UK (Table 1). Furthermore, there is no resilience in the road network, and when incidents occur almost the whole of the borough is gridlocked. Figure 2 shows what happens to the network on the west of Guildford when there is an accident on the A3. This screen grab of traffic was taken on 14 April 2017.

In planning its spatial development strategy, GBC does not appear to have taken the borough’s traffic problems into account. Nor has it taken into account the fact that 89 per cent of the borough lies within the green belt and that 64 per cent lies within the AONB. The neighbouring borough of Woking has reduced its OAN by 50 per cent as a result of constraints, and yet it has a lower percentage of green belt (60 per cent) and no AONB. Woking is also less congested. It seems a nonsense that Guildford should apply zero constraint (on the grounds of traffic and landscape) to its OAN and then seek to provide for the shortfall of a neighbouring borough, which is less constrained. It would appear that GBC’s refusal to apply constraints is driven by the Lead Councillor’s wish to maintain higher housing figures, as evidenced in his statement to the GBC Council Meeting on May 15, 2017:

“I’ll take the objectively assessed need as it is at 12,426, but I can tell you I’m not going to celebrate the fact that the number has come down.” (Cllr Paul Spooner, GBC Council Meeting, May 15 2017)

This suggests that, given a choice, Cllr Spooner would wish to build over the green belt, as this is a direct consequence of a higher housing number. It seems that the real driver is to boost the size of Guildford and its economy rather than to meet housing need at all, and this has resulted in the opportunity being taken at every turn to adopt the higher housing figure within the SHMA modelling. Unfortunately, Cllr Spooner has overlooked the fact that traffic congestion is detrimental to Guildford’s economic growth. A business survey carried out by GBC in 2008 found that the main reasons, given for businesses moving out of the borough – aside from the cost of property – were transport and congestion. Traffic problems are also cited as a deterrent to businesses setting up in Guildford[3].

Given that boosting housing provision is unlikely to make housing in the borough more affordable, it is incumbent on the Council to deliver a Local Plan that will encourage (per capita) growth and therefore will not exacerbate existing traffic problems.

1. POLICY S2

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London’s commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

I object to the Council's intention to declassify large areas of Green Belt in and around the borough and, in particular, the proposed excessive number of houses earmarked for Send and adjacent parishes. My reasons for objecting are as follows:-

- the housing numbers have been calculated on flawed data
- it will result in urban sprawl which is precisely what the Green Belt was designed to protect
- in addition to the earmarked sites, removal of Green Belt status will open the floodgates for further planning applications from developers and local landowners
- there is insufficient infrastructure to support such wholesale development
- local schools are at capacity now
- roads are at a standstill at peak times already and building on this scale will add hundreds more vehicles
- the Villages Medical Centre is already running to stand still

The plan has been fraught with controversy from its first airing and, despite overwhelming opposition to most of its proposals, planning councilors have completely ignored the 20,000 odd written objections. I object most strongly to the plan and trust that if Guildford Borough Council doesn't rethink its position, the planning inspector will reject it altogether.

I object to Policy S2 - Housing Number:-

- Guildford Borough Council (GBC) has chosen to ignore the professional advice of Neil MacDonald of NMSS and conjured up a proposed housing target of 12,426, which is clearly based on flawed data and based on criteria that has not been made public.

Housing number – POLICY S2

The housing target proposed, of 12,426 is based on assumptions that have not been made public and includes flaws that have not been corrected in the modified SHMA (verified by professional analyst Neil MacDonald of NMSS who concluded that an annual housing figure of 400 per year would meet Guildford’s overall need). The phased approach (more homes built towards the end of the plan period) is appropriate in order to permit necessary infrastructure but open-ended targets where an unknown figure is held back until after the plan period is not a reduction but a postponement and does not allow for optimal planning or transparency.

As a Horsley resident I also object to the proposals to squeeze large numbers of homes into local villages that just do not have the infrastructure to support them. These villages are part of our unique English Heritage which should be preserved at all costs, especially considering their proximity to the built up suburbs of London.

I object to 14,000 (690 per year) is unjustified, unproven and been subject to scrutiny.

The number excludes currently granted permissions and potential windfall sites which extends this number even higher.
This number is too high and is leading to numerous issues around lack of infrastructure and inevitable encroachment on Green Belt; there is lack of protection for our countryside.

At this level there are certain to be delays that will create problems down the line with pressure to bring in locations currently excluded.

There is no specific policy in the Local Plan to prevent inappropriate development within current communities such as Fairlands, e.g. garden grabbing. Which the government has stipulated should not be part of development plans. As above delays elsewhere will lend weight to such applications in order to meet the excessively high number. There needs to be a specific policy.

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website...
openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London’s commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result in coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

I OBJECT to the number of planned houses rising from 652 to 693 over the next twenty years. The way this has been assessed and calculated is not at all transparent and is more than double figures used in previous plans.

I object to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

There is too much proposed development in a small part of the borough in Wisley (A35) Ripley/Send (A43) and Clandon (A25). The plan is unbalanced with over 5,000 houses proposed between the M25 and Burpham, which will merge all the villages and their identities.

We have carefully considered the new version of the Local Plan and recognise the significant time and expense that has been incurred in preparing it for public consultation.

Having done so however, we take the view that the essential basis of the Plan is open to question because, it seems to us that the total number of new houses and dwellings stated as required during the period of the plan is seriously over estimated.

The immediate result of this over estimate is the need to locate numerous potential development sites in areas presently situate in the Green Belt.

We remain of the opinion previously expressed that the essential basis of the plan is open to question as there seem good grounds to consider that the number of new houses and dwellings stated to be required is seriously over estimated. One reason for this, as can be seen in East Horsley, is the increased willingness of GBC planners to permit the demolition of older smaller houses and bungalows in favour of larger modern houses that are frequently out of keeping with the local amenity and significantly reduce the opportunity for existing residents who wish to stay in the area to "downsize".

I am writing to support the Guildford Plan but feel that improvements need to be made to it before it is approved. I fully except that home need to be built and a certain amount of green belt land will need to be surrendered over the timespan of the plan to meet the housing numbers. It is important that Guildford Borough Council looks at all of the brownfield sites within the greenbelt that could be used before agricultural land is developed on. In Normandy a huge greenfield development is proposed that will substantially change the village for the worse. I feel it would better suit the village to build on our 10 acre brownfield land at Strawberry Farm. Our business has operated from this site in Normandy for - lover 50 years, but, because of the nature of the business with its many heavy lorry movements per day it has not always met with the approval of many of the residents. Removing this business from this site and replacing it with houses I am sure it would be viewed by villagers as a positive development.

So with this in mind I am proposing that this site be included in the plan.
No evidence has been provided to justify the need for 14,000 new houses to be built in the Borough. Guildford Borough Council have refused to release the data on which this housing need is based and sought to withhold it from wider scrutiny under the premise that it is the intellectual property of a third party and is commercially sensitive. If GBC genuinely believes this housing figure is accurate then they should have the confidence to release the data upon which the figure is based. Not doing so is cowardly, deceitful and only increases the general public's distrust of politicians.

- The referendum result means the data used to derive the need for 14,000 new dwellings must be revisited. One of the assumptions behind whatever model has been used to arrive at a housing need of 14,000 dwellings must have been that the UK would remain in the European Union. Given the country has voted to leave the EU it must mean that any population growth or immigration forecast assumptions used are redundant and will continue to be so until such time as we get a better understanding of what leaving will actually mean vis-a-vis the principle of freedom of movement.

Insufficient/inappropriate focus on developing Brown Field sites.

The expansion of urban areas to accommodate more commercial real estate indicates the Council is not interested in maximising Brown Field sites for housing purposes. For example, under Policy E7: Guildford Town Centre. it is suggested that 45,000 sq In of land at North Street should be assigned for retail uses not housing.

Online retail is set to account for 21.5% of total retail sales by 2018 from 12.7% in 2013, the highest online retail share in the world according to the Centre for Retail Research. In March 2016, online sales rose 12.3%, and it was the third consecutive month in which more than 20% of all non-food shopping took place online according to the British Retail Consortium and accounting firm KPMG. With such a high swing to online purchasing, retailers will need 70 high street stores to create a national presence compared to 250 in the mid 2000’s. An expansion on such a scale is negligent when the Council claims to be in such desperate need for housing. Retail is a declining industry and should not be invested in by the Borough at the expense of housing in the most sustainable urban locations, near employment and transport hubs.
The proposed housing need is unsustainable. Over development will damage local communities, especially West Horsley, East Horsley, Normandy, Ockham, Ripley, Send and Clandon. These communities do not need the housing numbers proposed. The Key Evidence document “Guildford Borough Economic Strategy 2013 -2031 makes no case for locating large numbers of dwellings in West and East Horsley or in neighbouring villages. Over 23% of the Plan's new housing is proposed for the localities of Ripley, Ockham, Send and the Horsleys.

Development on the scale proposed in the Plan will require huge levels of investment to provide the infrastructure to support the resulting influx of thousands of new residents. Currently, the provision of primary and secondary education within the area is under considerable strain with local schools being oversubscribed for places. Children who are unfortunate enough to live outside the catchment areas for these schools must travel considerable distances to receive their education. There is only a vague reference to school provision in the Plan despite the potential for hundreds of new homes falling within its catchment areas. This raises the question as to where GBC thinks the thousands of new children will go to receive their education?

There is one GP surgery serving the Horsleys currently. The Infrastructure Delivery Plan suggests a possible extension to the Kingston Avenue Medical Practice. However, here is no evidence to suggest that development of the scale proposed in the Plan will lead to additional GP provision within the timescales of the new development. As such the existing surgery would quite literally be swamped and be unable to provide anything like an adequate service.

The construction of 2,500 homes in the Ockham and Horsleys area will substantially increase the congestion on what are poorly maintained "B" and "C" category roads. It is also fair to conclude that the accompanying increase in traffic volume from such a massive population increase will accelerate the speed that these roads deteriorate and therefore, the frequency and cost of maintaining them. In addition the knock on effect of having thousands of new traffic journeys per day will quite literally gridlock the area, and will directly impact on the traffic flow on both the north and southbound A3 carriageways, and quite probably the M25/A3 junction.

Whilst Horsley station has frequent trains to London and Guildford, it is highly unlikely that the current or future train service provider will improve its peak time service to accommodate the increase in commuters.

There are a number of areas within the Horsleys and Ockham environs which are subject to frequent flooding. Two of the most notable areas, Ockham Road North and the Ripley/A3 roundabout are not even mentioned in the Plan. Failure to address these locations as well as other sites that are prone to flooding is clearly unacceptable.

To conclude, it is my opinion that the Local Plan is flawed, and is riddled with inaccuracies and unsubstantiated conclusions. It is a development-led, not needs based Plan, and has been devised using an over inflated housing target either by design or through incompetence. It is clear that the same type of errors and deceits are being repeated as with the 2014 Draft Local Plan despite the changes to the senior personnel responsible for the Plan.

I urge GBC to stop the current process and set about producing a Plan that is focused on housing need, not economic or commercial growth, and which is based on sound and transparent data.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Attached documents:
There is brownfield land available in the town centre which is being earmarked for commercial development rather than for housing. This is enough to meet our real needs for affordable local homes. There are enough vacant commercial sites to cope with genuine business need, and we have enough retail capacity already, so urban brownfield/derelict land should be used for housing.

I understand that more houses are needed in the South East - in my opinion a great deal more should be done to make the North East and other areas with comparatively low population growth, more attractive for expansion, but that's another story. However, I am dismayed at the proposed density and number of houses on the proposed sites. This is not only for aesthetic reasons but principally because it appears that absolutely no thought has been given to the impact this will have on the lives of those currently living in The Horsleys.

We, the residents, chose to live in a village, not a town and so we do not expect the facilities which a town has to offer.
But what is proposed in terms of population growth is a town with none of the amenities. In fact the proposal will detract from those amenities which we do currently have.

1. 1 OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

a. The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

b. The Housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

c. The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. Policy S2 Borough Wide Strategy
As stated above, I object to the enormous scale of the proposed building programme, which far exceeds the local housing needs. ONS forecast a sustained UK net immigration rate of 200,000 each year from 2014 to 2039. This is already high, and at least double the target, and will account for half of the UK's long term population growth. The current rate is higher still. The ONS also show that of Surrey's population forecast, some two thirds is due to net immigration. The draft plan seeks to build far in excess of local needs. It is not a local Borough plan but instead presents a threat to our county because of our national failure to manage our numbers sensibly. I believe two wrongs do not make a right.

It appears to me that the draft plan is little changed in scope from the previous version of 2014. I believe local people should be consulted and heeded; but it seems instead our views are needed as a box ticking exercise in this process, and then ignored.

As advised previously, my objections to the draft plan are that it would make our county and our village, an extension of Greater London. This is based upon estimates of the need for housing, due to inflated forecasts of immigration rates that are probably inaccurate, and certainly unnecessary and unwelcome at this scale.

In prioritising the massive construction implied by these migration forecasts, the draft fails to protect the Green Belt and productive agricultural land and the rural landscapes and character of the county. It fails to address the road and rail congestion and demand for schools and public services should it be implemented. It all but ignores the environmental impacts, such as local air quality, noise and light pollution, road safety, biodiversity loss and climate change. These problems are all too apparent in those parts of the world where urbanisation is unchecked.

In the national context the draft is unable to address the need to promote economic growth in the rest of our country, away from the southeast. But without a national effort to redistribute growth and wealth, any additional housing provided in Surrey would not remain affordable for long, and its provision would only consolidate the economic dominance of London at the expense of our countryside. England has over 45,000 ha previously developed land, enough for at least 1 million homes, but mainly outside London and the southeast (CPRE 2014: From wasted space to living spaces).

Given this availability, no compelling case or "exceptional circumstance" for the sacrifice of the Metropolitan Green Belt is possible. Green Belts have protected our land from urban sprawl for seventy years, and there remains adequate brownfield land for housing nationally. Instead this draft implicitly accepts a high immigration rate as a given, without consideration of ways to manage it. By catering to London's needs, it perpetuates problems of national importance with respect to immigration, the north-south divide, social mobility and environmental harm.

I object to the following proposals specifically:

The housing target proposed, of 12,426 is based on assumptions that have not been made public and includes flaws that have not been corrected in the modified SHMA (verified by professional analyst Neil MacDonald of NMSS who concluded that an annual housing figure of 400 per year would meet Guildford’s overall need). The phased approach (more homes built towards the end of the plan period) is appropriate in order to permit necessary infrastructure but open-ended targets where an unknown figure is held back until after the plan period is not a reduction but a postponement and does not allow for optimal planning or transparency.

I object to the Council not following due process.

Since the last draft Local Plan every site in the village of Send has been changed. Not only locations but also in housing numbers. Even as recently as 5th April 2016 there was a document released giving information on the new local Plan with links to maps and now there are massive changes, even since the publication of this document. My understanding is that following the rejection of the Draft Local Plan the Council could only push forward under Regulation 19 if there was not significant changes. In Send, None of the 485 new homes was included, the site at Garlick's Arch was not included, the land west of Winds Ridge and send hill was not included and the removal Send from the Green Belt was not included. These are major changes to the plan for the village of Send. If this amount of change is to be proposed then we need to go back and have a full consultation under Regulation 18.

The table shows the following increase in homes in the area over the period of the plan:

- Ash and Tongham 91
- Ash and Tongham Strategic location of growth 1241
- Village extensions (including Ash Green southern site) 993*

*no indication of the possible number for Ash Green included in this figure

Since 2013 the following residential developments have been approved:

Section page number 159 of 1722  Document page number 860
03/11/15  26 dwellings Spoil Lane
16/07/15  55 dwellings at Grange Farm
21/04/16  56 dwellings at Guildford Road
18/12/13  39 dwellings at The Croft
30/12/13  26 dwellings at Foreman Road
30/12/13  35 dwellings at Poyle Road
30/04/13  60 dwellings at Ash Green Lane West
20/03/14  400 dwellings at Ash Lodge Drive
15/06/16  55 dwellings at Spoil Lane
14/06/16  21 dwellings at South Lane
May 2016  7 dwellings at Wandle Close

Possible and, no doubt, probable:

Under immediate consideration and recommended for approval by GBC:
58 dwellings at Warren Farm
11 dwellings at rear of 57 Manor Road, Tongham

Currently under appeal with the Planning Inspector:
6 dwellings at South Lane

It is possible that not all of the developments approved in recent years have been included above but if just those shown are added up a grand total of 849 dwellings is achieved (this excludes the application at South Lane currently with the Planning Inspector).

If this inordinate amount of development already agreed for the area is considered against the numbers put forward in the draft plan, Ash and Tongham is already well on the way to satisfying their allocation and the Plan hasn’t even been finally agreed yet! This comment is of course based on the premise that the figures mooted in the Plan do actually take into account the developments, or at least some of the developments, mentioned above and that the area will not be expected to absorb a further 1,300+ dwellings up to 2033.

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guildford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

I OBJECT to all strategic sites proposed in the draft Plan to be built in the Green Belt.

1. I object to the identification and allocation of sites in this plan without regard to Green Belt, infrastructure or other constraints. The plan says that “allocating these sites does not grant planning permission for development.” However, each of the sites will be removed from the Green Belt and will be available in principle for development and non-Green Belt uses. The inclusion of these sites without detailed site by site justification shows contempt for the thousands of detailed comments the Council have received about individual sites ever since the Issues and Options consultation in 2013. The plan has hardly changed since the Council received 20,000 objections to its first draft plan in 2014. The Inspector considering the plan may conclude that the consultation has not been properly conducted.

2. The housing needs assessment is flawed in various respects and overstates housing need. In addition since it was produced, the referendum Brexit decision has almost certainly reduced future housing need and rendered the previous assessment seriously out of date. As a result any assessment of Green Belt sites which took place to consider whether “exceptional circumstances” existed to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt was based on false premises and should be reconsidered.

3. Having determined housing need the Council was entitled to consider constraints before determining the housing number. I believe that as Ill as being entitled to do this the Council was required to give proper consideration to constraints. The scarcity of sites outside the Green Belt as Ill as infrastructure (most notable roads) considerations all represented constraints which should have been taken into account in determining the final housing number. Accordingly in this regard our objection to the allocation of Green Belt sites is twofold. First I believe constraints should have been applied. Secondly I believe the Council did not properly consider constraints and that their decision making process was flawed and thus subject to being set aside by the Inspector.

4. Even if having properly applied constraints there is a need to develop in the Green Belt then specific Green Belt sites should not be included in the plan unless “exceptional circumstances” for development are proven in relation to that specific site, as stipulated repeatedly in the NPPF. The Green Belt should trump short-term considerations such as perceived housing need, as case law has established. There needs to be a specific balancing exercise conducted on each Green Belt site weighing the harm to the Green Belt against the very special circumstances which are argued in favour of development at that particular site. There is no evidence this has been done. Instead the council have appeared to say that having chosen a housing needs figure and decided it cannot be met without building on Green Belt then there is no need for any further consideration and any convenient Green Belt site can be allocated for building at will.

9/ I object to the total lack of consideration given to the air quality issues the proposed developments would cause given that several of the proposed sites are close to areas which already exceed EU limits. The air quality problem is both relevant to humans and Flora and fauna and there is no reference to the grievous effect increased nitrate deposits would have on the Wisley SPA.

10/ I object to the obvious lack of sustainability of the proposed sites. Poor access to public transport and non-existent cycle or even pedestrian pathways will cause a heavy reliance on car use for everyday tasks such as shopping, commuting, school runs and social activities. The nature of the rural roads and the already overstretched main highways will lead to even greater congestion with the resultant increase in pollution and accidents. No consideration has been made as to the supply of utilities to these distant sites and the necessary installation of these utilities will give rise to further pressures on the traffic infrastructure and local life over a considerable period of time.

I am writing to express the strongest opposition to the proposals, set out in the recent Guildford Borough Council Draft Local Plan document, to support development of 533 new houses in Horsley, of which 385 will be within West Horsley. Additionally, I oppose the extension of the village boundaries for East and West Horsley and removal of the village areas within these boundaries from the protection of the Green Belt. In addition, I object to the inclusion of the Wisley Airfield site as a potential development site.

I believe that the proposals are extremely misguided, and would be highly damaging to the existing communities of East and West Horsley. In addition, they are strongly opposed by the residents of the area, and therefore the plans are at odds with the localism agenda.

I am a Chartered Surveyor with 15 years experience in commercial real estate and over 4 years experience working in urban regeneration. As such, I have a clear professional understanding of the issues involved and also of the economics of development. I have lived in West Horsley for over six years and intend to be a long term resident and therefore am deeply concerned about the proposals set out in the draft plan.

My opposition can be summarised under the following headings, which I will consider in turn:

1. Concern over overall level of housing development for Guildford Borough.
2. Disproportionate housing development for West Horsley compared with other settlements in the Borough.
3. Effect of the Proposals on West Horsley.
4. Effect of the Proposals on the Green Belt.
5. Effect of the Proposals on the Surrey Hills AONB
6. Specific Comments on Potential Development Area at Waterloo Farm/ Ockham Road North.
7. Views of the Local Community in West Horsley.

Overall Level of Housing Development proposed for Guildford Borough.

I am extremely concerned about the overall level and type of housing development which is proposed for the Borough. My understanding is that the overall level of new housing proposed is far in excess of that proposed by other similar neighbouring authorities.
I have seen no clear rationale for the growth projections which underpin the housing calculations. Indeed, the number of new houses proposed for the Borough has increased from the 653 per annum proposed in the 2014 draft documents to 693 per annum in the current proposals.

Of the 12,498 new homes proposed within specific sites, 65% are within the Green Belt. This percentage is far too high and will have a damaging impact across the Borough.

Disproportionate Level of Housing development in West Horsley.

Not only do I oppose the level of green field housing development for the Borough as a whole, I also feel that the levels of housing proposed for West Horsley are disproportionate. The draft plan proposes 385 houses in major sites at West Horsley, with another 148 in close proximity within East Horsley. Additional "infill" developments are also proposed. West Horsley is a parish of 1,111 homes, but there are only 723 houses within the main settlement area of West Horsley (i.e. within the village boundaries). Therefore, the proposals for major sites alone would add 53% to the housing stock of the village and 35% to the housing stock of the parish as a whole.

This is grossly disproportionate and beyond the level proposed for other settlements around the Borough and particularly for Guildford itself, which does not seem 10 be taking its fair share of the proposed development.

West Horsley Parish Council has carried out a Housing Need Assessment, which showed a requirement for just 20 affordable homes. The proposals are therefore totally out of line with the requirements of the local community.

Conclusion.

In summary, I strongly oppose the current drafting of the Guildford Borough Council Local Plan in relation to West and East Horsley. In particular, I oppose the removal of West Horsley and East Horsley from the Green Belt, the extension of the village boundaries beyond their current extent, and plans for 533 houses across the two villages (of which 385 are planned for West Horsley), all of which are at unsuitably high densities, out of keeping with the current character of the villages.

I am writing to express the strongest opposition to the proposals, set out in the recent Guildford Borough Council Proposed Submission Local Plan document, to support development of 395 new houses in Horsley, of which 295 will be within West Horsley. Additionally, I oppose the removal of the village areas within the boundaries from the protection of the Green Belt. Whilst the scale of development has been reduced somewhat since the previous 2016 Draft Local Plan, I still believe that the proposals are extremely misguided, and would be highly damaging to the existing community of East and West Horsley. In addition, they are strongly opposed by the residents of the area. The small changes to the draft plan do not alter my fundamental objection to key elements of the plan. I have lived in West Horsley since 2009 and intend to be a long term resident, and therefore am deeply concerned about the proposals set out in the draft plan. I am also a Chartered Surveyor with 16 years of experience and so have a clear professional understanding of the issues involved. My objections are as follows. Overall Level of Housing Development proposed for Guildford Borough. I object to overall level and type of housing development which is proposed for the Borough. I have seen no clear rationale for the considerable growth projections which underpin the housing calculations. The revised proposals show a modest reduction in new homes per annum compared with the 2016 draft plan, but to a level of 654 homes which is almost identical to what was originally proposed in 2014. The overall housing growth figures suggested are close to double the Office for National Statistics prediction for the growth of Guildford. Generally, I feel that far too many of the proposed development sites are located within the Metropolitan Green Belt. This will have a damaging effect on the quality of life across the Borough.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

We have to believe there are insufficient homes and therefore we have to believe homes are required. We have to believe the number of homes needed. It is important to choose carefully where these homes are to be built - either as tagged on to existing or create new home areas. It is important to provide the correct design of easy to maintain homes - which the young can afford to purchase or rent. It is important to build on land which is Surface Water Managed and suitable highway/transport provided - i.e. Highway speed controlled, ample traffic filtering (traffic lights) and adequate parking facilities. It is important to provide reasonable space for each dwelling for healthy living - i.e. do not over-develop with density of build. There are dwellings and land in a neglected state that could be redeveloped into affordable flats/first time buys.
There are roads/junctions that could be redesigned to filter traffic/ease congestion. There are businesses that could be moved so to provide parking. The impact on our highways needs some forethought with changes before development, rather than deal with gridlock. So much time is wasted now due to congestion and the lack of traffic control/filtering. Facilities such as wastewater treatment should be put in place before demand is increased.

We cannot afford sustainability now due to the lack of funds. We are having to accept low standards now - how long can this be tolerated?

1. POLICY S2

I O B J E C T to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA.

It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s
OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London’s commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

I object to this policy. The presumption of 13,860 new homes required by 2033 is unsubstantiated and highly unlikely in view of the Brexit decision which is likely to reduce economic growth and the demand for housing in the area.

I object to the overall strategy.

The proposal to develop 693 new homes per year for the next 15 years is unsustainable, given that this area is densely populated and the infrastructure is already creaking at the seams. Even half of the proposed number would be difficult to accommodate.

The number of homes (SHMA) to be built according to the plan is nearly 14,000 (690 per year for the duration of the plan). This excludes any permissions that have already been granted, as well as windfall sites.

I object for a number of reasons:

1. There is no justification of the figure whatsoever
2. The growth is too high
3. Guildford Borough Council has not applied any constraints to this figure to allow for the lack of appropriate infrastructure or to protect our countryside from development.
4. This number is resulting in Guildford Borough Council encroaching into the Greenbelt without special circumstances.

My overriding concern is that at the unacceptably high level of expansion. Why are constraints to the overall housing target not being applied so as to protect the character of Guildford? The severe levels of traffic congestion, insufficient parking in Guildford town and pressures on services are already causing problems and strains without the addition of such an extreme number of houses.

I find it unacceptable that unlike other towns and areas, Guildford is not choosing to constrain its overall housing growth. Roads such as the A25/A246 Epsom Road, the A25 Boxgrove Road, A3100 London Road and A25 Ladymead are congested and at a standstill on an almost daily basis. The pressure of so many new homes outside the centre of the town will make this unbearable even with the highway schemes in the Plan. Please can a reduced and more realistic housing target be set.

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) does the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN were not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.
It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London’s commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

I support the Guildford Residents Association response and oppose the expansion of Guildford.

I do not agree that there is an inherent need for so many additional homes, as I said in my earlier feedback.

The demand for homes is due to Guildford being a desirable place to live, and I wish to keep it that way. 25% increase will not keep it that way, will not protect the character of the town.

1. The scale of the development will alter the character of Horsley and it will no longer be a village but a town, but unable to cope.

1. Any development in this area could set a precedent for the whole of Green Belt Land and render the principle meaningless.

1. Guildford BC should consider other brownfield sites, and sites within existing towns, rather than villages, where infrastructure, transport and communications can more easily cope.

1. Finally there is little or no mention of the One Public Estate initiative backed by the Cabinet Office. This initiative seeks to aid Local Authorities to make more efficient use of its buildings and land. It aims to increase efficiencies, reduce footprint and release surplus land and buildings back to the community for housing. Guildford Council needs to explore this potential before pushing forward with any changes to the Green Belt.

For these reasons, I urge the Council to maintain the Green Belt status and retain the current boundaries, and reject this proposed development plan, and re-examine the options outside of Horsley.

I have lived with my parents in Horsley for number of years and I write to object to the revisions to the new local plan and taking the Horsley out of the Green Belt. I note that with the amended 2017 plan that four of the original proposed housing developments sites remain. This is unacceptable to increase our village, by nearly 400 proposed residential units against an existing supply of circa 1,000 residential units. The evidence that exists is exaggerating the need for expansion as shown clearly by the GRA report on housing.

1.0 Strategic

1.1. Policy S2: Borough Wide Strategy

1.2. Policy S2 sets out the objective of adding 13,860 new homes to Guildford Borough over the 2013-2033 period of the Local Plan, equating to an annual build of 693 new homes per annum.

1.3. I have concerns about the enormous scale of this building program, represents, as already mentions above a net 25% increase in the housing stock of Guildford Borough, a remarkable rate of increase even for a borough in the English Home Counties. This is against a background projection of the Office of National Statistics (“ONS”) of a population growth of only 15% for Guildford Borough over this same period.

1.4. Some explanation for this mismatch may partly be found in the conclusion of the West Surrey Strategic Housing Market Assessment, (“SHMA”), which looks at how the annual housing target of 693 homes is comprised. It estimates that 517 homes per annum arise from ‘the demographic starting point’ – effectively what the official statisticians at the ONS and the Department of Communities and Local Government (“DLCG”) are predicting Guildford actually requires. To this is added in the SHMA another 120 homes per annum in order to ‘support economic growth’, a further 31 homes per annum to ‘improve affordability’ and 25 homes due to ‘student growth’, all of which totals up to 693 homes per annum target.

1.5. Economic growth is already factored into the statistics produced by ONS and DLCG, so what GBC are proposing actually comes on top of the official household growth forecasts for the borough.

1.6. Furthermore, DLCG research has concluded that there is on average a 97% correlation between population growth and household formation. Therefore, if GBC’s target of a 25% increase in housing stock were actually realised, effectively it would mean that Guildford Borough would see its population rise by around 25% over this period. This would mean that the actual population growth rate for Guildford Borough would actually come out at a level that is 67% above official forecasts.

1.7. Another concerns in reviewing the Local Plan is that the impression is conveyed to the reader that GBC’s housing targets are effectively needed to fulfil NPPF requirements, or because of central government policy – in other words that GBC has no real choice but to put forward these expansionists projections, unpalatable though they might be because they are being forced to do so. However, the reality is very different. GBC has voluntarily chosen to pursue a policy of massive civic and economic expansion – one might perhaps term it a policy of ‘Imposed Growth’ – in order to underpin all of the housing policies in the Local Plan. In short, the difference between the official statisticians’ forecasts and GBC’s target of a 25% increase in housing stock is entirely down to a choice made by GBC for which it has no mandate.

1.8. The SHMA set out to establish the objectively assessed need and guidance from DLCG was that it was not just another ‘needs survey’ but it was to look at market and affordable need. I will come back to this point in relation to affordable housing in a separate item. The other key point set out by DCLG was that in undertaking the assessment they were to ignore any constraints like Greenbelt, AONB, land availability and land cost etc. The idea was to get the best information on need LA were then expected to take into account matters of constraint in determining the number to go forward with in their Local Plans

1.9. There is no indication in the "Proposed Submission Local Plan" that they have taken any note of the constraints of the Greenbelt, land availability in fact they have added to the numbers in total disregard to their undertaking to protect at all cost the Greenbelt. The Expansionist Growth policy of the GBC and it proposals in this policy documents were not made clearly and explicitly to majority at the election.

1.10. I therefore OBJECT to the Expansionist Growth Policy and to the borough housing targets set out in Policy S2.

Do you consider this section of the document; complies with the Duty to Cooperate? ( ), is Sound? ( ), is Legally Compliant? ( )

I object to the borough housing targets set out in Policy S2.

The revised policy proposes a target for new housing in Guildford borough of 12,426 homes, a reduction from 13,860 homes proposed an annualised figure of 654 dwellings per annum a reduction of only 5.6% because of the different time periods considered by the revised plan.

I consider this revised target for the borough housing target as still very high and should be reduced significantly further.

The main reasons for this are set out below:

The conclusions drawn from the revised SHMA are seriously flawed. The West Surrey Strategic Housing Market Assessment: Guildford Addendum Report, 2017 ['SHMA Addendum'] issued by consultants GL Hearn in March 2017 provides an update on the previous SHMA issued in 2016. [This was in itself also flawed]. Much has happened in those 12 months, particularly the imminent prospect of Brexit, which is likely to result in major changes in economic growth, population trends, and migration patterns requiring a far more cautious approach than that currently put forward in the revised Local Plan.

Justification for objection

GL Hearn presented four alternative scenarios for their models, based upon different assumptions on the population projections. Their four scenarios resulted in projections of overall growth of Guildford borough housing needs over the plan period based on demographic trends of between 10.4% and 15.3% dependent upon the scenario used. Whilst the lowest of the figures, 10.4%, uses projections based upon a 10 year migration trend and making an UPC adjustment as proposed by the ONS in order to take account of various statistical anomalies in sampling sizes, etc. This growth of 10.4% provides a housing need for Guildford borough estimated at 521 dwellings per annum. GL Hearn recommends that GBC adopt the higher end figure of their scenarios, but no reasoning is given for this assumption this has resulted in a proposed, and now questionable ‘demographically-based’ housing need of 559 dwellings per annum, this figure is used as the base figure in the Local Plan.

GL Hearn [as in their 2016 SHMA report], proceeded to raise this figure further with a series of adjustments to reflect higher levels of projected economic growth, additional student housing and also an adjustment for affordable housing.
In my earlier comments to GBC, I was critical of this approach, pointing out this is highly speculative, as these factors of economic growth are already included within the household growth projections put forward by the Department of Communities & Local Government. Whilst GL Hearn have made some minimal adjustment to their tuning of economic growth in projections of housing need, possibly to adjust for Brexit. They are still effectively double counting. They have increased their proposed overall housing need figure to 654 dwellings per annum, an increase of 95 dwelling above their own top end demographic trend figure. Whilst it is acceptable for adjustments to be made to the base SHMA. I make the following observations and would challenge their weak arguments

Affordability GL Hearn in the SHMA notes that housing in Guildford is significantly less affordable than in England as a whole and therefore made an adjustment for extra homes each year to reflect this. However, the Government’s Planning Practice Guidance [PPG] notes say that, “Prices or rents rising faster than the national/local average may well indicate particular market undersupply relative to demand.” The issue here being, is not whether prices are high but whether that they are rising faster than elsewhere. The data for the affordability of homes in Guildford relative to earnings suggests that it is no worse than other parts of Surrey and it has not seen a faster deterioration than in other boroughs in Surrey. There are some that have seen a worse deterioration. By increasing housing supply beyond the level suggested by the demographic OAN would not result in any noticeable improvement in affordability but simply in more people who can afford high prices homes moving to the area. On this basis affordability uplift for Guildford would not be justified.

Students The other reason GL Hearn felt warranted an upward adjustment was to increase the provision for student housing. However, extra student homes are already included in the official projections and at a level that is possibly more than will be needed. There is evidence in the SNPP of a significant upward blip at age [18/19] that the student age group in Guildford has distorted the population projections and this distortion has fed through into the DCLG household projections. Given that there are reasons to believe that the SHMA’s calculation may overestimate the homes needed for students, there is not a case for adding additional student housing. Indeed, there is a possibility that the adjustment for students should be negative, not positive i.e. that too many student households have been included in the projections. This analysis of the impact of potential increases in student numbers may have on the overall housing needs of Guildford is complex and I guess would be best carried out separately from a general demographic analysis that has been used.

Economic Growth GL Hearn’s analysis is an adjusted projected housing need of 654 homes per annum, which if built would represent an overall increase of 22% in the housing stock of the borough. This compares to the ONS projection of 521 homes 10.4% GBC in their Local Plan are therefore proposing a housing figure which is more than twice this level of projected population growth. The final nail in the coffin of these projections by GL Hearn whilst acknowledging the influence of UPC when they used the latest 2014 Sub-national Population Projections they did not identify and take into account any Unattributable Population Change UPC which has been estimated to reduce the final number by up to 80 units.

Now is not the time to be double a commitment to future growth. GBC have chosen to adopt the highest forecasts on offer.

1. Policy S2 Local plan housing Target & SHMA

Further justification for objection

Are the processes used correct?

- Strategic Housing Market Assessments [SHMA] are relatively new in that it looks at the needs for all tenures of housing as opposed to the earlier Housing Needs Assessment which only looked at Social Housing Need.
- Guidance given to Plan Makers made it clear that the SHMA needed to be an objective assessment of need based on facts and unbiased evidence. That Plan Makers should not apply constraints to the overall assessment of need, such as limitations imposed by the supply of land for new development, greenbelt, historic under performance, infrastructure or environmental constraints.
- It went on to state that these considerations will need to be addressed when bringing the evidence bases together to identify specific policies within the development plans. i.e. the housing policy targets. So GBC are supposed to take the SHMA and then set it against any constraints that apply within the borough.
- GBC have failed to make or document any adjustments to accommodate for planning constraints, in particularly, the Green Belt, supply of land, AONB and flooding etc. The housing need projections of GL Hearn have been taken by GBC directly as the housing targets figure for the Local Plan.
- They therefore fail to take into account any of the significant and relevant constraints which do limit the supply of housing land across the borough, in particular the large proportion of land which currently falls within the Metropolitan Green Belt.
- We find nevertheless that over 58% of proposed development plan proposes to build on Greenbelt Land. That does not include areas in villages inset from the greenbelt that will be open to greater infill and wind fold type development.
- They have also failed to allow for limitation imposed by the already overstretched infrastructure including transport issues by using inappropriate and discredited transport assessments.

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build... homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand.
The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result in coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

I am writing to give my comments on the Proposed Submission Local Plan, issued June 2016, as a part of GBC’s consultation process.

I OBJECT to the Local Plan overall. My reasons are that the housing targets proposed for Guildford Borough are much too high. In my opinion they represent an overly aggressive plan that has no real foundation. The supporting analyses given as justification for these proposals are seriously flawed. Moreover, I do not believe that the proposed policy of aggressive expansion in Guildford Borough's housing stock is supported by a majority of its residents.

My objections to specific policies within the Local Plan are detailed below:
Policy S2: I OBJECT to the Borough wide housing target which is set out in this policy. The ONS population growth projections for Guildford Borough are for a 15% growth over the plan period but GBC proposes a 25% growth in its housing stock. This is unjustified. It also completely fails to take into account the constraints of the Green Belt which prevents such expansion from taking place other than by the wholesale consumption of Green Belt land. GBC justify their additional housing proposal based upon the need to support the high levels of economic growth expected in the Borough, on the need to house more students and on the need for more affordable housing. Firstly, economic growth at official projections is already included in the ONS population projects; secondly, there is ample affordable housing proposed in GBC's affordable housing policy; thirdly, following the Brexit vote it is clear that official government population and household projections will need to be seriously reduced, as will official economic forecasts, nationally and within the borough. GBC should either withdraw its Local Plan proposal entirely in the face of this important new factor, or else it should make its own estimates for the reduction needed to take account of the Brexit factor. My suggestion would be to cut the Borough's housing target by 50% from that indicated in the Local Plan.

Policy S2 Borough wide strategy

The housing targets for the borough set out in the plan are still much too high, despite the small reduction of 5.6% made in the annual housing target in the revised plan. The SHMA which underpins this target number is seriously flawed and fails to give due recognition to the impact of Brexit on future population forecasts. Despite considering a range of different methods for assessing future forecasts the SHMA study by GL Hearn dismisses the more conservative ONS projection based on a 10 year population trend analysis, (one which gives a projected population increase of 10.4% over the plan period), and makes a series of unjustifiable adjustments above the demographically-derived projection. This results in a proposed housing target which would see an increase of 22% in the overall housing stock of the borough. This increase is more than double the ONS population growth forecast. Given the strong likelihood that following Brexit the population growth will be further reduced this proposed target is not justifiable.

In my opinion the high housing targets proposed appear to reflect the political objectives of certain officers in GBC, more than the needs of Guildford borough residents or the views of over 30,000 residents who have registered their previous opposition to the target housing numbers proposed in the previous local plan.

The scale and locations proposed for new housing also fail to take into account the many constraints on development across the borough, in particular the major impact of Green Belt restrictions and the inadequacies of borough infrastructure.

For the reasons above therefore: I OBJECT TO THE HOUSING TARGETS SET IN POLICY S2

Objections to the Guildford 2016 Local Plan

I am currently overseas so am writing to you by email in respect of the above. Accordingly this letter will not be hand signed.

I object to the 2016 Draft Local Plan as a whole and in particular I object to the specific issues (listed below). I believe that this deeply flawed Local Plan will have a direct and detrimental effect on the amenity currently enjoyed by my family and other residents of East Clandon and to the even greater detriment to our neighbouring villages of West Clandon, Ripley, West and East Horsley. It erodes the openess of the Green Belt and endangers the beauty and views in and out of the Surrey Hills AONB.

My specific points are:

1. I object to Policy S2 for the proposed provision of the very high overall housing numbers of 13,800 new homes (690 new dwellings being built every year for 20 years) and I object on two grounds; these housing numbers have been imposed on the borough with no real consultation being undertaken with the residents of East Clandon and the borough as a whole. Secondly, the housing numbers are based on a high-growth economic development plan which in itself has had no consultation with us and this combined with estimated demand from London residents will turn Guildford into a dormitory town for London.

Further, I object to the fact that no real economic or housing demand factors have been provided by the borough planners to substantiate the very high housing target of 13,800 new dwellings over the next 20 years. This is in direct contravention of the NPPF’s requirement for the planning authority to provide meaningful consultation.

I object to Policy S2 for the proposed provision of the very high overall housing numbers of 12,426 new homes, which is only a small reduction on the previous figure of 13,860. These numbers are still based on an overly high-growth economic development plan which in itself has had no direct consultation. They remain too high as shown by an objective assessment made by the report made for the Guildford Residents Association (GRA) by Neil MacDonald (independent adviser and commentator on housing demographics).

Also in Policy S2 housing numbers, I object to the fact that downward economic pressures (including Brexit) have not been adequately accounted for. Additionally in Policy E1, E2 there is too much emphasis on providing retail and commercial space in Guildford town centre, when the pattern of business is changing and more town centre housing is needed rather than retail. This would ease the pressure on housing on the Green Belt.

Furthermore, I object to Policy S2 because I believe the 12,426 homes includes estimated demand from London, and also now possibly from Woking’s perceived unmet need, and I feel Guildford will become a dormitory town for London and the surrounding areas, rather than meeting the needs of residents of Guildford Borough.
I object to the fact that in Policy S2, despite the afore-mentioned slight apparent reduction in overall housing numbers and industrial space; the reduction is mostly in Normandy/Flexford and the load on the East of the borough is still disproportionate and has even increased.

I object to the excessive number of houses to be built in this part of the borough. The Green belt is not up for grabs. Ripley has built well over its fair share of houses already. The urban areas of the borough should be able to produce space for housing in the same way as Ripley has done in the last few years.

I object to the unfair burden on the North East of the borough for this development. The new plan has become even more unbalanced toward the North East of the Borough – why is 40.6% of the homes proposed within 3 miles of Send Marsh? This area has already had its fair share of development and it is very unfair that this region should face most of the development and the extended development proposed by the new plan.
I object to the concealment of development through ‘deferment’ at sites A24, A25, A26, A43. This deferment is designed to hide the number of houses being built. I object to this.

I am writing to OBJECT most strongly to the new revised Guildford Local Plan, in particular to the Policies that affect West Horsley, but also to those in East Horsley and all the villages that the Local Plan has proposed to remove from the Green Belt. Most land in our borough no longer appears to be safe and designating various areas as Green Belt, SSSI's or for any other type of conservation seems to count for nothing. The proposed number of houses the Guildford Borough Council wishes to build in our villages will change the villages that their residents know and love. The proposal is for an overall increase of 36% in the number of houses in West Horsley alone and there's a distinct feeling that West and East Horsley have been 'allocated rather more than their fair share' compared to other areas of the borough. It has even been proposed that our local facilities such as the Horsley Tennis and Cricket Club and the East Horsley Kingston Meadows, which also has tennis courts, could possibly be considered for development. These are places that are a huge asset to the people who live in the Horsleys and are an integral part of village life which are enjoyed by many. The open spaces we have within our villages are a part of what makes our villages a special place to live.

A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London’s commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.
This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guildford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

Document: Proposed Submission Local Plan: strategy and sites 2016 / Policy S2

Do you consider this section of the document; complies with the Duty to Cooperate? ( ), is Sound? ( ), is Legally Compliant? ( )

I object to the Borough Wide Strategy (policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards in light of the Brexit decision. The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the "West Surrey" tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, "West Surrey" is much too small. Half of Guildford borough's residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside "West Surrey".

Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the triborough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle,
Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has to date failed to revisit the data to validate that it is correct despite overwhelming concerns raised by borough residents. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make "West Surrey" reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour's "need", Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey's 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is "deliverable" and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council's cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

I am extremely concerned about the amount of new housing proposed and the infringements onto the current Green Belt, which will result in a significant increase in traffic and pollution in the area and the road through West Clandon becoming even busier and resulting in traffic accidents, more injuries and deaths. I attach two photographs taken in the last year which demonstrate very clearly how narrow the A247 is in parts – one is taken outside Summers and the other outside the Clandon Village school. In both cases lorries have mounted the pavement to pass each other - no further explanation needed. Increased housing will increase the amount of lorries passing through the village and on completion an increase in traffic in general.

Once the green spaces are taken, they can never be brought back and our country will forever be poorer and a less pleasant place to live.
I do not understand why the government cannot encourage more development and extra housing outside of the South East of England to 'spread the load' and discourage more and more people wanting to come to London and the South East. This should also ease the price and affordability of housing in the South East.

The 2016 draft Local Plan should be reassessed with a reviewed and transparent SHMA and revised to reflect the views of the residents of the Borough, who pay for Guildford Borough Council to act in their interests, and not those of developers and central government.

I trust that the objections made above are fully taken into consideration and that the 2016 draft Local Plan is amended accordingly.

Guildford borough Proposed Submission Local Plan: strategy and sites, June 2016

As a resident of West Horsley, I am writing to object to the Guildford Borough Proposed Submission Local Plan

I reject and object to many parts of the Plan. Much is based on flawed evidence and inadequate consultation with local people. More than 20,000 responses to the previous draft Local Plan in 2014 were opposed to many of its proposals, yet GBC has made relatively few changes, and certainly none of any consequence. Its aggressive and unjustified target of increasing housing stock by 25% would create an intolerable strain on both land and infrastructure in this already congested part of the country, and its assertion in Policy P2 that “We will continue to protect the Metropolitan Green Belt” is frankly laughable in light of its proposals for insetting and settlement boundary changes proposed for so many of its rural villages. The reality seems to be that it is adopting an implicit forced growth policy for the Borough – one that is not supported by the majority of its electorate

The predicted population increase is unsubstantiated: it is in excess of Government ONS forecasts. Policy S2 states that provision will be made for 13,800 new homes between 2013 and 2033. The number of homes is too high and unsustainable in Guildford’s villages. The target outlined represents a 25% increase in the housing stock of the borough, while ONS projects a population increase of some 15% for Guildford Borough over this same period. And in light of the Brexit vote, GBC’s predictions are possibly even more questionable. I agree with East Horsley Parish Council’s very reasoned analysis of how and why GBC has come to such an over-inflated target for housing growth in its response to the Plan

I object to the development of 385 homes on the 4 proposed sites in West Horsley set out in Policies S1: Presumption in favour of Sustainable Development, S2 Borough Wide Strategy, H1 Homes for all, H2 Affordable Homes

The need for so many houses to be built in West Horsley and at much higher densities than currently exist in the village over the first 5 years of the Plan period is totally unproven

The expansion of West Horsley with the proposed high volumes of new housing development is unsustainable in terms of provision of school places and medical services, drainage, road capacity, public transport, shops, and parking for essential services (especially in East Horsley for shops, the library and the station)

The West Horsley Parish Council and Surrey Community Action Housing Survey: May 2014, identified only a limited need for some 20 affordable homes for local people who want to remain in the village (for young people and for elderly people who wish downsize to a smaller home)

POLICY S2

I object because:

- Concerns about the Plan’s predicted increase in population and housing needs have been raised since 2014, but the Council has chosen not to seek better data
- The population and housing needs numbers are based on pre-Brexit projections, so probably need to be revised downwards, possibly quite dramatically Policy S2: I object to the enormous scale of the proposed building plan. The Office for National Statistics and the Department of Communities and Local Government predict that, based on their population and household forecasts, 517 homes per annum will be required. But the Strategic Housing Market Assessment has for some reason added another 120 homes per annum in order to ‘support economic growth’, 31 to ‘improve affordability’ and 25 due to ‘student growth’ which brings the total up to 693 homes per annum. Guildford Borough Council tries to blame central government policy for the housing targets, but I believe they are actually due to GBC’s own aggressive policy of civic and economic expansion. This is a political choice made by GBC without being honestly or transparently explained and I do not believe it is supported by the majority of the electorate. Doubt has consistently been thrown on GL Hearn’s methodology in reaching the 693 homes per annum, and this has been reinforced by Councillor David Reeve's and another independent source's recent exhaustive research and mathematical modelling. The whole draft local plan is being built on shaky foundations. We deserve better.

To summarise: despite Guildford Borough Council's promise that they have listened to local concerns about the previous draft local plan, I believe they have continued to tread exactly the same path as before, except that they have proposed an even greater number of homes while refusing to share the methodology behind reaching this number and they have taken even more land out of the Green Belt. Yet again the electorate is being treated with contempt. I object to this draft local plan.

I OBJECT to the volume of housing proposed in the Local Plan for the Horsleys, currently standing at 533 on the main sites proposed plus a further 90 on other small sites. This scale of development cannot be sustained without major infrastructure changes and improvements. Currently our roads (which are mainly country lanes) are choked with traffic, parking at the shops is impossible, parking at the station is only just sufficient, it is very difficult to obtain an appointment at the surgery and the schools are already full to overflowing. “With a further 500 plus families life would be impossible and that is without the development at Wisley. Should all this volume of development be done then the area would become an urbanised area. Do we want to leave this as a legacy for future generations or do we want to leave the pleasant green land that we have known and enjoyed ourselves?

4) I object to the disproportionate allocation of housing in this particular part of the borough. Indeed, over 23% of the Plan’s new housing is proposed in the immediate localities of Ockham, Ripley, Send and the Horsleys (of which 65% is allocated to FWA/TFM, an area that at present has only 0.3% of the population of GBC).

The revised policy proposes a target for new housing in Guildford borough of 12,426 homes.

However I believe this revised target for borough housing is still excessively high and should be reduced much further. This is due to the following:

a) The conclusions of the revised SHMA are seriously flawed

The West Surrey Strategic Housing Market Assessment: Guildford Addendum Report, 2017 (‘SHMA Addendum’) issued by consultants GL Hearn in March 2017 provides an update on the previous SHMA issued in 2016. Much has happened in those 12 months, particularly the imminent prospect of Brexit, which is likely to result in major changes in population trends, migration patterns and the economic development of the UK.

b) GBC fails to make any allowance for planning constraints, particularly the Green Belt
The housing need projections of GL Hearn are taken by GBC directly as the housing targets proposed in the Local Plan. They therefore fail to take into account any of the significant constraints which limit the supply of housing across the borough, in particular the large proportion of land which currently falls within the Metropolitan Green Belt. They also fail to allow for the already overstretched infrastructure.

Other local plans across the country have adjusted their housing targets to reflect such constraints. However, GBC chooses to ignore them. This is despite having a revised Green Belt policy P2 in the Local Plan which states that “The Metropolitan Green Belt will continue to be protected”.

In order to meet its high housing targets, GBC proposes to remove large swathes of land from the Green Belt for use as housing. This is contrary to ministerial guidance and planning inspectorate decisions which continue to support the position that unfulfilled housing need does not constitute the ‘very special circumstances’ needed to justify building on Green Belt land. This is achieved because the Green Belt & Countryside Study produced for GBC by the consultants Pegasus proposes numerous changes in Green Belt boundaries without due justification in order to deliver land for housing use in the Local Plan. The many apparent justifications given by Pegasus in their Green Belt & Countryside Study are extraordinarily weak and in many cases fail to meet the planning criteria required for moving long established defensible Green Belt boundaries. In East Horsley this applies to the Green Belt movement proposed at Kingston Meadow (a movement away from a river line) and at Lollesworth Fields, as discussed further in Section 2 below.

The majority of the land being proposed by GBC for development under the revised Local Plan is currently part of the Metropolitan Green Belt. Indeed the Guildford Green Belt group have estimated that some 57% of all the new housing proposed in the 2017 GBC Local Plan is to be built on land which is currently Green Belt.

A further concern is the fact that the Green Belt land selected by GBC in the local plan is predominantly located in the north eastern part of the borough. Therefore it is land closest to London, which represents that most vital part of the Green Belt needed to prevent the encroachment of the Metropolitan conurbation.

Throughout the Local Plan consultations many thousands of residents across the borough have written to object to GBC’s approach towards this fundamental issue – there were over 25,000 comments in the 2016 consultation, mostly opposing the plan. Judging by the revised 2017 Local Plan now proposed by GBC it seems that these voices have once again been ignored.

and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent districts of Rushmoor and Mole Valley, minutes from Guildford town, are outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere. Unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and is part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

3. These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council have failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so the housing numbers derived from it are unreliable. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county (none in Mole Valley, for instance). This highly lopsided distribution is unexplained.

4. The figure of 13,860 new homes is unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinised by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. The Council say we should trust the contractors’ model because it is used by a large number of other local authorities. Wide usage, however, does not confer objectivity. Guildford’s OAN would fail the basic transparency test even if the methodology used were a universally admired ‘gold standard’. But it is not: it belongs to consultants whose website openly proclaim their pro-development agenda, provoking reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. External experts and members of the public have provided detailed critiques of the model. Its most fatal flaw, however, is that it has not been disclosed – not even to the authors of the plan, who have taken it on trust. This is irrational and unsound.

5. The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The plan fails to set a Housing Target of new homes to be built, or explain how this relates to the “Objectively Assessed Number” (OAN) for housing need. Elsewhere, the Council have said that the two are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted, but in the same breath say that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. Despite the NPPF, the plan fails to address these constraints. In any case, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permission, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how can anything else be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a Housing Target that takes normal constraints and adjustments credibly into account, and which leaves the Council to set one at any level without further consultation. Even if the OAN were not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is irrational to embark on a radical transformation of the borough without a clear Housing Target. Most of Guildford borough is theoretically protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the existing number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

There is a major difference between the borough wide housing delivery strategy given here (in Policy S2) and that given in the LAA. Why? In the LAA, housing delivery in the first five years of the plan is given as 3,288 dwellings, plus a further 1,342 from outstanding permissions, a total of 4,630 over the first 5 years of the plan. Yet in the S2 Policy Statement above, the total is only 2,950, a difference of 1,680 dwellings over 5 years, an average of 336 dwellings per year over these five years. Which is correct? Why is there such a difference between documents, so much confusion? Given this confusion, why should I have faith in any of the documents produced or endorsed by GBC?

The simple truth is that housing need in the SHMA was grossly inflated. This local plan is supposed to provide housing for local residents - but how can this be so? Over the period of the plan, (if implemented) based on the average dwelling occupancy in the last census, the population of Guildford will increase at 4.5 times the rate seen between the two most recent censuses of 2001 and 2011. How could this housing be for local residents? Has there been an explosion in the local birth rate? Does the water supply of Guildford include an additive to ensure the delivery of triplets on every conceivable occasion? The answer to these questions is no - and so this is not a plan for local residents. This means the plan is legally non-compliant, Local plans are supposed to be for local residents. This plan is not.

This section of the plan is not sound, as it is clear the housing need has been grossly inflated. Not only has the housing need been exaggerated, but so too has the need for employees to feed the local economy, which is predicted to grow at a rate not seen in living memory. According to this, there will be boom but no busts, just a long continuous boom - a dream that even Gordon Brown in his most evangelical trance dared not enunciate. GBC have done what Gordon Brown failed to do - they have abolished busts, and so Guildford's economy will grow, grow, grow - for 15 solid years. What a fantasy. The AECOM report on Guildford's economy propagated such a vision, sadly wholly false. It is astonishing to suggest, as the draft Local Plan does, that jobs can be created each and every year over a 15 year period at a rate never seen by Guildford in its past. The housing target of a minimum of 693 dwellings/yr will mean that there will be about an additional 1200 employees available per year - each and every year. Guildford would have to supply an additional 18,000 jobs over a 15 year period. To justify this, AECOM produced a report that included a selective use of statistics, used averaging when it was totally inappropriate, and had very limited ambition when it came to land use efficiency. But the best that they could suggest for GBC with regard to land use efficiency was that they should match the average land use efficiency of the country - in an area where land costs are high and green belt was 89% of the borough. Greater ambition would have been much more appropriate. So the section of the report that deals with the need for employment floor space is no better than the SHMA, or the Green Belt and Countryside Study. Any plan based on these documents could not be sound.

Supposedly, in meeting their duty to co-operate, GBC have engaged with two other local authorities. Yet 6 local authorities share a boundary with GBC. How can a housing report shared with 2 others adequately reflect the reality of the local housing market? The duty to co-operate has been glossed over.

Another reason for my objection is that this plan will do nothing for those dependent on social housing. It is fixated on home ownership, despite this not being a suitable option for a large percentage of the population. At the home ownership peak, locally, about 25% of homes were rented. Since then, wage rates have declined in real terms, and now, nationally, about 35% of residents rent. There is nothing in this plan for those whose only realistic option is to rent, whatever their circumstances or ambition. There is a need for a substantial expansion of social housing, but this is not recognised in this plan.

2.1. Policy S2: Planning for the Borough
I object to this policy. Specifically, I object to the housing target of 12,426 as this has been developed using a model that uses assumptions that have not been made public. Essentially the model uses population statistics that are developed over a 5-year period, but these are projected forward to 2034. Population statistics should not be used in this way unless accompanied by an analysis of underlying factors that could cause changes to current population trends. Factors such as changes in death rates or changes in immigration levels have not been considered. A more thorough analysis was performed by Neil MacDonald of NMSS and his conclusion was that a lower housing target would be appropriate for the borough.

2.2. Policy H1 (and H13): Homes For All
I object to policy H1 as it fails to adequately consider the provision of social housing which is desperately needed. A paragraph (4.2.8) that considered housing density has been deleted from the previous iteration of the draft plan, but densification of housing within Guildford town is an alternative to building on Green Belt sites. Lord Rodgers and many other planners make cogent arguments for the densification of towns and cities, but these have been ignored. It is essential that land is used efficiently, especially previously developed land. A further objection is to the housing target for students – one objective should be to provide accommodation on the campus for all first-year students as well as for at least 60% of other students. This would make more housing available within the town.

My specific points are:

1. I object to Policy S2 for the proposed provision of the very high overall housing numbers of 13,800 new homes (690 new dwellings being built every year for 20 years) and we object on two grounds; these housing numbers have been imposed on us with no real consultation being undertaken with the residents of East Clandon and the borough as a whole. Secondly, the housing numbers are based on a high-growth economic development plan which in itself has had no consultation with us and this combined with estimated demand from London residents will turn Guildford into a dormitory town for London.

Further, I object to the fact that no real economic or housing demand factors have been provided by the borough planners to substantiate the very high housing target of 13,800 new dwellings over the next 20 years. This is in direct contravention of the NPPF’s requirement for the planning authority to provide meaningful consultation.

I object to the disproportionate allocation of housing in this particular part of the borough. Over 23% of the Plan’s new housing is proposed in the immediate localities of Ockham, Ripley, Send and the Horsleys, an area that at present has only 0.3% of the population of GBC.

I object to the fact that air quality concerns have not been taken seriously – air pollution in many parts of the borough, and particularly at the M25/A3 junction, is in excess of EU-permitted levels. Additional traffic will exacerbate this situation, impacting the health of all current and future residents.

I wish to object to the Guildford Plan Planning Policy (Local Plan Consultation) The huge number of homes proposed takes insufficient account of major transport and infrastructure problems. The numbers used are far too high as evidenced by the data gathered and published by the Guildford Residents Association. Evidence gathered prior to ‘Brexit which should also be factored shows the figure for new home should be 510 per year from 2013 to 2033.

Guildford Borough Council needs to be transparent about the calculations used to produce their figures.

1. POLICY S2

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 homes being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinised by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN are not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.
It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing coalescence of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

If each village across the south had an additional 10 house built would this not rectify the need for more housing? Rather than ruining the peace & tranquility of villages why not try & enhance them. Don't build on Greenbelt land. There are no exceptional reasons to do so within the Horsleys or surrounding area for that matter.

I OBJECT in the strongest possible terms to the above plan. As a retired person I do not have the facilities or the resources to enter into every aspect of this plan. But I particularly OBJECT to those sections listed below appertaining to the area of West Horsley and the adjacent areas proposals.

I OBJECT in detail and in general to this plan

I particularly OBJECT to the method whereby this plan has regurgitated inaccurate, badly researched and unjustified information and is an obvious ploy to get around the previous objections voiced within West Horsley and, indeed, in all the villages affected.

I OBJECT to being forced to undertake this exercise again and that my previous OBJECTIONS have been put aside. This cannot be democratic.

I OBJECT to Policy Q: Green Belt and the Countryside: Surrey Hills Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty (AONB)

I am totally opposed to the plan affecting all the Guildford Villages and to West Horsley’s removal from the Green Belt by insetting and extending the 2003 boundaries. There are no exceptional circumstances or other justification for the new Green Belt boundaries that will result from the proposed insetting. This study is flawed.

The West Horsley Parish is well established with low housing density settlements with a considerable number of historic buildings and the Council fails to make a case for locating large numbers of homes in the Horsley or neighbouring villages.

I OBJECT to the Polices S1 Presumption in favour of Sustainable Development, Borough Wide Strategy, H1 Homes for all, H2 Affordable Homes.

No accurate or acceptable case has been made for provision for 13,800 new homes over the period 2013 to 2033. The number of homes is too high and unsustainable in Guildford's villages. The current infrastructure is strained and at breaking point and there are no plans for addressing the infrastructure

The proposals for West Horsley are clearly unsustainable for the proposed high volumes of new housing development

I OBJECT to the development of 385 homes on the proposed sites in West Horsley. The proposals are at much higher densities than currently in the village and with the existing mix of different housing styles and the layout of the village.
I OBJECT particularly to the proposals for site A40 in that this is the area I know best. The A40 site is unsuitable for development and the Guildford Council has several times rejected applications to build on the site. It has a high water table, is prone to flooding in even medium rain fall and in high rainfall there are problems with flooding of the roads and the overflow of sewage. The work to make such a site suitable for development, even for a third of the homes specified would be out of proportion to any return on capital invested.

The drainage affects are acknowledged by the water authorities who point out that the downstream effects are sizeable and probably uneconomic.

Importantly this is an area of calm, peace and quiet within the green belt and I am reliably informed that there are several species of orchids growing and the land is full of wild life which needs preservation.

The development proposals throughout the village- and also in terms of the knock on effect of the Wisely Airfield proposals- are unsustainable in terms of schooling, drainage, roads capacity, shopping and Rail Station parking, and lack of public transport.

The roads are already at capacity and breaking up under the strain. Traffic uses Ockham Road North as a cut through/rat run when the A3 and M25 are busy or blocked (frequently these days) and this is acknowledged by Surrey County Council roads authority.

There is a major strain on schooling in the area and on medical services. There are few jobs in the area and the practicalities of commuting to London or, indeed to Guildford are heavily affected by the plan.

The strain on the current rail service is obvious and it all but impossible to park at the Horsley rail Station where the parking even after extension work is problematical.

I OBJECT on the grounds that there is no proven need for so many houses to be built in Horsley. It is totally unproven and risks the formation of a dormitory township devoid of infrastructure that could manage such an influx of people and cars.

Any forecast of housing needs is also rendered out of date by the current Referendum related to immigration which will lead to a much lower demand for housing in the future

It is my understanding that in West Horsley the recent survey of the village in 2014, identified a limited need for only 20 affordable homes.

In summary: Guildford Council’s plans are highly suspect and need investigating in depth. Inquiries should be made into the reasons for the document which, for example, must have been completed before the democratic decision, widely applauded, to refuse planning for the Wiseley Airfield site proposal. Yet this proposal appeared again in the council’s plan. The allocation of developments to the various villages are dubious.

Why build on the Green Belt when there is room and land for development within the immediate area of the town of Guildford where it is likely there could be an increased demand.

The National Planning Policy Framework requires that new residential development must respect the character and density of housing in any areas and be limited in quantity by the availability of infrastructure and local facilities.

I couple with that the need and the desire of the people of the area to preserve the GREEN BELT.

Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

As a long term resident of West Clandon, a village in which my children have grown up, and my grandchildren are now growing up, I have given this issue considerable thought. As a result, please find below my objections to Guildford Borough Proposed Submission Local Plan (June 2016).

I OBJECT in the strongest possible terms to the Guildford Borough Proposed Submission Local Plan (June 2016) overall. This Plan is unsustainable, unworkable and, in many provisions, unnecessary.

Furthermore, I set out below my objection to specific policies and matters within the Plan.

1. I OBJECT to the Local Plan as the development proposed will not be sustainable.

The purpose of the planning system is to contribute to the achievement of sustainable development, as stated by National Planning Policy.

The development of 13,860 homes during the Plan period is not sustainable. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on existing local communities by over-development, particularly for the villages between Guildford and the M25, including Ripley, Send and West Clandon. The services in these villages will be unable to cope with the level of development proposed. The proposed developments do not meet the needs of the local communities.

The strategic sites of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick's Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) are in unsustainable locations. The former two sites do not benefit from railway stations within easy walking distance and bus services across rural villages are forever reducing. Residents will have few options, but to be reliant on motor vehicles. These sites are just unsuitable due to being unable to access sustainable transport. Furthermore, there are no plans to improve the infrastructure for Garlick's Arch in the Infrastructure Plan. Residents will be reliant on the car for transport. Greater consideration should be given to increasing the density of development in urban areas, such as Guildford, where more practical sustainable transport options can be provided.

The A3, M25 and the roads through the villages of Ripley, Send and Clandon already suffer from congestion. Further vehicle movements will result in even more acute congestion and greater pollution. Residents and the environment will suffer as a result.

1. I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy

A - The borough wide strategy is poorly It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

B - The Housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite significantly.

C - The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the "West Surrey" tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverly. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, "West Surrey" is much too small. Half of Guildford borough's residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside "West Surrey". Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make "West Surrey" reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guildford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour's "need". Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey's 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick's Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill (Clandon) (AZS) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. This will result in undesired coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick's Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages and a permanently detrimental impact on each of these currently distinct communities.

Your papers also contain comments on the type of housing that you would wish to see in the Horsleys. Here again your approach is flawed as 533 new homes of the type you describe would be wholly out of keeping with the village. It is an observable fact that many Horsley houses are large and on large plots and that is why people have bought them. Furthermore, you reflect this fact in the heavy Council tax bills we pay from which Horsley residents derive few benefits.

I object to over 70% of new housing proposed to be built within the Guildford Borough. There are ample brownfield sites in the urban areas which could be used first before looking elsewhere.

I am a resident of East Horsley and am writing to object to the Guildford Local Plan which proposes 593 new houses in the Horsleys within 5 years. This would be a huge increase of about a third on the existing number of households, imposing huge damage to the environment and the character of the villages in an unacceptably short timescale.

I OBJECT in the strongest possible terms to the Guildford Borough Proposed Submission Local Plan (June 2016). This Plan is unsustainable, unworkable and, in many provisions, unnecessary. There is a lack of transparency in the underlying assessment of needs which is completely unacceptable. The effects on traffic would be woeful and a suitable solution is not apparent in the plan.

I set out below my objection to specific policies and matters within the Plan.

I am at a loss to understand the need for all these houses in Horsley. Our local population has not gone up, birth rate is stable. Therefore, where are all these people coming from?

This is a Green Belt area also a SSI area, and must be preserved. We elected Guildford Council to consider and abide by the wishes of its residents.

I strongly object to the 2016 Local Plan for the Guildford area as it is flawed at many levels and demand that it be withdrawn and re-written to reflect the real requirements of both the local community and our national needs. The draft sets out a policy of green belt destruction to meet a set of questionable targets that bears no relationship to the requirements of the local community. Instead it attempts to impose on us the ambitious aspirations of a few local individuals and in some instances councillors who threaten us with even greater destruction of our communities and countryside if we do not adopt this plan.

Guilford is fortunate in having an area of outstanding natural beauty to the west and thankfully this is protected. The Green belt to the east is of equal importance and I strongly object to plans to destroy it through urban sprawl and industrial zoning. The planned growth figures were questionable before the EU referendum and are now a substantial over estimate given the national governments own forecast for the economy for the next decade. Consequently a significant reduction in the number of new homes should be adopted and conditioned by the opportunity to develop them on existing brown field sites in the Borough. Destruction of the green belt to the east of Guildford is indefensible not only because it would be an irretrievable loss to future generations but because its infrastructure which is already under extreme pressure could not cope with further development.

In summary the plan needs to be re-examined once again post Brexit and the growth plan focused on redevelopment of brown field sites in the Borough. We have no right to destroy the Green Belt, it's the property of future generations!

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s
The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London’s commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

• I object to the disproportionate allocation of housing in this particular part of the borough. Indeed, over 23% of the Plan’s new housing is proposed in the immediate localities of Ockham, Ripley, Send and the Horsleys (of which 65% is allocated to FWA/TFM, an area that at present has only 0.3% of the population of GBC).

1. I object to Policy S2. This allows for 25% increase in housing stock in Guildford Borough Council whilst population increase is estimated by official statisticians' forecast to be 15%. Is this because Guildford Borough Council has decided to pursue a policy of aggressive expansion? I am not aware that the local electorate has been asked if it wants this. I object to Guildford Borough Council’s policy of excessive growth.

Please note that I hereby formally object to:

[Response has been redacted due to statement containing personal data which cannot be disclosed due to the provisions of the Data Protection Act 1998]

• The number of homes that the Plan intends to deliver over the 20 year period 2013-2033 (policy S2). The annual target of 693 is significantly higher than the 652 that the Council proposed last year and disregards the constraints which should have been imposed by the high proportion of the borough's designated Green Belt land and the capacity of the roads, schools, doctors, hospitals and other infrastructure to support such an increase in the population.
• The new boundaries proposed for insetting the villages of Send and Send Marsh/Burnt Common from the Green Belt (policy P2). The boundaries drawn enclose huge areas of open spaces that should be retained as Green Belt land and not developed at any time in the future. The village boundaries should be much more closely circumscribed to prevent urban sprawl and retain their village identity. With a presumption for development within these 'inset' areas, the proposed enclosures would encourage over-development and expansion of the villages in the future and completely ruin their essentially rural nature.
• Garlick's Arch (policy A43) The proposal to build 400 houses and 7,000sq.m. employment space (light industrial/storage, warehousing) on virgin Green Belt land, lying outside the Send Marsh/Burnt Common village boundary, defies all logic. This area which includes ancient woodland is a refuge for deer and other wildlife. It was never considered as a Potential Development Area within the Council's 'Issues and Options report' or identified for development in the 2014 consultation. In 2014 the Council rejected a planning application from 'Oldlands' to build 25 houses in this location on sound planning grounds, so how is can now be considered apt to construct 400 houses and 7,000sq.metres of employment space there? Apart from the fact that this is all Green Belt land, the infrastructure just cannot support such a development. Send Marsh/Burnt Common has one just shop (Waitrose), no doctors' surgery, no schools and the local roads are already filled to capacity. Any development at all in this area world be totally inappropriate and would be to the very substantial detriment of Send Marsh/Burnt Common as a village. The housing proposal alone would add 960 to the existing population of 2,341, an increase of 41%.

The proposed light industrial/storage facility would significantly detract from the open countryside aspect and add dramatically to the existing road use. It is totally inappropriate and would destroy the village's demarcation from Ripley, creating urban sprawl.

This very late and very major change to the Local Plan proposals does appear to have not followed the correct due process and therefore shall, if approved by your Council, be subject to immediate legal challenge.

• New north and southbound slip-roads to and from the A3 to the A 247 Clandon Road (policy A43a) This proposal would encourage additional traffic along the very narrow, winding A247 Clandon Road and the Send Barns Lane/Send Road leading to Woking, the traffic along both of which are already at capacity. Send village is a ribbon development of housing along both sides of Send Road, so there is no scope to widen it, and where it ends at the Old Woking roundabout none of the connecting roads can be widened to ease congestion because of the existing surrounding buildings.

Policy'S2 - The 12,426 (654 per year) number of homes that the Plan intends to deliver over the 19 year period 2015-2034.

Although the target for housing has now been reduced from 693 to 654 per year, it is still far too high and falls to take account of the constraints which should have been imposed by the high proportion of the boroughs designated Green Belt land and the capacity of the roads, schools, doctors, hospitals and other infrastructure to Support such an increase in the population.

I therefore object to the calculation of assessed need for housing and other development in the area and the grossly disproportionate impact oldie Local Plan's proposals on its more northerly communities of the borough.

POLICY S2

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA.
It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guildford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London’s commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

This is entirely CONTRARY to the purpose of the Green Belt, i.e. to prevent suburban sprawl.

Policy S This plan is based on growth projections agreed by whom? Just because there is an expert report stating this projected population growth does not mean that we, the voters, want it. UK exiting the EU surely makes a nonsense of the projected inflow from Greater London. Why does the University have carte blanche to increase its student population?

I object to the exaggerated “housing need” figure of 13,860 which is far too high and results in the completely unnecessary development of the Green Belt. The way students, economic need and affordability are calculated inflates the housing need.

- I object to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2) GBC’s proposal for 13,860 new houses without any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The Plan is unbalanced across the borough; there’s too much development in the north east of the borough (Wisley [A35], Ripley/Send [A43] and Clandon [A25]). 36% of all the Plan’s new housing is proposed in this area, which has only 11% of the existing housing.

5,036 houses are proposed between the M25 and Burpham (about 5 miles) which will obviously lead to a merging urbanisation of identities the villages.

Policy S2- Planning for the Borough

Evidence Base - The Strategic Housing Market Assessment

This policy is key to the whole of the Local Plan and underpins all the plans for development. The MRA has commented on the earlier SHMA and has attended numerous meetings to evaluate every element of the SHMA. We have always been troubled by the very high OAN in the SHMA and fail to understand why the figure is so high leading to a housing target that is so much higher than the housing target that has been set by the Council of GBC in recent years.

We commented at an earlier stage of the development of this draft Local Plan as follows:

“The assessment of housing need in the current draft SHMA is not justified by an analysis of the data. A new joint local authority SHMA is being prepared but will only be available for scrutiny after this consultation has been concluded. Meanwhile new ONS statistics predict the population of Guildford will be just under 5000 people fewer than assumed in the draft Guildford SHMA, greatly reducing the need for additional housing. The MRA believes that even these new ONS figures overstate the likely population growth as virtually all the growth to 2021 is predicted to come from net international migration. This prediction is based upon the net international migration over the past 5 years which is highly unlikely to be repeated. It should be noted that the draft SHMA does explain that student international migration associated with the University will only present a very limited housing need.”

Subsequently the Guildford Residents Associations (GRA) commissioned a review of the SHMA and the OAN by NM Strategic Solutions Ltd (NMSS) and GBC will, we are sure, be aware of the detail in that report which the GRA will be taking forward to the Examination in Public of our Local Plan. This report appears on the GRA website http://www.guildfordresidents.co.uk/

The OAN suggested by NMSS is 510 and this is a figure that we can support. We understand and accept that ‘standing still’ is not an option and that an OAN must be set for the Borough of Guildford to follow the guidelines in the NPPF and the PPG. This is exactly what NMSS have done to meet the demands for new housing, business and schools in Guildford. We do not intend to repeat the detailed arguments from NMSS in this response except to point out that the report does meet our concerns about international and student migration to which we have referred in previous responses to GBC and the OAN appears far more sensible and reasonable than the figure in the West Surrey SHMA of September 2015. In summary NMSS suggests that the September 2015 West Surrey SHMA inflates the proposed housing figure due to failure to correct for errors in the historical data for international migration flows, issues with the way it considers students and affordability and flaws in the method for estimating the number of homes needed to support job growth.

We are aware that CPRE has also commissioned an independent review of the SHMA and the OAN by Green Balance and they recommend that the OAN for homes in Guildford should be reduced from 693 to 481- a figure that is independently and remarkably close to the figure from NMSS.

We conclude that the OAN for Guildford should be set at no more than 510 new homes per year in accordance with the conclusions of the report from NMSS.

Housing Target- We are concerned not only at the high housing target that appears in Policy S2 but also at the way that the numbers have been presented in both the draft Local Plan and also in the Land Availability Assessment. It is suggested in Policy S2 that the housing target for the period of the plan is 13,860 but a detailed examination would indicate that it is either 15,116 as this figure appears in the LAA on page 17 or 15,060 being the figure that can be calculated from table I on page 28 of the draft Local Plan after adding the numbers in the table to the homes with planning permission taken from the text in the LAA. This is confounded by the fact that the table in the LAA on page 17 adds up to 13,708 and the Local Plan table on page 28 to 13,652 and although very similar are not identical - when they should be exactly the same.

We object to the way that the housing target has been inflated in this way to a figure that is significantly in excess of the OAN. The Local Plan commentary states that the number of new homes is greater than the figure in the policy to allow for flexibility but as with most figures in this plan, that figure is open to a different interpretation.

We conclude that the housing target in the draft Local Plan is confusing and should be corrected.

Constraints - The housing target of 693 does not reflect the fact that there are real constraints in the borough, that we are a gap town and that constraints should be applied to the overall housing target as well as on a site by site basis in accordance with paragraph 14 of the NPPF and paragraph 044 of the Planning Guidance. Further comment on this appears on page 7 et seq. This is a serious failure in this draft Plan. In particular the Green Belt is a real and valid constraint and has not been given sufficient weight in the draft as described above.

We conclude that the draft Local Plan does not follow the NPPF, the PPG nor the advice of Ministers in the DCLG.

We object to Policy S2 as it is unsound and unsustainable on three counts, described above.

MRA has commented on the earlier drafts of the SHMA and voiced its objection to the OAN. We now wish to comment on the West Surrey Strategic Housing Market Assessment: Guildford Addendum Report 2017. We dispute the revised OAN. Even though the housing target figure has been reduced to 12,426 homes (558 pa), we believe it is based on a fundamentally flawed analysis of the demographic and economic need figures that have been produced by GL Hearn.

GRA commissioned a review by NM Strategic Solutions Ltd (NMSS) of the Addendum Report as well as the original SHMA. Their detailed reports and the credentials of Neil McDonald who prepared them can be found on the GRA website.

The NMSS study established through a thorough analysis that there are a number of serious defects in GL Hearn’s Report which cast grave doubt on the reliability of their OAN. In particular, GL Hearn have seriously over-estimated the population growth for Guildford which can be largely attributed to significantly over-estimating net migration into Guildford in student age groups, most probably as a result of the under-recording of student migration out of Guildford. If plausible adjustments for the outflow of students in the period 2001-15 are made, this would reduce the demographically-based estimate of the number of homes needed for the period 2015-34 from 558 to 404 pa based on student figures alone. Furthermore, trust in the OAN is also undermined by GL Hearn’s totally flawed estimates of the number of homes needed to support economic growth.

We consider that the significant shortcomings in GL Hearn’s Reports highlighted in NMSS’s Review make it impossible for GBC to make an informed, evidence-based decision on the housing figure. Consequently, in common with many other Guildford organisations and individuals, we have no confidence in the SHMA and OAN produced by GL Hearn to the extent that the Local Plan should not rely or depend on them.

We therefore object to Policy S2 and the OAN in G L Hearn’s Report which should be disregarded.

hope that they can narrow the gap with particular reference to the students that leave Guildford on completion of their studies which, clearly, has a very considerable impact on the demographically-based estimate of the number of homes needed for the period 2015-34.

3. Comments relating to Policy S2: Planning for the borough - our spatial development strategy

I OBJECT fundamentally to the whole basis of the proposal to build 13,860 new homes, which is non-transparent and undemocratic:

- No justification is given for the 13,860 housing figure, which is based on a non-disclosed formula used by consultants and never seen by anyone on the Council or by the public. The Council has failed to seek disclosure of the formula.
- The 13,860 figure confuses the OAN with a housing target, and no definite housing target is given. How can we comment when we don’t know how many houses the Council want to build?
- The figures are based on a Housing Market Area that ignores 2 neighbouring districts (Rushmoor and Mole Valley) and is much too small, since most people commute or travel far outside the Area to shop or study. This distorts the figures: why should Guildford need to build nearly twice as many large housing estates as the rest of Surrey put together, or half of all sites over 100 units.
- The high numbers involved would transform the character of the borough from mainly rural/Green Belt to urban, creating a corridor of development out of London as per Woking or Croydon.
- Over the time period of this Plan, Brexit may affect the numbers related to growth and demographic data.

I object to Policy S2 which states that provision will be made for 13,860 new homes. From my reading, the need for this number of new homes is based on flawed assumptions and assessment of future housing needs. This undermines the foundation of the local plan.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
1. The reduction in the number of new homes proposed in the Green Belt after the 2016 Consultation is welcomed but does not go far enough in reducing the still very large number of new dwellings proposed on Green Belt. The changes also mean that the eastern side of the Borough is now scheduled to take an even greater proportion of new homes in the Green Belt.

2. It is totally unacceptable that Guildford is choosing not to constrain its overall housing growth, as many other types of Council have done to protect Green Belt. The objectively assessed housing target, though reduced since 2016 to 12,426 homes, will by 2034 (the end of the Plan Period) mean that Guildford has grown by nearly 25%. This is nearly double the Office for National Statistics prediction for the growth of Guildford.

Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London’s commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done.
The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

In the Foreword to the Plan, page 7, Monika Juneja states that “We have sought to select sites carefully and in a way which does not over burden any single area of our borough and ensure that the right infrastructure is in place”

I am a resident of Worplesdon parish in which I therefore take a particular interest. Worplesdon currently has 3577 dwellings. The proposed housing developments in Worplesdon are Blackwell farm, of which at least 1000 houses will fall within the parish, Fairlands (safeguarded) 773 houses, Liddington Hall 625 houses and Keens Lane 140 homes. This totals 2538 homes which would be an increase of 71% to housing in the parish. In a Green Belt area with only minor roads this is in direct contradiction to Ms Juneja’s statement and is without a thought for the local infrastructure which is already overburdened before a single new house is built.

In the Key Facts, para 2.2, you predict that the population of Guildford will increase to 155,400 by 2031. This is an increase of 15,700 from 2012. Why then are you proposing to build 13,040 new homes? This housing number is clearly an over-estimate and will result, if you have your way, of large swathes of Green Belt land being concreted over unnecessarily.

Furthermore the University has not used its land at Manor Farm to build the 4,700 accommodation units for which they were given permission. They have in fact only built 1,665 – that is a shortfall of 3,125. Therefore these students are having to find other accommodation in the borough, so adding to the number of other homes now needed.

2. Number of new houses and density (Policies S1, S2, H1 and H2)

I object to the proposals relating to the number of new houses and the density of such housing.

- The housing numbers proposed across the borough are for 13,800 homes over the Plan Period to This number is too high and unsustainable in Guildford's villages. The model used to calculate the number has not been seen or the assumptions tested by the Council or any of its officers. It has been, on numerous occasions, shown to be flawed by various third parties. This housing target will result in the borough's permanent resident population increasing at 4.5 times the rate of population increase during the period 2001 to 2011. This population growth, by definition, is excessive and unsustainable for a gap town with many environmental, physical and infrastructure constraints.

- In West Horsley, the 385 homes on the four proposed sites are at much higher densities than currently exist within the village and will be totally out of character with the existing mix of different housing styles and layout of the For West Horsley this would represent a 35% increase in the number of houses within 3-5 years of a plan being adopted. The home building proposals are unsustainable in terms of schooling, drainage, roads capacity, shops, parking and public transport.

I object to the disproportionate allocation of housing in this particular part of the borough. Indeed, over 23% of the Plan's new housing is proposed in the immediate localities of the Horsleys, Ockham, Ripley and Send.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
It is clear that development along the lines provided in the Local Plan is completely unsustainable, as well as a betrayal of the whole concept of the Green Belt. Many residents do recognize that there may be a need for a limited amount of additional housing, but the current draft Local Plan is absolutely not the way to address this requirement. There is no alternative but for the Council to revise the housing number down significantly, to amend the Local Plan to make greater use of brownfield/previously used land rather than green field sites (of which there are significant amounts of the former within the Borough), and to propose credible, evidence-based plans for how the sustainability of any development will be achieved.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

• I object to a plan which proposes that over 70% of new housing be built within the Green Belt. There is ample brownfield land in the urban areas which needs to be regenerated, without the need to encroach on protected Green Belt land.

elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy.

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the "West Surrey" tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, "West Surrey" is much too small. Half of Guildford borough's residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside 'West Surrey'. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It

OBJECT. Again, the huge number of houses makes no sense for Guildford, a 'gap town' with serious movement restrictions and natural constraints. The Council has the right not to build on the Green Belt but has not taken it. The SHMA figures have been widely and rightly criticised for many reasons but scrutiny of the methodology has been denied.

The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

Having written in September 2014 to object to the original Draft Local Plan, I am deeply concerned about the 2016 Plan which seems virtually unchanged and containing the same flaws. Namely:

- The wholesale removal of rural villages, in particular Ripley, Wisley, Clandon, Send and E & W Horsley, from the Green Belt;
- The monster building proposals at Wisely, already rejected by the GBC as unsuitable, Burnt Common, Gosden Hill and Blackwell Farm;
- As well as the proposed 385 new homes in my village, West Horsley, which is completely disproportionate to the 1,100 existing homes in the village - an expansion of the size of the village by nearly 40%;
- The evidence for this scale of new housing number, namely 14,000, is just not there; nor is the infrastructure in terms of shops, schools, doctors' surgeries, railways and car.

The proposals in this Plan are completely disproportionate and unjustified, and are a disservice to the need for a properly controlled expansion of our housing stock in the UK. I hereby register my objection to the 2016 Draft Local Plan.

<td>2. I Object to the unsustainably high level of development planned for the Borough as it would put harmful pressures on its protected AONB and AGLV landscapes, especially in the longer term to the detriment of future generations. This has not been justified within the Plan and seems to have been overlooked by the Council. Instead the Plan and its inadequate Sustainability Appraisal are based upon at least meeting the objectively assessed development needs calculations. That approach seems to be at odds with Government planning policy in the highlighted NPPF paragraph 14, requiring specific policies in the Framework (such as AONB and Green Belt designations that largely cover the Borough) restricting development to be balanced with meeting objectively assessed needs. No evidence so far exists that local communities support the Plan’s departure from Government policy in the NPPF or the accepted international definition of sustainable development.</td>

The volume of additional housing and the accompanying loss of Green Belt land required to accommodate this is a brutal over-reaction to genuine planning needs. These latest proposals appear to be crudely based around some artificially drawn numbers already challenged without adequate reply in response to earlier consultations on this matter. The methodology employed for the SHMA remains a complete mystery and its subsequent handling by GBC is beyond reason. The only clear impression that leaves is of a design that simply seeks to identify all green spaces adjacent to existing housing and calculating the number of new dwellings that could be sited using a standard model to produce a number. We do not need a complex planning process and the use of expensive private consultants to reach such a flawed outcome. Any number of residents in the Horsleleys could identify the selected plots if asked.

I object to this policy as it does not follow the NPPF, the NPG nor the advice of Ministers in the DCLA on how constraints should be applied.

This policy is based on the Evidence Base of the Strategic Housing Market Assessment. The housing target of 37,200 new homes during the plan period is obviously too high and based on OAN data in GL Hearn’s report that many organisations in Guildford have questioned e.g. new ONS statistics for a lower predicted population of Guildford; and high net international migration which is wrongly associated with the University and is now much more unlikely as a result of BREXIT.

The housing target does not reflect the real constraints in the borough, that Guildford is a gap town and that constraints should be applied to the overall housing target as well as on a site by site basis, in accordance with paragraph 14 of the NPPF and paragraph 044 of the Planning Guidance. In particular the Green Belt as a critical constraint has not been given sufficient weight.

The local plan seeks to add approximately 5,000 new houses in an area within a 5 mile radius of East Horsley. This number of new houses is unsustainable in this small area – it will almost double the number of houses currently in the villages of East and West Horsley. I object to the inclusion of such a large number of new houses in this area and consider that the local plan should be amended to take out any sites which are on Green Belt land.

- Strategic Balance: the draft Plan stresses the importance of the Green Belt but then proceeds to eat into it in a completely unbalanced way. This area of the borough (Clandon and Send) is taking a disproportionate share of the new building requirements over the Plan period. Together with Wisley, we end up with an urban swathe running from the M25 through to Burpham. This will completely change the nature of the whole of this part of the borough. It is not what local people want, as has been very clear from responses to previous consultations.

Included among my OBJECTIONS are the removal of West & East Horsley from the Green Belt and the unpalatable and surely unnecessary addition of 385 houses in West Horsley which equates to a staggering increase of 35% on this essentially rural village which currently comprises 1,111 homes. This proposed increase is infinitely greater than that proposed in any other village across the whole Borough and leads to the supposition that West Horsley is being discriminated against.

All of our local Schools are already full, our Medical facilities are already overstretched and our village Parking facilities (including the railway station and local shops) are already inadequate with no space for improvement. All local roads are narrow and were built at a time when the stage coach / pony & trap were the typical mode of transport rather than today's 4x4's, long wheel courier vans and supermarket delivery vehicles. Much of the Horsleys are built on clay with the consequence that drainage is inadequate.

Inexplicably, the new Draft Local Plan (which provides for 5000 new homes within a 5-mile radius of the Horsleys) has designated Station Parade, East Horsley, as a 'District Centre' which demonstrates a complete and utter misreading of the area because there are but a handful of local shops of which some have flats above. Such a designation / classification would merely encourage future urban development.

Also of major concern is the calculation and quantification of the number of houses proposed in the Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA): a target number that was generated by an external consultant's mathematical formula of which no qualification or calculation is to be made available. As if this wasn't unacceptable enough, the consultant's unsubstantiated calculation has been further massaged by Guildford Borough Council to such an extent as to provide for a population increase across the Borough which is almost 70% above the official national estimates for population growth. WHY?

Furthermore, these unquantified numbers are obviously pre-Referendum / Brexit calculations and as such now need to be recalculated if they are to be meaningful? Furthermore with Theresa May becoming the new Prime Minister, time MUST be given for her to provide a clear policy statement on her plans for the Green Belt which, hitherto, she has long sought to protect.

Following a major public outcry, GBC's Planning Committee rejected unanimously a recent application for this development on numerous grounds yet, for no apparent reason, it has been included in the new Draft Local Plan - a clear invitation to the developers that they should try again. This is not a NPPF "presumption in favour of sustainable development" but a predetermined bias in favour of specific applicants, who have already been given many additional months to refine their application prior to its rejection. It is therefore my opinion that this development should be removed from the new Draft Local Plan for all the same reasons that it was rejected by GBC's Planning Committee on 5th April 2016. These include:

- Green Belt location and absence of "exceptional circumstances”.
- Misrepresentation of the site as brownfield land: 17ha (less than 15%) is brownfield, it is adjacent to the SPA and therefore within 400m exclusion zone for The remains of the runway (14ha) are a habitat for rare flora and fauna and has never had any buildings on it.
- Proximity to RHS Wisley and Thames Basin Heath Special Protection Area (TBHSPA).
- Proximity to A3/M25 bottleneck and Ripley village and roundabouts.
- Absence of adequate traffic
- Further harm to air quality both onsite and nearby (e.g. the Cobham AQMA) and disregard for the health of children at the proposed secondary school.
- Loss of high-quality agricultural land (55% of the site), in breach of national policy.
- Disproportion of locating 2,000 dwellings within the village of Ockham's 159
- Presence of a Surrey County Council safeguarded waste site.
- Cost of infrastructure required to the detriment of alternative more favourable sites.
- Lack of local transport possibilities owing to country lanes with no footpaths or cycle ways and the distance to railway stations which have no spare parking capacity
- Impact on listed buildings
- Difficulty of SANG siting and inability to divert residents and their pets away from the SPA
- Extreme housing density with tiny garden spaces
- Damage to neighbouring communities of creating a settlement of 5,000 residents, equivalent to East and West Horsley combined, with worse light pollution, noise and traffic, and competition for local amenities and infrastructure
- Insufficient information about the impact on the local water table and run-off (see comments on flooding in Horsley above), and the possible aggravation of downstream flooding towards the Thames (e.g. Thames Ditton, which was under water during the winter of 2013/14).
- Failure to evaluate the cumulative impact of this and nearby development sites on the area.

I object to this strategy. The SHMA figure is shrouded in secrecy. This fundamental calculation is at the heart of the local plan and appears excessive. The proportionately large number of students housed off campus means less housing for local people.

Policy S2 confirms (in the preamble at para 4.1.6) that the preference within the plan is to focus growth in the most sustainable locations, making the best use of previously developed land including within Guildford Town Centre and that 13,860 dwellings will be provided in the Plan period.

However, despite this stated preference, Table 1- Planned Delivery between 2018 and 2033 confirms as stated above that only 1,172 units - i.e. just 8.5% of the total dwellings requirement will be directed to Guildford Town Centre.

Consistent with our comments above, we consider that much greater emphasis should be placed on maximising opportunities to meet housing need on sustainable brownfield land with the Town Centre. Such an approach would also be consistent with draft Policy H1: Homes for All - see comments below.

We would therefore suggest that after the first paragraph the following sentence should be added:
"In bringing forward development, there will be a strong preference to focus and maximise growth in the most sustainable locations, particularly within Guildford Town Centre and other urban areas, making the best use of previously developed land."

HOUSING NEED

I do not consider that the case regarding the need for the proposed overall number of houses in Guildford borough has been proven.

The target house building programme proposed represents a 25% increase in the housing stock of the borough, whilst we have been advised that the Office of National Statistics (ONS) only projects a population increase of some 15% for the borough of Guildford over the same period. Something just doesn’t make sense. Certainly the proposed increase in the number of new houses required has not been proven for the village of West Horsley.

In my opinion the Proposed Submission Local Plan in respect of West Horsley is excessive in terms of the potential residential provision currently indicated. I do not believe that the scale of development proposed, in any way, reflects the actual need, nor that it respects the local character and existing built density of the village.

I therefore OBJECT to the current site allocations and housing densities proposed for all four sites in West Horsley.

I would further make the point that the Guildford Borough Economic Strategy 2013 – 2031 made no such case for siting large numbers of residential units within West Horsley. As previously stated, West Horsley is remote from the existing centres of employment and the new Economic Development Site proposals, which are focussed on the opposite side of the borough.

Furthermore, I understand that in March 2014 the Government published a new web-based Planning Practise Guidance (Housing & economic land availability assessment, Methodology – stage 5: Final evidence base, 6 March 2014) to accompany and give further detail about the policies in the NPPF. This guidance set out that unmet housing need in a particular area is unlikely to meet the “very special circumstances” test to justify development within the Green Belt. It states “Unmet housing need is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt and other harm to constitute the “very special circumstances” justifying inappropriate development on a site within the Green Belt.”
On 4th October 2014, I understand that the Government announced that it had further updated its online Planning Practise Guidance. The aim of this was to reaffirm local authorities’ abilities to “safeguard their local area against urban sprawl, and to protect the green lungs around towns and cities”. The Government said that it wanted to make planning policy clear that housing need does not justify the harm done to the Green Belt by inappropriate development.

The new guidance included the statement that: “The Framework (NPPF) makes clear that, once established, Green belt boundaries should only be altered in exceptional circumstances, through the preparation or review of the Local Plan.”

Do local planning authorities have to meet full housing needs identified in needs assessments? – Local authorities should prepare a Strategic Housing Market Assessment to assess their full housing needs. However, assessing need is just the first stage in developing a Local Plan. Once need has been assessed, the local planning authority should prepare a strategic housing land availability assessment to establish realistic assumptions about the availability, suitability and likely economic viability of land to meet the identified need for housing over the plan period, and in so doing take account of any constraints such as Green Belt, which indicate that development should be restricted and which may restrain the ability of an authority to meet its need.”

I further understand that on 19 December 2014 the Planning Minister wrote to the Chief Executive at the Planning Inspectorate about Strategic Housing Market Assessments. This letter set out the relationship between housing figures produced as part of a Strategic Housing Market Assessment and those in a Local Plan and how to take into account constraints such as Green Belt land. It contained the following: “However, the outcome of a Strategic Housing Market Assessment is untested and should not automatically be seen as a proxy for a final housing requirement in Local Plans.”

It does not immediately or in itself invalidate housing numbers in existing Local Plans. Councils will need to consider Strategic Housing Market Assessment evidence carefully and take adequate time to consider whether there are environmental and policy constraints, such as Green Belt, which will impact on their overall final housing requirement.”

It is my view that the overall extent of development required in the borough necessary to meet the employment and housing needs in the borough and, as set out in Policy S2, has not been satisfactorily defined having regard to the methodology summarised above.

The West Surrey Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) assesses an Objectively Assessed Need (OAN) of 693 dwellings per annum “but does not take into account land supply, policy or other constraints to development”. as per paragraph 1.2 of the Guildford Summary Report – October 2015. This figure is acknowledged as including upwards adjustments to support growth in student numbers and higher migration levels than are shown in the 2012-based Population Projections and represents an OAN 23% higher than need calculated through London sensitivity analysis, as per paragraphs 4.1 – 4.2 of the same Guildford Summary Report.

Policy S2 of the Proposed Local Plan then, apparently uncritically, applies this OAN figure to identify a housing requirement of 13,860 dwellings for the plan period (20 years at 693 dwellings per annum). There is no evidence to indicate that in defining this figure GBC has undertaken a careful consideration of “whether there are environmental and policy constraints, such as Green Belt, which will impact on their overall final housing requirement” and which may well indicate that development should be restricted.

Furthermore, I also understand that GBC will not release details of the methodology used by their third party consultants to arrive at the OAN figures used, which, in my opinion, also makes the likelihood of the Proposed Local Plan being considered unsound in this respect highly unlikely.
Given that these OAN figures then play such a fundamental role in many of the Site and Strategy issues (and in particular Site Allocation) I believe that much of the Proposed Local Plan is very much open to challenge, possibly including judicial review.

In my opinion, the Proposed Submission Local Plan’s proposal to make provision for 62% of this total dwelling requirement on land that is currently Green Belt is simply not supported by adequate justification.

As previously stated, in my opinion, a disproportionate burden of meeting what GBC has chosen to define as its development needs is also proposed to fall on the more rural east of the borough. Within this eastern area, West Horsley is then allocated to bear a particularly excessive proportion of this proposed development, despite the numerous counterevailing reasons put forward in previous consultation rounds by many local residents (e.g. narrow roads; areas of flood risk; access to both senior and junior school places; medical facilities, parking availability at the station, etc.) If adopted, the draft plan will put an unsustainable pressure on all local resources and infrastructure.

It should be noted that, within the Draft Guildford Borough Local Plan; Strategy & Sites: July 2014, GBC proposed the possible site allocation for a total of 434 houses within West Horsley (plus a further 100 abutting the parish boundary in East Horsley) including 185 homes on Land to the west of Silkmore Lane and no mention of development on the sites now proposed under Policies A37 nor A41.

Many of us objected to the same and, quite correctly, the Silkmore Lane site was removed from the current Proposed Local Plan. We were amazed however to see that, in lieu, site allocations were now proposed for sites A37 and A41 proposing a total further 130 homes on these two sites! It seems to me as though GBC have predetermined that West Horsley should ‘suffer’ approx. 450 homes come what may and, if not on initially proposed sites then on others. Are we truly meant to believe that GBC, having removed this Silkmore Lane site in the village, found that sequentially the next two most ‘appropriate sites for residential development’, within the whole of the borough of Guildford were in the very same village? I don’t think so!!

I cannot, for the life of me, see how any ‘need’ for the proposed number of houses can be proven. This feels like pure opportunism on behalf of GBC and landowners.

I therefore OBJECT to the borough housing targets set out in Policy S2.

Furthermore, I am also concerned that all of the proposed Site Allocation sites are currently designated for years 1 – 5 of the plan which I feel, if adopted, would only exacerbate local infrastructure problems, set out later in this representation. Finally, delivery of whatever provision is adopted should at least be phased so as to control the construction traffic impact. Such prolonged phasing should also assist the developers in their ‘take up’, by phasing the delivery and release to the market.

I therefore OBJECT to the proposed timing of any adopted housing targets. I would ask that they be reconsidered and redistributed so as to phase delivery with reference to delivery of the necessary supporting infrastructure.

SUMMARY

The Green Belt within Guildford borough is a Regional and National asset. It must be protected in so far as is absolutely possible.

Every effort must be made to locate proposed new housing on existing brownfield sites close to areas of employment, before the ‘easy option’ of allowing development of greenfield sites is permitted.

I remain unconvinced that the Proposed Submission Local Plan: Strategy & Sites 2016 has fully exhausted the possibilities for residential development on such land, preferring to reserve many such areas of land for potential employment or education opportunities, which may not fully require the same.

I remain completely unconvinced as to the proven need (OAN) for the full extent of new housing proposed. In my opinion the scale of potential development proposed in West Horsley, in particular, is excessive, disproportionate and inappropriate. For the reasons previously stated I believe that it should be limited in terms of both potential locations for proposed development and permitted density. It is a semi-rural village and any future development should both respect and contribute to its local character, context and distinctiveness, not detract from or, at worse, destroy the same.

13,860 homes are proposed at a build rate of 693 per annum. This number has not been scrutinised by councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden. It is not reasonable to produce unsubstantiated numbers in order to justify major structural change in a widely protected area (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB, approx. 75% within 7km mitigation zone of SPA).

It is inappropriate to allocate this housing number, either over the plan period OR across projected sites, when the number itself is unsubstantiated. External consultants and members of the public have provided detailed criticisms of the model. Were the housing number substantially lower, meeting housing need, there would be no need to build on Green Belt or open countryside. The number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permission, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds 13,860.

This policy is flawed for the following reasons:

1. it is not subject to the constraints imposed by the fact that 89% of the borough is Green Belt and inadequate infrastructure;
2. it does not require ‘brownfield’ sites to be used first;
3. it does not reflect Government policy to reduce international migration which accounts for the majority of the projected population growth;
4. it fails to require Surrey University to house its own students (if the university built out the land on which it already has planning permission for student accommodation, it would house not only the future growth of student numbers but many of the students occupying properties in Guildford which could therefore be released for affordable housing);
5. it proposes ‘insetting’ 16 out of 24 villages in the Borough and identifies a few very large areas of land to be “strategic sites” without presenting the ‘exceptional circumstances’ required to redraw Green Belt boundaries

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
I OBJECT to the disproportionate concentration of new housing numbers proposed to the east of Guildford. This would result in massive overloading for schools, medical centres, public transport and local roads. The population of East and West Horsley is currently c. 2800; the draft plan proposes nearly 5000 new houses within a 5 mile radius of Horsley, that is an approximate 80% increase. This is not sustainable.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

It seems that in their desperation to maximise the new housing numbers in the Local Plan, GBC Councillors have chosen to ignore the wishes of their existing electors and residents. Is this an example of democracy working fairly?

Objections to Guildford Borough Proposed Submission Local Plan (June 2016)

I OBJECT in the strongest possible terms to the Guildford Borough Proposed Submission Local Plan (June 2016). This Plan is unsustainable, unworkable and, in many provisions, unnecessary.
I set out below my objection to specific policies and matters within the Plan.

I object to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

1. The borough wide strategy is poorly It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

2. The Housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

3. The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the "West Surrey"tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or

On any common sense view, "West Surrey" is much too small. Half of Guildford borough ’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside "West Surrey". Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, Guildford town centre is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used inthe past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make "West Surrey" reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour 's "need".

Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey's 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick's Arch (Rpley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley.Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick's Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

My principal objections to the Local Plan are:

• Inadequate infrastructure improvements to support already overcrowded roads and railways.
• Increased traffic congestion and journey times, due to the developments
• Increased pollution from the traffic and developments causing health problems for residents, and irreversible damage to protected sites (nitrate deposits).
• Reduction in quality of life, due to increased stress due. For example, large increase in cyclists over the last ten years.

1. Policy S2 – object
   1. The number of houses is too high, which will result in the permanent loss of Green Belt land, and irreversible damage to SPAs.
   2. Constraints imposed by the Green Belt, AONB and SPAs have not been properly taken into account in setting the housing numbers in the Local Plan. If these were properly applied then this would result in a lower number.
   3. I am not convinced by the evidence presented for the number of houses. In particular the Economic Assessment has resulted in an inflated demand for houses. Councillor David Reeve for Clandon & Horsley has produced “A Review of the Guildford Objectively Assessed Housing Need”, July 2016.
   4. Housing needs require reassessment in light of the Brexit vote, and the economic uncertainties that this has caused, which will result in reduced levels of growth, certainly until negations are completed on exit from the EU and new trade deals negotiated. The outcome of these talks won’t be known for at least 5 years and may well take much longer, despite the over-inflated optimism of some politicians.
   5. The housing numbers are unsustainable

Comment - Localism

The Plan is supposed to be informed by residents and by parish councils and residents’ groups and their input used to formulate the Local Plan, not for it simply to be presented to them and objections and subsequent input ignored. Despite a great deal of effort from these groups and many like-minded responses, the Plan has not taken their concerns on board. The Plan has barely changed since day one and residents feel their views have been ignored and that the consultations have not been genuine. To add insult to injury, some of the key points raised have actually been exacerbated or made worse, such as the scale of development and harm to the Green Belt and issues over infrastructure.

The NPPF is open to interpretation, but it is our belief that GBC has chosen to interpret it in a way that lacks objectivity in an effort to appease developers in order to avoid costly court cases at a later stage. GBC has cited cases where development has been granted in an effort to justify this pro-development stance but has failed to balance this against the many sites where development has been refused.

To gain true public reaction, material presented has to be factual and unbiased and written without jargon and acronyms. This has not been the case. A degree of ‘double speak’ has led to absurdities such as ‘affordable housing’ which is over £300,000 i.e. ten times the average salary; ‘safeguarding’ which does not mean protection of land as most people would think, but rather potential future development and ’insetting’ which means removal? It is recognised that these terms are not locally derived but all the same they are confusing for most of us.

Some Councillors have shown a lack of knowledge about environmental matters. Cllr. Gunning - webcast 24th May section 7 - 3:39

‘About ancient woodlands, of course they are very attractive things, but they are ancient and trees don’t last forever, so can we be practical about ancient woodlands and consider their value or their life, I should say, their life’

May 11th - Cllr Ellwood announced that he couldn't understand what all the fuss was about pollution as his Mother had lived (presumably unaffected by it) under the flight path at Heathrow?

Whilst people have been encouraged to take part in consultation, objectors have been subjected to name calling and public humiliation. There are too many examples to list and so I am listing the most recent. http://www.guildford-dragon.com/2016/07/10/letter-not-surprised-mr-patons-comparison/#comment-157440

The Local Plan has divided communities and highlighted weaknesses and alliances, which have resulted in a breakdown of trust between residents and those whose job it is to implement the Plan.

The Plan has been roundly criticized and objected to and yet it is presented to us once again. Many feel the consultations to date have been worthless and feel they have already made their points, which were ignored and will not therefore be making them again as they fail to see the point?
It simply is not possible to address infrastructure shortfalls by building in the hope that developers contributions will cover the costs as the level of development needed negates any benefits gained and in many cases, the situation is made worse.

Central government funding is needed to address current problems so that funding from development can be used to implement additional infrastructure needed to make new sites viable without damaging their surroundings. It must be accepted that geography and lack of previous investment leaves some areas with less opportunity to do this than others.

I object to policy S2 the Borough Wide Strategy and the commitment to build 13,860 homes based on the Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) 2015 prepared by GL Hearn.

The OAN ‘objectively assessed need’ figure in the SHMA of 693 homes a year is far too high

I am very surprised and concerned that GBC have adopted the OAN of 13,860 homes as the housing target without any application of constraints as required under the National Planning Policy Framework and the National Planning Policy Guidance. The scale of the housing number proposed, inevitably increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

Other local planning authorities appear to take a more balanced view in their approach to planning. The Woking Core Strategy 2012 applies a constraint of 50% from the 594 new homes identified in their own SHMA. ‘It should be noted that local evidence (Strategic Housing Market Assessment - SHMA) highlights a need for an additional 499 new affordable homes every year in the Borough and a total of 594 new homes every year when taking into account demand. Given the level of environmental constraints present in the Borough, it is considered that the provision of an average of 292 dwellings per annum represents a reasonable level of housing growth for Woking and is deliverable.’

Historically GBC have correctly applied constraints on housing numbers to protect the Green Belt. The Surrey Structure Plan 1994 advocated a general slowing down in the rates of development ‘because of the environmental constraints which exist in the County, including Green Belt’. This slowing down was reflected in the requirement that Guildford Borough should accommodate a net increase of 3,800 dwellings between 1991 and 2006. This was a lower rate of development than in previous years. It is interesting to note that the Structure Plan at that time expected sufficient land to arise within the urban areas to accommodate this requirement.

However it would appear that today GBC have effectively ignored the real potential of the urban area to provide for housing. At the same time GBC have adopted a radically different approach to the policy of the Council over the last 20/30 years and are now ignoring government policy in relation to the Green Belt.

A detailed and comprehensive professional review of the SHMA dated June 2016 by NMSS an independent expert firm dealing with housing and demographics procured by Guildford Residents Association (GRA) has concluded that the OAN figure should be revised down from 693 homes per annum to 510 homes per annum.

The 41 page report by NMSS which can be found on the GRA website entitled ‘A Review of the West Surrey SHMA as it relates to the Objectively Assessed Housing Needs of Guildford’. It was a real community effort. It was paid for by over separate 20 Guildford Residents Associations and Local Parish Councils none of whom were convinced that the SHMA report procured and presented by GBC was accurate or transparent or accessible in a meaningful way. So they clubbed together and collected contributions from many hundreds of Guildford residents to try to find out the truth of the housing need figure presented in the Local Plan.

The NMSS report includes detailed analysis and financial modelling and was prepared by Neil McDonald. He is an independent adviser and commentator on housing demographics. He works with local authorities and others on the estimation of housing need and related issues. He was a civil servant and policy adviser to Ministers for over 30 years, the last 10 advising on housing and planning issues within the Department of Communities and Local Government. His 7 years as a Director at DCLG included a posting as Director, Planning Policy and a period as Chief Executive of the National Housing and Planning Advice Unit.

NMSS found that the SHMA used in the Local Plan incorrectly adds extra homes to its basic demographic projection to allow for improving affordability of housing, increased student numbers and economic growth. The report found that none of these additions were justified based on the evidence presented within the SHMA. The report concluded amongst other matters that:

• The affordability of housing in Guildford is no worse than in other Surrey districts and boosting supply beyond the demographic OAN would not result in a noticeable improvement in affordability but simply in more people moving to the area.

• There are reasons for believing that the SHMA’s estimate of the number of homes needed for students may be too high and that an adequate provision for students is already included in the demographic OAN. The report advises that the Council should commission a separate student housing need figure for Guildford given the distorting effect of students on our overall OAN. It envisages that, once this exercise is undertaken, improved accuracy means the overall OAN would be likely to reduce still further.

• The SHMA seeks to estimate the number of homes needed to support employment growth using employment rate assumptions that are inconsistent with the employment forecasts. This produces misleading results. An analysis of the Cambridge Econometrics and Oxford Economics forecasts using employment or economic activity rate assumptions consistent with the forecasts suggests that in neither case is there a need to provide more housing than suggested by the demographic analysis. Indeed, in both cases a smaller population growth (and hence fewer homes) could support the jobs growth that is forecast.

A further independent report was procured in 2016 by the Campaign for the Protection of Rural England CPRE from Richard Bate of Green Balance, an independent consultancy with expertise in demographic and housing matters to carry out a review of the GL Hearn SHMA

The report by Green Balance runs to 37 pages and its findings are that the OAN for homes in Guildford should be reduced from 693 per annum to 481 because:

1. the vacancy rate figures should be taken from local government annual records rather than from the 2011 Census. This would reduce vacancy rates to 2.9% in Guildford.
2. there should be no increase for affordability above basic demographic change.
3. there should be no increase for Student housing and it was considered unrealistic that the University should be allowed to exert such substantial pressure on the domestic housing market.
4. the use of employment-led forecasts should be abandoned using purely household projections instead which are more reliable as a form of prediction.

Two completely independent expert reports are surprisingly consistent in their findings. In broad terms a figure of approximately 500 homes per annum would appear to be a correct estimate of OAN for Guildford. However, this is before constraints are applied to arrive at an acceptable housing target.

The SHMA is based on pre-Brexit projections for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards.

It is unacceptable that demographic and economic model assumptions have been withheld by GBC and cannot be checked making the process unaccountable.

The figure of 13,860 new homes is unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinised by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA.

Both the National Planning Policy Framework and National Planning Policy Guidance provide a clear policy direction that the overall housing target should be reduced by a variety of constraints to take account of protected wildlife areas (e.g. Thames Basin Heath SPA), landscape areas (Surrey Hills AONB), Green Belt, flood risk and significant infrastructure constraints, all of which apply to Guildford. This local plan and the SHMA number have completely ignored these factors. I have corrected this omission below. Infrastructure policies should be planned at the same time as Local Plans but in this case they have effectively been left out and are not sufficiently developed.

The Framework also makes clear that, once established, Green Belt boundaries should only be altered in exceptional circumstances, through the preparation or review of the Local Plan.
Unmet housing need (including for traveller sites) is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt and other harm to constitute the ‘very special circumstances’ justifying inappropriate development on a site within the Green Belt.

THE NEED TO APPLY CONSTRAINTS

Ministerial guidance in relation to building on the Green Belt is clear:

1. ‘the single issue of unmet need - is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt and other harm to constitute the “very special circumstances” justifying inappropriate development in the Green Belt’ - Nick Boles to Sir Paul Beresford MP 7th February 2014.

1. ‘we were always very clear that we would maintain key protections for the countryside, and, in particular, for the Green Belt. The Framework makes it clear that a Green Belt boundary may be altered only in exceptional circumstances and reiterates the importance and permanence of the Green Belt’ – Nick Boles to Sir Michael Pitt, Planning Inspectorate 3rd March 2014.

2. ‘Planning Guidance, updated in March 2014, also states that unmet housing need is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt to constitute the very special circumstances justifying inappropriate development within the Green Belt’ – Nick Boles to Sir Paul Beresford MP 18th June 2014.

70% of the sites put forward in the Local Plan are in the Green Belt which flies in the face of current government planning policy. The National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF), National Planning Policy Guidance and case law make it clear that Green Belt is an absolute constraint on housing supply. Exceptional circumstances need to be shown to adjust boundaries.

Other constraints under the NPPF include assessments of sustainability, strategic flood risk assessment, physical constraints on land use and infrastructure constraints (this can include road congestion, schools, drains, power supply and medical requirements).

Constraints should be applied to the Objectively Assessed Housing Need (OAN). However this itself is overstated and should be reduced from 693 per annum to 500.

In view of the comments above it would appear logical to apply CONSTRAINTS in line with government policy to a corrected OAN. Of approximately 50% to account for the fact that 89% of the borough is in the permanent Green Belt and development is not supported by adequate major infrastructure. This reduction is in line with the constraints percentage of 50% applied by Woking Borough Council.

This would result in a more acceptable and practically achievable HOUSING TARGET of 250 homes per annum which over a 20-year period would be 5,000 homes. All of these homes could be built in the existing urban brownfield areas of the borough and would in part satisfy the 20,000 objections made by residents to the 2014 draft plan and also relieve the additional problems of inadequate infrastructure.

It would also mean that there is currently 8.5 years supply of housing (2131/250) which is made up of existing permissions granted (1,518) and completions made (613) during 2013/2015. (Monitoring Report by GBC 2015)

The Brexit vote may have strengthened government policy further. Theresa May, the new prime minister, announced on 11 July that she is personally committed to protecting the Green Belt once she takes office.

Whilst I have many significant objections to the GBC Local Plan I applaud the policy statement by GBC in their Monitoring Report, ‘We will continue to monitor the use of previously developed land, and continue to identify as many opportunities as possible for redevelopment of previously developed land.’ I believe it will be to the benefit of all residents if GBC can apply themselves vigorously to this endeavour in order to protect the Green Belt.

As residents of the ‘Guildford Community’ we have been sympathetic to the need for additional housing in the Borough to satisfy quantifiable demand, but feel that this has not been addressed by the 2016 Guildford Borough Council Local Plan.

We believe housing development should: meet the needs of the local community; respect the Green Belt and long established settlement boundaries; be in keeping with existing development in terms of scale and density; have regard to the local infrastructure and be sympathetic to proximity to AONB.

We feel that the number of new homes proposed in the Borough is significantly higher than those that would be required based on population projections of the ONS figures. In addition the location of the developments has little regard to the NPPF rules, particularly in respect of the ‘Horsley Green Belt’ and changes to boundaries.

Our specific objections to The Local Plan Proposals are as follows:

POLICY S2: Borough Wide Strategy

The proposed increase in housing stock in the Borough is 25% which is in excess of the ONS population projections of a 15% increase.

We object to this Policy

6) I OBJECT to the Policy S2

The 2017 Local Plan continues to contain some of the unproven assumptions of previous versions of the Local Plan such as housing numbers. The amended policy S2 the Borough Wide Strategy and the commitment to build 12,426 homes based on the Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) 2017 prepared by GL Hearn has not addressed many of the 32,000 objections made to the 2016 plan. A detailed and comprehensive professional review of the SHMA dated June 2017 by NMSS an independent expert firm dealing with housing and demographics procured by Guildford Residents Association (GRA), a group made up of parish councils and residents associations from across Guildford Borough, has concluded that the OAN figure should be revised down from 560 homes per annum to 400 homes per annum. Once other permitted constraints are allowed, that figure could be revised downwards even further. These constraints, in line with government policy to protect Green Belt and make sure development is supported by adequate infrastructure, could correct the OAN by approximately 50%. This is what neighbouring Woking Borough Council have done. I object to the fact that GBC have not used the guidance available to reduce the number of houses they propose, resulting in an unsustainable and inappropriate plan, based on erroneous assumptions.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
I object to the complete failure of GBC to identify sufficient brownfield sites within the urban area which should be targeted first for development before the open countryside and the Green Belt and the failure to include the Town Centre Masterplan 2015 within the plan. Every new green belt site reduces the chance that a future brownfield site will be developed.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

The 2017 Draft Local Plan for Guildford continues to contain some of the unproven assumptions of previous drafts of the proposed Local Plan such as housing numbers. The amended policy S2 the Borough Wide Strategy and the commitment to build 12,426 homes based on the Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) 2017 prepared by GL Hearn has not addressed many of the 32,000 objections made to the 2016 plan. This is what neighbouring Woking Borough Council have done. I object to the fact that GBC have not used the guidance available to reduce the number of houses they propose, resulting in an unsustainable and inappropriate plan, based on erroneous assumptions.

Thus, I object to the amended policy S2 the Borough Wide Strategy.

Comment ID: PSLPP16/13409  Respondent: 8840033 / Jimmy Daboo  Agent:
1. POLICY S2

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN Ire not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guildford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.
It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

I OBJECT to all strategic sites proposed in the draft Plan to be built in the Green Belt.

1. I object to the identification and allocation of sites in this plan without regard to Green Belt, infrastructure or other constraints. The plan says that “allocating these sites does not grant planning permission for development.” However, each of the sites will be removed from the Green Belt and will be available in principle for development and non-Green Belt uses. The inclusion of these sites without detailed site by site justification shows contempt for the thousands of detailed comments the Council have received about individual sites ever since the Issues and Options consultation in 2013. The plan has hardly changed since the Council received 20,000 objections to its first draft plan in 2014. The Inspector considering the plan may well conclude that the consultation has not been properly conducted. The Council should also consider the impact that objections (which will inevitably be made) on any planning applications on these sites will have on its capacity to deal with planning matters.

2. The housing needs assessment is flawed in various respects and overstates housing need. In addition since it was produced, the referendum Brexit decision has almost certainly reduced future housing need and rendered the previous assessment seriously out of date. As a result any assessment of Green Belt sites which took place to consider whether “exceptional circumstances” existed to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt was based on false premises and should be reconsidered.

3. Having determined housing need the Council was entitled to consider constraints before determining the housing number. I believe that as Ill as being entitled to do this the Council was required to give proper consideration to constraints. The scarcity of sites outside the Green Belt as Ill as infrastructure (most notable roads) considerations all represented constraints which should have been taken into account in determining the final housing number. Accordingly in this regard our objection to the allocation of Green Belt sites is twofold. First I believe constraints should have been applied. Secondly I believe the Council did not properly consider constraints and that their decision making process was flawed and thus subject to being set aside by the Inspector.

4. Even if having properly applied constraints there is a need to develop in the Green Belt then specific Green Belt sites should not be included in the plan unless “exceptional circumstances” for development are proven in relation to that specific site, as stipulated repeatedly in the NPPF. The Green Belt should trump short-term considerations such as perceived housing need, as case law has established. There needs to be a specific balancing exercise conducted on each Green Belt site weighing the harm to the Green Belt against the very special circumstances which are argued in favour of development at that particular site. There is no evidence this has been done. Instead the council have appeared to say that having chosen a housing needs figure and decided it cannot be met without building on Green Belt then there is no need for any further consideration and any convenient Green Belt site can be allocated for building at will.

Finally, I object to the disproportionate allocation of new housing to this area as a whole - there are a considerable number of houses proposed not only at Three Farm Meadows, but large sites in Horsley and Ripley. This will damage the nature of the area and result in a huge burden on inadequate and already-strained infrastructure and local services.

The Local Plan, as it stands, will turn this part of Surrey from an attractive, sought-after, green and clean place to live into an extension of the London sprawl. We have a responsibility to protect this lovely environment for future generations, or there will soon be none left.

Policy S2: Planning for the borough - our spatial development

2.1. I OBJECT to this policy. This policy aims to add 13,860 new homes to Guildford Borough over 2013-2033. This is equivalent to 693 new homes per annum.

2.2. The numbers seem to result from a forced growth policy rather than a reasoned analysis.

2.3. Furthermore, students have not been properly accounted for, and it does not (but should) require the University of Surrey to build the student accommodation that it previously committed to.

2.4. Others far better qualified than me have explained that these numbers are excessive and based upon false assumptions and using a model that the public have not been allowed full access to so that it can be properly verified. Nevertheless, from the limit information provided to some, Councillor David Reeve and Guildford Residents Association (who I believe used an independent expert) have separately identified numerous errors that need correcting and will lead to a reduction in forecast numbers. Furthermore, the economic growth rate forecasts need to be revisited in the light of Brexit which is already causing an economic slow down.
2.5. The SHMA numbers therefore need to be revised downwards.

I object to policy S2 the Borough Wide Strategy and the commitment to build 13,860 homes based on the Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) 2015 prepared by GL Hearn. The OAN “objectively assessed need” figure in the SHMA of 693 homes a year is far too high. I am very surprised and concerned that GBC have adopted the OAN of 13,860 homes as the housing target without any application of constraints as required under the National Planning Policy Framework and the National Planning Policy Guidance. The scale of the housing number proposed, inevitably increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole. Historically GBC have correctly applied constraints on housing numbers to protect the Green Belt and growth not in keeping with the capacity of the borough. Theses previous plans concluded that sufficient land to arise within the urban areas to accommodate this requirement. However, GBC have ignored the potential of the urban area to provide for housing. The current plan now is going hell for leather for Green Belt development and are ignoring government policy in relation to the Green Belt. I read, in detail the most damming report by NMSS an independent expert firm dealing with housing and demographics procured by Guildford Residents Association (GRA) which concluded that the OAN figure should be revised down from 693 homes per annum to 510 homes per annum. An independent adviser and commentator on housing demographics. He works with local authorities and others on the estimation of housing need and related issues. He was a civil servant and policy adviser to Ministers for over 30 years, the last 10 advising on housing and planning issues within the Department of Communities and Local Government. His 7 years as a Director at DCLG included a posting as Director, Planning Policy and a period as Chief Executive of the National Housing and Planning Advice Unit. I’m sure others will comment on this report in detail so I won’t but I fully support the conclusions. Not because the number is lower but I believe it passes the test of Objectively Assessed Need. When one goes back to the 2014 presentation by JULIAN D S LYON MBA FRICS of the Guildford Society on the Draft Strategic Market Housing Assessment (SHMA). Nuances maybe different but the general trajectory and logic still remains the same. The Guildford Society concluded in 2014:

1 The premise for the housing data in the Draft SHMA published by GL Hearn looks deeply flawed and a full demographic analysis needs to be undertaken to understand the NEED for housing in Guildford during the Local Plan period

2 The Guildford Society’s simplistic analysis suggests the actual need figure that should be in the SHMA is in the range 435 to 641, and is probably closer to 507.

3 The Guildford Society has urged Guildford Borough Council to re-examine the core data (particularly within age-group cohorts aged 18 to 24 in 2011) before it moves to adopt any report or figure as the basis for its Objective Assessment of Housing Need in the Emerging Local Plan

http://www.guildfordsociety.org.uk/2014_March_Housing_Series_4_503D6C51E8ED.pdf

The figure of 507 is stunningly close to the figure that the GRA report suggests is the correct figure of 510 per year.

In research and science, "objective" is without bias. To be properly considered objective, the results or claim must be communicated from person to person, then demonstrated for third parties and repeatable by other third parties using the same methods with the same results.

Around 510 seems to be an objective number - two independent bodies coming up with the same results 2 years apart essentially using the same data. GL Hearn’s number seems to be “subjective” as no-one seems to be able to get anywhere near repeating the results. In trying to do so some very smart people have spotted issues and flaws in GL Hearn’s work.

What's more the Guildford Residents Association and Guildford Society have identified exactly the same issues such as the treatment of the blip in Guildford student age cohort which is far in excess of any other similar university town. The Guildford Society show that the vast majority of the growth of the university has come from overseas students since 2000-2011. This is an anomaly the GRA study highlights as an issue with current SHMA which the Council refuse to consider.

From the 2011 census 8% of Guildford residents were in FULL TIME education vs 3.5% for Surrey - for Guildford that is 12,000 full time students on a population of roughly 150k.

The independent expert suggests:

"The analysis of the impact which potential increases in student numbers may have on the overall housing needs of any university town is complex and best carried out separately from a general demographic analysis. Given that students are a significant part of Guildford’s population and there are substantial uncertainties in the calculations, there is a strong case for carrying out such a separate analysis and, possibly, setting a separate requirement for student housing."

Back of a fag packed packet calculation conservatively makes this a £10-12billion decision excluding the infrastructure costs and town center redevelopment. That is ignoring the devastation to endangered species residing in our green belt and premature deaths resulting from increased air pollution. I suggest the Council would be negligent if it did not examine the numbers in the evidence and not take GL Hearn's number in blind faith, enough people have put them on notice that they should If one looks at the Green Balance report findings are that the OAN for homes in Guildford should be reduced from 693 per annum to 481 because So we have 3 completely independent expert reports are surprisingly consistent in their findings. In broad terms a figure of approximately 500 homes per annum would appear to be a correct estimate of OAN for Guildford. However, this is before constraints are applied to arrive at an acceptable housing target. It is unacceptable that demographic and economic model assumptions have been withheld by GBC and cannot be checked making the process unaccountable and unsound. Just because someone is a third party, one cannot conclude their conclusions are “objective”.

GL Hearn is owned by a property and infrastructure business, why should their study be accepted without scrutiny. Guildford has some specific historic dynamics and population structure which cannot be just put into an off the shelf model and hope for robust figures. Both the National Planning Policy Framework and National Planning Policy Guidance provide a clear policy direction that the overall housing target should be reduced by a variety of constraints to take account of protected wildlife areas (e.g. Thames Basin Heath SPA), landscape areas (Surrey Hills AONB), Green Belt, flood risk and significant infrastructure constraints, all of which apply to Guildford. The Framework also makes clear that, once established, Green Belt boundaries should only be altered in exceptional circumstances, through the preparation or review of the Local Plan. Unmet housing need (including for traveller sites) is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt and other harm to constitute the “very special circumstances” justifying inappropriate development on a site within the Green Belt. Ministerial guidance in relation to building on the Green Belt is clear: “the single issue of unmet need - is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt and other harm to constitute the “very special circumstances” justifying inappropriate development in the Green Belt” - Nick Boles to Sir Paul Beresford MP 7th February 2014. "we were always very clear that we would maintain key protections for the countryside, and, in particular, for the Green Belt. The Framework makes it clear that a Green Belt boundary may be altered only in exceptional circumstances and reiterates the importance and permanence of the Green Belt” – Nick Boles to Sir Michael Pitt, Planning Inspectorate 3rd March 2014. “Planning Guidance, updated in March 2014, also states that unmet housing need is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt to constitute the very special circumstances justifying inappropriate development within the Green Belt” – Nick Boles to Sir Paul Beresford MP 18th June 2014 70% of the housing in the Local Plan are in the Green Belt which flies in the face of current government planning policy. The National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF), National Planning Policy Guidance and case law make it clear that Green Belt is an absolute constraint on housing supply. Exceptional circumstances need to be shown to adjust boundaries. Other constraints under the NPPF include assessments of sustainability, strategic flood risk assessment, physical constraints on land use and infrastructure constraints (this can include road congestion, schools, drains, power supply and medical requirements). Constraints should be applied to the Objectively Assessed Housing Need (OAN). However this itself is overstated and should be reduced from 693 per annum to 500. In view of the clear guidance it is only logical to apply CONSTRAINTS in line with government policy to a corrected OAN of around 500 homes. The fact that 89% of the borough is in the permanent Green Belt and development is not supported by adequate major infrastructure this has to be substantial. In this plan we have non! have recently (9 July 2016) had a meeting with Sir Paul Beresford my own MP for Mole Valley who has kindly assured me that he is in the process of speaking to the Secretary of State to ratify the current government policy of protecting the Metropolitan Green Belt and to instruct the Planning Inspectorate and Local Planning Authorities accordingly. This is in the wake of the recent national referendum and the likelihood of the easing pressure on international immigration over the next 20 years. Theresa May, announced on 11 July that she is personally committed to protecting the Green Belt.

Traffic & parking

I object to the plan on the grounds of the additional vehicles and impact this will have on local parking and local roads. Assuming that every new house has at least 2 cars, this means potentially 6,000 more cars within a three mile radius of the Horsley villages. Parking at the, already full, stations, local shops and amenities will all be seriously affected.

Road network

I object to the plan on the grounds of the impact to the local road network, which I do not believe has been adequately addressed. In respect of the proposals for development at Wisley Airfield and for an upgrade the current A3 junction at Burntcommon to a full 4-way junction, SCC traffic modelling anticipates increased use of Guilesshall Lane, Hungry Hill Lane and Tithebarns Lane for traffic accessing the A3 at Burntcommon in order to travel to Guildford and beyond. The SCC report states that “consequently, it indicates that further thought may have to be given to managing traffic in this area as part of a transport assessment should the development be progressed”. It appears that the Plan is proposing a strategic site at Wisley Airfield without even knowing what improvements to the local road infrastructure will be required. If that is the case for Wisley Airfield, then it is almost inevitably true for the proposed developments in East and West Horsley as well.

Pollution

I object to the plan on the grounds of the increased pollution it will cause. The large increase in volume of traffic will cause an increase in air pollution, an issue that is already a cause for concern in several areas in the Borough.

Housing. The building lots of new houses on greenfield sites will make little or no difference to the price of homes in the GBC area unless the number is extreme. There will always be more demand than supply in attractive areas and to try to meet that demand will ultimately destroy the area.

The GLP 2016 is suggesting a huge increase in the size of the village of West Horsley – an increase of 35% in the number of homes. I strongly oppose this policy under the NPPF definition of sustainable development. The Council has not listened to its residents: the housing target is even higher than before. Furthermore, the secretive SHMA calculation used to obtain this figure has not been open to scrutiny even by the Council itself, which demonstrates a shocking lack of democracy and accountability. We are basically being told to put our trust blindly into an outsourced commercial company without knowing if the model or data could be flawed, or if there could be a conflict of interest. For all we know, this company might just be concocting a number out of thin air!

The NPPF and its translation into this document is not really about "growth", but an attempt to put a positive spin on a massive house-building programme to mop up problems with overpopulation and artificial inflation of the housing market. The mantra of "growth" (i.e. economic growth) is still being deliberately confused with increasing population size (i.e. population growth). They are not the same thing. Population growth does not automatically translate to economic growth; in fact the opposite occurs, where the average productivity of individuals in the population falls, which is still currently the case in the UK. There is no reason why boroughs like Guildford have to constantly expand physically in size to be successful. Instead, the responsibility lies with central government to adopt a more targeted national strategy to solve population growth, wealth disparity and housing problems, for example concentrating on areas of the country away from the disproportionately overcrowded South East, where infrastructure is not so heavily oversubscribed, or can be more easily built up.

To put it simply, the borough is severely restricted in both physical expansion and infrastructure by its environment. The town is in a valley split by a river with increasingly active flood plains, surrounded by large swathes of Green Belt, AONB, AGLV and legally protected SPAs and SSSIs. Regulations/principles regarding these areas were put into place specifically for this sort of circumstance: to prevent stupid short-term errors of judgment and stop us from irreversibly destroying the environment and wellbeing of future generations from both a national and international perspective. The proposed strategy does not therefore comply with the NPPF definition of sustainable development - "ensuring that better lives for ourselves don't mean worse lives for future generations", and the guiding principle of "living within the planet's environmental limits" (NPPF Achieving Sustainable Development).

Policy S2: Borough Wide Strategy

This policy sets out the objective of adding 13,860 new homes to Guildford Borough over the 2013-2033 period of the Proposed Submission Local Plan, equating to an annual build of 693 new homes per annum. I have serious concerns about the enormous scale of this building programme, which represents a net increase of 25% in the housing stock of Guildford Borough while official statisticians at the Office of National Statistics ("ONS") are projecting a population increase of some 15% for Guildford Borough over this same period.

The West Surrey Strategic Housing Market Assessment, ("SHMA") takes the estimate of 517 homes per annum that the official statisticians at the ONS and the Department of Communities and Local Government ("DCLG") predict Guildford will require based upon their population and household forecasts and adds another 120 homes per annum to ‘support economic growth’, a further 31 homes per annum to ‘improve affordability’ and 25 homes due to ‘student growth’, all of which totals up to 693 homes per annum target.

This increase is not valid. Economic growth is already factored into the statistics produced by ONS and DCLG, so there is no need to add a further 120 homes; the GBC Affordable Housing Policy H2 proposes that all development sites (other than the very smallest) will be required to have 40% of affordable housing, so there is no need to add another 31 affordable homes per annum. Furthermore, DCLG research has concluded that there is on average a 97% correlation between population growth and household formation. Therefore, if GBC’s target of a 25% increase in housing stock were actually realised, the outcome will be that Guildford Borough would see its population rise by around 25% over this period. This means that the resultant population growth for Guildford Borough would be at a level 67% higher than the official forecasts.

I OBJECT to the impression created in the Proposed Submission Local Plan that GBC’s housing targets are needed to fulfil NPPF requirements or because of central government policy, when in fact the difference between the official statisticians’ forecasts and GBC’s target of a 25% increase in housing stock is entirely a choice made by GBC.

I strongly OBJECT to fact that the method used by GL Hearn to identify the number of new homes required remains out of the public domain – this to me is a serious with holding of information which makes the whole draft Local Plan unsubstantiated, if not just plainly incorrect!

I am also concerned that the infrastructure proposals are inadequate even to meet the needs of what is there at the moment, let alone the proposed developments in the Local Plan.

In conclusion s2

After more than 20,000 responses were submitted in 2014 in connection with the previous draft Local Plan, most of them opposed to its proposals, GBC has made relatively few changes from the earlier version. At the heart of the problem is GBC’s desire to pursue a ‘Forced Growth’ policy which results in highly aggressive and unjustified targets being set for housing development in the Borough. These excessive targets – the proposed 25% increase in housing stock in particular – create a tremendous strain on both land and infrastructure in an already over-crowded and over-stretched part of the country. These targets will also have a material adverse impact on the Metropolitan Green Belt across this area, despite all the political promises made to the contrary. Accordingly I OBJECT to the Proposed Submission Local Plan.

I trust that you will take my views into account, and I would appreciate acknowledgement of receipt of this letter.

I have carefully considered the Proposed Submission Local Plan which Guildford Borough Council ("GBC") has now published for public consultation. My comments are set out in this letter.

I have strong concerns about the Proposed Submission Local Plan and the evidence and assumptions which support it. In particular, I do not agree with the scale of the house building programme which is being proposed by GBC. The target outlined represents a 25% increase in the housing stock of the borough, whilst we note that the Office of National Statistics ("ONS") projects a population increase of some 15% for Guildford Borough over this same period.

I also note that the Proposed Submission Local Plan includes the statement "We will continue to protect the Metropolitan Green Belt". I fully and support this policy. However, unfortunately GBC appears to be in breach of this same policy through the housing policies it has set out in the Proposed Submission Local Plan, whereby some 65% of developments will be made on land that is currently Green Belt.

I is also concerned that the infrastructure proposals are inadequate even to meet the needs of what is there at the moment, let alone the proposed developments in the Local Plan.

I therefore OBJECT to the Proposed Submission Local Plan.

Detailed comments on the six different policy areas which form the basis of the Proposed Submission Local Plan are now set out below, followed by my comments on specific site allocation policies.

I have serious concerns about the enormous scale of this building programme, which represents a net increase of 25% in the housing stock of Guildford Borough, a remarkable rate of increase for a borough in the English Home Counties. It is even more remarkable when the official statisticians at the Office of National Statistics ("ONS") are projecting a population increase of some 15% for Guildford Borough over this same period.

I accordingly OBJECT to the borough housing targets set out in Policy S2.

I do not share the same vision for the future of Guildford Borough as GBC, although I recognise that an enormous volume of work has gone into the preparation of the Proposed Submission Local Plan, which is now out for public consultation.

However, after more than 20,000 responses were submitted in 2014 in connection with the previous draft Local Plan, most of them opposed to its proposals, GBC has made relatively few changes from the earlier version and none of any materiality.

At the heart of the problem is GBC's desire to pursue a 'Forced Growth' policy which results in highly aggressive and unjustified targets being set for housing development in the Borough. These excessive targets - the proposed 25% increase in housing stock in particular - create a tremendous strain on both land and infrastructure in an already over-crowded and over-stretched part of the country.

These targets will also have a material adverse impact on the Metropolitan Green Belt across this area, despite all the political promises made to the contrary. The irony of Policy P2 which states that "We will continue to protect the Metropolitan Green Belt" does not fool anybody.

Accordingly I OBJECT to the Proposed Submission Local Plan.

Please understand that I am not against development and new housing, particularly affordable housing for young families and I understand that there is a real, tangible problem in the country as a whole with housing stocks. However, all development must take place in a balanced and sustainable way and the answer is NOT to identify Green Belt areas near to London which it would appear are "easy targets" for developers. This is the lazy option and is what GBC appears to be doing. The Local Plan MUST take into account the view of local residents and the GBC councillors would do well to remember that they are elected by residents and that they work for the residents whom they should try and represent at all times. To me, it certainly feels that this latest version of the Local Plan is being "bulldozed" through and I would sincerely hope and request that GBC listens to its electorate and responds in a constructive, responsible and ethical way.

I oppose the proposal to build 13,860 houses across the borough as a whole because:

- This figure represents a 25% on housing numbers (based on 2011 census) and is therefore significantly higher than the housing projections of 15% growth and not necessary. I understand that some development is required and desirable but see no justification for building on the green belt and certainly no need to build on the green belt above the current growth projections.

- GBC is allowed to apply constraints to reduce the housing projection figure (i.e. the 15%) based on factors such as Green Belt, which clearly applies in the Guildford Borough. I do not understand why these allowed constraints have not been applied given GBC’s pledge to protect the Green Belt and the overwhelming views of residents during the 2014 consultation regarding development of Green Belt.

- Whilst there is a need for some development and particularly for some affordable houses to be built, without a way of stopping owners of affordable houses from extending their properties (and therefore removing them from the “affordable houses” bracket), the whole cycle will start again in 20 years’ time and there will be need to build on more of the Green Belt. There is no need for more 5 bedroom houses in these rural villages and when you are talking about building on a scarce resource, you need to ensure you only build what is needed. This plan includes the building of “affordable houses” in villages such as East and West Horsley, where the term is frankly laughable. These will not be affordable homes.

- The calculations to produce the number of houses required have not been made available to the public and have not even been scrutinised by GBC. I fail to understand how GBC can be putting forward these numbers without being able to confirm that these figures are accurate. Local Government should be transparent and accountable to the taxpayer, but for some reason, GBC clearly considers itself exempt from this. GBC’s integrity is undermined by its inability to show its residents how it arrived by these very important figures and it’s patronising to your residents to suggest we don’t need to know.

Specifically in West Horsley, I oppose the proposal to increase housing numbers by 385 or by 35%

- It’s not clear why West Horsley is being picked on, with such a massive increase in housing numbers. However, it’s obvious to everyone that if you take a village with only 1,111 houses and put another 385 houses there, this will significantly change the character and look of the village from what currently makes it such a desirable place to live. Everyone understands that more housing is needed and that all parts of the county need to take their fair share but it’s not morally acceptable to put so much of this housing in one small, rural village. This represents a percentage increase of 35%, far greater than any other single area within the borough, yet in the introduction to the DLP, GBC has specifically said what a lovely place to live Surrey is and how important it is to protect this and referenced its Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty. West Horsley has the AONB within its boundaries and is so rural and unspoilt it seems madness to give this small village the largest percentage of houses across the borough.

- Note to the Planning Inspector - I would ask that the Planning Inspector takes a drive through West Horsley to understand its character (small, rural village, 89% of it is in the Green Belt, no Post Office, one village shop which has been sold and is likely to be gone by September) before taking a decision regarding the proposed development areas for West Horsley. Whilst I appreciate you cannot visit the whole of Surrey to consider this, West Horsley has been given an exceptionally high percentage of the proposed housing, far higher than any other village and more than 3 times what was being suggested for Guildford Town Centre. It is important you understand what you are signing off and what you are ruining and the only way you can see this is to see for yourself. I do not see how anyone could allow for such a heavy burden to fall on one small village when compared with the allocation elsewhere across the borough

It is totally unacceptable that Guildford is choosing not to constrain its overall housing growth, as many other Councils have done to protect Green Belt. The objectively assessed housing target, though reduced since 2016 to 12,466 homes, will by 2034 (the end of the Plan Period) mean that Guildford has grown by nearly 25%. This is nearly double the Office for National Statistics prediction for the growth of Guildford.

GBC planis based on 25% required increase in housingstock where as ONS forecast an increase of 15% over this period. GBC appears to double count the new affordable housing needed in the borough so in effect adds at least 8% to their overall prediction. The removal of the development in the Flexford/Normandy area is to be welcomed (see page 22). The tables on page 30 show a welcome reduction in the number of additional homes, but appear to just be "putting off the evil day" by reducing the numbers in the short term, but increasing those further down the line - in my view Guildford does not need to expand to this extent, which will fundamentally change the borough and put ridiculous pressure on an already overstretched infrastructure. Guildford has long been a commuter town for senior staff from the City of London, but the impact of Brexit is likely to reduce the workforce in the City, and hence lower demand for substantial properties in Guildford.

1. I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

1. The borough wide strategy is poorly considered; proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

1. The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

1. The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the "West Surrey" tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, "West Surrey" is much too small. Half of Guildford borough's residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside "West Surrey". Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it.

The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make "West Surrey" reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guildford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour's "need". Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey's 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick's Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result in coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisely Airfield (A35), Garlick's Arch (A 43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

The SHMA predicts a growth of some 25% in the housing stock over the plan period. This far exceeds the population increase envisaged by the ONS, which is nearer 15%. GBC has not published the basis for the SHMA calculations, but in view of the large discrepancy with official figures there is reasonable doubt that the figures used to inform the LP are accurate. It is more likely that they are excessive and that the real demand for housing will be significantly less than assumed by GBC.

I am writing to object to the local plan.

There are many areas of the plan that concern me but the complexity of the process naturally works against the average person in the street like myself. It is hard not to conclude that there is not some method in said process in that regard.

On that basis i cannot fight all the points. So i will list some concerns that i see in my domain but i would register here that they likely apply across all areas affected by the plan.

So there you have it and quite frankly i have not even mentioned Brexit and the likely implications on population growth. At the very least a pause is required to watch the impact over the next few years but again i object because the Plan seems flawed at many levels.

The scale of the housing number proposed in this plan, inevitably increases the onus for the plan to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number of 5,000 homes over the plan period, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

I am gravely concerned that GBC have failed to grasp the opportunity of following clear government policy to develop in the urban area on previously developed sites. Many of these sites are in their ownership and it would seem a practical and readily achievable alternative which is much more acceptable to local residents.

In my opinion much of the proposed local plan appears out of date and based on old thinking. Current trends in terms of property development such as the marked decline in town centre shopping centres with increased internet procurement and the need to create modal shift by developing residential uses close to transport hubs appear to have been overlooked. The budget for infrastructure requirements is just not available and development on the scale proposed will create gridlock and companies will leave the area due to the traffic congestion and added pollution arising as a result.

I object to policy S2 the Borough Wide Strategy and the commitment to build 13,860 homes based on the Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) 2015 prepared by GL Hearn.

The OAN “objectively assessed need” figure in the SHMA of 693 homes a year is far too high

I am very surprised and concerned that GBC have adopted the OAN of 13,860 homes as the housing target without any application of constraints as required under the National Planning Policy Framework and the National Planning Policy Guidance. The scale of the housing number proposed, inevitably increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

Other local planning authorities appear to take a more balanced view in their approach to planning. The Woking Core Strategy 2012 applies a constraint of 50% from the 594 new homes identified in their own SHMA. “It should be noted that local evidence (Strategic Housing Market Assessment - SHMA) highlights a need for an additional 499 new affordable homes every year in the Borough and a total of 594 new homes every year when taking into account demand. Given the level of environmental constraints present in the Borough, it is considered that the provision of an average of 292 dwellings per annum represents a reasonable level of housing growth for Woking and is deliverable.”

Historically GBC have correctly applied constraints on housing numbers to protect the Green Belt. The Surrey Structure Plan 1994 advocated a general slowing down in the rates of development “because of the environmental constraints which exist in the County, including Green Belt”. This slowing down was reflected in the requirement that Guildford Borough should accommodate a net increase of 3,800 dwellings between 1991 and 2006. This was a lower rate of development than in previous years. It is interesting to note that the Structure Plan at that time expected sufficient land to arise within the urban areas to accommodate this requirement.

However it would appear that today GBC have effectively ignored the real potential of the urban area to provide for housing. At the same time GBC have adopted a radically different approach to the policy of the Council over the last 20/30 years and are now ignoring government policy in relation to the Green Belt.

A detailed and comprehensive professional review of the SHMA dated June 2016 by NMSS an independent expert firm dealing with housing and demographics procured by Guildford Residents Association (GRA) has concluded that the OAN figure should be revised down from 693 homes per annum to 510 homes per annum.

The 41 page report by NMSS which can be found on the GRA website entitled “A Review of the West Surrey SHMA as it relates to the Objectively Assessed Housing Needs of Guildford”. It was a real community effort. It was paid for by over separate 20 Guildford Residents Associations and Local Parish Councils none of whom were convinced that the SHMA report procured and presented by GBC was accurate or transparent or accessible in a meaningful way. So they clubbed together and collected contributions from many hundreds of Guildford residents to try to find out the truth of the housing need figure presented in the Local Plan.
The NMSS report includes detailed analysis and financial modelling and was prepared by Neil McDonald who we were lucky to find. He is a niche consultant with the right skills and a national reputation. An independent adviser and commentator on housing demographics. He works with local authorities and others on the estimation of housing need and related issues. He was a civil servant and policy adviser to Ministers for over 30 years, the last 10 advising on housing and planning issues within the Department of Communities and Local Government. His 7 years as a Director at DCLG included a posting as Director, Planning Policy and a period as Chief Executive of the National Housing and Planning Advice Unit.

NMSS found that the SHMA used in the Local Plan incorrectly adds extra homes to its basic demographic projection to allow for improving affordability of housing, increased student numbers and economic growth. The report found that none of these additions were justified based on the evidence presented within the SHMA. The report concluded amongst other matters that:

- The affordability of housing in Guildford is no worse than in other Surrey districts and boosting supply beyond the demographic OAN would not result in a noticeable improvement in affordability but simply in more people moving to the area.
- There are reasons for believing that the SHMA’s estimate of the number of homes needed for students may be too high and that an adequate provision for students is already included in the demographic OAN. The report advises that the Council should commission a separate student housing need figure for Guildford given the distorting effect of students on our overall OAN. It envisages that, once this exercise is undertaken, improved accuracy means the overall OAN would be likely to reduce still further.
- The SHMA seeks to estimate the number of homes needed to support employment growth using employment rate assumptions that are inconsistent with the employment forecasts. This produces misleading results. An analysis of the Cambridge Econometrics and Oxford Economics forecasts using employment or economic activity rate assumptions consistent with the forecasts suggests that in neither case is there a need to provide more housing than suggested by the demographic analysis. Indeed, in both cases a smaller population growth (and hence fewer homes) could support the jobs growth that is forecast.

A further independent report was procured in 2016 by the Campaign for the Protection of Rural England CPRE from Richard Bate of Green Balance, an independent consultancy with expertise in demographic and housing matters to carry out a review of the GL Hearn SHMA

The report by Green Balance runs to 37 pages and its findings are that the OAN for homes in Guildford should be reduced from 693 per annum to 481 because:

1. the vacancy rate figures should be taken from local government annual records rather than from the 2011 Census. This would reduce vacancy rates to 2.9% in Guildford.
2. there should be no increase for affordability above basic demographic change.
3. there should be no increase for Student housing and it was considered unrealistic that the University should be allowed to exert such substantial pressure on the domestic housing market.
4. the use of employment-led forecasts should be abandoned using purely household projections instead which are more reliable as a form of prediction.

Two completely independent expert reports are surprisingly consistent in their findings. In broad terms a figure of approximately 500 homes per annum would appear to be a correct estimate of OAN for Guildford. However, this is before constraints are applied to arrive at an acceptable housing target. A further study is attached which is included within this section by reference.

It is unacceptable that demographic and economic model assumptions have been withheld by GBC and cannot be checked making the process unaccountable.

The figure of 13,860 new homes is unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinised by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA.
Both the National Planning Policy Framework and National Planning Policy Guidance provide a clear policy direction that the overall housing target should be reduced by a variety of constraints to take account of protected wildlife areas (e.g. Thames Basin Heath SPA), landscape areas (Surrey Hills AONB), Green Belt, flood risk and significant infrastructure constraints, all of which apply to Guildford. This local plan and the SHMA number have completely ignored these factors. We have corrected this omission below. Infrastructure policies should be planned at the same time as Local Plans but in this case they have effectively been left out and are not sufficiently developed.

The Framework also makes clear that, once established, Green Belt boundaries should only be altered in exceptional circumstances, through the preparation or review of the Local Plan.

Unmet housing need (including for traveller sites) is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt and other harm to constitute the “very special circumstances” justifying inappropriate development on a site within the Green Belt.

THE NEED TO APPLY CONSTRAINTS

I object to the Local Plan in its failure to apply constraints.

Ministerial guidance in relation to building on the Green Belt is clear:

1. “the single issue of unmet need - is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt and other harm to constitute the “very special circumstances” justifying inappropriate development in the Green Belt” - Nick Boles to Sir Paul Beresford MP 7th February 2014.

2. “we were always very clear that we would maintain key protections for the countryside, and, in particular, for the Green Belt. The Framework makes it clear that a Green Belt boundary may be altered only in exceptional circumstances and reiterates the importance and permanence of the Green Belt” – Nick Boles to Sir Michael Pitt, Planning Inspectorate 3rd March 2014.

3. “Planning Guidance, updated in March 2014, also states that unmet housing need is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt to constitute the very special circumstances justifying inappropriate development within the Green Belt” – Nick Boles to Sir Paul Beresford MP 18th June 2014

4. “Many people contact me about development on the Green Belt, particularly when it on land near our villages. I am exceptionally fond of the British countryside. While it is up to local authorities to determine the development of new homes through local plans, I would like to reassure you that the Government is acting to protect the Green Belt from inappropriate development.

National planning policy is explicit that key protections such as the Green Belt cannot automatically be overridden by the presumption in favour of sustainable development.

Planning policy also guarantees strong protection for National Parks, Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty and Sites of Special Scientific Interest. Powers have also been given to councils to resist unwanted garden grabbing and to protect valuable local green spaces. The Green Belt now also enjoys greater protection against erosion from caravan and traveller sites.

I am proud that the Government has also abolished every single one of Labour’s top-down Regional Strategies that sought to remove the Green Belt around 30 different towns and cities. Latest statistics show that the level of Green Belt development is now at its lowest rate since modern records began in 1989.

I further welcome plans to ensure that planning permission is in place on 90 per cent of suitable brownfield sites by 2020. This will ensure that development is prioritised on brownfield sites rather than at the expense of our countryside.

June 7, 2016 Brandon Lewis"

70% of the sites put forward in the Local Plan are in the Green Belt which flies in the face of current government planning policy. The National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF), National Planning Policy Guidance and case law make it clear that Green Belt is an absolute constraint on housing supply. Exceptional circumstances need to be shown to adjust boundaries.

Other constraints under the NPPF include assessments of sustainability, strategic flood risk assessment, physical constraints on land use and infrastructure constraints (this can include road congestion, schools, drains, power supply and medical requirements).

Constraints should be applied to the Objectively Assessed Housing Need (OAN). However this itself is overstated and should be reduced from 693 per annum to 500.

In view of the comments above it would appear logical to apply CONTRAINTS in line with government policy to a corrected OAN. of approximately 50% to account for the fact that 89% of the borough is in the permanent Green Belt and development is not supported by adequate major infrastructure. This reduction is in line with the constraints percentage of 50% applied by Woking Borough Council.

This would result in a more acceptable and practically achievable HOUSING TARGET of 250 homes per annum which over a 20-year period would be 5,000 homes. All of these homes could be built in the existing urban brownfield areas of the borough and would in part satisfy the 20,000 objections made by residents to the 2014 draft plan and also relieve the additional problems of inadequate infrastructure.

It would also mean that there is currently 8.5 years supply of housing (2131/250) which is made up of existing permissions granted (1,518) and completions made (613) during 2013/2015. (Monitoring Report by GBC 2015)

Whilst I have many significant objections to the GBC Local Plan I applaud the policy statement by GBC in their Monitoring Report, “We will continue to monitor the use of previously developed land, and continue to identify as many opportunities as possible for redevelopment of previously developed land.” We believe it will be to the benefit of all residents if GBC can apply themselves vigorously to this endeavour in order to protect the Green Belt.

GREEN BELT SITES

I object to ALL Green Belt sites allocated for development in the local plan

I object to the identification and allocation of sites in this plan without regard to Green Belt, infrastructure or other constraints. The plan says that “allocating these sites does not grant planning permission for development, however, it does identify the principle of development and uses.” This ignores the tens of thousands of detailed comments the Council have received about individual sites ever since the Issues and Options consultation in 2013. This amounts to a war of attrition by the Council in conjunction with developers, since many busy residents are sick and tired of repeating the same comments to deaf ears. The plan has hardly changed since the Council received 20,000 objections to its first draft plan in 2014.13 other than proposed sites have, despite the high level of objections, become Strategic Sites!

There is no need for housing on these sites because the local plan housing target is incorrect and inflated and ignores constraints.

All Green Belt sites should be removed from the plan until “exceptional circumstances” for development are proven, as stipulated repeatedly in the NPPF. The Green Belt should trump short-term considerations such as perceived housing need, as case law has established.

6 POLICY S2 PLANNING FOR THE BOROUGH

6.1 I object to the amended policy S2 the Borough Wide Strategy and the commitment to build 12,426 homes based on the Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) 2017 prepared by GL Hearn because it has not addressed many of the 32,000 objections made to the 2016 plan.

6.2 The OAN “objectively assessed need” figure of 12,426 is far too high

6.3 I am very surprised and concerned that GBC have adopted the OAN of 12,426 homes as the housing target without any application of constraints as required under the National Planning Policy Framework and the National Planning Policy Guidance. The scale of the housing number proposed, inevitably increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

6.4 Other local planning authorities appear to take a more balanced view in their approach to planning. The Woking Core Strategy 2012 applies a constraint of 50%.

6.5 Historically GBC have correctly applied constraints on housing numbers to protect the Green Belt. The Surrey Structure Plan 1994 advocated a general slowing down in the rates of development “because of the environmental constraints which exist in the County, including Green Belt”. This slowing down was reflected in the requirement that Guildford Borough should accommodate a net increase of 3,800 dwellings between 1991 and 2006. This was a lower rate of development than in previous years. It is interesting to note that the Structure Plan at that time expected sufficient land to arise within the urban areas to accommodate this requirement.
6.6 However it would appear that today GBC have effectively ignored the real potential of the urban area to provide for housing. At the same time GBC have adopted a radically different approach to the policy of the Council over the last 20/30 years and are now ignoring government policy in relation to the Green Belt.

6.7 A detailed and comprehensive professional review of the SHMA dated June 2017 by NMSS an independent expert firm dealing with housing and demographics procured by Guildford Residents Association (GRA) has concluded that the OAN figure should be revised down from 560 homes per annum to 400 homes per annum.

6.8 The 19 page report by NMSS which can be found on the GRA website entitled “Review of GL Hearn’s Guildford Addendum to the West Surrey SHMA”. It was a real community effort. It was paid for by over separate 20 Guildford Residents Associations and Local Parish Councils none of whom were convinced that the SHMA report procured and presented by GBC was accurate or transparent or accessible in a meaningful way. So they clubbed together and collected contributions from many hundreds of Guildford residents to try to find out the truth of the housing need figure presented in the Local Plan.

6.9 The NMSS report includes detailed analysis and financial modelling and was prepared by Neil McDonald who is a niche consultant with the right skills and a national reputation. An independent adviser and commentator on housing demographics. He works with local authorities and others on the estimation of housing need and related issues. He was a civil servant and policy adviser to Ministers for over 30 years, the last 10 advising on housing and planning issues within the Department of Communities and Local Government. His 7 years as a Director at DCLG included a posting as Director, Planning Policy and a period as Chief Executive of the National Housing and Planning Advice Unit.

6.10 The NMSS recent study has found that the latest SHMA update by GL Hearn 2017 over estimates population growth for Guildford.

6.11 The report shows that an indication of the scale of the problem can be obtained directly from the ONS’s own data. Their estimates of births, deaths and population flows into and out of Guildford suggest that the population should have grown by 15,000 between the 2001 and 2011 censuses. The censuses, however, record a population growth of only 7,800. The discrepancy is over 90% of the population change indicated by the censuses.

6.12 The analysis in the NMSS report demonstrates that the errors must be in the population flows in age groups in which there are significant numbers of students. They are almost certainly the result of the under-recording of the numbers of students leaving Guildford each year.

6.13 If the projections are based on under-estimates of the number of students leaving the district each year, they will assume that people will be living in the area who will in fact have left. This means that they will over-estimate the likely growth in Guildford’s population. The ONS’s projections envisage that the population will grow by 21,700 between 2015 and 2034. However, if the estimates of past migration flows are adjusted to make them consistent with the census figures, this could fall to 13,000. As a consequence, the demographically-based estimate of the number of homes needed would be 400 homes a year (2015-34), not 580.

6.14 70% of the sites put forward in the Local Plan are still in the Green Belt which flies in the face of current government planning policy. The National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF), National Planning Policy Guidance and case law make it clear that Green Belt is an absolute constraint on housing supply. Exceptional circumstances need to be shown to adjust boundaries.

6.15 Other constraints under the NPPF include assessments of sustainability, strategic flood risk assessment, physical constraints on land use and infrastructure constraints (this can include road congestion, schools, drains, power supply and medical requirements).

6.16 Constraints should be applied to the Objectively Assessed Housing Need (OAN). However this itself is overstated and should be reduced from 580 per annum to 400.

6.17 I object to the fact that GBC have not used the guidance available to reduce the number of houses they propose.

6.18 GBC has not taken into account the possibility of lowering the required number of houses by adhering to the restraints offered in various papers. Government guidelines, even before the publication of the Paper, quoted below say that if a Council cannot supply sufficient houses without impinging on the Green Belt, then they do not have to build so many houses.

6.19 GBC have gone against the NPPF as they are not adhering to the ruling that Local Plans must plan positively to seek opportunities that meet objectively assessed development needs and be flexible enough to adapt to rapid change unless any adverse impact of doing so would significantly outweigh the benefits or specific policies in the NPPF which suggest that development should be restricted.

6.20 House of Commons Briefing Paper ; Planning for Housing no 03741, 14 June 2017. Guidance on taking account of constraints. “Need alone, is not the only factor to be considered when drawing up a Local Plan”. This includes “land designated as Green Belt” and “SSSIs”.

6.21 “The framework makes clear that once established Green Belt boundaries should only be altered in exceptional circumstances” and “should take into account any constraints such as Green Belt, which indicate that development should be restricted and which may restrain the ability of an authority to meet its need.” (P d055 ref ID.3-045-20141006)

6.22 In view of the comments above it would appear logical to apply CONSTRAINTS in line with government policy to a corrected OAN, of approximately 50% to account for the fact that 89% of the borough is in the permanent Green Belt and development is not supported by adequate major infrastructure. This reduction is in line with the constraints percentage of 50% applied by Woking Borough Council.

6.23 This would result in a more acceptable and practically achievable HOUSING TARGET of 200 homes per annum which over a 20-year period would be 4,000 homes.

6.24 All of these homes could be built in the existing urban brownfield areas of the borough and would in part satisfy the 32,000 objections made by residents to the 2016 draft plan and also relieve the additional problems of inadequate infrastructure.

Policy S2 - Borough Wide Strategy

I object to the proposal to build 13,860 new homes:

The projections for economic and population growth should be revised downwards especially in view of Brexit.

The West Surrey Housing Market Area is too small and adjacent districts of Rushmoor and Mole Valley are outside the area. The area is artificial and the absence of a suitable alternative doesn't make 'West Surrey' reliable. There is a highly lopsided distribution of proposed developments in Surrey.

The assumptions and calculations are hidden and are using a model belonging to consultants that are openly pro development.

The plan fails to set a housing target of new homes or explain how this relates to housing need. It exceeds the 13,860 total.
If a lower number were proposed it would remove the need to build on the Green Belt.

I am writing in response to the document referenced above ("the Document") issued by Guildford Borough Council ("GBC") for public consultation. While I recognise and accept that some development should happen, I consider very strongly that development should be in proportion to population needs, in keeping with the areas in which it occurs, and carried out in a way which benefits the areas concerned rather than having an adverse impact on those areas.

I would particularly like to address the following items included in GBC’s Document:

The policy sets out the objective of adding 13,860 new homes to Guildford Borough over the 2013 – 2033 period of the Document. This is 693 new homes per annum and represents a net increase of 25% in the housing stock of Guildford Borough. This appears completely disproportionate given the Office of National Statistics is projecting a population increase of 15% for Guildford Borough over this same period. For West Horsley, the proposals would represent an increase of 35% on existing households which is greater than any other area within the borough.

Further, given the recent Brexit vote there is undoubtedly huge uncertainty over the extent of population growth in the medium term. The population growth figures were produced before the Brexit vote. It is unlikely that there will be any clarity at all on the medium term impacts of Brexit on housing need for a few years. It would therefore seem far more appropriate to adopt a flexible approach to development over the next 15 years, with some development immediately to address known housing needs and a more staggered approach to development over the medium to long term so that the development can more accurately meet the need. This would be far more preferable than huge scale development now which ultimately simply isn’t required.

I consider development over the period of the Local Plan should at the most be commensurate with the overall projected growth for the borough however this should be managed in a flexible manner, with a ‘softer start’ than the Plan proposes, given the very significant uncertainty in the medium and long term population projections caused by the Brexit vote. I also urge GBC to ensure new development in any given village is proportional to the Borough’s need and in keeping with the existing environment, rather than disproportionately over or under developing in any given village.

I object to the housing targets set out in Policy S2

I object to the disproportionate allocation of housing in this particular part of the borough. Indeed, over 23% of the Plan’s new housing is proposed in the immediate localities of Ockham, Ripley, Send and the Horsleys (of which 65% is allocated to FWA/TFM, an area that at present has only 0.3% of the population of GBC).

I object to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2) as this is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite significantly.

The housing number appears to be based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial as are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guildford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”.

Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

As a business owner as well as resident, I recognize the need for affordable housing but the Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London’s commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability and so will not benefit my staff or the local economy. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

6. New houses, schools and services should be developed in or adjacent to areas of actual demand and not in relatively remote areas which inevitably and unnecessarily result in major increases in travel requirements from home to work, work to home, home to school, etc.

7. The proposed allocation of housing in the north east of the Borough particularly Ockham, Ripley, Send and the Horsleys is a prime example of locating supply impractically far from the areas of demand, and is totally disproportionate to allocations elsewhere in the Borough.

I would like to object to the inclusion of the Wisley Airfield and Garlick Arch/ Send Marsh sites as housing development areas in the local plan. Both sites are clearly designated as Green Belt and designed to stop the ribbon development of Greater London down the A3 all the way to Guildford. The addition of 2100 accommodation units at Wisley Airfield and a further 400 at Send Marsh would add an unacceptable number of vehicles onto an already overcrowded road network in the area. The A3/M25 junction is routinely at a standoff particularly when the M25 has a traffic jam on the Leatherhead to Woking section of the motorway. Ripley is also a bottleneck and the centre would clog up with the additional traffic. I am not sure how the addition of an additional slip road off the A3 would do anything apart from making the situation worse in Ripley.

I OBJECT to this policy.

13,860 homes are proposed. This number has not been scrutinised by councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden. It is not reasonable to produce unsubstantiated numbers in order to justify major structural change in a widely protected area (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB, approx. 75% protected by SPA). It is inappropriate to allocate this housing number, either over the plan period OR across projected sites, when the number itself is unsubstantiated. External consultants and members of the public have provided detailed criticisms of the model. IF the housing number were substantially lower, and only met housing need, there would be no need to build on Green Belt or open countryside. The number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permission, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds 13,860. Guildford residents would not accept building homes on open countryside to meet Woking’s designated “need” but this seems to be implied.

I have 5 objections to the proposal to build 13,860 new homes:
1. The number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

2. The number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any commonsense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market. These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guildford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

3. The figure of 13,860 new homes is unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinised by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. The Council say we should trust the contractors’ model because it is used by a large number of other local authorities. Wide usage, however, does not confer objectivity. Guildford’s OAN would fail the basic transparency test even if the methodology used were a universally admired ‘gold standard’. But it is not: it belongs to consultants whose website openly proclaim their pro-development agenda, leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. External experts and members of the public have provided detailed critiques of the model. Its most fatal flaw, however, is that it has not been disclosed – not even to the authors of the plan, who have taken it on trust. This is irrational and unsound.

4. The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The plan fails to set a Housing Target of new homes to be built, or explain how this relates to the “Objectively Assessed Number” (OAN) for housing need. Elsewhere, the Council have said that the two are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. But they also say that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. In contravention of the NPPF, the plan fails to address these. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permission, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN were not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

5. It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

1. I object to the amended policy S2 the Borough Wide Strategy and the commitment to build 12,426 homes based on the Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) 2017 prepared by GL Hearn because it has not addressed many of the 32,000 objections made to the 2016 plan.

2. The OAN “objectively assessed need” figure of 12,426 is far too high.

3. I am very surprised and concerned that GBC have adopted the OAN of 12,426 homes as the housing target without any application of constraints as required under the National Planning Policy Framework and the National Planning Policy Guidance. The scale of the housing number proposed, inevitably increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

4. Other local planning authorities appear to take a more balanced view in their approach to planning. The Woking Core Strategy 2012 applies a constraint of 50%.

5. Historically GBC have correctly applied constraints on housing numbers to protect the Green Belt. The Surrey Structure Plan 1994 advocated a general slowing down in the rates of development “because of the environmental constraints which exist in the County, including Green Belt”. This slowing down was reflected in the requirement that Guildford Borough should accommodate a net increase of 3,800 dwellings between 1991 and 2006. This was a lower rate of development than in previous years. It is interesting to note that the Structure Plan at that time expected sufficient land to arise within the urban areas to accommodate this requirement.

6. However it would appear that today GBC have effectively ignored the real potential of the urban area to provide for housing. At the same time GBC have adopted a radically different approach to the policy of the Council over the last 20/30 years and are now ignoring government policy in relation to the Green Belt.

7. A detailed and comprehensive professional review of the SHMA dated June 2017 by NMSS an independent expert firm dealing with housing and demographics procured by Guildford Residents Association (GRA) has concluded that the OAN figure should be revised down from 560 homes per annum to 400 homes per annum.

8. The 19 page report by NMSS which can be found on the GRA website entitled “Review of GL Hearn’s Guildford Addendum to the West Surrey SHMA”. It was a real community effort. It was paid for by over separate 20 Guildford Residents Associations and Local Parish Councils none of whom were convinced that the SHMA report procured and presented by GBC was accurate or transparent or accessible in a meaningful way. So they clubbed together and collected contributions from many hundreds of Guildford residents to try to find out the truth of the housing need figure presented in the Local Plan.

9. The NMSS report includes detailed analysis and financial modelling and was prepared by Neil McDonald who we were lucky to find. He is a niche consultant with the right skills and a national reputation. An independent adviser and commentator on housing demographics. He works with local authorities and others on the estimation of housing need and related issues. He was a civil servant and policy adviser to Ministers for over 30 years, the last 10 advising on housing and planning issues within the Department of Communities and Local Government. His 7 years as a Director at DCLG included a posting as Director, Planning Policy and a period as Chief Executive of the National Housing and Planning Advice Unit.

10. The NMSS recent study has found that the latest SHMA update by GL Hearn 2017 over estimates population growth for Guildford.

11. The report shows that an indication of the scale of the problem can be obtained directly from the ONS’s own data. Their estimates of births, deaths and population flows into and out of Guildford suggest that the population should have grown by 15,000 between the 2001 and 2011 censuses. The censuses, however, record a population growth of only 7,800. The discrepancy is over 90% of the population change indicated by the censuses.

12. The analysis in the NMSS report demonstrates that the errors must be in the population flows in age groups in which there are significant numbers of students. They are almost certainly the result of the under-recording of the numbers of students leaving Guildford each year.

13. If the projections are based on under-estimates of the number of students leaving the district each year, they will assume that people will be living in the area who will in fact have left. This means that they will over-estimate the likely growth in Guildford’s population. The ONS’s projections envisage that the population will grow by 21,700 between 2015 and 2034. However, if the estimates of past migration flows are adjusted to make them consistent with the census figures, this could fall to 13,000. As a consequence, the demographically-based estimate of the number of homes needed would be 400 homes a year (2015-34), not 580.

14. 70% of the sites put forward in the Local Plan are still in the Green Belt which flies in the face of current government planning policy. The National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF), National Planning Policy Guidance and case law make it clear that Green Belt is an absolute constraint on housing supply. Exceptional circumstances need to be shown to adjust boundaries.

15. Other constraints under the NPPF include assessments of sustainability, strategic flood risk assessment, physical constraints on land use and infrastructure constraints (this can include road congestion, schools, drains, power supply and medical requirements).

16. Constraints should be applied to the Objectively Assessed Housing Need (OAN). However this itself is overstated and should be reduced from 580 per annum to 400.

17. I object to the fact that GBC have not used the guidance available to reduce the number of houses they propose.

18. GBC has not taken into account the possibility of lowering the required number of houses by adhering to the restraints offered in various papers. Government guidelines, even before the publication of the Paper, quoted below say that if a Council cannot supply sufficient houses without impinging on the Green Belt, then they do not have to build so many houses.

19. GBC have gone against the NPPF as they are not adhering to the ruling that Local Plans must plan positively to seek opportunities that meet objectively assessed development needs and be flexible enough to adapt to rapid change unless any adverse impact of doing so would significantly outweigh the benefits or specific policies in the NPPF which suggest that development should be restricted.

20. House of Commons Briefing Paper ; Planning for Housing no 03741, 14 June 2017. Guidance on taking account of constraints. “Need alone, is not the only factor to be considered when drawing up a Local Plan”. This includes “land designated as Green Belt” and “SSSIs”.

21. “The framework makes clear that once established Green Belt boundaries should only be altered in exceptional circumstances” and “should take into account any constraints such as Green Belt, which indicate that development should be restricted and which may restrain the ability of an authority to meet its need.” (P d055 ref ID.3-045-20141006)

22. In view of the comments above it would appear logical to apply CONSTRAINTS in line with government policy to a corrected OAN. of approximately 50% to account for the fact that 89% of the borough is in the permanent Green Belt and development is not supported by adequate major infrastructure. This reduction is in line with the constraints percentage of 50% applied by Woking Borough Council.

23. This would result in a more acceptable and practically achievable HOUSING TARGET of 200 homes per annum which over a 20-year period would be 4,000 homes.

24. All of these homes could be built in the existing urban brownfield areas of the borough and would in part satisfy the 32,000 objections made by residents to the 2016 draft plan and also relieve the additional problems of inadequate infrastructure

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Attached documents:
1. I OBJECT to the boundaries for both East and West Horsley being extended, thus encroaching on the Green Belt. This, despite GBC's statement that it will 'continue to protect the green belt'.

1. I OBJECT to the number and density of dwellings being proposed for the Horsleys. The number of dwellings will significantly increase the size of the villages which the infrastructure is unable to support. The density of the proposed dwellings is also out of keeping with the scale of the rest of the villages and is detrimental to their rural and historic character.

1. I OBJECT also to the proposed development of the Wisley airfield site. This is a totally inappropriate development within the Metropolitan Green Belt area which should be protected. The need for 2000 dwellings has not been justified and will place untenable strain on local services which has been well documented.

In conclusion I urge that the character of the Horsleys and above all the Green Belt should be protected as they currently stand. We owe it to future generations to preserve them. We will not know what we have lost - one could say 'squandered' until they have gone.

I object to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.
These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guildford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”.

Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London’s commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly, in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations.
I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas. The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result in coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

I have major concerns about this proposed development. I consider this proposed development to be a severe contravention of Metropolitan Green Belt policy. It will result in a New Town being created of very low sustainability which will have a major adverse impact on infrastructure across a widespread area, including East and West Horsley.

I object to the proposed development site A35, former Wisley Airfield, due to its adverse impact to the local community and surrounding green belt countryside.

I strongly object to the number of houses identified for provision during the plan period.

Our objection is mainly based on two considerations:

- The total number is based on a flawed Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) for Guildford. The major contributors to the inaccuracy in the numbers are: perceived errors in the net migration figures for the borough; the inclusion of student housing needs which are already accounted for elsewhere in the calculations; inconsistent use of data from disparate sources to calculate the homes needed to support job growth. The detailed argument for this is to be found in Neil McDonald's report of June 2017 entitled "Review of GL Hearn’s Guildford Addendum to the West Surrey SHMA".

- The total housing number resulting from the flawed calculations is then used without any constraints. It is our contention that the target number used should have constraints applied in correcting Objectively Assessed Needs (OAN) to take account of Green Belt, infrastructure and other relevant issues.

Since the target numbers for housing requirements underlie most of the other policies in the proposed Plan, doubts concerning their accuracy mean that much of the current document remains suspect.

1. The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

2. The Housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. Given the result of the EU Referendum this now needs to be reconsidered.

3. The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guildford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result will be a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

I open my response by stating that over 20,000 responses were received by you objecting to the 2014 draft plan, and therefore I object that this plan is not materially different, and that the Consultation Process has not been properly followed. I object to building on the Green Belt because its essential characteristic is its openness and permanence (National Planning Policy Framework paragraph 79). I object to the fact that infrastructure has not been properly assessed and is inadequate to deal with current housing levels - roads, schools and doctors will not be able to cope. In the case of roads, the volume of traffic which currently uses the A247/The Street at peak times makes exiting both from Oak Grange Road and from Clandon Station a difficult and often hazardous occupation. The road itself is narrow in parts, and absolutely not suitable for large vehicles. Yesterday a significant jam was caused by two such vehicles endeavouring to pass each other. The pavement was mounted, emphasising the danger to pedestrians that such vehicles present on this road. The damaging and dangerous effect of the increased volume of traffic which will use the road as a result of the appalling plan that has been presented does not bear thinking about.

I object specifically to proposed building on Gosden Hill Farm on Green Belt designated to prevent West Clandon being swamped by a sprawling urban environment four times its size. I object also to all other strategic sites in the Local Plan. Blackwell Farm, 3 Farms Meadows, Garlick’s Arch, West Horsley and Hog’s Back. All are wholly out of proportion to the surrounding area and none qualify for the exceptional circumstances required for them to be taken out of the Green Belt. Therefore

I OBJECT in the strongest possible terms to the Guildford Borough Proposed Submission Local Plan (June 2016). This Plan is unsustainable, unworkable and, in many provisions, unnecessary.

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

1. The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Cladon & Horsley. I object to the fact that 23% of proposed new housing is to be in Ockham, Ripley and Horsley and 65% of that is to be on FWA, this historic village of 157 residences in Ockham, would be subsumed by over 2000 new urban styled homes.

Policy S2 Borough Wide Strategy

I OBJECT to the proposal to build 13,860 homes in the Borough over the Plan period which leads to a necessity to build in the Green Belt.

The figure of 13,860 has not been properly scrutinised and is based on calculations carried out by consultants whose assumptions are kept secret and are not therefore open to debate. Guildford Borough has 89% Green Belt and a woefully inadequate infrastructure but these constraints on development are completely ignored in setting the figure of 13,860 homes. The figure also ignores homes for which planning permission has already been granted and expected windfall sites.

Since the projected need for new homes is based to a large extent on projected immigration during the Plan period, the figures clearly need to be revised following Brexit.

Many of the new homes are said to be required to accommodate projected student numbers. The University already has planning permissions dating back to 2004 which it has failed to utilise. If accommodation was built in accordance with these existing permissions and if underground car parks replaced surface car parks, students could be accommodated on the university campus and not only would the need for development of Blackwell Farm become redundant but large numbers of affordable homes in the urban area of Guildford would be released where they are most needed.

I have reviewed the Guildford BC plan and attended the open evening at East Horsley Village Hall. I find several matters contained therein unacceptable to me as a resident of West Horsley.

BREXIT: Since the publication of the Guilford BC Local Plan the nation has voted to leave the EU. As a result the number of migrants to England will be substantially reduced. This means that the proposed number of houses to be built within the borough are inaccurate and most probably an overestimate of the numbers that will now be required. The local plan is in effect void and should therefore be put on hold until the negotiation of UK's exit from the European Community has been completed and the future migrant policy and immigrant numbers known.

I therefore object to the proposed numbers of houses GBC are planning.

The National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF): This national policy requires GBC to address and take into consideration the character of our village, West Horsley, and see that future expansion does not spoil the existing quality of residential surrounding in which we live. The proposed density in all the areas on which housing is proposed is totally out with this national policy.

I therefore object to the proposed numbers of houses GBC are planning.

In conclusion it would seem that the estimated requirement numbers for housing are based on an out of date European position and assume that Guildford needs to expand industrially or commercially. That is not the case, Guildford is a viable borough as it stands and its residents would be better served by building starter homes and flats in the centre of the town of Guildford itself.

Guildford Borough–Proposed Submission Local Plan: Strategy and Sites June 2016 Consultation - OBJECTIONS

I am writing to you with objections in regard to the above and request that the following points be taken into account when you are considering the matter.

I have lived in West Horsley for over 20 years and therefore the majority of my comments relate to the specific issues for this particular village.

The points made in this letter are in addition to the points made by Porta Planning in their separate submission on behalf of myself and a group of neighbours.

Density, Quantity and Location of Proposed Homes in West Horsley:

  • I appreciate the pressure on Guildford Borough Council to adopt a deliverable Local Plan for the Borough for the plan period but believe that such housing provision should ideally be located on existing brownfield sites and be located as near as possible to the centres of employment, such as Guildford. The Green Belt is a defining character of Guildford Borough and there should be an insistence that it must be protected as once the Green Belt has gone it can never be reinstated.

- The existing village settlement of West Horsley consists of 1,111 homes, currently low density housing with a considerable range of ages and housing styles. The density of the proposed developments with 385 homes proposed on the four Parish sites within West Horsley and 100 homes proposed on a fifth site in East Horsley, but abutting the West Horsley Parish boundary, will be significantly greater than anywhere currently existing. The Local Plan will considerably enlarge the two village Settlement Areas, as defined in the GBC Local Plan 2003, and the quantity of proposed homes in West Horsley combined with its increased density, is completely out of character with the existing village, where a density of 10 – 15 homes per hectare is much nearer to the norm and more appropriate. I therefore OBJECT to both the quantity of homes and the density proposed for West Horsley in the Guildford Local Plan.

- No sound reasons have been given for the proposed changes for extending the boundaries of the Settlement areas of both East Horsley and West Horsley, which seem to be at the whim of local land owners who are clearly prepared to sell for a traitorous profit and thereby increasing the land available within, and adjacent to, the settlements for the proposed and future additional developments.

- The scale of the increase in proposed new houses, which is an increase of up to 35% on existing West Horsley households, is greater than any other single area in Guildford Borough. This inflated number of new houses proposed arises from a Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) that was generated by a consultant’s mathematical model. This consultant’s model is not revealed in the plan, nor, apparently, has it been revealed to GBC. However, this SHMA target for housing number has then been taken without question and further increased by GBC to give a proposed population increase which is almost 70% higher than official national estimates for population growth in the Borough. I therefore question whether the SHMA is sound and OBJECT to the housing numbers proposed within both the Borough generally and specifically in West Horsley.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Attached documents:
4) I object to the disproportionate allocation of housing in this particular part of the borough. Indeed, over 23% of the Plan’s new housing is proposed in the immediate localities of Ockham, Ripley, Send and the Horsleys (of which 65% is allocated to FWA/TFM, an area that at present has only 0.3% of the population of GBC.

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

1. The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

2. The Housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN Ire not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. The need for the 13,860 new houses proposed is not supported by research or scientific study. In fact the figures supplied by the council appear flawed in many respects and to this day serious questions are yet to be answered on the validity of the model used to calculate the area’s housing need.

I am especially concerned about the damage that will be caused to small local communities, in particular, West Horsley, East Horsley, Normandy, Ockham, Ripley, Send and Clandon. These villages have a rural character with low density housing, which should be protected to differentiate the countryside from the town. The number of new houses proposed for these villages is out of all proportion to the existing settlements.

We wish to object to the Local Plan for the reasons as issued by the Guildford Residents Association (GRA).

We wish it to be noted that from a cynical point of view, it could be a means of reducing appeals on Planning Applications and hence a reduction in the legal costs of Appeals.

It would appear that the only people who would welcome these proposals will be the developers who will see the opportunity to make a 'quick buck' by building on easy green field sites with no thought beyond for the community or the environment - please do not let this happen in this area.

BROWNFIELD AVAILABLE

There is brownfield land available in Guildford town centre which is being earmarked for commercial development rather than for housing. This is enough to meet our real needs for affordable local homes. There are enough vacant commercial sites to cope with genuine business need, and we have enough retail capacity already, so urban brownfield/derelict land should be used for housing. I understand that Surrey University is sitting on permission for 1500+ accommodation units on its own brownfield campus. If the University fulfilled its obligations much Town Centre affordable accommodation would be available for rental/purchase.

2. I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy

a. The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

b. The Housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

c. The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guilford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

2  Sustainable development.

Expansion of our village is unsustainable. We have only one small shop, no post office and a very limited weekdays only bus service. In the 28 years we have lived here, the post office has closed, the local grocery shop is likely to close and there has been a corresponding increase of traffic.

The proposal for 385 properties on the proposed sites is at a much higher density than at present. The number of residents would increase putting extra strain on local services such as roads capacity, drainage, shops parking in East Horsley (both for the station and shops) and schools.

There does, however, continue to be a need for smaller properties as older people want to downsize within the village and young people want to buy.

I object to Policy S2.

I object to the proposed housing figure for the Local Plan to build 13,652 homes at 693 DPA for next 20 years (2013-2033). The housing figure for this plan is unsustainable and the plan does not apply constraints. Local infrastructure will not cope. Paragraph 4.1.12 of the proposed submission Local Plan acknowledges that the number of houses is greater than required. Representations made on behalf of Send Parish Council by Tibbalds Planning and Urban Design consultants illustrate how allocations are made to provide 910 Dwellings Per Annum (DPA) or 131% of the requirement of the SHMA.
According to NPPF guidance Paragraph 47 stipulates that planning authorities should provide for an additional buffer of between 5-20% and based on this advise the figure would be in region of 727-832 DPA. The provision in the GBC Local Plan to build 910 DPA is therefore excessive.

Without applying constraints the housing figure could rise even higher than 13,652 houses when windfall sites are taken into consideration.

Policy S2: Borough Wide Strategy

This policy sets out the objective of adding 13,860 new homes to Guildford Borough over the 2013-2033 period of the Proposed Submission Local Plan, equating to an annual build of 693 new homes per annum.

I OBJECT to the borough housing targets set out in Policy S2 – I have serious concerns about the enormous scale of this building programme, which represents a net increase of 25% in the housing stock of Guildford Borough, a remarkable rate of increase for a borough in the English Home Counties. It is even more remarkable when the official statisticians at the Office of National Statistics (“ONS”) are projecting a population increase of some 15% for Guildford Borough over this same period, which could be challenged further given the results of the recent referendum.

I am writing to comment on the amended local plan as it affects the Horsleys, and the wider area including Wisley airfield and Merrow.

I remain horrified by the level of planning that is suggested and the destructive effect that this will have on the local communities and environment. It appears completely unrealistic with respect to local services and infrastructure and will lead to a dramatic loss in the rural character of the villages and surrounding countryside.

My main concerns are the disproportionate number of houses suggested with the inevitable number of people and cars that this will mean. I have seen no evidence to justify this massive development and loss of protection of this beautiful part of the country. Brownfield development in other areas such as Guildford itself have not been fully exploited, and clearly should come well ahead of this rural destruction.

The prospect of a giant urban sprawl rapidly heading towards a joining of Cobham and Leatherhead with Guildford is horrific and must not be allowed to take place. The local communities will be changed and much of the character will be lost. The countryside needs protection. No one ever tears a town down to give it back to nature. We have to stop this development now.

I am writing in response to the recently published Local Plan. It is however disappointing to note how little, in my opinion, previous consultations appear to have affected this new Plan. While I appreciate that Guildford Borough Council must make proposals for the future, much of what is included in the presented plan would, I believe, destroy the very essence of the Borough and damage the environment for future generations rather than manage, sustain and develop sensitively. My objections are as follows:

There appears to be a continued drive to build over the countryside rather than develop urban areas. Locally it is in Guildford where there is work and where there is a requirement for affordable housing both to buy and lease, and I feel that more can be done in Guildford to maximise its potential for housing development. Building in and developing outlying villages such as the Horsleys will increase traffic, congestion and poor air quality as residents travel to the workplace and for leisure activities. Already this area, and in particular the A246 between East Horsley and Effingham, suffers from terrible traffic problems especially at rush hours when traffic is backed up at a standstill for two or three miles.

The number of proposed houses is completely disproportionate to the area. It seeks to fundamentally change the villages of East and West Horsley without any consideration for their status within conservation zones or the impact on the many Listed properties. There is also a worrying lack of thought for the impact on the infrastructure. There are no proposals to increase medical facilities or schools, to improve rail travel, including parking facilities, for work and leisure commuters, to alleviate traffic congestion, to put in place effective general drainage throughout the village, all of which cause problems already to the residents that will increase exponentially if the Plan is agreed. As I understood it the number of houses proposed in the previous plan was disputed as being well over requirement, yet this NEW Local Plan proposes even more! Factoring in Brexit, surely these figures need to be radically adjusted DOWN. I would also question what constitutes "Affordable Housing". This appears to be undefined and I have a concern that, in this area, this will not realistically be within the budget of the lower paid as we are being led to believe.

To conclude, I believe that this Plan continues to propose far greater build than is required, is unsympathetic to the area in its proposed implementation and I object to it in its present draft.

I would show below several points I wish to raise in Objection to GBC (Guildford Borough Council) Plans in regards to their proposed Borough Draft.

It is of great concern in the way GBC have complied and submitted the '2016 DRAFT LOCAL PLAN' with various late and amended submissions. It should be noted that constitutionally Councils should carry out full 'Due Diligence' prior to and during process of submitting a Local Plan, this should review and identify all potential unprotected areas for development prior to investigating protected areas, this does not appear to have been carried out in this case, as such would be potentially open to 'Judicial Review'.

GBC have not identified or made use of all Brownfield areas and potential unprotected areas which are suitable for development.

I am aware that GBC have removed previously identified potential development sites which are far more suitable and acceptable to try and substantiate other unsuitable areas.

There has been no reasoning for this and is being ignored by GBC, these potential development areas have been working with GBC for several years on these sites, however GBC have now removed them and as such GBC are not fully committed to properly carrying out full 'Due Diligence' on the 'Borough Wide Strategy'.

Specifically:

1. Existing Industrial/Commercial Premises with open Land to the side in Burnt Common - This site offered a substantial increase in Commercial area adjoining the existing as well as potential for residential development between 100-200 homes with suitable infrastructure existing

2. Land adjoining Slyfield Green - This site would both be able to sustain Industrial and Residential development to open land with already Industrial and residential adjoining. GBC also have land available to their existing industrial site.

I am writing to OBJECT to the 2016 draft version of the Local Plan produced by Guildford Borough Council.

The process of compiling the local plan has caused outrage amongst the electorate. 20,000 letters were submitted in during the Sites and Strategies Options Consultation. 95% objected to using Greenbelt land. These views have been ignored and appear to go against the councillors own election promises.

The A3 / M25 is at capacity at peak times and the Highways England Agency are not planning to improve the A3 before 2020. The planned developments will only increase congestion in and around the surrounding villages. It is proposed that 65000 houses (40%of the housing proposed) is built between the M25 & Burpham and I shall concentrate on that area during this letter.

In response to the above plan that was published on the 6th June 2016, I would like to object to this proposal for a number of reasons:

1. The sheer scale of proposed development in West Horsley is The Plan proposes building 385 houses, which is an increase of 35%, in a short period. This is a significantly higher percentage increase in housing than is apparent in surrounding areas, is disproportionate and will damage the unique character and community of the village, irreversibly.
1. The density of the proposed development is significantly greater than anywhere in the area currently and will considerably enlarge the two village settlements thus damaging the character of the village and causing a significant loss of The Plan does not make a responsible or reasonable justification for this level of development.

6. The proposed housing development in West Horsley will have significant ramifications on local infrastructure but when taken in conjunction with all the proposed developments, including the Wisley Airfield and the surrounding area, the vicinity will become overwhelmed with traffic. The Guildford Borough Council Highways Department and those who regularly travel in and around this area will know just how busy the local highways are currently (for example the A3; M25; A246 and many surrounding main and minor roads) and the situation will become intolerable with the additional population associated with the proposed building plan. This will also have an adverse impact on economic development through increased fuel use/cost, time wasted and lack of timely response to business needs, not to mention the adverse environmental impact. It would be far more appropriate to spend money on bringing infrastructure, amenities and services up to an acceptable level for current dwellers before building more houses. The current roadways are in a deplorable condition and will deteriorate further and faster with the increased used that the development plan would bring. It is a major deficiency of The Plan that it does not include infrastructural developments or improvements to amenities and services and so cannot demonstrate for the Authorities that there is a "Presumption in favour of Sustainable Development". The Plan is therefore flawed.

7. There is no demonstrable need for such a level of housing development in West Horsley. Our local Parish Council identified only a limited need for about twenty (20) affordable homes in the village. It is therefore questionable how such large scale housing development is justified. The numbers seem to relate more to developing a plan for the sake of a plan rather than dealing with reality.

8. Taking the whole Plan into account the number of new homes proposed to be built in surrounding villages (some 92% of the total proposed by The Plan) cannot be shown to be sustainable. This will put an intolerable strain on services and amenities which will be unable to cope as a result. Insufficient emphasis has been put on developing land nearer to the town centres which are already well served with communications and amenities. This would also help in the development of town centres which need to be able to attract more people in a sustainable way in order to aspire to be vibrant civil and commercial hubs for the area.

9. It is noted in The Plan that developers "will only be expected" to contribute to transport arrangements for their developments and regrettably this is wholly unsatisfactory as it only appears to be aspirational. You as the Borough Council must be aware of the current capacity constraints in the area and so any housing development MUST take due recognition of this and work on solutions to the difficulties that will be created. In fact there seems to be no mention of this in written policies and only vague statements within the Infrastructure Polices section of The Plan. Overall there is no specified or coherent plan to develop services and infrastructure contained within The Plan and this is a major confounding factor.

10. Another major confounding factor of The Plan is that it was developed at a time when the UK was a Member of the EU. Since its publication circumstances have changed such that it will likely have a profound effect on the need for housing in the UK (witness the current failure of numerous commercial building funds). The Plan should be put into abeyance until the situation is has been clarified.
Overall The Plan does not coherently or practically address housing needs in West Horsley and appears to be driven by a requirement to have a plan in place rather than respecting the need for considerate and sustainable development. No compelling need is shown to inset Green Belt land for the purpose of building new houses, particularly at the level proposed; not enough consideration is given to brown field or other suitable sites nearer to towns where communications are vastly superior compared to the outlying villages; no consideration seems to have been given to developing the appropriate infrastructure and services which is a sine qua non when considering increasing the population of any settlement and the Key Evidence document "Guildford Borough Economic Strategy 2013-2031" makes no rational case for locating large numbers of homes in West and East Horsley or neighbouring villages

I wish to object to this plan for the reasons stated above and furthermore believe that in view of the UK withdrawal from the EU The Plan should be put into abeyance until the situation is clarified and revised accordingly.

The leader of the council Paul Spooner makes reference to "The borough of Guildford is a very special, beautiful place for all who live and work here"

They are also my thoughts too. I would like it to remain like this for generations to come. However I do not believe this local plan upholds this sentence in the opening paragraph.

I therefore object to the predicted housing numbers required by 2033. We have an ageing population as is stated in your documents. Yes we do have young people too. I have four children myself and yes I am very aware of the lack of affordable properties in this borough. So yes I do support a high % of 1 , 2 and 3 bedroom affordable homes being build and would also support a high % of market homes in these bedroom sizes too. We are saturated with 4 bedroom + homes in this borough. After all people like me need to downsize too. However affordable homes at 80% of the market value this is not affordable to most young salaried people in this area.
BAE Systems Applied Intelligence Systems acquired Detica which moved to the Surrey Research Park in 1986. The company now employs 4,500 staff working at the highest level in a number of critical fields that are important to UK economy.

Guildford is a location in which there has been consolidation for the company. The Draft Local Plan now out for consultation gives us an opportunity to comment on this as an important employer in the town.

- The plan improves infrastructure and the road leading off the park is an important part of this.
- Housing of different sizes and on different tenure options widens the choice for employees.
- The need to change the green belt boundary to accommodate these proposals, although not ideal, is supported.
- We would support the Borough in the process of securing an adopted Local Plan at the earliest opportunity.

I object to the number of houses planned in the local plan
This figure has risen to 693 houses per year over the next 20 years (compared with 652 per year in the 2014 Draft) and is more than double the 322 houses per year that was approved in the 2003 Local Plan.

I object to 65% of new houses in the Borough being built on land that is currently in the Green Belt.
The Green Belt was set up to protect this precious land.

I object to a total of 4,993 new homes being build within 5 miles of the Horsleys.
This is the total of the suggested areas within the Horsleys, 173 (East Horsley) 420 (West Horsley) plus another 4400 at Wisley, Garlick's Arch, Send Marsh Burnt Common, Ripley, Gosden Hill Farm, Merrow Lane.
It will ruin the rural nature of the area forever.

Included among my OBJECTIONS are the removal of West & East Horsley from the Green Belt and the unpalatable and surely unnecessary addition of 385 houses in West Horsley which equates to a staggering increase of 35% on this essentially rural village which currently comprises 1,111 homes. This proposed increase is infinitely greater than that proposed in any other village across the whole Borough and leads to the supposition that West Horsley is being discriminated against.

All of our local Schools are already full, our Medical facilities are already overstretched and our village Parking facilities (including the railway station and local shops) are already inadequate with no space for improvement. All local roads are narrow and were built at a time when the stage coach / pony & trap were the typical mode of transport rather than today's 4x4's, long wheel courier vans and supermarket delivery vehicles. Much of the Horsleys are built on clay with the consequence that drainage is inadequate.

Inexplicably, the new Draft Local Plan (which provides for 5000 new homes within a 5-mile radius of the Horsleys) has designated Station Parade, East Horsley, as a 'District Centre' which demonstrates a complete and utter misreading of the area because there are but a handful of local shops of which some have flats above. Such a designation / classification would merely encourage future urban development.

Also of major concern is the calculation and quantification of the number of houses proposed in the Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA): a target number that was generated by an external consultant's mathematical formula of which no qualification or calculation is to be made available. As if this wasn't unacceptable enough, the consultant's unsubstantiated calculation has been further massaged by Guildford Borough Council to such an extent as to provide for a population increase across the Borough which is almost 70% above the official national estimates for population growth. WHY?
Furthermore, these unquantified numbers are obviously pre-Referendum / Brexit calculations and as such now need to be recalculated if they are to be meaningful? Furthermore with Theresa May becoming the new Prime Minister, time MUST be given for her to provide a clear policy statement on her plans for the Green Belt which, hitherto, she has long sought to protect.

Following a major public outcry, GBC’s Planning Committee rejected unanimously a recent application for this development on numerous grounds yet, for no apparent reason, it has been included in the new Draft Local Plan - a clear invitation to the developers that they should try again. This is not a NPPF "presumption in favour of sustainable development" but a predetermined bias in favour of specific applicants, who have already been given many additional months to refine their application prior to its rejection. It is therefore my opinion that this development should be removed from the new Draft Local Plan for all the same reasons that it was rejected by GBC’s Planning Committee on 5th April 2016. These include:

- Green Belt location and absence of “exceptional circumstances”.
- Misrepresentation of the site as brownfield land: 17ha (less than 15%) is brownfield, it is adjacent to the SPA and therefore within 400m exclusion zone for The remains of the runway (14ha) are a habitat for rare flora and fauna and has never had any buildings on it.
- Proximity to RHS Wisley and Thames Basin Heath Special Protection Area (TBHSPA).
- Proximity to A3/M25 bottleneck and Ripley village and roundabouts.
- Absence of adequate traffic

- Further harm to air quality both onsite and nearby (e.g. the Cobham AQMA) and disregard for the health of children at the proposed secondary school.
- Loss of high-quality agricultural land (55% of the site), in breach of national policy.
- Disproportion of locating 2,000 dwellings within the village of Ockham's 159
- Presence of a Surrey County Council safeguarded waste site.
- Cost of infrastructure required to the detriment of alternative more favourable sites.
- Lack of local transport possibilities owing to country lanes with no footpaths or cycle ways and the distance to railway stations which have no spare parking capacity
- Impact on listed buildings
- Difficulty of SANG siting and inability to divert residents and their pets away from the SPA
- Extreme housing density with tiny garden spaces
- Damage to neighbouring communities of creating a settlement of 5,000 residents, equivalent to East and West Horsley combined, with worse light pollution, noise and traffic, and competition for local amenities and infrastructure
- Insufficient information about the impact on the local water table and run-off (see comments on flooding in Horsley above), and the possible aggravation of downstream flooding towards the Thames (e.g. Thames Ditton, which was under water during the winter of 2013/14).
- Failure to evaluate the cumulative impact of this and nearby development sites on the area.

2. I object to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only 5 miles. It will in effect create a sprawl, with the merging of ‘identities’ of the surrounding villages, with no delineation between one village and the next.

The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. This development will have a permanent and detrimental impact on each of these communities, should this Plan be approved.
I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN Ire not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.
What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Attached documents:

Without major infrastructure investment which is notoriously difficult to secure or deliver the north part of Guildford Borough Council is not a realistic area to propose the development of large amounts of housing.

Town centres have always provided the best opportunity for sustainable development and large areas close to the Guildford's centre have low density poor quality commercial development which could with relatively little investment in flood defence be resolved and/or commercial use retained at ground floor level.

The population growth projected in the plan assumes an ever upward trend of numbers and household formation and aims to meet that demand whatever it might be. The underlying calculation has not been made available for scrutiny. Resources including land are finite and as well as housing the planning system is required to provide a sustainable environment for Guildford and the surrounding authorities and especially London including the need to provide open space and relief from the urban environment. The requirements the Green Belt fulfils have been entirely disregarded in formulating this Development Plan and the Green Belt is seen as an obstruction rather than its usefulness weighed against the requirement to provide housing.

The densities proposed for the large sites are not realistic and will as they do in every Local Plan fall short once internal site roads, open space and other needs are designed in.

The Local Plan as drafted is, as ever, driven by politics rather than planning and simply places unwanted development as far from the County towns as possible and is designed to fail and throw the burden of deciding where housing should be built onto the Planning Inspectorate. In these circumstances where the plan is unsound planning will be uncontrolled and by exception and it is inappropriate to expose land with such poor surrounding infrastructure to this unplanned approach by removing its Green Belt designation.

The laissez fairs attitude to investment in road and flood protection infrastructure has now taken up all available capacity outside of the large and small town centres in Surrey and it is extraordinary that the Local Development Plan has such limited proposals for the upgrading of that infrastructure.

The Local Plan is in my view unsound in that it will fail to deliver the housing provision it proposes and in such circumstances removing land from the Green Belt without a method of making it deliverable or weighing its existing benefits against other needs is unsound and bad in its proposal process and bad at law and fails to meet the test of an "exceptional circumstance" to remove land from the Green Belt.

I am writing to complain about the housing being increased in Guildford by 693 homes a year. This figure is far too high and I have not seen any evidence to justify it (if there is some please provide it in a form the general public can understand).

The university has not fulfilled any of its obligations to the town. Students rent all the available homes for 30 weeks of the year when they should be available to local families all year round. The university has space to increase its campus but has failed to do so.

Please take notice of the views of Guildford residents who want to live here with their families and not be forced out by developers who are going to make a fast buck and get out.

Policy S2 Borough Planning

I Object to this as the number of 13,860 homes proposed has not been scrutinised despite apparently frequent request being made to account for this unsubstantiated number which will require major structural changes. If these only met housing needs it would not be necessary to encroach on the Green belt. This is also pre-Brexit data: These should also be looked at in the light of Brexit, possible (probable) slowdown of growth of the economy, people leaving Britain and less migration. The future is uncertain, traffic problems are already dire in and around Guildford,

This number also apparently refers to houses for 'West Surrey' including Guildford, Woking and Waverley. This is Commuter belt for London. Is Guildford being asked to build houses in open countryside to cater to London and feed Woking's requirements? There must be transparency for the underlying working of this figure. The Consultants used to have a website which proclaims a pro development agenda: have these figures been inflated for profit? What about the rickety infrastructure? Rural areas will become urban. A substantially lower figure is needed.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
Do you consider this section of the document; complies with the Duty to Cooperate? ( ), is Sound? ( ), is Legally Compliant? ( )

1.1 We object to policy S2 the Borough Wide Strategy and the commitment to build 13,860 homes based on the Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) 2015 prepared by GL Hearn.

1.2 The OAN “objectively assessed need” figure in the SHMA of 693 homes a year is far too high

1.3 We are very surprised and concerned that GBC have adopted the OAN of 13,860 homes as the housing target without any application of constraints as required under the National Planning Policy Framework and the National Planning Policy Guidance. The scale of the housing number proposed, inevitably increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

1.4 Other local planning authorities appear to take a more balanced view in their approach to planning. The Woking Core Strategy 2012 applies a constraint of 50% from the 594 new homes identified in their own SHMA. “It should be noted that local evidence (Strategic Housing Market Assessment - SHMA) highlights a need for an additional 499 new affordable homes every year in the Borough and a total of 594 new homes every year when taking into account demand. Given the level of environmental constraints present in the Borough, it is considered that the provision of an average of 292 dwellings per annum represents a reasonable level of housing growth for Woking and is deliverable.”

1.5 Historically GBC have correctly applied constraints on housing numbers to protect the Green Belt. The Surrey Structure Plan 1994 advocated a general slowing down in the rates of development “because of the environmental constraints which exist in the County, including Green Belt”. This slowing down was reflected in the requirement that Guildford Borough should accommodate a net increase of 3,800 dwellings between 1991 and 2006. This was a lower rate of development than in previous years. It is interesting to note that the Structure Plan at that time expected sufficient land to arise within the urban areas to accommodate this requirement.

1.6 However it would appear that today GBC have effectively ignored the real potential of the urban area to provide for housing. At the same time GBC have adopted a radically different approach to the policy of the Council over the last 20/30 years and are now ignoring government policy in relation to the Green Belt.

1.7 A detailed and comprehensive professional review of the SHMA dated June 2016 by NMSS an independent expert firm dealing with housing and demographics procured by Guildford Residents Association (GRA) has concluded that the OAN figure should be revised down from 693 homes per annum to 510 homes per annum.

1.8 The 41 page report by NMSS which can be found on the GRA website entitled “A Review of the West Surrey SHMA as it relates to the Objectively Assessed Housing Needs of Guildford”. It was a real community effort. It was paid for by over separate 20 Guildford Residents Associations and Local Parish Councils none of whom were convinced that the SHMA report procured and presented by GBC was accurate or transparent or accessible in a meaningful way. So they clubbed together and collected contributions from many hundreds of Guildford residents to try to find out the truth of the housing need figure presented in the Local Plan.

1.9 The NMSS report includes detailed analysis and financial modelling and was prepared by Neil McDonald who we were lucky to find. He is a niche consultant with the right skills and a national reputation. An independent adviser and commentator on housing demographics. He works with local authorities and others on the estimation of housing need and related issues. He was a civil servant and policy adviser to Ministers for over 30 years, the last 10 advising on housing and planning issues within the Department of Communities and Local Government. His 7 years as a Director at DCLG included a posting as Director, Planning Policy and a period as Chief Executive of the National Housing and Planning Advice Unit.

1.10 NMSS found that the SHMA used in the Local Plan incorrectly adds extra homes to its basic demographic projection to allow for improving affordability of housing, increased student numbers and economic growth. The report found that none of these additions were justified based on the evidence presented within the SHMA. The report concluded amongst other matters that:
The affordability of housing in Guildford is no worse than in other Surrey districts and boosting supply beyond the demographic OAN would not result in a noticeable improvement in affordability but simply in more people moving to the area.

There are reasons for believing that the SHMA’s estimate of the number of homes needed for students may be too high and that an adequate provision for students is already included in the demographic OAN. The report advises that the Council should commission a separate student housing need figure for Guildford given the distorting effect of students on our overall OAN. It envisages that, once this exercise is undertaken, improved accuracy means the overall OAN would be likely to reduce still further.

The SHMA seeks to estimate the number of homes needed to support employment growth using employment rate assumptions that are inconsistent with the employment forecasts. This produces misleading results. An analysis of the Cambridge Econometrics and Oxford Economics forecasts using employment or economic activity rate assumptions consistent with the forecasts suggests that in neither case is there a need to provide more housing than suggested by the demographic analysis. Indeed, in both cases a smaller population growth (and hence fewer homes) could support the jobs growth that is forecast.

A further independent report was procured in 2016 by the Campaign for the Protection of Rural England CPRE from Richard Bate of Green Balance, an independent consultancy with expertise in demographic and housing matters to carry out a review of the GL Hearn SHMA

The report by Green Balance runs to 37 pages and its findings are that the OAN for homes in Guildford should be reduced from 693 per annum to 481 because:

1. the vacancy rate figures should be taken from local government annual records rather than from the 2011 Census. This would reduce vacancy rates to 2.9% in Guildford.
2. there should be no increase for affordability above basic demographic change.
3. there should be no increase for Student housing and it was considered unrealistic that the University should be allowed to exert such substantial pressure on the domestic housing market.
4. the use of employment-led forecasts should be abandoned using purely household projections instead which are more reliable as a form of prediction.

Two completely independent expert reports are surprisingly consistent in their findings. In broad terms a figure of approximately 500 homes per annum would appear to be a correct estimate of OAN for Guildford. However, this is before constraints are applied to arrive at an acceptable housing target.

It is unacceptable that demographic and economic model assumptions have been withheld by GBC and cannot be checked making the process unaccountable.

The figure of 13,860 new homes is unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinised by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA.

Both the National Planning Policy Framework and National Planning Policy Guidance provide a clear policy direction that the overall housing target should be reduced by a variety of constraints to take account of protected wildlife areas (e.g. Thames Basin Heath SPA), landscape areas (Surrey Hills AONB), Green Belt, flood risk and significant infrastructure constraints, all of which apply to Guildford. This local plan and the SHMA number have completely ignored these factors. I have corrected this omission below. Infrastructure policies should be planned at the same time as Local Plans but in this case they have effectively been left out and are not sufficiently developed.

The Framework also makes clear that, once established, Green Belt boundaries should only be altered in exceptional circumstances, through the preparation or review of the Local Plan.
1.18 Unmet housing need (including for traveller sites) is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt and other harm to constitute the “very special circumstances” justifying inappropriate development on a site within the Green Belt.

2 THE NEED TO APPLY CONSTRAINTS

2.1 Ministerial guidance in relation to building on the Green Belt is clear:

1. “the single issue of unmet need - is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt and other harm to constitute the “very special circumstances” justifying inappropriate development in the Green Belt” - Nick Boles to Sir Paul Beresford MP 7th February 2014.

2. “we were always very clear that we would maintain key protections for the countryside, and, in particular, for the Green Belt. The Framework makes it clear that a Green Belt boundary may be altered only in exceptional circumstances and reiterates the importance and permanence of the Green Belt” – Nick Boles to Sir Michael Pitt, Planning Inspectorate 3rd March 2014.

3. “Planning Guidance, updated in March 2014, also states that unmet housing need is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt to constitute the very special circumstances justifying inappropriate development within the Green Belt” – Nick Boles to Sir Paul Beresford MP 18th June 2014

2.2 70% of the sites put forward in the Local Plan are in the Green Belt which flies in the face of current government planning policy. The National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF), National Planning Policy Guidance and case law make it clear that Green Belt is an absolute constraint on housing supply. Exceptional circumstances need to be shown to adjust boundaries.

2.3 Other constraints under the NPPF include assessments of sustainability, strategic flood risk assessment, physical constraints on land use and infrastructure constraints (this can include road congestion, schools, drains, power supply and medical requirements)

2.4 Constraints should be applied to the Objectively Assessed Housing Need (OAN). However this itself is overstated and should be reduced from 693 per annum to 500.

2.5 In view of the comments above it would appear logical to apply CONTRAINTS in line with government policy to a corrected OAN. of approximately 50% to account for the fact that 89% of the borough is in the permanent Green Belt and development is not supported by adequate major infrastructure. This reduction is in line with the constraints percentage of 50% applied by Woking Borough Council.

2.6 This would result in a more acceptable and practically achievable HOUSING TARGET of 250 homes per annum which over a 20-year period would be 5,000 homes. All of these homes could be built in the existing urban brownfield areas of the borough and would in part satisfy the 20,000 objections made by residents to the 2014 draft plan and also relieve the additional problems of inadequate infrastructure

2.7 It would also mean that there is currently 8.5 years supply of housing (2131/250) which is made up of existing permissions granted (1,518) and completions made (613) during 2013/2015. (Monitoring Report by GBC 2015)

2.8 Whilst we have many significant objections to the GBC Local Plan we applaud the policy statement by GBC in their Monitoring Report, “We will continue to monitor the use of previously developed land, and continue to identify as many opportunities as possible for redevelopment of previously developed land.” We believe it will be to the benefit of all residents if GBC can apply themselves vigorously to this endeavour in order to protect the Green Belt.

I object to the fact that it appears that 12,426 is based on assumptions THAT HAVE NOT BEEN MADE PUBLIC and have not been modified or corrected in the SHMA. (Professional analyst Neil McDonald of NMS5 feels that annual housing initially of 400 per year should meet the overall need in Guildford). In order to allow for the infrastructure to be improved and for this to be carefully monitored open ended targets with unknown figures held back until after the plan period is a postponement not reduction and does not allow for proper planning and is not TRANSPARENT.

I object to the proposed SHMA figures and support the submission by Guildford Residents' Associations which challenges the figure of 693 houses per annum. The reports commissioned by GRA and others prove that the methodology used has been deliberately withheld from public scrutiny and seems to be flawed and that such a high level of housing is justified, particularly in the light of the recent economic and political situation.

I wish to object to the new version of the plan.

It envisages an unacceptable degree of incursion into the green belt. Unless the green belt is given priority as a key contributor to the quality of life, which must be protected, it will in the end suffer death by a thousand cuts. In my view the plan far too readily extends village settlement areas without sufficient regard to the character of those villages.

The Guildford area is currently very congested and further significant building will require major infrastructure investment much of which cannot be easily funded by developers. It seems absurd to be proposing building on such a scale without more convincing detail of how the necessary resulting infrastructure can be set up.

There is a clear need for more housing, particularly small and affordable dwellings, and this need cannot be easily met but the plan displays disappointingly little imagination in devising solutions to the problem.

2. POLICY S2

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey. The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compares with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.
It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London’s commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

Policy S2: Planning for the borough - our spatial development

I OBJECT to this policy.

This policy aims to add 13,860 new homes to Guildford Borough over 2013-2033. This is equivalent to 693 new homes per annum.

The numbers seem to result from a forced growth policy rather than a reasoned analysis.

Furthermore, students have not been properly accounted for, and it does not (but should) require the University of Surrey to build the student accommodation that it previously committed to.

These numbers are excessive and based upon false assumptions and using a model that the public have not been allowed full access to so that it can be properly verified.

The Council has not scrutinised them either which is an incomprehensible error. Nevertheless, from the limited information provided to some, Councillor David Reeve and Guildford Residents Association (who I believe used an independent expert) have separately identified numerous errors that need correcting and will lead to a reduction in forecast numbers.

GL Hearn subcontracted the work on the SHMA to J Gardner Consultancy and subcontracting is against the rules. I object to my money being used in this way.

Furthermore, the economic growth rate forecasts need to be revisited in the light of Brexit which is already causing an economic slow down and will change requirements significantly.

The SHMA numbers therefore need to be revised downwards.

Constraint has not been applied to the housing numbers of homes. The rate of growth is still too great and will spoil the borough. 395 additional homes for Horsley is too high. 25% increase of the size of Guildford by 2034 is ridiculous. No account has been taken of Brexit uncertainty either.

Flawed evidence is still being used to justify over expansion. Transparency is needed.

I object to the fact that, despite some changes in sites, the east of the Borough is planned to have more than its fair share of development.

- provide primarily, sufficient housing for the needs of the local community e.g. for those children of existing residents who need to purchase locally, or existing elderly residents wishing to downsize, thus providing larger properties for other incoming families. The Draft Plan makes dubious and unsupported assumptions about housing need in this particular area (S2). The numbers proposed are much too high, and calculations dubious in the extreme, with plenty of “double accounting”. Nor do they take account of the EU Referendum result which will likely lead to better border controls. The majority proportion of population increase in the UK arises from high net immigration. “Sustainable development” means that the country needs to spread the burden, and the benefits, of increasing population across a much wider area of the country, instead of attracting yet higher density into the south-east and London. Businesses will, through market forces, move towards available labour, and government should recognise this by providing the necessary infrastructure to other areas anxious to attract better living standards.

I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

1. I object to the inclusion of a 10% buffer in the housing number over the plan period. This is unnecessary.
2. I object to the fact that the Council appear to have directed the transport assessment to use prescribed vehicle movements from this site with no justification.
3. I object to the housing number and particularly the fact that the Council have not, as required used any constraints such as green belt, infrastructure, air quality, AONB, TBHSPA etc. I believe that the housing number is unsound and open to legal challenge.
4. I object to the apparent disregard for the impact of in-combination development on the TBHSPA, particularly the damage caused by nitrogen deposition and high pollution levels.
5. I object to policy S2 where it states “the figures set out in the Annual Housing Target table sum to a total of 12,426” yet the figures in the table add up to 9,810 – what is the significance of the missing 2,616? This is one of a number of glaring examples of why the plan is not sound.

   • I OBJECT to what I see as disproportionate Regardless of the validity of the housing numbers proposed overall, the burden of development seems to fall disproportionately on the rural east of the borough. 1. I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

a. The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

b. The Housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

c. The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any commonsense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guildford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. I object most strongly to the latest draft of the GBC Local Plan.

My reasons are as follows:

The plan still proposes to inset East Horsley from the Greenbelt;

Development of 100 homes is proposed near Horsley Station;

Over 2000 homes are still proposed to be built on the Wisley Airfield site;

The village of East Horsley and its surrounding villages (West Horsley, Effingham and Ripley) simply do not have the infrastructure in terms of schools, medical facilities and transport (including rail, roads and parking) to meet such a high increased demand.

I note that 57% of the new housing proposed will be on land that is currently categorised as Greenbelt. This was promised to benefit future generations and to destroy this is quite appalling.
Following the Brexit referendum forecasts of increasing population numbers have been reduced to 10.4% for Guildford so why, in the light of this does the Council plan to raise housing stock by more than double to 22%? It is neither warranted nor rational.

• I object to the removal of the Former Wisley Airfield (FWA/TFM) from the Green Belt. The site serves a vital role in protecting against urban sprawl from London. Development on the site will create an urban corridor stretching from London to Guildford. Under the NPPF, no exceptional circumstances have been established to warrant removing the land from the Metropolitan Green Belt.

• I object to the disproportionate allocation of housing in this particular part of the borough. Indeed, over 23% of the Plan’s new housing is proposed in the immediate localities of Ockham, Ripley, Send and the Horsleys (of which 65% is allocated to FWA/TFM, an area that at present has only 0.3% of the population of GBC).

Guildford Borough Council Local Plan 2016.

I am once again writing with my comments about the Guildford Borough Council’s Local Plan. Certain issues must be addressed in particular for my local area, East and West Horsley.

a) The proposal to build more than 533 houses is excessive. Combined with proposals to build an enormous number of houses on Wisley Airfield, the locality will be overrun. I understand that this expected expansion of the population far exceeds the forecast rate of expansion in the borough generally. We are being unfairly targeted.

h) Gradual development of the housing stock in the villages is of course desirable, and most residents will accept that this process will continue. It is the sheer scale of the proposals that are so unacceptable. The process of destroying the Green Belt little by little (large by large?) will in later generations be seen to be unfortunate, insensitive, unnecessary and much to be regretted.

I hope that my letter will be taken as constructive, and those in the villages affected and indeed all residents in the borough can in the end feel that they have had the opportunity to be heard and their views taken into account.

1. POLICY S2

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously. The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market. These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guilford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guilford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s
The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London’s commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

I object to the threat the Local Plan poses to the historic rural village of Ockham and the blight on properties The plan calls for a village of 159 residences (with narrow lanes, no streetlights, very few pavements and many listed houses) to be swamped by a 2,068 dwelling development, with urban-style buildings up to five stories high and a population density higher than most London boroughs.

I OBJECT TO POLICY S2 (BOROUGH-WIDE STRATEGY):

- Numbers based on growth and demographic data now invalidated by Brexit.
- No justification given for 13,860 housing figure. Figure based on a secret formula used by consultants and never seen by anyone on the Council or by the public. Council has failed to seek its disclosure.
- 13,860 figure confuses the OAN with a housing target. No definite housing target given, leaving too much scope for the Council to make one up. I can’t understand how we’re being consulted when we don’t know how many houses the Council want to build, taking all the contraints into account.
- Figures based on a Housing Market Area that ignores 2 neighbouring districts (Rushmoor and Mole Valley) and is much too small, since most people commute or travel far outside the Area to shop or study. This distorts the figures: no reason why Guildford needs to build nearly twice as many large housing estates as the rest of Surrey put together, or half of all sites over 100 units.
- High numbers involved would transform character of the borough from mainly rural/Green Belt to urban, creating a corridor of development out of London as per Woking or Croydon.

Having seen the Local Plan proposals shown by the GRA for new homes to be built throughout Guildford on greenbelt land, I am appalled. Development is always dependant on investment, but what is the point of destroying areas in such magnitude, especially without transport infrastructure. Developments of this hostile enormity can only scar the surrounding environment, robbing future generations forever. Why waste the opportunities to use brownfield development areas?

I have a deep love of Guildford Please treat our greenbelt like the fragments of a Greek vase, and control this exaggerated need for expansion.

Having considered the proposed developments for Guildford, it would appear that no serious consideration has been given to the ramifications that will ensue. This can only be described as a wanton attack on Guildford and the surrounding area, presented in the guise of development! I cannot agree with the proposals as they are grossly inept.

HIGH DENSITY OF HOUSING

I am a Guildfordian and have lived in Guildford for the majority of my life and I am appalled at the recent developments in west Guildford with particular reference to the high density of housing in the area. It seems that any available spaces, including gardens, are used for housing development. This development may advantage developers and builders, but does not enhance the character of the neighbourhood or the benefit of local residents. The area includes too many housing of the HMO type that could be used for families. Any further additional housing that may be planned can only add to the deterioration of the area.

NATIONAL POLICY

The emphasis of national policy on building more homes does not take into account local and special circumstances. Extensive development in Guildford and the surrounding areas can only lead to a lower quality of life for existing residents, higher external costs and permanent loss of the Green Belt.

On a macro-economic level, I consider that the South East region has become too expensive for large scale investment and that in future the centres for growth will be the Midlands and the North.

Projects like H2 are welcome as they should extend the commuting catchment area to London, ease congestion and encourage extensive growth in their regions.

In conclusion, I strongly recommend that Guildford keeps its existing Green Belt area and has limited development and concentrates on high value industries and services and limits housing to existing 'brown field sites'. I cannot understand how the housing target of 652 houses per year was achieved and accepted. The target should be considerably reduced to reflect the many homes occupied by students and the already congested areas within the Borough.

An alternative scenario may consider that the University has expanded too much and has outgrown the Borough. I believe it came from Battersea and perhaps should move to somewhere else.

In conclusion, I strongly recommend that the Guildford area remains Green with limited development concentrating on high value industries and services and limiting housing to existing 'brown field sites'.

In view of flawed new evidence, Guildford's proposal for more than 12,426 homes (plus a buffer of 1155 homes) is excessive and will result in needless loss of Green Belt and green, and increased congestion, that cannot be justified in our heavily constrained borough.

GUILDFORD'S POPULATION GROWTH

There is evidence that Guildford's population growth is overestimated by about 40% because of under-recording of students leaving at the end of their studies.

CONSTRAINTS TO GROWTH

If the Council fails to apply Green Belt protection or constrain expansion to reflect widespread legitimate environmental and transport constraints, the 2017 Plan will cause harm to the qualities that underpin the economic success of Guildford and aggravate congestion.

As a Guildfordian, I am proud of our heritage and rural situation and deplore efforts to expand or amalgamate with the outward expansion of London or the Farnham, Aldershot conurbation.

WOKING EXPANSION

Allocating too much land for development in the 2017 Plan will also result in Guildford being required to provide homes for Woking on our Green Belt which is unacceptable given the constraints in Guildford, a gap town with constricted roads set in the Surrey Hills AONB.

CONGESTION

Even taking into account of all the proposals in the 2017 Plan, congestion which is already severe is set to get worse over the plan period. Traffic in West Guildford is very congested, particularly in early morning and evening. It is more convenient to walk to the town centre than use a car in this period.

STUDENT ACCOMMODATION

The revised proposal that only 60% of full time Guildford based University students will be provided with accommodation on campus puts unnecessary pressure on housing stock in the town. An 80% target could help by freeing up affordable homes relatively quickly. Many students occupy private homes more suited to family accommodation. In addition the accommodation of students within the community, particularly in West Guildford, has not been generally acceptable to local residents. Students are not normally considered part of the local community and some students subject residents to high levels of noise and unacceptable behavior.

Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt.
in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

The quantity of properties proposed is vastly disproportionately high compared to the size of East Horsley, West Horsley and the hamlet of Ockham, and is therefore out of keeping with the nature of these villages. The National Planning Policy Framework requires new development to respect the density of existing housing in the area, not overwhelm it.

I am writing to object to the Guildford Borough Proposed Submission Local Plan: strategy and sites : June 2016

Previously, I have sent letters, attended meetings and contributed to local information gathering and protests against the intentions of the local plan.

The National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF) clearly states that new residential development must respect the character and density of existing housing and be limited in quantity by the availability of infrastructure and local facilities.

ARE YOU NOT LISTENING ?

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside.
“West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

The scale of the proposed increase in the number of houses in the Horsleys is unreasonable. It is far greater than in other areas. It would be much better to expand the area of a town, such as Guildford, which would not change its character to the extent that these proposed developments would drastically change the character of the Horsley villages.

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.
The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.
The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

The nearest station, Horsley, which most commuters would drive to as there is little other public transport, would be unable to cope with the increase in commuters at peak times. Even now it is now difficult on occasions to find parking at either Horsley or Effingham stations.

The existing local medical facilities will be unable to cope with the proposed increase in population. The royal Surrey Hospital would not have capacity to cope with the increase in patient numbers created by the proposed Local Plan development.

AVAILABLE DEVELOPMENT SITES

The Local Plan does not take in to account the existing sites still undeveloped within Surrey. There are Brownfield sites available, which have not been developed and would provide enough land to meet the need for affordable local housing. Many commercial sites are unused and should be developed before any planned use of the Green Belt land.

I ask Guildford Borough Council to reject the existing plan and review Brownfield sites and existing permissions for development rather than the development of precious Green field sites, which have been nationally recognised as protecting the quality of both our urban and natural environments.

I object to a plan which proposes that over 70% of new housing be built within the Green Belt. There is ample brownfield land in the urban areas which needs to be regenerated, without the need to encroach on protected Green Belt land. Election manifesto promises to the electorate are being ignored.

I object to the disproportionate allocation of housing in this particular part of the borough. Indeed, over 23% of the Plan’s new housing is proposed in the immediate localities of Ockham, Ripley, Send and the Horsleys (of which 65% is allocated to FWA/TFM, an area that at present has only 0.3% of the population of GBC).

I object to raising the annual number of houses built per year. With no rational reason given, one must assume these are developers' numbers for financial gain and not for social need.

I object to the disproportionate distribution of houses across Guildford Borough, by far, the North East has taken an unsustainable number, in an area where country lanes are narrow and volume of traffic now using through routes makes roads gridlocked at rush hour.

1. Emphasis should be on smaller dwellings. We do not need more four and five bedroom houses (although developers can make more profit on these). Furthermore permission should not be given to extend or knock down/replace existing small dwellings with larger buildings.

1. I OBJECT to the Local Plan as the development proposed will not be sustainable.

The purpose of the planning system is to contribute to the achievement of sustainable development, as stated by National Planning Policy.

The development of 13,860 homes during the Plan period is not sustainable. It will have a permanently detrimental impact over existing local communities by over development, particularly for the villages between Guildford and the M25, including Ripley, Send and Glandon. The infrastructure/services in these villages will be unable to cope with the level of development proposed and do not meet the needs of the local communities.

The sites of Wisley Airfield, Garlick's Arch, Send Hill and Tannery Lane are in unsustainable locations. They do not benefit from railway stations that are within easy walking distance and bus services across rural villages are forever reducing. Residents will have few options but to be reliant on motor vehicles.

Greater consideration should be given to increasing the density of development in urban areas, such as "brownfield" sites in Guildford, where more practical sustainable transport options are available.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
There is no doubt that Guildford needs more homes, though they should be of the right kind, providing for first time buyers, genuinely affordable houses for those in the public sector and suitable homes for those wishing to downsize. The housing need has been reduced from 693 per annum last year to 653 per annum, giving a total build over the period of the Plan of 13,893. A reduction of around 5% does nothing to alleviate the concerns we expressed last year and we object strongly to this revised figure for the following reasons.

- Any organisation presenting a set of figures for whatever purpose should be prepared to be open about the provenance of such data. GBC has refused to give any information as to how this figure was arrived at, thus failing the requirements of open government as this extract from the opengovernment.org.uk website suggests.

"Priority 1: Extending the principles of openness and transparency.

Transparency – opening up of government data and information on areas such as public spending, government contracts, lobbying activity, the development and impact of policy, and public service performance.”

- The Guildford Residents’ Association (GRA) commissioned an independent analysis of the SHMA which was carried out by a respected national expert who worked for the government. He, with complete clarity, has concluded that an annual build of 404 houses would be sufficient for Guildford’s needs. This would give a total build of 7,676 houses over the period of the Plan. Even this reduced figure exceeds all other boroughs in the county as indicated in the SCC plan below.

[Image]

- It would appear that the SHMA figures were distorted by the incorrect recording of University students leaving Guildford at the end of their studies. The discrepancy between the two sets of figures is nearly 40%. It says something about the lack of transparency of GBC that the twenty Parish Councils and Residents’ Associations that make up the GRA were prepared to pay for Neil McDonald’s independent assessment.

An over-inflated housing need figure affects every aspect of this Draft Local Plan; this one particular renders the whole Plan unsustainable.

The changes made to the Draft Local Plan do nothing to address the concerns we raised last year. You claim to have listened to local views but would seem to have done so with your collective hands over your ears. Requests for clarity in the methods used to obtain the housing needs figures have been ignored and we can only draw the obvious conclusion.

No one doubts the need for some new housing but the revised housing figure cannot be trusted, given an independent assessment that differs by nearly 40%. This one issue renders the whole Plan suspect and therefore unsustainable.

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

May I take this opportunity of registering my objection to the unnecessary damaging effects of the Proposed Submission Local Plan: Strategies and Sites June 2016. The number of homes proposed is excessive and disproportionate to the character and nature of the area which clearly has not got an adequate infrastructure to meet the travel, educational, medical and shopping requirements imposed by such a high density development plan.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

I object most strongly to the proposed increase to the number of new houses for West Horsley in the Local Plan.

In doing so you will turn a small surrey village into a dormitory development to Guildford, destroying the natural pleasant environment for its present inhabitants who have accepted the policy of infilling to be in proportion to its size and to its present infrastructure.

1. I object to the unfair imbalance of the Plan across the borough.

I do not understand why you have formulated a plan that is so very and unfairly biased against the North East of the Guildford Borough with the removal of site A46 from the Plan (with its proposed 1100 houses) and reductions of housing planned in this version of the Plan in other parts of the borough the Plan.

You propose that 40.6% (4613) of the 11350 homes should be built and be within 3 miles of Send Marsh, most of them on Green Belt. Guildford Borough is over 100 square miles, this is grossly unfair on an already overcrowded part of the borough.

S2 Borough Wide Strategy

I object most strongly to S2, the growth of 693 dwellings per annum (a total of 13,860 dwellings). In 2010, the growth rate was set at 322 units per annum. In just six years this number has more than doubled. I am deeply concerned that the SHMA produced by G L Hearn has not been scrutinised properly by councillors. After watching the full council meeting in May there appeared to be a difference of opinion regarding the SHMA, whether it should be taken on trust because it was deemed ‘a professional document’ or whether G L Hearn should be invited in to discuss the document. The model on which the calculations are based is not even held by GBC so is not available for scrutiny.

Policy S2 is unacceptable especially as 89% of development proposed is in the greenbelt. I live only a few 100 metres away from ‘strategic site’ A46. I think it is an absolute disgrace that councillors have not scrutinised the core evidence they have base the Local Plan on. According to Planning Policy, it is easier to develop a few strategic sites within the Borough than spread development throughout the whole Borough. This does not follow the core principles of the NPPF. It is unjust, and does not ‘objectively assess the ‘needs’ of my rural community. This is an unelected decision made by Planning Policy. There is no infrastructure in place for a monstrous development of this size.

The Plan does not have a brown site policy, Only 1760 houses will be built in the Town Centre and urban areas. Surrey University has enough land available to accommodate all students on campus freeing up homes in Guildford for families and the results of the recent Brexit referendum were not even taken into consideration. The west of the Borough is already heavily urbanised and A46 will ensure another rural village is concreted over and destroyed.

GBC have refused to listen to residents concerns. I strongly object to Policy S2.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

I don’t believe that GBC have achieved ‘…recognition of environmental constraints and the availability and viability of land for development.’ in this LP. The figure shown for the number of new houses per year as stated in this policy ‘this is a higher level of development than experienced in Guildford borough during the previous Local Plan period, and represents an increase in new homes and employment floor space in line with the aims of NPPF, NPPG, our Economic Strategy, and the best available information on the likely levels of development required by 2033’ is unproven as the methodology and proof behind these figures has not been shared for review. How can the OAN for housing be consulted on when we don’t know the basis on which the figures have been arrived at. The previous figure used in Guildford local planning was 322 per year and that was sufficient in 2010, but how this new higher figure has been worked out is not at all clear. The GBC needs to revise its planned housing numbers downwards, and then ask each Parish in Guildford to identify smaller, local plots, that could be developed "organically" in each parish, as well as in the town centre and especially brownfield sites, so not overloading existing facilities, rather than the "super" strategic sites." as in the existing draft plan.
It is clear that the preference for the GBC planners is to encourage a small number of big developers, who prefer large sites not on Brownfield and then to get CIL to compensate.

I object to Policy S2 where it states “the figures set out in the Annual Housing Target table sum to a total of 12,426” yet the figures in the table add up to 9,810 – what is the significance of the missing 2,616? This is one of a number of glaring examples of why the plan is not sound.

I object to Policy S2 (Borough Wide Strategy)

The Draft Local Plan would see a 25% increase in the number of households in the Borough over the period 2013-2033. This is an incredible increase and I seriously question the basis of this calculation. It would appear that the consultant’s mathematical model that formed the basis of this calculation is not revealed in the Draft Local Plan. Guildford Borough Council have not scrutinised these numbers before offering the Draft Local Plan for Consultation. External consultants and members of the public have provided detailed criticisms of the model and it is completely unreasonable to be planning such a dramatic change based on highly questionable data – it is critical that there is not mistake here as once housing has been built it will not be undone.

It would also seem sensible to consider the impact of the European Referendum on projected economic growth rates and on projected migration throughout the period from 2013 to 2033. This should be assessed and the economic modelling should be repeated so that accurate data is used to calculate the impact on migration.

Guildford Borough is highly protected against development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). It is appropriate for the Council to apply these constraints when considering their housing target as other Councils have done, but no constraints have been applied. It is shocking to think that the Borough of Guildford would dramatically change from being mostly rural and Green Belt land to mainly urban, creating a corridor of housing straight out from London. Guildford doesn’t need to build nearly twice as many large housing estates as the rest of Surrey put together!

I strongly object to this Policy and the impact it will have on communities, the environment and the character of the Borough of Guildford.

I object to this Plan which proposes that over 70 per cent of new housing be built within the Protected Green Belt. There is ample brownfield land in Urban areas without using precious protected Green Belt Land and destroying historic rural villages and agricultural land.

I object to the housing number of 683 houses per year from West Surrey Strategic Market Housing Assessment (SHMA) as far too high...

I object to the totally disproportionate allocation of housing in this particular part of the Borough. - over 23 per cent of the Plans new housing is in area of Ockham, Ripley, Send and the Horsleys... This are at present has only 0.3 per cent of the population of Guildford Borough This would be the greatest example of disruption to the Green Belt in the whole country if this development goes ahead.

The result of the Strategic Housing Market Assessment referred to in the proposed plan is unbelievable. Estimates that 593 additional houses are required to be built within 5 years of adopting the plan are totally outrageous. Other estimates, provided by detailed analysis using a number of different methodologies have shown that the total number of new houses required in East Horsley is in the order of 130 to 180 over the next 15 - 20 years. This is in line with population growth over the last 12 years, and takes account of the local demographic, the nature of local businesses, and the lack of students living in the Horsleys (which appear to have disproportionately influenced GBC’s calculations). Development on this scale is much more reasonable. We absolutely accept the need to increase housing stock, including the provision of... affordable housing, but the scale of development must be proportionate and the character of any development must be in keeping with the current character of the Horsleys, which are, and should remain, within the Green Belt.

1. POLICY S2

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.
It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result in coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

4) I object to the disproportionate allocation of housing in this particular part of the borough. Over 23% of the Plan’s new housing is proposed in the immediate localities of Ockham, Ripley, Send and the Horsleys, of which 65% is allocated to FWA/TFM, an area that at present has only 0.3% of the population of GBC. I presume that this is solely because it is anticipated that the number of objections from this area will be lower than others and that a simple numbers game it being played – the less objections from an area, the more likely a development. Adopting this approach is both cynical and unbecoming of a democratically elected organization.

POLICY S2 – Borough Wide Strategy

OBJECT. I object to the huge scale of the building programme. The proposed 13,860 new homes would represent a net increase of 25% in the housing market of the Borough. That far exceeds population growth forecasts and the effect of Brexit on migration. In addition, the Council has not explained how it has arrived at this figure and so the hidden nature of any calculations used to reach the figure raises reasonable concerns about their legitimacy, especially as the new homes will involve major structural change in a protected area - some 89% Green Belt.

Please find attached my comments on the current Proposed Local Plan. I recognise that a great deal of work has gone into this plan but it does seem that many of the issues I and others raised in my last submission are once again cropping up unanswered. I have used analysis from local groups to help me understand what these proposals are and often used their words when I agree with them, and not, where I do not. I would ask therefore that you consider my Objections with due weight.

POLICY S2:

Borough Wide Strategy, I OBJECT to this policy.

This policy sets out the objective of adding 13,860 new homes to Guildford Borough over the 2013-2033 period of the Proposed Submission Local Plan, equating to an annual build of 693 new homes per annum. This represents a net increase of 25% in the housing stock of Guildford Borough, which when the official statisticians at the Office of National Statistics (“ONS”) are projecting a population increase of some 15% for Guildford Borough over this same period.

When Guildford residents protest at proposed developments such as the re-development near the Guildford Railway station site (which would have resulted in a large number of housing needs to be met) on the grounds that the proposed development is not in keeping with the character of Guildford, their protest is heeded. However, even though many more people have protestested at the proposals (in the previous draft of the Local Plan) for more housing in East Horsley and Wisley Airfield site (achieved by the expediency of GBC re-defining what remains within the Metropolitan Green Belt), their wishes are ignored by GBC. This is hardly an endorsement of local democracy in action.

Large Scale Housing

Why are Surrey University promoting Housing land at Blackwell Park, do they not have enough land? what is the reason for actively promoting a site for Development of this scale? This on top of potential Housing on a massive scale at Wisley, Gosden Hill and Send/Ripley much of which will have a detrimental effect on the local infrastructure and will completely alter the character of the area. It gets back to Green Belt and protection, the area around Ripley and Send is a pleasant place to live because new Development is protected by Legislation and should not be compromised. All of the aforementioned sites will effectively create a corridor of excessive development along the A3, the result of which will be increasing pressure on infrastructure to the extent that West Surrey will be subject to fundamental change which, in my view will ultimately see the amalgamation of many districts and Villages within the area, not least the ultimate merging of Guildford and Woking particularly when ones consider the impact of further development at Merrow, potentially linking with Ripley (Garlicks Arch) and ultimately with further development in Send, Old Woking and beyond. There really must be a consensus of common sense in relation to the Draft Proposals otherwise the area will merge in the way suburban London has done over the last 30-40 years..

Brown Field Development Insetting of Villages:

I am extremely concerned that GBC have failed to grasp the opportunity of following clear Government policy to develop in the urban area on previously developed sites. Many of these sites are in their ownership such as Slyfield Industrial Estate and it would seem a practical and readily achievable alternative which is much more acceptable to local residents. Constraint should be applied as has been the case in neighbouring Woking Borough, Guildford is a special case with swathes of the Borough subject to AONB and AGLV status, it is a fact that this statutory protection should prevail notwithstanding the perceived need for additional homes in the Borough.

I am against the insetting of Villages albeit I have seen examples of sensible and tasteful development in certain instances and see no reason why Villages need to be insetted when the current planning policies and procedures seem to work well enough. It should not be an easy task to secure Planning for development within Villages that are located in The Green Belt and I see absolutely no reason why `any` Village currently within The Green Belt should be subject to Status change.

In summary I am of the opinion that the DRAFT proposals as set out by Guildford Borough are clumsy, ill-considered and frankly I would question the validity and legality of suggesting that ANY Green Belt should be considered for Housing save in cases of extenuating and extreme circumstances, moreover each DRAFT proposal on a site by site basis should also be subject to a thorough central Government assessment. To conclude, there are numerous urban land opportunities in the Borough with the added bonus of being able to accommodate higher density development with reduced means of car use and these should be exhausted before any Green Belt land is considered as a potential Housing site.
I should like an acknowledgement and confirmation that Guildford Borough Council have received this communication and I should like to be kept informed as to progress.

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN Ire not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.
What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Attached documents:

I OBJECT to all strategic sites proposed in the draft Plan to be built in the Green Belt.

1. I object to the identification and allocation of sites in this plan without regard to Green Belt, infrastructure or other constraints. The plan says that “allocating these sites does not grant planning permission for development.” However, each of the sites will be removed from the Green Belt and will be available in principle for development and non-Green Belt uses. The inclusion of these sites without detailed site by site justification shows contempt for the thousands of detailed comments the Council have received about individual sites ever since the Issues and Options consultation in 2013. The plan has hardly changed since the Council received 20,000 objections to its first draft plan in 2014. The Inspector considering the plan may conclude that the consultation has not been properly conducted.

2. The housing needs assessment is flawed in various respects and overstates housing need. In addition since it was produced, the referendum Brexit decision has almost certainly reduced future housing need and rendered the previous assessment seriously out of date. As a result any assessment of Green Belt sites which took place to consider whether “exceptional circumstances” existed to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt was based on false premises and should be reconsidered.

3. Having determined housing need the Council was entitled to consider constraints before determining the housing number. I believe that as ill as being entitled to do this the Council was required to give proper consideration to constraints. The scarcity of sites outside the Green Belt as ill as infrastructure (most notable roads) considerations all represented constraints which should have been taken into account in determining the final housing number. Accordingly in this regard our objection to the allocation of Green Belt sites is twofold. First I believe constraints should have been applied. Secondly I believe the Council did not properly consider constraints and that their decision making process was flawed and thus subject to being set aside by the Inspector.

4. Even if having properly applied constraints there is a need to develop in the Green Belt then specific Green Belt sites should not be included in the plan unless “exceptional circumstances” for development are proven in relation to that specific site, as stipulated repeatedly in the NPPF. The Green Belt should trump short-term considerations such as perceived housing need, as case law has established. There needs to be a specific balancing exercise conducted on each Green Belt site weighing the harm to the Green Belt against the very special circumstances which are argued in favour of development at that particular site. There is no evidence this has been done. Instead the council have appeared to say that having chosen a housing needs figure and decided it cannot be met without building on Green Belt then there is no need for any further consideration and any convenient Green Belt site can be allocated for building at will.

The borough wide strategy proposes 13,860 houses being developed across the borough and in not applying any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure – the only course which would make reasonable sense – has the wrong starting point. No other Borough Council in Surrey has taken this approach.

The Plan places an unfair burden of development on the north east of the borough as a result of major residential sites proposed at Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill (Clandon) (A25). It cannot be considered just and equitable to allocate 36% of proposed new housing to just three Wards within Guildford Borough (Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley) – which at present represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough.

The identity of the villages in these rural Wards will be destroyed by the joining up of development all along the A3, from the M25 to Burpham (proposal for 5,036 houses) and beyond.

In addition, the proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a huge, permanent detrimental impact on the communities of Ripley and surrounding villages.

The planned proposals and the disproportionate amount of development in one area of the borough has not been thought through.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

I object to the number of homes that the Plan intends to deliver over the 20 year period 2013-2033 (policy S2).

The annual target of 693 is significantly higher than the 652 that the Council proposed last year and disregards the constraints which should have been imposed by the high proportion of the borough's designated Green Belt land and the capacity of the roads, schools, doctors, hospitals and other infrastructure to support such an increase in the population.
There is no further evidence provided as to why so many more houses are required.

The borough has taken the easy way out in the plan and ignored the primary purpose of the Green Belt. Transport and SSSIs have taken primary consideration. Problems with the A3 around Guildford and the Downs providing a funnelling effect through Guildford have been accepted as limitations in the basic thinking for the plan. This plan is meant to provide the framework for development over many years and should have been prepared to consider radical infrastructure changes for such a large increase in housing stock. This is a plan which will fundamentally change the nature of the borough but has been done by essentially squeezing them in within the current communication structure. The result is an inadequate plan based perceived housing need (specifically stated as an inappropriate reason) without vision or reflection on the overall character implications for the borough. However painful, it is essential that this plan is rejected before urban sprawl envelopes Guildford and we become as much a part of London as Croydon.

4) I object to the disproportionate allocation of housing in this particular part of the borough. Indeed, over 23% of the Plan’s new housing is proposed in the immediate localities of Ockham, Ripley, Send and the Horsleys (of which 65% is allocated to FWA/TFM, an area that at present has only 0.3% of the population of GBC).

I object to policy S2 where it states “the figures set out in the Annual Housing Target table sum to a total of 12,426” yet the figures in the table add up to 9,810 – what is the significance of the missing 2,616? This is one of a number of glaring examples of why the plan is not sound.

Policy S2: The Plan as a whole is undermined by massive errors in the housing need figures. The housing need has been reduced from 693 per annum last year to 653 per annum, giving a total build over the period of the Plan of 13,893. On the one hand, a reduction of around 5% has minimal impact on concerns about the scale of the housing development’s enormous and negative impact on the Borough as a whole. Equally, I now understand that an over-inflated housing need figure has been used in the Plan. As this affects every aspect of this Draft Local Plan; this one particular renders the whole Plan unsustainable.

1. I object to the Borough Wide Strategy

2. The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

3. The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result in coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

There is brownfield land available in the town centre which is being earmarked for commercial development rather than for housing. This is enough to meet our real needs for affordable local homes. There are enough vacant commercial sites to cope with genuine business need, and we have enough retail capacity already, so urban brownfield/derelict land should be used for housing. I understand that Surrey University is sitting on permission for 1,500+ accommodation units on its own brownfield campus. If the University fulfilled its obligations much Town Centre affordable accommodation would be available for rental/purchase.

Policy S2 – Planning for the Borough

1. I object: to GBC producing an Assessment of Sites for Amenity Value (which includes numerous sites for potential housing), plus other sites in the borough, but not projecting even rough numbers of potential homes on these sites to reduce the need to include large Green Belt sites.

2. I object: to the amended plan ignoring the government’s NPPF guidelines - “……. local planning authorities should take account of the need to promote sustainable patterns of development. They should consider the consequences for sustainable development of channelling development towards urban areas inside the Green Belt boundary, towards towns and villages inset within the Green Belt or towards locations beyond the outer Green Belt boundary”. (NPPF, Section 9, para 84). This is proven in the GBC continuing to propose large Green Belt developments.

3. I object: to GBC making amendments whilst doing little to meet the principle of the government’s NPPF rules “to assist in urban regeneration, by encouraging the recycling of derelict and other urban land”. (NPPF, Section 9, para 80).

4. I object: to GBC using amended housing figures (SHMA) based on a flawed housing study which has attracted widespread criticism.

5. I object: to GBC making amendments which do not address the 32,000 +/- comments made on the 2016 draft, particularly regarding Green Belt.

6. I object: that the amended draft does not encouraging utilising the numerous surface public car parks in Guildford town, surrounding areas and at Surrey University to provide sustainable homes, close to employment opportunities, facilities and transport links, with public car parking relocated underground. The university could house its students and free up properties in Guildford currently needed by students.

7. I object: to GBC amending all of the large Green Belt sites and including large Green Belt sites throughout the borough for housing instead of proposing housing in every village and town, on a proportional basis, to meet local needs.

8. I object: to GBC amending the plan to include further development in the north-east of the borough as some sites are just not sustainable.

Conclusion

Guildford Borough Council are planning to increase the Borough by 25% over the next twenty years. I have to ask why? Also Guildford Borough Council proposes to put 65% of the prosed new housing in Green Belt Land in complete contravention of NPPF guidelines and expressly against Government policy for protection of our much needed and precious Green Belt land.

There comes a point when Guildford Borough Council will have to admit that only small scale development is possible.

Overall my feeling that this has not been a well thought out exercise, and one wonders how much genuine planning lies behind this document. There seems to be no vision for what we want our Borough to achieve and look like. Unjustifiable housing numbers have been proposed and with little attention given to sustainability. It was made very clear in the NPPF that the Government attaches great importance to Green Belt land and stated that once established, Green Belt boundaries should only be altered in exceptional circumstances, and yet this has been completely ignored. Guildford Borough Council itself clearly identifies in the Settlement Hierarchy that urban areas are more sustainable areas for development than rural areas. Yet it has not even listened to its own guidelines.

Is Guildford Borough Council so lily livered that it cannot argue at Government level that the numbers being asked of us are too high or is there a hidden agenda for ignoring NPPF guidelines? Why has it not been argued that the south-east of England is already full to bursting? Has anyone considered the overall effect of all this proposed development? Not only are minor roads already busy but the A3 is choked every working day. Coping with tens of thousands of extra vehicles, brought about by the massive housing target, on a daily basis is just impossible.
I am not against some development, but I believe it should be proportionate, using brownfield sites and with great attention to the sustainability of any proposed development. Our villages need small numbers of genuinely affordable homes to rent to people who work locally. The town similarly needs affordable properties to rent to people who work locally. The university must be made to build accommodation for its staff and students, as it has permission to do, and release other homes currently occupied by students, a transient population, for local families. We do not need large expensive homes – these will always be snapped up because at the moment Guildford Borough is such a desirable place to live and commute from.

I do think the “south east” issue should be challenged at high level. We cannot forever be the “sponge” that absorbs all comers. I also think that the Green Belt should be protected at all costs. Once we let one bit go we are going to be doomed to creeping urban sprawl with severe destruction of all that is precious in this land.

The current proposals in the draft Local Plan would destroy the qualities that make Guildford a good place to live and work. Developers, once given planning permission will use their usual wiles to get around their original proposals and we will end up with the worst of all worlds. Please do not let developers and the university dictate what Guildford needs.

I strongly object to the housing targets set out in Policy S2.

The local plan sets out a very high level view of the Borough as Guildford Borough Council sees it over the plan period. There are a series of three very large new developments, The Hogs Back (Blackwell Farm), th Slyfield redevelopment, Burpham (Gosden Hill Farm) and Ockham (Three Farms Meadows) (between 1700 and 2000+ for each development) and a large development at Send (Garlick’s Arch and nearby area 700 houses, new A3 entry and exit access points and industrial buildings) and a large increase the Horsleys of some 400 houses. It is to be noted that all of these, developments are adjacent to the A3/A31 (The Horsleys some 3 miles from the A3) and all but Blackwell Farm are to the eastern side of the Borough which is a very disproportionate spread. Overall the Local Plan represents a level of building which will mean an increase of over 22% in housing stock in the Borough in just over 10 years. This is a huge proportional increase in the Borough and enormous burden on the infrastructure and nearly double the prediction for growth for our area made by the Office for National Statistics.

At a time when Brexit negotiations are in their infancy and there is considerable uncertainty in future economic growth and population trends, Guildford Borough Council has chosen to adopt the highest forecasts given by their consultants GL Hearn for future housing need. Surely this is a reckless strategy. It is also very much out of line with the planning expert employed by Guildford Residents Association (Mr Neil MacDonald, who has impeccable credentials) who was asked to provide an independent assessment of Guildford Borough’s housing needs and who calculated a much lower number than GL Hearn did. It is also worth saying that recently the Planning Inspector, when reviewing Waverley Council’s Local Plan, acknowledged Mr Macdonald’s expertise and was happy to accept his calculations.

Policy S2: Borough Wide Strategy

This policy sets out the objective of adding 13,860 new homes to Guildford Borough over the 2013-2033 period of the Proposed Submission Local Plan, equating to an annual build of 693 new homes per annum.

EHPC has serious concerns about the enormous scale of this building programme, which represents a net increase of 25% in the housing stock of Guildford Borough, a remarkable rate of increase for a borough in the English Home Counties. It is even more remarkable when the official statisticians at the Office of National Statistics (“ONS”) are projecting a population increase of some 15% for Guildford Borough over this same period.

Some explanation for this mismatch may partly be found in the conclusion of the West Surrey Strategic Housing Market Assessment, (“SHMA”), which looks at how the annual housing target of 693 homes is comprised. It estimates that 517 homes per annum arise from ‘the demographic starting point’ – effectively what the official statisticians at the ONS and the Department of Communities and Local Government (“DCLG”) are predicting Guildford will require based upon their population and household forecasts. To this is added in the SHMA another 120 homes per annum in order to ‘support economic growth’, a further 31 homes per annum to ‘improve affordability’ and 25 homes due to ‘student growth’, all of which totals up to 693 homes per annum target.

EHPC finds this analysis perplexing. Economic growth is already factored into the statistics produced by ONS and DCLG, so what GBC are proposing actually comes on top of the official household growth forecasts for the borough. Moreover, the GBC Affordable Housing Policy H2 is proposing that all development sites (other than the very smallest) will be required to have 40% of their homes offered as affordable housing, so why another 31 homes per annum is needed as affordable housing on top of this 40% ratio is quite incomprehensible.

Furthermore, DCLG research has concluded that there is on average a 97% correlation between population growth and household formation. Therefore, if GBC’s target of a 25% increase in housing stock were actually realised, the outcome will be that Guildford Borough would see its population rise by around 25% over this period. This means that the resultant population growth for Guildford Borough would be at a level 67% higher than the official forecasts.

One of EHPC’s particular concerns in reviewing the Proposed Submission Local Plan is that the impression is conveyed upon the reader that GBC’s housing targets are effectively needed to fulfil NPPF requirements or because of central government policy – in other words that GBC has no real choice but to put forward these projections, unpalatable though they might be. However, the reality is very different. GBC has voluntarily chosen to pursue a policy of aggressive civic and economic expansion – one might perhaps term it a policy of ‘Forced Growth’ – which underpins all of the housing policies in the Local Plan. In short, the difference between the official statisticians’ forecasts and GBC’s target of a 25% increase in housing stock is entirely down to a political choice made by GBC.

Of course, there is nothing fundamentally wrong in GBC adopting a Forced Growth policy for the Borough – not so long as that policy is made clearly and explicitly and is fully supported by a majority of its electorate. However, EHPC doubts whether this is actually the case. It is certainly not a vision that is shared by EHPC, which unequivocally rejects GBC’s Forced Growth policy.

1. POLICY S2

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN Ire not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Attached documents:
I object to Policy S2 for the proposed provision of the very high overall housing numbers of 12,426 new homes, which is only a small reduction on the previous figure of 13,860. These numbers are still based on an overly high-growth economic development plan which in itself has had no direct consultation with any residents. They remain too high as shown by an objective assessment made by the report made for the Guildford Residents Association (GRA) by Neil MacDonald (independent adviser and commentator on housing demographics).

Also in Policy S2 housing numbers, I object to the fact that downward economic pressures (including Brexit) have been adequately accounted for. Additionally in Policy E1, E2 there is too much emphasis is on providing retail and commercial in Guildford town centre, when the pattern of business is changing and more town centre housing is needed rather than retail. This would ease the pressure on housing on the Green Belt.

Furthermore, I object to Policy S2 because I believe the 12,426 homes includes estimated demand from London, and also now possibly from Woking’s perceived unmet need, and I feel Guildford will become a dormitory town for London and the surrounding areas, rather than meeting the needs of residents of Guildford Borough.

I object to the fact that in Policy S2, despite the afore mentioned slight apparent reduction in overall housing numbers and industrial space, the reduction is mostly in Normandy/Flexford and the load on the East of the borough is still disproportionate and has even increased.

It is extremely doubtful that the proposal of 13,000 plus houses to be developed are reasonable and sustainable, particularly in view of Brexit I therefore object to the Borough Wide Strategy. National Planning Policy promotes sustainable development, which this-total plan lacks.

What is driving the need for housing in and around the villages of Guildford? I suspect it is the greed of our Borough Council to build more business premises and attract more people to live in the area, which is ludicrous as the road infrastructure is overloaded as it is.

I object to the disproportionate allocation of housing in this particular part of the borough. Over 23% of the Plan’s new housing is proposed in the immediate localities of Ockham, Ripley, Send and the Horsleys (of which 65% is allocated to FWA/TFM, an area that at present has only 0.3% of the population of GBC).

1. there is no clear justification for the removal of one strategic site over site A35;
2. the inclusion of A35 would not contribute to the 5-year housing projection due to constraints particularly in the provision of sewerage capacity;
3. the inclusion of a 10% buffer in the housing number over the plan period is unnecessary;
4. the evidence base especially the West Surrey SHMA and the Guildford addendum 2017 is unclear and has been challenged by other experts including NMSS;
5. the transport evidence base including the SHAR 2016 Highways assessment report has been criticised by Mouchel for using out of date modelling software and is therefore unreliable;
6. GBC has directed the transport assessment to use prescribed vehicle movements from this site with no justification;
7. GBC has not as required, used any constraints such as green belt, infrastructure, air quality, AONB, TBHSPA etc. The housing number is unsound and open to legal challenge;
8. the disregard for the impact of in-combination development on the TBHSPA, particularly the damage caused by nitrogen deposition and high pollution levels;
9. policy S2 states “the figures set out in the Annual Housing Target table sum to a total of 12,426” yet the figures in the table add up to 9,810 – what is the significance of the missing 2,616? This is one of a number of glaring examples of why the plan is not sound;
10. of the quantity of space allocated for retail in the town centre which could be better used for residential development. Reliance on the Carter Jonas study update 2017 which includes demand for retail space from companies already in administration is strange to say the least;

16: the unfair imbalance of the plan across the borough as regards housing, becoming even more biased against the north east of the borough. Guildford Borough is over 100 square miles. Of the 11350 homes proposed in the plan, 40.6% (4613) are within 3 miles of Send Marsh, most of them on Green Belt. This is grossly unfair on an already overcrowded part of the borough.

Because of the above and many other reasons cited by the Horsley Countryside Preservation Society, Ripley Action Group and Wisley Action Group all of whom I support, this plan is unsound and not fit for purpose.

I object to the developments in the Greenbelt where 70% of the new housing is planned. Urban brownfield land is being protected for unexplained reasons. This strategy is contrary to the manifesto commitments made prior to the election last year. GBC seems intent on urbanizing the length of the A3.

This is despite GBC Councillors who were elected at the last election on the promise of keeping the Greenbelt free from development.

Our roads cannot cope with the present traffic. The council appear to be unwilling to face the problems eg Rice's Corner which desperately needs a roundabout. Heavy lorries thunder through Chilworth as do many lorries with drivers under instruction. Not only is the traffic situation poor for drivers it is appalling for pedestrians, especially parents taking their children to school when traffic is at its worst. Policy S2 Borough Wide Strategy Objection -The reasons for objection are below (on pages 5-7 of this letter).

Targets

The target of 13,860 new homes during the Plan period (2013-33) is too high and unrealistic. It will harm the environment (loss of green fields and trees; more pollution). My view is there should be up to 400 new homes built per year.

Serious questions have been raised about forecasts of the number of homes that should be built (the use of historical statistics etc). Forecasts, especially involving economics over extended periods of time, are often wrong or misleading

(a) The Green Belt was established to meet a number of important needs, and those needs have not gone away.

(b) There should be no building on the Green Belt, except perhaps small scale, limited infilling.

• The number of houses and other buildings proposed in the Local Plan should be greatly reduced, otherwise significant harm will be done to the Green
It is unwise -and unsustainable - to have huge numbers of extra buildings in the Borough of Guildford (especially in the Green Belt) to cater for a national population which is increasing at a fast pace. There is now widespread use of the term "housing needs" even though in some ways it lacks precision. The word "need" means lacking something which you cannot well do without ; necessity; requiring relief eg extreme poverty or distress. However, for many people it would be a matter of preference - not need - to live in Guildford Borough rather than somewhere else.

Seeking to Maximise Housing Delivery

Seeking to maximise housing delivery is implied in Policy S2. History since the 19th century has shown us that, it is not sensible to build a maximum number of homes to meet demand, in most areas of the UK. The worst results have been slums, brutal high rise flats contributing to crime and social problems (some of which had to be demolished after a short life) and spoilt townscapes/landscapes. High demand in the South East is now almost endless. But land in the UK is not unlimited, especially in the South East.

Building homes outside the south east would be more sensible than building on the Green Belt around London.

Farmland (Existing or Potential) Taken for Homes

Agriculture is, like accommodation, very important. We need more farmland, not less, so that we can produce more food in a sustainable way. About 50% of our food is rented. But soil in many parts of the world is degrading; water in many parts of the world is inadequate; and more countries need to import food or to keep food for their own growing populations rather than export it to us. A forecast for global population in 2050 is nine billion and this will affect the UK. Low quality farmland can be used for planting trees to help deal with pollution and climate change. It should not be used for building in the Green Belt.

Pollution

Meeting needs or demand for homes in the Borough will mean more roads to service homes, more vehicles and more air pollution. Poor air quality is already causing illness and death, especially in the south east. Data from Public Heath England indicate that 5.3% of all deaths every year in people over 25 are linked to air pollution. It is especially bad for children because their lungs are still developing.

The Guildford Borough Local Plan should contain data showing existing and future air pollution levels in various places in the Borough (eg in Ash and Guildford), just as it contains facts and figures for many other subjects. Data should not be in supporting documents only.

C) Farmland, Fields and Woods Between Towns and Villages

These help community cohesion, quality of life and life expectancy. They should be retained, not reduced in area.

For example, the green gaps between the furthest edges of existing development, from Ash to Guildford, extend to a total of only about 2-3 miles. So, there should be no more development allowed between Ash and Guildford (including ribbon development) with only a very small number of special exceptions to such a policy.

Homes in the UK - General

There will have to be an under supply of housing in Guildford Borough because of the need to protect the countryside and the character of towns and villages. But there could be an oversupply outside the south east (eg in the north west) which could be used to accommodate people, if they decide to move there. Certainly, there are 'brown field sites' in London and outside the south east.

Realigned Green Belt Boundaries

Central government has said that there is no need for Green Belt land to be removed unless there are exceptional circumstances. It seems that central government's policy is that, in general, homes etc should not be built on the Green Belt.
Belt. See the letter from the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State (Planning) dated 18 June 2014, enclosed with my letter of the 10 September 2014.

Objection to the Guildford 2016 Local Plan

I OBJECT to the 2016 Draft Local Plan as a whole and in particular I object to the specific issues listed below. I believe that this deeply flawed Local Plan will have a direct and detrimental effect on the amenity currently enjoyed by residents of East Clandon, West Clandon, Send Marsh, Ripley, West and East Horsley. It erodes the openness of the Green Belt and endangers the beauty and views in and out of the Surrey Hills AONB.

My specific points are as follows:

1. I OBJECT to Policy S2 for the proposed provision of the very high overall housing numbers of 13,800 new homes (690 new dwellings being built every year for 20 years). I object on 3 grounds:

   1. these housing numbers have been imposed with no real consultation being undertaken with residents;
2. The housing numbers are based on a high-growth economic development plan which in itself has had no consultation and this combined with estimated demand from London residents will turn Guildford into a dormitory town for London;

3. No real economic or housing demand factors have been provided by the borough planners to substantiate the very high housing target of 13,800 new dwellings over the next 20 years.

2. I object to the proposed scale of new building throughout the borough, which is disproportionate and unjustified.

It is not too late to make a Local Plan which accords with the character of the Borough and the wishes of local people. I call on you to carry out a proper Plan/GBC led review of urban brownfield sites, particularly in and around Guildford town centre, as proposed some time ago by Guildford Green Belt Group. Their work shows that a much greater proportion of housing need can be met in the urban areas on brownfield sites and I support this, as someone who wishes within about 10 years to move to an urban area for proximity of amenities and to remove the need for car travel. Redeveloping urban brownfield sites is not of course the easiest way for developers to make a profit, but it is best for the whole of our borough as recognised in your Vision, but not carried through into your policies. It is time to stop allowing developers to lead the Plan by proposing sites and time to make it clear that there is no big profit to be made by banking Green Belt land for future development. Please stand by the promises that have been made to protect that land.

I call on you further to make a realistic and transparent estimate of real local housing need in accordance with Parish Council neighbourhood surveys and in line with national statistics, revised to take into account economic and other forecasts post the Brexit vote. Stop wasting our money on opaque modelling that is not explained even to you who are supposed to be representing us.

This plan barely deserves the title of a plan. It seems to me to be a catalogue of things that might happen without any clear vision of what sort of town we are aiming for. Adopting the SHMA result as a housing target without applying constraints means that the Borough Council is abandoning any consideration of any of the Borough’s needs other than having a huge house-building programme. Committing to so much Green Belt development is a contradiction of the Conservative pledge to protect the green belt. The transport provisions are sketchy and will not alleviate the congestion already present and destined to get worse when the new developments are built. Why is there a 40% increase in retail space specified when on-line shopping will make such an increase unnecessary? The plan is not ready for an inspector.

I support an expanding and thriving Guildford which evolves in a way which maintains and enhances the character of the town and preserves its country setting. This plan does not address such development and is merely an assembly of developers’ wish lists. I commend the submission from the Guildford Residents Association.

This revision now proposes a target for new housing in Guildford borough of 12,426 homes. While this is a small reduction from the 13,860 proposed in the previous draft, it still seems far too high. I strongly object to the 12,426 homes target for the following reasons:

a) The conclusions of the revised SHMA are very likely wrong

However it takes insufficient account of many significant changes during the past 12 months, particularly those connected with Brexit and national targets for reduced immigration, which are likely to result in major changes in population trends, migration patterns and the economic development of the UK. It is very probable that the whole economic future of the UK is less rosy than many people (especially politicians) like to think. In addition to Brexit, two other major factors that will limit growth are climate change and constraints on energy supply. Both seem likely to impact on economic activity, prosperity, and housing demand during the coming decades. It is also worth noting that expert demographers confidently expect world population to peak within the next few decades, and then start to fall.
While this will take time to work through to become a reduction in UK housing demand, it does suggest that assuming and planning for an never-ending increase in UK population is the wrong strategy. In this context, it is surely prudent to prioritise the conservation of our irreplaceable natural assets of wildlife and countryside; and not promote a suburban sprawl which in the longer term would be wasteful and unnecessary. Instead we need to re-direct necessary development towards under-used and brownfield sites.

On the detail of the Plan’s housing numbers, I agree with much of the analysis submitted in comments by East Horsley Parish Council and will not go into this further. The key point is that given the considerable uncertainty in all forward trends for economic growth, population and housing demand, it would be prudent to be very cautious and conservative in making forward projections used for long term policy. So, why has GBC chosen to adopt the highest forecasts on offer to establish projections of future housing need in the borough? I believe this approach by GBC is almost certain to be wrong.

b) GBC fails to allow adequately for known planning constraints, especially the Green Belt. GBC seems to be taking the housing need projections of GL Hearn as the housing targets proposed in the Local Plan. This however fails to take into account any of the significant constraints which limit the supply of housing across the borough, in particular the large proportion of land which currently falls within the Metropolitan Green Belt; and our already over-stretched infrastructure.

Finally I'd like to comment on the effect of this programme of accelerated and forced development of our village (East Horsley) on the local infrastructure. To take just one example, the roads are simply not wide enough to accommodate an increase in lorry and commercial traffic, and the geography of the two villages prevents a widening of most of the roads which are little more than country Lanes. A few days ago there was a serious car collision in the very centre of East Horsley because of poor visibility. It is simply not good enough to say that our infrastructure services are the responsibility of a different public authority; council tax-payers have the right to expect joined-up thinking. If the building programme goes ahead as you propose, it will involve a permanent down-grading of the quality of life in this part of Surrey.

I therefore object to the draft Local Plan because of the perfunctory attention that is given to the effect of the proposed house-building on the local infrastructure.

Policy S2 BOROUGH WIDE STRATEGY

The Plan proposes the provision for 13,860 new houses for the period to 2033. Why? There is certainly a shortage of particular types of housing within the borough. However there is MUCH DOUBT as to the need for such a large number of new houses. I can find NO EVIDENCE to support GBC's claim that the need is there! I can only find evidence to show that GBC have wildly exaggerated the requirement for new housing. The rampant expansionist policy being promoted by GBC is very alarming. I strongly deny the need to build 693 houses per year through to 2033. This presupposes the requirement for a 250/o increase in the housing stock over the borough in that time. However this does not even agree with figures from The Office of National Statistics suggesting an increase of 15/o in the population of Guildford over that time. There is also now evidence since the EU Referendum that the economy will be cooling down and there will be less migration and less housing need than expected. However I suppose it is quite possible that with the falling pound more foreign investors will be interested in buying into our housing stock!

I am particularly annoyed that GBC have a propensity to blame others for their plans & actions! When a query arises over the matter of the excessive numbers, GBC blame official government policy & legislation for the figures. I understand the relevant government departments do not agree with this assessment!

The effect of S2 on The Horsleys

Under this New Local Plan East & West Horsley Horsley together could receive 593 new houses. At this moment there are fewer than 3,000 houses in the two Horsleys. Although the two villages each have their own very clear identity, development in one has a substantial effect on the other. Many facilities are shared. The schools are in West Horsley, while the station, shops and surgery are in East Horsley. All these facilities are considerably over stretched at present so to add 593 houses to the stock would result in chaos and would certainly not meet the sustainable development criteria as set out in the NPPF - there would be NO economic, social or environmental enhancement.

Although the two villages each have their own very clear identity, development in one has a substantial effect on the other. Many facilities are shared. All these facilities are considerably over stretched at present so to add 593 houses to the stock would result in chaos and would certainly not meet the sustainable development criteria as set out in the NPPF - there would be NO economic, social or environmental enhancement.

West Horsley would bear the brunt of the development with 405 new houses. This is in a village where there is only one small shop and that is scheduled to close in a few months. West Horsley Parish Council and Surrey Community Action Survey identified a limited need for some 20 affordable homes for local people who wish to remain in the village i.e. for young people and for the elderly who wish to downsize to a smaller home. I would dispute the demand for 405 new houses in a village with no shops, no post office, no station, very limited bus service, no surgery and overcrowded schools! All the new householders would need to get in a car!

East Horsley has most of the facilities but it is interesting to refer to GBC's own documentation. In the Guildford Borough Council's Greenbelt & Countryside Study Volume 5 it says "East Horsley would not be appropriate for a major village expansion due to the current population of..."
3,785 meaning that only a relatively small population growth requirement of 215 would be needed to reach the 'critical mass' population of 4,000. Well the addition of the 188 new houses proposed in East Horsley would take the population well over that critical mass! East Horsley certainly has a reasonable collection of small shops at Station Parade, named as a 'district rural' centre in the Plan. However for this 'district rural' centre parking is a big challenge. The parking facilities do not meet current demand so it is impossible to imagine the situation if the Plan goes ahead. The Plan also picks out Bishopsmead Parade as a 'rural local' centre - rather a grand title for one small newsagent/post office! The other businesses in that parade are services such as dentist or estate agents. East Horsley has a station with a reasonable service to Waterloo. However again the parking facilities are very tricky indeed. Sometimes one pays £6.50 to park and cannot find a space! East Horsley has a surgery, which is not currently meeting the demands of its patients.

One also needs to put the situation in context and look beyond our village boundaries. Under this Plan there will be 4,993 new houses built within 5-mile radius of the Horsleys; this will equate to the development of a village nearly twice the size of both Horsleys in the area Horsley/Burpham.

- Therefore I STRONGLY object to the proposals in S2 - the housing targets are not justifiable and cannot be achieved without chaos! They satisfy a demand that is not there.

1. I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

1. The borough wide strategy is poorly It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

1. The Housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

1. The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the "West Surrey" tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, "West Surrey" is much too small. Half of Guildford borough's residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside "West Surrey". Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make "West Surrey" reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guildford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour's "need". Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey's 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick's Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result in coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick's Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

3.3 Green Belt Development

Listing developments as Urban extension is disingenuous as this is Green Belt land. The Conservative Councillors were elected having issued a campaign promise to protect the Green Belt. Whilst the vision states that brownfield development is the preferred route the majority of dwellings are provided on Green Belt land.

We object most strongly to the growth rate of 693 dwellings per annum. This figure is so fundamental to the plan, that its validity must be beyond question or the plan cannot possibly be accepted. If the number was set at the previously agreed growth rate of 322 units per annum, would the devastation of vast areas of the Green Belt be required?

The number has not been scrutinised by Councillors, nor have the inner workings and assumptions been revealed. It is absolutely essential in an era of open government that these figures are beyond reproach, instead the number is produced “out of a hat” with no justification or appropriate scrutiny.

We also object to the fact that the total exceeds even the 693 units a year, once windfall and existing permissions are taken into account.

Scale of development

I OBJECT to an increase of up to 385 potential new dwellings which is included in the proposed submission Local Plan for West Horsley in the next 5 five year. This represents an increase of over 35% which is totally disproportionate to the size of the village and at a density that is significantly above the village at present. The existing infrastructure is already at capacity and would be totally swamped by the number of new dwellings proposed and the character of the village would be changed forever.

The local primary school has been at capacity for many years and has no room for expansion. The local medical centre is also at capacity. There is no mention in the submission of essential facilities such as shops. The railway station car park is full every day and parking in East Horsley village centre is very difficult.
We ask you to reconsider the proposals concerning Horsley and change the plan to incorporate a consensus of the views expressed by all Horsley residents. Following a local survey of residents, it was considered that a limited need for some 20 affordable homes was required in West Horsley to accommodate local people, especially the young and the elderly, and we ask that you respect these views.

1. I object to Policy S2 for the proposed provision of the very high overall housing numbers of 13,800 new homes (690 new dwellings being built every year for 20 years) and I object on two grounds; these housing numbers have been imposed on the borough with no real consultation being undertaken with the residents of East Clandon and the borough as a whole. Secondly, the housing numbers are based on a high-growth economic development plan which in itself has had no consultation with us and this combined with estimated demand from London residents will turn Guildford into a dormitory town for London.

4.0 SECTION 4.1: STRATEGIC POLICIES

Policy S2: Borough Wide Strategy

4.1 We broadly support the overall level of housing provision proposed in the Local Plan which is consistent with national planning policy and the Government’s objective of rapidly increasing the supply of new housing by 2020.

4.2 In progressing the Local Plan to an Examination, GBC will need to consider the recently published DCLG 2014-based household projections which show an increased need for housing in Guildford when compared to the previous 2012-based projections which were used in the SHMA. These latest projections, together with any other more up-to-date data i.e. economic forecasts, could point to an increase in the objectively assessed need for housing.

4.3 MGH objects to the proposed phasing of housing delivery set out in Policy S2. The National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF) is clear that local planning authorities should “boost significantly the supply of housing” (paragraph 47). There is plainly an urgent need to significantly increase the level of housing provision within the Borough from the unsustainably low levels experienced in recent years (principally as a result of policy constraints restricting land supply). The inclusion of a phased approach to housing delivery is unduly negative and unnecessary.

4.4 As set out below, MGH is committed to bringing forward the delivery of housing at Gosden Hill at an early stage in the plan period. This will likely include a contribution to supply in the first five years of the plan period.

4.5 Furthermore, the annual housing numbers set out in the phasing schedule do not take account of the under delivery in housing provision since the start of the plan period (2013). We therefore seek an amendment to Policy S2 which removes phasing and provides for an annual average figure covering the plan period.

4. I object to policy S2 where it states “the figures set out in the Annual Housing Target table sum to a total of 12,426” yet the figures in the table add up to 9,810 – what is the significance of the missing 2,616? This is one of a number of glaring examples of why the plan is not sound.

5. I object to the plan period being inconsistent. This is an example (of which there are many) of extremely careless work which gives me no confidence in the content. For example, the foreword mentions an end date of 2034 whereas the introduction 1.2 and 1.3 refer to 2033. Spatial vision uses 2033. What is the plan period? This is very unclear.

5. I object to the inclusion of a 10% buffer in the housing number over the plan period. This is unnecessary.

7. I object to the housing number and particularly the fact that the Council have not, as required used any constraints such as green belt, infrastructure, air quality, AONB, TBHSPA etc. I believe that the housing number is unsound and open to legal challenge.

17. I object to Para 4.1.11 which should clearly identify the version of the LAA and not just refer to “the latest”.

35. I object to the housing number of 693/annum as no constraints have been applied – the GL Hearn methodology has compounded past errors in international migration forecasts and the whole SHMA needs to be re-visited and corrected as a matter of urgency.

I object to the 2016 Draft Local Plan with particular regard to the amount of proposed development around the Burpham and Merrow area. This plan merges all the villages along the A3 from the Hog’s Back to the M25. Yet there is no provision for specific infrastructure improvements to either the A3 or local roads. Just some of the reasons are listed below:

- Once the Green Belt has gone it will be lost forever.
- There is a lack of evidence for the doubling of housing need numbers – 693 a year is more than double the previous figure of 322.
- There is a proposed disproportionate level of development in one area of the borough ie Burpham.
- There is a disturbing lack of specific details about essential infrastructure.

Transport and Infrastructure. When I was born in the 50's the roads were adequate and there was little congestion. As the country prospered car ownership increased but really the only reactions to the were the introduction of the 'gyratory system' and improvements to the A3. Guildford is also a market town that attracts people and a 40% increase in retail space will increase that attraction and thus require a plan to cope with both the increased traffic and the attendant parking requirements.

• The focus should be on bringing currently empty properties back into active housing use and using all available brownfield sites to provide the homes actually needed rather than allowing Green Belt land to be destroyed in pursuit of profits for developers of market housing.
• Guildford Borough Council has no mandate to pursue such an aggressive growth strategy, which is driving the insetting of villages, growth of retail centres outside the town and proposed housing development far in excess of, and of a mix not appropriate to, that actually needed by the Borough’s residents.

We are writing to express our dismay at the plan to expand our town further. To sacrifice even more of our precious green belt seems madness. The proposal for more than 12,426 homes is excessive, given that the population growth could be an over estimate.

We need a plan but not one based on questionable evidence.

It is irresponsible to use all available green field sites, in a single plan leaving none for the future

Brown field opportunities should be maximised to provide the homes that are needed otherwise this is a wasted opportunity

Guildford should be trying to constrain its overall housing growth as other places are doing and it is not acceptable if it chooses not to do so

I object to the proposed distribution of housing in the 2016 Local Plan. This Local Plan identifies sites for some 1,800 new homes to be built in the Central Wards of Guildford and some 11,000 in the outer wards of Guildford Borough with some 9,600 of the new homes in the outer wards being congregated in very large sites of 400 homes or more. Without doing detailed sums I suspect this proposed provision is almost in a directly inverse proportion to the existing housing stock. This is monumentally unfair to residents who have typically invested between a quarter and a third of their income in the home and environment of their choice. The Plan needs to be revisited and use innovative methods to establish a fairer distribution of new housing in proportion to existing housing, which for example, sees Send Marsh / Burnt Common expected to accept an increase in 48% in home numbers and Send Parish as a whole see an increase of 20% plus with other areas being allocated increases of 2.5% or less.

1. Distribution of Housing

The Society objects to the proposed distribution of housing in the 2016 Local Plan. This Local Plan identifies sites for some 1,800 new homes to be built in the Central Wards of Guildford and some 11,000 in the outer wards of Guildford Borough with some 9,600 of the new homes in the outer wards being congregated in very large sites of 400 homes or more. Without doing detailed sums the Society suspects this proposed provision is almost in a directly inverse proportion to the existing housing stock. This is monumentally unfair to residents who have typically invested between a quarter and a third of their income in the home and environment of their choice. The Plan needs to be revisited and use innovative methods to establish a fairer distribution of new housing in proportion to existing housing.

1. Overprovision of Housing

The Society objects to the overprovision of housing provided for in the Local Plan 2016. The plan provides for approximately 31% oversupply of the OAN number while making no allowance for infill housing that is not envisaged by the Local Plan, rather seeing this infill is seen as ‘windfall supply’ or should that be oversupply. If the Target numbers are to be recalculated as discussed in Section 1 above this oversupply may be around 40% or more. Whilst the Society can understand a desire to allow for some sort of oversupply in the short term it seems madness to allow for oversupply some 17 years into the future. No one can see that far ahead, three different governments will have come and gone by then and policies will have changed. The fact is that any substantial sites which identified in the plan will inevitably lead to housing blight in their immediate vicinity until they are identified as not required. The Council must make decisions and eliminate some sites before the Plan is finalised.

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on the Guildford Borough Proposed Submission Local Plan (GBPSLP).

The Society wishes to register its concerns over GBPSLP and the Evidence Base which supports it. We realise that the ' Evidence Base is not a part of the consultation process, but because it underlies the whole of the GBPSLP, and we continue to see the inaccuracies and inconsistencies which we outlined in our previous letters in response to the Options document (2013) and the Draft Local Plan ((2014), we therefore Object to the Proposed Submission Local Plan.

We outline below some of the specific items to which we object.

Policy S2 - Borough wide Strategy.

We consider that the Housing Targets on which the policy is based are derived from an Objectively Assessed Housing Need (OAN) and a Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) which are flawed. The modelling to produce the original number has not been demonstrated to adequately represent either the historic immigration figures nor the projected figures issued by the Office of National Statistics (ONS). The further increases made to the demographic starting point are in some cases inappropriate and in some case erroneous. Given that the proposed developmental needs in the borough are based on what we consider to be inaccurate data we object to Policy S2.

Policy S2

HCPS strongly object to the number of houses identified for provision during the plan period.

Our objection is mainly based on two considerations:

1. The total number is based on a flawed Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) for Guildford. The major contributors to the inaccuracy in the numbers are: perceived errors in the net migration figures for the borough; the inclusion of student housing needs which are already accounted for elsewhere in the calculations; inconsistent use of data from disparate sources to calculate the homes needed to support job growth. The detailed argument for this is to be found in Neil McDonald's report of June 2017 entitled "Review of GL Hearn’s Guildford Addendum to the West Surrey SHMA".

2. The total housing number resulting from the flawed calculations is then used without any constraints. It is our contention that the target number used should have constraints applied in correcting Objectively Assessed Needs (OAN) to take account of Green Belt, infrastructure and other relevant issues.

Since the target numbers for housing requirements underlie most of the other policies in the proposed Plan, doubts concerning their accuracy mean that much of the current document remains suspect.

Policies

Housing targets

1. I object to policy S2. The figures given for growth needed in the number of houses amounts to 25% increase over the plan period whereas the National Statistical Office’s estimate of population growth in the same period is 15%. Why is there this discrepancy? According to census data much of the growth in the period up to 2012 was not from natural increase in the local population but from incomers. In the post-Brexit situation this growth is unlikely to continue and could turn negative. No justification is given for the high rate of growth proposed or why it creates an exceptional situation. It appears to be an artificial target self-imposed by GBC Spatial Strategy.

Spatial Strategy.

1. I also object to policy S2 on spatial strategy grounds. Though the general principles are unexceptionable the implementation, in putting a major proportion of new housing in the Green belt in the east of the Borough is detrimental to the wider national interest in the Metropolitan Green Belt, containing the spread of London. With over 64% of new homes proposed for the Green Belt its integrity and effectiveness will be seriously damaged. The insetting of Ripley, Send, Send Marsh and the Horsleys from the Green Belt coupled with the changes to their areas of settlement and the creation of the new settlement on the former Wisley airfield will thin out the Green Belt where it is most needed.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Attached documents:
The University broadly supports the proposed provision under this policy of 13,860 new homes, 36,200 – 47,200 sq. m. of office and research development (B1a and b) floorspace and 47.7 – 5.3 ha of industrial (B1c, B2 and B8) employment land, to help meet the needs for new homes, support the economy and supply 3,200 additional B class jobs. This is an amount of development that will see a step change in provision of new homes in the borough against a background of under-provision.

It is noted that the level of housing that the borough is planning for equates to 693 dwellings per annum when spread over the 20-year plan period, which accords with the objectively assessed need identified for Guildford in the West Surrey Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) published in October 2015.

The University considers that the 13,860 homes figure should be regarded as a minimum (i.e. at least 13,860). This would not preclude additional sustainable development from coming forward during the plan period where it could be demonstrated that this made a positive contribution towards meeting the borough’s needs and if allocated sites were not likely to be delivered during the plan period. It would also allow the opportunity to address matters such as potentially increasing pressure to respond to changing housing needs arising from London.

The University also notes that the 99 ha of safeguarded land identified in the July 2014 draft local plan, which was safeguarded “to provide a level of flexibility and to ensure that the realigned Green Belt boundaries endure beyond the plan period” is not part of the current version of the plan. Whilst the University did not agree with the locations of the safeguarded land in the 2014 draft plan, it supports the principle of safeguarded land, as this provides flexibility for the long term and would mean that the next review of the local plan may not need to consider further alterations to green belt boundaries.

It is not clear why the idea of having such safeguarded land is no longer included in the plan. The University considers that it is important that the plan should include this as it will be important to show that the plan, in altering green belt boundaries, has looked to the longer term beyond the plan period. Given the tightness of the green belt boundary in the borough it is therefore not clear how the Council now intends to accommodate any additional housing pressure over and above what it is currently planning for, if the need arises.

Without safeguarded land there is no safety buffer should housing needs develop further, which is not a sustainable way of planning for the future of the borough.

Without the provision of safeguarded land, it is possible that there will be pressure to undertake further alterations to the green belt boundary later on in the plan period, or in a future period beyond that, whereas the matter can be suitably dealt with now in anticipation of any potential further housing needs.

The University therefore considers that the borough-wide strategy set out in Policy S2 should include safeguarded land, altering the green belt boundary in this plan to allow space for future development needs.

Such land should be well located in relation to the urban area. Land at Blackwell Farm allocated for an urban extension under Policy A26 is particularly well located in relation to the employment areas to the west of the town, and will see further employment creation as a significant part of the borough’s planned employment land is located there. It will have a new access on the A31 that will help to ease pressure on the A3. It is located on the western end of the Sustainable Movement Corridor that links it to Guildford Town Centre.

There is land immediately adjacent to the west of the land allocated in Policy A26 at Blackwell Farm that is available and is suitable for inclusion as safeguarded land. This land is well placed in relation to the new A31 access and employment land, and the new sustainable transport links could easily be extended into this area. The area is shown on the plan at Annex 1 to these comments.

The University considers that the land should be identified as safeguarded land and the green belt boundary should be altered accordingly.

The following should be added to Policy S2:

“Areas identified as safeguarded land will be protected from development other than that which is necessary in relation to the operation of existing uses, change of use to alternative open land uses or temporary uses. All proposals must not prejudice the possibility of long term development on safeguarded land sites. The status of safeguarded land sites will only change through a review of the local plan.”

There should also be a new section of explanatory text as follows:

“The identification of safeguarded land ensures that green belt boundaries will last beyond the end of the local plan period. This is in accordance with national planning policy which states the intention for green belt boundaries to have permanence in the long term.

The green belt boundary will be altered to exclude the safeguarded land. Consideration of the permanent development of safeguarded land, such as for housing or employment, will only occur through a change to the allocation through a review of the local plan. During a local plan review, the reassessment of safeguarded land will involve determining for each site whether in the prevailing circumstances there is a case for releasing some or all of the land for development, or whether it should be maintained as safeguarded land until the next review of the plan.”

The plan should go on to identify the safeguarded land as a new site allocation policy (or policies) accordingly.

Paragraph 4.1.8

The University supports the recognition in this paragraph that not all development can be located within the identified sustainable locations.

The University therefore broadly supports the proposal to release allocated land in other areas, and notes the list provided, which includes urban extensions.

However, the University considers that urban extensions to Guildford, as the principal town in the borough, provide some of the most sustainable locations. The University has suggested a change to paragraph 4.1.6 to reflect this, and suggests an additional change to paragraph 4.1.8 as outlined below.

Hence the University suggests that the bullet points in paragraph 4.1.8 be redrafted as follows (and in the context of the University’s proposed change to paragraph 4.1.6 to include urban extensions as some of the most sustainable locations):

- Countryside beyond the green belt
- New settlement at the former Wisley airfield
- Development around villages (including some expansion).

Table 1 – Planning Delivery between 2018 and 2023

The University welcomes the inclusion of land at Blackwell Farm in the list of urban extensions to Guildford.

The University notes that the Blackwell Farm site is allocated in Policy A26, and has provided further responses to that specific policy, and to other site specific policies as necessary.

Table 2 – Hierarchy of retail and service centres

The University notes and is supportive of the inclusion in table 2 of Blackwell Farm as a future location for a new urban local centre as part of the mixed-use strategic development.
A new local centre is an important part of the proposals for Blackwell Farm and indeed Policy A26 highlights the elements that it would be expected to accommodate.

Policy S2; Planning for the Borough: our spatial development strategy

The University of Surrey notes that there have been changes to the plan period (from 2013-33 to 2015-34) and to the amounts of development proposed, including a reduction in the number of new homes. It considers that this has potential implications for the plan’s ability to provide the significant boost to housing supply encouraged by the NPPF. The plan is therefore likely to be unsound. Further details on the University’s position are provided below.

New homes

The number of new homes to be provided has been reduced from 13,860 to 12,426, albeit over a 19 year period rather than the previous 20 year period.

It is also noted that the amount of homes to be provided is now expressed as a minimum (‘at least 12,426’), and the University supports this wording change as it recognises that the plan should provide for at least this number and could provide for more. This addresses a comment made by the University at the previous consultation.

The University notes that, as previously, the plan seeks to meet the Objectively Assessed Need (OAN) for new homes, an approach that the University has supported.

However, there has been a change in the OAN to 654 homes per year, a decrease from the previous version of the plan (693 homes per year).

The University considers that the impact of meeting unmet needs from within the West Surrey HMA does not appear to have been fully addressed in these changes to the plan. It is apparent that there is unmet need of 3150 homes arising from Woking and that Guildford should be playing its part in helping to meet this. This matter was raised by the Inspector at the Waverley local plan examination hearings on 27 June 2017.

The Inspector at the Waverley hearings also considered that there needed to be a significant uplift in Waverley for affordability reasons.

Whilst recognising that the Waverley Inspector’s comments are made at the examination hearings of a different plan, the University is aware that the comments are in the context of the same HMA, encompassing Woking, Waverley and Guildford together.

The result is that the OAN figure of 654 homes per annum in the current Guildford local plan (lower than the 693 per annum that was in the 2016 Submission Plan) is likely to be on the light side and may well have to rise to take account of a proportion of Woking’s unmet need and a greater uplift to address affordability.
The University notes that in this context it is likely that more land will need to be found to accommodate a higher OAN, and the plan therefore appears to be unsound on the issues of addressing OAN and identifying enough land to meet the requirements of development.

However, it is acknowledged that there are infrastructure constraints that require ‘backloading’ of much of the housing delivery towards the end of the plan period. A greater housing number would need to take account of this.

The plan addresses the infrastructure constraint and backloading by assuming that a proportion of the strategic site delivery around Guildford might spill over beyond the plan period. This approach may be appropriate for an element of additional provision.

In this respect, the University notes that the Blackwell Farm allocation (Policy A26) has been reduced in size since the draft plan (Regulation 18) consultation, with the removal of land to the south of the current allocation. There was a consequent reduction in the site capacity from 2250 homes to 1800 (approximately). Should the OAN be revised upwards from the 654 now proposed in the targeted changes, and GBC need to identify further land to meet a higher OAN, then the reinstatement of the part of the Blackwell Farm site allocation that was previously removed would help to meet an increase. The removal of the land was not because the land was unavailable (it is available) or of new evidence of hard constraints to development (no new evidence of previously unknown constraints has emerged), but because of a change in the green belt study methodology. The suitability, availability and deliverability of the land has not changed.

The re-allocation of this land as part of the Policy A26 requirement would see a total allocation of 2250 homes (an additional 450) of which it could be assumed that 750 (rather than 300) would be delivered beyond the plan period. This is well within the capacity of the whole site.

In respect of the likelihood that there will continue to be limits on the amount of land that can be found on previously developed sites in the urban areas, and that the most sustainable locations for growth will be around Guildford town, the plan should also amend the green belt boundary through this local plan review to identify safeguarded land that is to be released for development in a future local plan review. The NPPF allows for this approach, and indeed encourages it as it means that green belt boundaries are not continually altered with each plan review.

Whilst the Draft local plan in 2014 had some areas of safeguarded land, these have been removed and the plan currently makes no provision. It is the University’s opinion that the plan is not sound without an element of safeguarded land. This is because the plan will not be effective; it will not guard against the need for further green belt boundary changes in the next plan period. This point has already been made in the University’s previous comments on the 2016 Regulation 19 plan.

This current consultation is accompanied by an updated Green Belt Toic Paper (2017) that addresses the reasons why the Council has chosen not to provide safeguarded land. The University's comments on this updated topic paper on this issue are attached.

Housing target table

The University notes that the annual housing target table accompanying policy S2 sums to 9,810. The supporting text at 4.1.9a specifically states that the total in the table is 12,426. This is clearly not the case, and this should be explained.

Looking at the Housing Trajectory in the LAA addendum published with the plan, the following is apparent. The cumulative annual total from 2015/16 to 2033/34 (start and end dates of the plan) at 654 per annum is 12,426 (654x19). The total for the 15 years from 2019 to 2034 that are identified in the table is 9,810 (654x15).

Hence the statement in para 4.1.9a that ‘the figures set out in the Annual Housing Target table sum to a total of 12,426 homes’ is wrong, as that table starts at 2019/20 and does not include the provision from 2015/16 to 2018/19. This statement should therefore be corrected and a clear explanation be provided.

The University notes that the Housing Trajectory in the LAA shows a projected figure of 13,581 completions over the plan period, being 1,155 greater than the target (and the OAN). It is said that this over provision provides a buffer (of just less than 10%) and this gives flexibility to meet the target (OAN) of 12,426.
The University notes that the phasing starts late; the plan covers 2015-34 but the table says nothing about what has been provided 2015 to 2017 or will be provided 2017-19 (it starts at 2019-20). It is apparent from the Housing Delivery Topic Paper that completions and outstanding capacity since 2015 are included in the 13,581 provisions figure stated in the LAA. It would be helpful to have some reference to the whole picture in the local plan itself.

During the plan period (2013-33), we will make provision for a minimum 13,860 new homes, 37,200 - 47,200 sq m of office and research and development (81a and b) floorspace and 4.7 - 5.3 hectares of industrial (81c, 82 and 88) employment land to help meet the needs for new homes, support the economy and supply 3,200 additional 8 class jobs.

We also object to the proposed phasing of the annual housing target as set out in the policies. Such an approach is inconsistent with the framework that requires LPAs to significantly boost the supply of housing now. This is especially relevant in Guildford Borough which has been the subject of a long standing housing land supply deficit and has persistently under delivered against identified needs. Consequently we object to the annual housing target table included at the bottom of Policy S2.

Having regard to the site allocations listed in Table 1 (see also page 123), we consider our site represents one of the most logical locations for growth, having regard to its highly sustainable location (adjacent to Wanborough Station) and its enabling function in providing land for a secondary school that will meet wider needs across the western half of the Borough.

The revisions proposed above would help safeguard the policy in light of the latest CLG household projections and be consistent with paragraph 47 of the NPPF that seeks to boost significantly the supply of housing.

Proposed Changes:

The addition of the wording 'a minimum'.

Removal of the 'annual housing target' table at the bottom of Policy S2.

POLICY S2: Borough Wide Strategy

Updated 2014 based household projections were issued by CLG earlier this month. These revealed an uplift in the household projection for the Borough from 499 dwellings per annum (2012 based projections) to 538 dwellings per annum. It follows that the need to maximise delivery at the strategic sites is yet more pressing given these revised projections. For these reasons, we propose that Policy S2 is amended to include the words 'a minimum' in front of the housing requirement, as per the below:

'During the plan period (2013-33), we will make provision for a minimum 13,860 new homes, 37,200 - 47,200 sq m of office and research and development (B1a and b) floorspace and 4.7 - 5.3 hectares of industrial (B1c, 82 and 88) employment land to help meet the needs for new homes, support the economy and supply 3,200 additional B class jobs.

This is especially relevant in Guildford Borough that has been the subject of a long standing housing land supply deficit and have persistently under delivered against identified needs. Consequently we object to the annual housing target table included at the bottom of Policy S2.

Policy S.2 Borough Wide Strategy

It is difficult for anyone to predict at this stage what the impact of the Brexit decision will be. What we do know is that most of Guildford should be highly protected from development thanks to long established planning policies such as the Green Belt which are defined and understood by the general public as permanent. It appears that this is not the intention in the draft Local Plan. 44% of the nationally important countryside within the Surrey Hills AONB lies within the Green Belt and about 75% of the area of the borough is further protected by the Thames Basin Heath SPA. Other land such as Registered Commons and Ancient Woodland are also not available for development.

CPRE objects to a draft local plan which calls for an increase in the number of residential dwellings by a quarter. This requirement for a housing figure of 13,860 dwellings is based on the West Surrey Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) prepared by GL Heam for GBC which is shown to be flawed. Green Balance has prepared for CPRE a review of this document for Guildford, Waverley and Woking Districts which maintains that the annual housing figure upon which the Borough Wide Strategy is based for Guildford is far too high. This renders the whole Local Plan for the District unsound.

GBC has not been able to prepare in time an acceptable plan for the Town Centre and the urban area of Guildford, causing undue emphasis to be switched to building on Green Belt countryside around the town. It is in our view unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an uncertain housing target which may well prove increasingly unreliable. CPRE OBJECTION.

It is in our view essential to reconsider the proposals made regarding the priority given to retail and office development, which we believe to be overstated, rather than to housing at an appropriate density on brownfield sites in the town. We question the allowance for the provision of other business employment land such as warehousing. It seems to us that retailing is undergoing a transformation illustrated by the loss of Austin Reid and BHS, the incursion of Aldi, M&S foodshops at rail and petrol stations, and on line purchasing and delivery of all kinds.

We maintain that the gap town of Guildford is a "special case" and should be recognised as such from a planning viewpoint because of its widely protected countryside which should be an ongoing constraint on development and preclude major structural change along the lines proposed. We feel obliged to emphasise again the permanence of the Green Belt, the Surrey Hills AONB and the SPA in this district. CPRE OBJECTION.

homes through local plans, I would like to reassure you that the Government is acting to protect the Green Belt from inappropriate development. National planning policy is explicit that key protections such as the Green Belt cannot automatically be overridden by the presumption in favour of sustainable development. Planning Policy also guarantees strong protection for National Parks, Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty and Sites of Special Scientific Interest. Powers have also been given to councils to resist unwanted garden grabbing and to protect valuable local green spaces from caravan and traveller sites.

In view of this informal statement of national policy, we should like to see GBC reconsider the draft Local Plan that is now under consultation which undermines and erodes the Green Belt in Guildford Borough extensively. CPRE has major objections to the way in which Green Belt policy is being ignored by GBC using the "Objectively Assessed Need" figure for housing of 693 houses per annum as a justification for their recommendations. We object to this approach since we believe it is linked to evidence that is flawed as indicated by Green Balance and other specialists in this field.

The web site goes on to state that "latest statistics show that the level of Green Belt development is now at its lowest rate since modern records began in 1989." This is an achievement which underlines the permanence of the Green Belt policy in stark contrast to what is proposed for Guildford. CPRE therefore objects strongly to the draft GBC Local Plan which it finds to be unsound.

The calculation of the SHMA is flawed as demonstrated above and must be reviewed as a priority.

Guildford is unfortunately a dormitory town for London and the growth of London should be met by the London Boroughs and not fed out into the surrounding Home Counties.

There appears to be double counting of the University’s requirements plus the growth that the University has experienced in the last few years is expected to continue. With the view that further education courses are becoming more expensive this continued growth is unlikely to happen.

In addition the economic growth that the SHMA is based upon is unlikely to occur due to the decision by the Great British public to exit the European Union. We are already seeing property development funds closing because of the concerns about the fallout from the decision on leaving the EU.

There is also a report prepared by GRA that demonstrates that the need for dwellings within the period of the local plan can be significantly reduced.

There is too much development in Wisley (A35) Ripley/Send (A43) and Clandon (A25). The plan is unbalanced with over 5,000 houses proposed between M25 and Burpham, which will merge all the villages and their identities. This is unfair and unreasonable.

I object to the proposals for Guildford as I believe the proposals as drafted would change Guildford’s character forever.

I believe the assessment used by the council to identify housing need and to justify growth on such a scale, is fundamentally flawed and exaggerates need very significantly even before one takes into account the implication of the vote to leave the EEC. I thus object to its use and I support the Guildford Residents Association response (GRA) and oppose Guildford being expanded by one quarter. I also support the views of Cranley Road.

I object that brownfield opportunities are being ignored we need homes in the centre of town not 40% more shops.

I object to the plan being put forward to an inspector at this stage as I do not believe it is ready for this. Similarly I believe the transport evidence is not fit for use. As there are major transport issues unresolved such as another river crossing or a central bus facility.

Policy S2: Planning for the borough – our spatial development strategy

I OBJECT to this policy.

- 13,860 homes are proposed. This number has not been scrutinised by councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden. It is not reasonable to produce unsubstantiated numbers in order to justify major structural change in a widely protected area (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB, approx. 75% protected by SPA).
- It is inappropriate to allocate this housing number, either over the plan period OR across projected sites, when the number itself is unsubstantiated.
- External consultants and members of the public have provided detailed criticisms of the model.
- IF the housing number were substantially lower, and only met housing need, there would be no need to build on Green Belt or open countryside.
- The number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permission, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds 13,860.
- Guildford residents will not accept building homes on open countryside to meet Woking’s designated “need” but this seems to be implied.

Policy S2 seeks to set out the Council’s strategy for planning positively to meet its Objectively Assessed Needs (OAN) as required by the NPPF (paragraphs 14 and 47). In particular, this policy focuses on the Borough-Wide housing target.

In relation to this target, we would note the following:

- The sufficiency of the assessed OAN remains to be established, including in the context of the Local Plan’s obligation to fully address unmet needs in neighbouring authorities;
- The Proposed Submission Local Plan has pushed the plan period back to 2013 to 2033 from 2011 to 2031. Given the significant under-delivery since 2011, despite an increased overall target, the current approach means Guildford is very likely to see fewer homes delivered by 2031 than is required or was previously planned for;
- The phasing of development in the Proposed Submission Local Plan ‘backloads’ the housing target. The overall housing target is equivalent to 693 dwellings per year, but the Council is not planning to deliver that many homes in any year until 2022/23. It is already generating a significant backlog of housing need with only 242 homes delivered in the last full year for which data is available (2014/15);
- The spatial strategy relies on a smaller number of larger sites which, due to infrastructure and other phasing requirements, are often slow to deliver their targeted number of homes. The accompanying housing topic paper suggests that none of the proposed strategic sites will begin to deliver before 2020/21, with the majority of anticipated provision after 2027. Given the long planning period for such sites, even these targets may be ambitious.

As a result, we are of the view that the currently proposed approach will add to the Council’s backlog, does not plan to meet OAN in any reasonable timescale, and in practice will delay required development. On that basis, we do not believe it is positively prepared or effective.

Neither the Proposed Submission Local Plan itself nor the accompanying reports set out a proper assessment of the alternative approaches to meet the OAN, or the impacts of the very significant changes in site allocations since the previous Draft Local Plan (2014) on doing so. We are, therefore, of the view that the current strategy has not been properly justified.

As the Council is aware, the Government sets a very high priority on the delivery of new homes and associated infrastructure, and the failure of the Council to produce an effective strategy to do this means the Proposed Submission Local Plan is not consistent with national policy.

Berkeley Homes has been working alongside Howard of Effingham School for a number of years to deliver much needed housing and a new school to the area. These sites were allocated for development in the Draft Local Plan 2014 but refused planning permission by Guildford Borough Council in March 2016. Consequently, an appeal was lodged against this decision and a public inquiry was held in May 2017. The suitability of the sites has been demonstrated through the inquiry and accordingly, we believe the sites should be included in the Guildford Local Plan as Site's Allocated for Development - for the provision of a replacement Howard of Effingham School and up to 295 residential dwellings.

Following the recent appeal decision on land at Long Reach for the provision of a Suitable Alternative Natural Greenspace (SANG), Guildford has the opportunity to release housing sites in that part of the District and allocating the Howard of Effingham/ Lodge Farm site would assist in delivering homes in this part of the District, including the provision of much needed affordable housing.

You will be aware that the Local Plan will be tested by the Inspector against the four tests of soundness (National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF) para 182), namely that it is positively prepared, justified, effective and consistent with National Policy. We set out below why we are of the view that the Proposed Submission Local Plan does not meet these tests in relation to the Spatial Strategy (Policy S2), Affordable Homes (Policy H2), the Green Belt (Policy P2), and Infrastructure Delivery (Policy IDl).

Policy S2: Borough Wide Strategy

Policy S2 sets out the council's approach to meeting its Objectively Assessed Needs (OAN) as required by the NPPF (paragraphs 14 and 47).

The Proposed Submission Local Plan has pushed the plan period back from 2013-2033 to 2015-2034. Given the Borough's significant under-delivery since 2011, despite an increased overall target, the current approach means Guildford is very likely to see fewer homes delivered by 2033 than is required or was previously planned for.

The phasing of development in the Proposed Submission Local Plan 'backloads' the housing target. The overall housing target is equivalent to 654 dwellings per year, but the Council is not planning to deliver that many homes in any year until 2026/27. It is already generating a significant backlog of housing need with only 388 homes delivered in the last full year for which data is available (2015/16).

The proposed approach does not plan to meet OAN in any reasonable timescale, will add to the Council's backlog, and in practice will delay required development. On that basis, we do not believe it is positively prepared or effective.

The Council will also be aware that from November 2017, authorities that deliver below 85% of the borough's OAN will be expected to plan for an addition 20% buffer on their 5 year plan. Delivery of below 65% from November 2020 the presumption in favour of sustainable development in the National Planning Policy Framework would automatically apply (Housing White Paper 2017).

As the Council is aware, the Government sets a very high priority on the delivery of new homes and associated infrastructure, and the failure of the Council to produce an effective strategy to do this means the Proposed Submission Local Plan is not consistent with national policy.

Sufficient, deliverable sites need to be identified to meet this increasing need for housing land, particularly in the east of the Borough, where capacity has been released due to the grant of permission for SANG land at Long Reach.

Conclusion

As a whole, the Proposed Submission Local Plan June 2017 is greatly flawed. The currently proposed phasing of housing and spatial strategy will not deliver Guildford's Objectively Assessed Needs within a reasonable timeframe, if at all.

The recently granted SANG at Long Reach also releases housing capacity in this part of the Borough and accordingly, the District wide allocations should be reviewed as a whole to ensure appropriate distribution.

The previous Draft Local Plan (2014), substantially based on the same evidence, allocated Howard of Effingham School, Effingham Lodge Farm and Brown's Field (Site Al location 69) to provide homes and a bigger school. This allocation has been removed but remains an appropriate, deliverable and sustainable means of meeting the Borough's need for new infrastructure and homes.

We will continue to seek to work with Guildford Borough Council and Effingham Parish Council to bring forward the delivery of the Effingham sites and are happy to discuss the above points further.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
I am writing in support of the Guildford Residents Associations response to the Local Plan. I oppose the plans to expand Guildford.

I have known Guildford since the early 1970’s and have lived here since 1995. During this time the town has become overwhelmed by traffic. Until the traffic problems have been addressed there would appear to be little point in planning for more housing and retail space as there simply isn't the capacity to absorb more cars.

The physical geography of the town combined with its historical character are what make Guildford such an attractive place to live and work. The planned development of Green Belt land for homes will destroy this environment.

There would appear to be a real need for student housing without which our academic institutions will not thrive as appropriate housing for students is essential to their wellbeing whilst living away from home.

With so many shops standing empty, it would seem ill advised to plan for more retail space.

I would hope to see the traffic issues addressed as an absolute priority, followed by sympathetic development to meet identified specific needs. Brownfield sites should be used creatively before any consideration is given to development of farmland.

I oppose the plan and look forward to seeing a solution to the existing traffic problems and the redevelopment of under utilised existing buildings.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
I object to the average annual target of 654 houses planned to be built over the period until 2034. The evidence in the Guildford Addendum Report (March 2017) is not soundly based. This high number is modelled from the demographic needs within the Borough representing some 85% of the overall projected increase.

The new evidence from GRA’s independent expert shows there is an over estimate of population growth of about 40%. The GBC proposal will result in needless loss of Green Belt and increased congestion.

As resident of Normandy of more than 30 years my comments are going to be about the local plan as it affects this area.

Under the proposed development in the local plan Normandy & Flexford, 2 beautiful rural villages, effectively cease to exist as what is proposed is basically a new town swamping the existing villages.

This is clearly a disproportionate level of development.

In addition to the brownfield sites identified by the G.G.G. and others, there are huge areas of ground level parking in the town, land that could be used far more efficiently. The university should also be made to honour the promise it made, when given the 60 hectares of land at Manor Park, and build the accommodation for the 3,000 students still outstanding. In fact, it has been calculated that there is sufficient and on that sprawling site, to accommodate all the 7,000 students currently living in rented houses in the town, thus freeing up some 2,000 houses for Guildford families. This would have the added benefit that the houses would pay council tax, which, as houses in multiple occupation, they currently do not.

I also object to the way GBC is attempting to deal with the shortage of affordable housing in Guildford. In his talk here last year, the eminent planning expert, Alan Wenban-Smith, said that to expect commercial developers to build anything like 40% affordable housing, on prime Green Belt land, that they have paid premium prices for, was completely unrealistic. 'It just isn't going to happen' he said.

He also pointed out that it is actually hugely more expensive to build on greenfield sites, than on brownfield sites, because it is so very costly to have to put in all the infrastructure and services, whereas with brownfield sites, some, or any of them, will already be there. So if it is affordable housing you are seeking to provide, surely you have to go for the least expensive sites, not the most expensive ones. You are left wondering whether GBC is either very naive about how commercial developers operate, or whether they are not really serious about providing affordable homes.

As a resident of Wood St. Village, I particularly object to the proposed huge development at Blackwell Farm, on the northern slopes of that beautiful and iconic feature of Surrey's landscape, the Hog's Back.

I object for many reasons. Firstly, because the N.P.P.F states that the Green Belt should be considered permanent, the most modest definition of permanence being defined as at least 20 years, [which many people may consider as not very permanent at all]. But even by that weakest definition of permanence, the university is surely not entitled to apply to push back the Green belt till 2024, as it was pushed back for them in 2004 when they were given the 60 hectares of prime Green Belt land at Manor Park. The N.P.P.F. also states that planners should choose land 'of low environmental value' and 'refuse permission when it would have a detrimental effect on ancient woodland'. The whole site is either A.O.N.B. or A.G.L.V., it is bordered by ancient woodland to the east and to the west, and to the north by common land designated as an S.N.C.I. I cannot see how, by any stretch of the imagination, that could be described as being 'of low environmental value'. Walking across the proposed site affords the most extensive panoramic views of the north side of the Hog's Back A.O.N.B., in it's A.G.L.V. setting, to be found anywhere between Guildford and the Farnham conurbation. There is no view like that in the whole of East Anglia.

The whole area is a green lung, mitigating the air pollution in Guildford, due to the prevailing westerly winds. It is also highly productive farmland, and it has been estimated it produces something of the order of 1.5 million loaves of bread each year. Planners are also required by law to do what they can to maintain biodiversity, are they not? I object strongly that this whole local plan, by concentrating development on greenfield sites, totally fails in its duty, in this regard. Local wildlife experts have observed over 50 species of wild birds on Blackwell Farm, including four species whose decline has been so drastic in recent years that their special protection is specifically mentioned in the N.P.P.F. These are the skylark, the yellowhammer, the linnet, and the lapwing. I have personally seen all these species on the site in recent years. Our green spaces are a precious and finite resource, shown by recent studies to be of great psychological benefit to the nation, and should only be destroyed as a last resort, not as, in this case, a first resort, when the university has ample planning permission to build on brownfield sites at Manor Park.

The second important development since the last consultation is the publication of the INRIX report, which revealed that Guildford has the worst traffic congestion of any town in the whole of the U.K., and worse than many major cities like Glasgow, Cardiff, Belfast, Liverpool, and Bristol, making it the sixth worst congestion hotspot in the entire U.K. This independent report completely vindicates what many people have been saying for years, that Guildford is not a suitable site for mass development on the sort of scale proposed in the local plan. Nor will the modifications to the slip roads on the A3 significantly improve the situation, as the main problems are the sheer weight of traffic, which will only get heavier, due to the large developments at Aldershot, Farnborough, Cranleigh, Dunsfold, and Blackwell Farm, making the congestion at the junction of the A3 and A31 even worse, and the fact that the A3 narrows to four lanes through Guildford. So I object to the changes to the local plan because of the intolerable traffic congestion they will cause, as now confirmed by the INRIX report.

The INRIX report also deals with the question of the supposed government pressure on local authorities to just keep building more and more houses. Surely no government minister, with any common sense, on being shown it's findings, is going to think Guildford is a suitable site for mass development.

There is never any mention of the old CEGB site at the bottom of town it had a high rise building of offices surrounded by the same surely that would create many affordable dwellings on a high rise basis without owners needing cars particularly with the close proximity of railway and buses.

I am a resident of West Horsley and wish to register objections to the revised Draft Local Plan. I understand the need for some additional housing but feel that the proposals now being put forward are inappropriate in scale and have not been properly justified. Indeed I understand that even the Council itself do not know the basis on which the number of new homes in the Borough has been calculated, which cannot give any trust at all that it is a sensible number and not a developer’s wish list! A large number of new homes will provide a ‘pull’ factor into the area from Greater London which would not have existed otherwise. Such a demand will never be satisfied.

- I object to the manner in which a total figure of over 13,000 additional houses in the Borough has been presented with no justification of the actual need.
- I object to the fact that a very large proportion of the proposed new housing should be in the Green Belt and/or on agricultural land which will be lost for ever
- I object to the disproportionate allocation of housing to the Horsley area, the opposite side of the Borough from areas of economic development

This policy sets out the objective of adding 13,860 new homes to Guildford Borough over the 2013-2033 period of the Proposed Submission Local Plan, equating to an annual build of 693 new homes per annum.

I have serious concerns about the scale of this building programme, which represents a net increase of 25% in the housing stock of Guildford Borough, a remarkable rate of increase for a borough in the English Home Counties. It is even more remarkable when the official statisticians at the Office of National Statistics (“ONS”) are projecting a population increase of some 15% for Guildford Borough over this same period.

Some explanation for this mismatch may partly be found in the conclusion of the West Surrey Strategic Housing Market Assessment, (“SHMA”), which looks at how the annual housing target of 693 homes is comprised. It estimates that 517 homes per annum arise from ‘the demographic starting point’ – effectively what the official statisticians at the ONS and the Department of Communities and Local Government (“DCLG”) are predicting Guildford will require based upon their population and household forecasts. To this is added in the SHMA another 120 homes per annum in order to ‘support economic growth’, a further 31 homes per annum in order to ‘improve affordability’ and 25 homes due to ‘student growth’, all of which totals up to 693 homes per annum.

Economic growth is already factored into the statistics produced by ONS and DCLG, so what GBC are proposing actually comes on top of the official household growth forecasts for the borough. Moreover, the GBC Affordable Housing Policy H2 is proposing that all development sites (other than the very smallest) will be required to have 40% of their homes offered as affordable housing, so why another 31 homes per annum is needed as affordable housing on top of this 40% ratio is quite incomprehensible.

Furthermore, DCLG research has concluded that there is on average a 97% correlation between population growth and household formation. Therefore, if GBC’s target of a 25% increase in housing stock were actually realised, the outcome will be that Guildford Borough would see its population rise by around 25% over this period. This means that the resultant population growth for Guildford Borough would be at a level 67% higher than the official forecasts.

One of my particular concerns in reviewing the Proposed Submission Local Plan is that the impression is conveyed upon the reader that GBC’s housing targets are effectively needed to fulfil NPPF requirements or because of central government policy – in other words that GBC has no real choice but to put forward these projections, unpalatable though they might be. However, the reality is very different. GBC has voluntarily chosen to pursue a policy of aggressive civic and economic expansion – one might perhaps term it a policy of ‘Forced Growth’ – which underpins all of the housing policies in the Local Plan. In short, the difference between the official statisticians’ forecasts and GBC’s target of a 25% increase in housing stock is entirely down to a political choice made by GBC.

Of course, there is nothing fundamentally wrong in GBC adopting a Forced Growth policy for the Borough – not so long as that policy is made clearly and explicitly and is fully supported by a majority of its electorate. However, I doubt whether this is actually the case. It is certainly not a vision that is shared by myself, which unequivocally rejects GBC’s Forced Growth policy.
Therefore I object strongly to the borough housing targets set out in Policy S2.

The level and concentration of development cannot deliver economic, social or environmental conditions - the level of congestion is already high, mitigated only by areas of green belt. I believe the plan rides roughshod over greenbelt and as such will fundamentally change the character of the countryside here without delivering the benefits it promises.

I believe that the local plan is fundamentally flawed and should be much more rigorously tested before it is allowed to proceed.

We need to develop more Brown field sites into integrated variety sites

Homes- Starter, family, down-sizers, green, especially social;

Leisure and community spaces and places which are accessible by foot, cycle, car or public transport.

We are very lucky to live where we do, we need to share, compromise but not lose its fundamental greenness

I am writing to you to object wholly to the Local Plan June 2016.

I will head my objections and then explain these objections in more detail.

- Policy, Site Proposals and NPPF Framework
- Housing Density
- Drainage
- Education
- Infrastructure
- Summary

Policy Site Proposals

I am horrified that the Plan targets the Horsley’s with a 35% increase in homes, the highest in the borough. This would remove the two separate villages from the Green Belt and merge them; thus increasing urban sprawl. The Government’s own Housing and Planning Minister, Brandon Lewis, stated housing demand is not enough to change Green Belt boundaries. The NPPF clearly states that inappropriate development is by definition harmful to the Green Belt and should not be approved except in very special circumstances. This alone shows the Local Plan evidence to be flawed. The estimate for housing needs would bring more people into the Borough not providing local needs for those already here.

Housing Density

The density of proposed homes is far too great and would merge two existing separate villages into a town. This together with the proposal at Wisley (another town) would kill off our local community, with vast swathes of Green Belt lost forever. Many people visiting the area comment on its natural beauty and quaintness. This would also be lost forever.

I am much concerned that, if this plan is approved, development will be "approved in principle".

If this is so, it would appear to go against all ideas of local democracy. What mechanism will there be for any serious comments to be heard & considered in specific cases?

I understand the important need for housing, etc., but environmental considerations are also vital.

OBJECT. 13860 homes are proposed. This number has not been scrutinised by councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden. It is not reasonable to produce unsubstantiated numbers in order to justify major structural change in a widely protected area (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB, approx. 75% protected by SPA).

It is inappropriate to allocate this housing number, either over the plan period OR across projected sites, when the number itself is unsubstantiated. External consultants and members of the public have provided detailed criticisms of the model. IF the housing number were substantially lower, and only met housing need, there would be no need to build on Green Belt or open countryside.

The number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permission, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds 13860. Guildford residents would not accept building homes on open countryside to meet Woking’s designated “need” but this seems to be implied.

I object to the inclusion of all Green Belt sites, and particularly the following sites, on the basis that (per the policy objections listed above) the need for use of Green Belt land is unsustainable and exceptional circumstances have not been adequately demonstrated for their removal from the Green Belt, as required by NPPF 83 inter alia:

A25 Gosden Hill
A26 Blackwell Farm
A35 Wisley
A38 – A41 Land around West Horsley
A42 Clockbarn Nursery
A43 Garlicks’ Arch
A43 a Burnt Common
A44 Send Hill
A46 Land between Normandy and Flexford
A47 West of the Paddocks, Normandy

I object to the amended policy S2 the Borough Wide Strategy and the commitment to build 12,426 homes based on the Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) 2017 prepared by GL Hearn because it has not addressed many of the 32,000 objections made to the 2016 plan.

The OAN “objectively assessed need” figure of 12,426 is far too high.

I am very surprised and concerned that GBC have adopted the OAN of 12,426 homes as the housing target without any application of constraints as required under the National Planning Policy Framework and the National Planning Policy Guidance. The scale of the housing number proposed, inevitably increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

Other local planning authorities appear to take a more balanced view in their approach to planning. The Woking Core Strategy 2012 applies a constraint of 50%.

Historically GBC have correctly applied constraints on housing numbers to protect the Green Belt. The Surrey Structure Plan 1994 advocated a general slowing down in the rates of development “because of the environmental constraints which exist in the County, including Green Belt”. This slowing down was reflected in the requirement that Guildford Borough should accommodate a net increase of 3,800 dwellings between 1991 and 2006. This was a lower rate of development than in previous years. It is interesting to note that the Structure Plan at that time expected sufficient land to arise within the urban areas to accommodate this requirement.

However, it would appear that today GBC have effectively ignored the real potential of the urban area to provide for housing. At the same time GBC have adopted a radically different approach to the policy of the Council over the last 20/30 years and are now ignoring government policy in relation to the Green Belt.

A detailed and comprehensive professional review of the SHMA dated June 2017 by NMSS an independent expert firm dealing with housing and demographics procured by Guildford Residents Association (GRA) has concluded that the OAN figure should be revised down from 560 homes per annum to 400 homes per annum.

The 19 page report by NMSS which can be found on the GRA website entitled “Review of GL Hearn’s Guildford Addendum to the West Surrey SHMA”. It was a real community effort. It was paid for by over separate 20 Guildford Residents Associations and Local Parish Councils none of whom were convinced that the SHMA report procured and presented by GBC was accurate or transparent or accessible in a meaningful way. So they clubbed together and collected contributions from many hundreds of Guildford residents to try to find out the truth of the housing need figure presented in the Local Plan.

The NMSS report includes detailed analysis and financial modelling and was prepared by Neil McDonald who we were lucky to find. He is a niche consultant with the right skills and a national reputation. An independent adviser and commentator on housing demographics. He works with local authorities and others on the estimation of housing need and related issues. He was a civil servant and policy adviser to Ministers for over 30 years, the last 10 advising on housing and planning issues within the Department of Communities and Local Government. His 7 years as a Director at DCLG included a posting as Director, Planning Policy and a period as Chief Executive of the National Housing and Planning Advice Unit.

The NMSS recent study has found that the latest SHMA update by GL Hearn 2017 overestimates population growth for Guildford.

The report shows that an indication of the scale of the problem can be obtained directly from the ONS’s own data. Their estimates of births, deaths and population flows into and out of Guildford suggest that the population should have grown... by 15,000 between the 2001 and 2011 censuses. The censuses, however, record a population growth of only 7,800. The discrepancy is over 90% of the population change indicated by the censuses.

The analysis in the NMSS report demonstrates that the errors must be in the population flows in age groups in which there are significant numbers of students. They are almost certainly the result of the under-recording of the numbers of students leaving Guildford each year.

If the projections are based on under-estimates of the number of students leaving the district each year, they will assume that people will be living in the area who will in fact have left. This means that they will over-estimate the likely growth in Guildford’s population. The ONS’s projections envisage that the population will grow by 21,700 between 2015 and 2034. However, if the estimates of past migration flows are adjusted to make them consistent with the census figures, this could fall to 13,000. As a consequence, the demographically-based estimate of the number of homes needed would be 400 homes a year (2015-34), not 580.

Around 70% of the sites put forward in the Local Plan are still in the Green Belt which flies in the face of current government planning policy. The National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF), National Planning Policy Guidance and case law make it clear that Green Belt is an absolute constraint on housing supply. Exceptional circumstances need to be shown to adjust boundaries.

Other constraints under the NPPF include assessments of sustainability, strategic flood risk assessment, physical constraints on land use and infrastructure constraints (this can include road congestion, schools, drains, power supply and medical requirements).

Constraints should be applied to the Objectively Assessed Housing Need (OAN). However this itself is overstated and should be reduced from 580 per annum to 400.

I object to the fact that GBC have not used the guidance available to reduce the number of houses they propose.

GBC has not taken into account the possibility of lowering the required number of houses by adhering to the restraints offered in various papers. Government guidelines, even before the publication of the Paper, quoted below say that if a Council cannot supply sufficient houses without impinging on the Green Belt, then they do not have to build so many houses.

GBC have gone against the NPPF as they are not adhering to the ruling that Local Plans must plan positively to seek opportunities that meet objectively assessed development needs and be flexible enough to adapt to rapid change unless any adverse impact of doing so would significantly outweigh the benefits or specific policies in the NPPF which suggest that development should be restricted.

House of Commons Briefing Paper; Planning for Housing no 03741, 14 June 2017. Guidance on taking account of constraints. “Need alone, is not the only factor to be considered when drawing up a Local Plan”. This includes “land designated as Green Belt” and “SSSIs”.

“The framework makes clear that once established Green Belt boundaries should only be altered in exceptional circumstances” and “should take into account any constraints such as Green Belt, which indicate that development should be restricted and which may restrain the ability of an authority to meet its need.” (P d055 ref ID.3-045-20141006

In view of the comments above it would appear logical to apply CONSTRAINTS in line with government policy to a corrected OAN. of approximately 50% to account for the fact that 89% of the borough is in the permanent Green Belt and development is not supported by adequate major infrastructure. This reduction is in line with the constraints percentage of 50% applied by Woking Borough Council.

This would result in a more acceptable and practically achievable HOUSING TARGET of 200 homes per annum which over a 20-year period would be 4,000 homes.

All of these homes could be built in the existing urban brownfield areas of the borough and would in part satisfy the 32,000 objections made by residents to the 2016 draft plan and also relieve the additional problems of inadequate infrastructure

There would appear to be two worrying examples where GBC are taking the role of “developer/landowner” rather than “independent not for profit public sector planner” in so far that they have a pre-determined agenda for building on the Green Belt rather than acting as careful, professional and responsible planner guardians. Example 1: Policy A43 Garlicks Arch Burnt Common. The stated, albeit unproven, need by GBC is 400 homes. Normal residential density is 30 homes per ha. Land required would therefore be 13 ha. Land actually proposed to be allocated is 28.9 ha. This is more than double land required in beautiful irreplaceable Green Belt. Example 2: Burnt Common Policy A 53. The stated, albeit unproven need, is 7,000 sq m B1c, B2 and B8 development. Normal density 50% plot ratio. Land required 1.4 ha. Land allocated 9.26 ha. This is more than six and half times more land than necessary in valuable Green Belt which the planners should be looking after.

GBC still fail to acknowledge that the application of constraints to housing need in respect of the Green Belt is a sensible and practical approach to development within the borough and is not only what they have done in the past in previous plans but is also what its neighbouring local planning authorities have done.

The current scale of the housing number proposed in this plan, which is based on a flawed SHMA, inevitably increases the onus for the plan to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number of 4,000 homes, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

It appears that GBC have still failed to grasp the opportunity of following clear government policy to develop in the urban area on previously developed sites. Many of these sites are in their ownership and it would seem a practical and readily achievable alternative which is much more acceptable to local residents.

I feel much of the updated local plan still appears out of date. Current trends in terms of property development such as the marked decline in town centre shopping centres and the need to create modal shift by developing residential uses close to transport hubs appear to have been overlooked.
Unsupported assertions that there is real demand for the expansion of retail, industrial or office space lack credibility especially in the absence of significant planned expansion of residential development in the town centre which is universally acknowledged as a key stimulant for urban economic health.

There are a number of buildings left unoccupied all around the Guildford area and it seems criminal to create further environmental problems by new builds. Indeed it seems to serve corporations who wish to make a profit as opposed to providing homes for people who cannot find affordable housing in this area.

With the lack of opportunity for peer review of the process, let alone public examination of it, the document and its conclusions cannot be considered to be “objective”. Any plan based on this must be considered to be unsound and I therefore object to it in the strongest terms.

Disproportionate number of new houses for local facilities: I strongly object to the number of new houses proposed within the Horsleys and surrounding villages namely Ripley, Send and Clandon. Within the Horsleys, the schools, doctors and train stations are struggling to cope with the Current demand. My family commute to London from Horsley and the trains and car parking are almost at maximum capacity. Assuming that every new house has at least two cars, this means potentially 6000 more cars within a three mile radius of the villages. The impact on the local roads will be tremendous. Parking at Horsley & Effingham junction stations (which are already full), at the shops, at the medical centre and at the village hall will be affected.

The proposed development plan is disproportionate to the size of the villages and is an overkill. It is by directly out of proportion to the size and availability of Brownfield sites already available for development.

I sincerely hope you, the council, will consider my objections and avoid destroying the Borough's Green Belt which is precious and I fear for its demise. Our British countryside needs to be protected for future generations of population, animal, bird and plant life. Please protect our environment from increased pollution and flooding.

Policy S2: Borough Wide Strategy (Including Tables 1 and 2 & the Land Availability Assessment)

Object (not effective, positively prepared nor consistent with national policy in respect of NPPF paragraph 182)

The overall proposal to allocate land to meet the OAN is supported. The GBLP is clearly positively prepared in spirit.

WPI does however maintain a technical objection to draft policy S2, as in application there is a notable shortcoming with respect to accounting for the actual planned growth, development phasing and contingency. There are also inconsistencies throughout in respect of how the Land Availability Assessment (LAA) relates to the proposed policy, the Sustainability Appraisal (SA) and other supporting documents such as the topic papers.

Planned growth and contingency: As set out within Policy S2 the OAN over the plan period is 693 x 20 years = 13,860 homes (2013-2033). It is typically the case that adopted plans include a circa 10% contingency for non-implementation. This is to reflect unimplemented consents and the number and scale of proposed allocations, the vast majority of which are still to progress through planning. It is well known, for example, that the Slyfield Regeneration Area will deliver homes toward the end of the plan period. In addition, there are obvious complexities with some Town Centre sites, notably at the station, exemplified by the recent refusal of planning permission (ref. 14/P/02168).

Draft policy S2 only indicates that the plan "will make provision for 13,860 new homes". This is not a factual statement. It is also not positively prepared, as the plan includes additional provision and hence the emerging policy is ineffective. In addition, the draft policy makes absolutely no references to the sources of housing supply in the period 2013-2018. Instead it includes a phased annual housing target (range 500 dpa to 790 dpa) in the period 2018–2033. This is also ineffective, as the Plan Period is clearly 2013-2033.

There is no requirement or allowance in the NPPF to artificially set a five-year housing land supply period, some two years hence. The NPPF is clear that Local Authorities must maintain a rolling five-year housing land supply.

Phasing: Based upon an annual delivery rate of 693 dpa, draft Policy S2 indicates that housing delivery will not reach parity until 2028/29. In other words, there will be a planned under supply for the first 15 years of the 20-year plan period. WPI understands the rationale behind the phased or stepped approach to housing delivery as set out within the LAA and justified within the Housing Topic Paper. However, this approach requires that GBC make every effort to support the delivery of dwellings from the strategic sites as early as possible in the plan period.

The overall phasing of the Wisley new settlement should reflect the phasing provided in these representations (see comments on draft allocation A35). This should be within the housing trajectory of the GBLP and associated evidence base.
In respect of Table 1, it should be clarified whether the homes indicated in the second column include C2 uses, as well as C3. The allocation for the Wisley new settlement should be to deliver approximately 2,000 homes (C3 use) in addition to 100 homes for the elderly (C2 use).

The Guildford Annual Monitoring Report 2014/15 (October 2015) shows that there is currently 2.4 years' housing land supply within the Borough when calculated against the OAN figure of 693 dpa (West Surrey SHMA, September 2015). This figure has been confirmed in a recent planning appeal decision relating to development at Ash in respect of which planning permission for 56 dwellings was granted by the Inspector (APP/Y3615/W/3135326).

The overall phasing of the Wisley new settlement should reflect the phasing provided in this Representation (see comments on draft Allocation A35). This should be within the housing trajectory of the GBLP and associated evidence base.

Table 1 of the GBLP should be clarified, to outline the numbers of planned houses as ‘approximates’ and whether this includes C2 uses in addition to C3. The delivery of the Wisley new settlement is noted in plan period 1-15 years. This is supported. The intended delivery is entirely within the period 2017-2031.

Brownfield sites

We need to reassess the brownfield sites we currently have and assess whether they are being appropriately used and whether there are more opportunities there that haven't been fully explored e.g. reconsider how the town centre should be redeveloped and include more housing and fewer shops.

I urge you to reconsider this plan to prevent the loss of the beautiful character of our wonderful town and prevent the loss of the greenbelt surrounding it. Once it's gone, it's gone.

I object to the disproportionate distribution of houses across Guildford Borough. The NE has taken an unsustainable number, in an area where country lanes are narrow and volume of traffic using through routes makes roads gridlocked at rush hour.

I object to the methodology of drawing up the plan. Borough employs consultants who allegedly have planning expertise, but have done so without taking account of Surrey County Council highway planners' views, the costs involved of improving the infrastructure currently outweigh their financial capability.

The methodology is also flawed in my view, as this plan has been formulated without regard to Village Neighbourhood Plans. Surely logic would suggest planning is best formed by bottom up approach, not top down.

I object to the 2016 Draft Local Plan as it has had no regard to schools required, additional medical or hospital facilities which would make a plan sustainable.

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

I OBJECT to a suggested increase of housing in West Horsley of 35%.

Please do not carry forward a flawed plan which sees 593 new houses in the Horsleys within 5 years of adopting the plan. I recognise the borough needs new housing but new housing does not need to be put on the Green Belt. Please redevelop brown field sites and listen to village neighbourhood plans. These plans are written by the people who know the villages best and know where new housing could be included without ruining our villages.

Nearly 70% of the proposed housing is on greenbelt land, but the government’s national policy planning framework indicates that new housing does not constitute the very special circumstances which would justify this.

There is a mismatch between new economic development sites in the Borough and the proposed housing developments.

For example a 35% increase is proposed for West Horsley.

The percentage increase in housing in West Horsley is higher than anywhere else in the Borough, but we are not told why and the densities proposed are much higher than those in the village now.

Housing Numbers

While I appreciate the need for additional housing in the borough, I fail to see why the Horsleys should have a population increase that is almost 70% higher than the population estimate increase for the rest of the borough. It is clear that the council have decided to put homes here and NOT spread them across the rest of Guildford.

I would like to write in support of the draft local plan which is currently in the public domain for consultation.

Guildford has some difficult requirements. As is well known through the borough, housing is in short supply and therefore very high cost - prohibitively high for many. We do of course have much beautiful green open space which would be wonderful to protect completely. However, as the plan shows, we need to take a pragmatic approach to balancing the needs of all and taking small sacrifices in the green belt to achieve this.

I hope that after many hours of discussion and review we can finally get a local plan approved, submitted and accepted. Whilst we spend so much time talking about what Guildford needs, we are sadly falling behind neighbouring boroughs and not doing our wonderful town justice. I urge the council to push ahead with this plan, there will never be a plan that is universally accepted. If we try and wait for that, our town will quickly become irrelevant. For a great town like Guildford, this is my biggest fear.

I, like many others I know, want to start my family in this town and allow them to appreciate all the wonderful benefits it has to offer. Please take Guildford out of limbo and allow us to maximise it's potential.

1. POLICY S2

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.
It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

OBJECT. Again, the huge number of houses makes no sense for Guildford, a 'gap town' with serious movement restrictions and natural constraints. The Council has the right not to build on the Green Belt but has not taken it. The HMA figures have been widely and rightly criticised for many reasons but scrutiny of the methodology has been denied.

I object that most new houses designated in the plan will be outside the local urban areas, forcing the increase in rural or semi urban areas which are far more likely to struggle to cope with sudden increases in population. There seems to be very little consideration given to viable alternatives better suited to an increase in affordable accommodation, such as Guildford. This is recognised as an area that can benefit from redevelopment of specific urban areas for lower cost housing rather than solely focus on developing green belt land

The plan states that the proposals will have particular regard to 'the distinctive settlement pattern of the village and the important relationship between the built development and the surrounding landscape'. Over 23% of the Plan’s new housing is proposed in the immediate localities of Ockham, Ripley, Send and the Horsleys (of which 65% is allocated to Former Wisley Airfield (FWA/TFM), an area that at present has only 0.3% of the population of GBC. I don’t see how this can be justified as the proposal recommends increasing the number of properties in the West Horsley alone by over 34% without any significant investment in infrastructure to the surrounding areas. For example, both local primary and secondary schools are hugely overcrowded and oversubscribed and want to instigate plans to expand to at least enable them to meet existing demands.

I OBJECT. 13,860 homes are proposed. This number has not been scrutinised by councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden. It is not reasonable to produce unsubstantiated numbers in order to justify major structural change in a widely protected area (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB, approx. 75% protected by SPA).

The main threat to Guildford’s economy is the lack of infrastructure. With perhaps the exception of the Surrey Research Park, all of the other large employers, such as Game, could operate anywhere in the country. If their workers cannot get to work or meetings are constantly starting late as visitors are held in traffic, then there is nothing to stop the Companies moving. They are here for all that Guildford and its surrounding environment has to offer. If this is diluted by unnecessary development and its impacts then the economic future of the Borough is at risk. This is now partly acknowledged by the Plan but still the housing numbers remain largely unaltered. The Plan now acknowledges the existing infrastructure shortfall but still proposes very significant increases in housing with no deliverable proposals to address the shortfall, let alone cope with all the extra demands a near 10% increase in population would make.

The reduction in housing numbers is largely, and is very much the case for the Gosden Hill Farm site, just moving the completion date. The final development would still be of the same size as before, just completed after the proposed plan period.

Nothing has been done to address the traffic issues for Burpham that 10,000 plus vehicles per day [2,000 homes x an average of 2 per home x 2 (away/home) plus workers/children] plus the additional traffic caused by the Park & Ride proposed for Gosden Hill Farm. With only one entrance and exit for the site the proposal is unsustainable.

Whilst additional housing is needed the figures produced by the SHMA are in error and do not account for the EU Referendum result or use latest ONS population projections. The figures produced by the Guildford Resident Association own SHMA are more sustainable and deliverable. The Plan also does little to provide homes that are actually affordable for key sector and other workers. The 80% of normal market price definition does little to help with Guildford house prices. Also i do not feel it is possible to build sufficient homes to reduce the prices to have a useful effect.

The level of housing growth proposed in Policy S2 of the PSLP – the Objectively Assessed Housing Need and the unmet needs of the HMA

A) The OAHN

1.1 Policy S2: of the PSLP sets out the spatial development strategy for the Borough. It includes the overall housing requirement, which is set at 12,426 dwellings for the period 2015-34 – an average of 654dpa. This is some 1,434 dwellings less than the 13,860 dwellings proposed for the period 2013 – 2033 (693dpa) in the Reg 19 PSLP of June 2016, and is based upon the SHMA Addendum of 2017 which seeks to update the OAN calculation for Guildford using the 2014 population projections.

1.2 Whilst we support the use of the 2014 population projections, these have to be considered in the context of the Housing Market Area (HMA) as a whole, which, as set out in the 2015 SHMA, includes Waverley and Woking. Unfortunately the 2015 SHMA has not been updated to reflect the 2014 population projections across the HMA as a whole. The Addendum of 2017 is for Guildford only and does not demonstrate how the projections play out across the HMA as a whole and thus the implications for the HMA.

1.3 Paragraph 47 of the NPPF is clear that ‘47. To boost significantly the supply of housing, local planning authorities should:

● use their evidence base to ensure that their Local Plan meets the full, objectively assessed needs for market and affordable housing in the housing market area, as far as is consistent with the policies set out in this Framework, including identifying key sites which are critical to the delivery of the housing strategy over the plan period;’

1.4 Furthermore, as set out in PPG, population projections are but the starting point for determining the OAHN. In this context we note that the 2015 SHMA identified a baseline demographic need for 517 dwellings per annum (dpa), based on the 2012-based Household Projections, rebased to take account of ONS 2013 Mid-Year Population Estimates[1]. Paragraph 8.3 of the 2017 SHMA Addendum indicates that based on the ONS 2014-based Sub-National Population Projections the baseline demographic need is for 557 dwellings per annum in the borough. Thus there has in effect been an increase in the baseline need from 517dpa to 557dpa.

1.5 The 2015 SHMA sought to adjust the baseline population projection of 517dpa having regard to economic growth and housing need, affordable housing and market signals, and the need to provide for the demand for student accommodation, to arrive at an overall OAN of 693dpa. The difference in the level of uplift applied to the baseline figure to arrive at the overall OAN is set out below. It is clear from the figures below that the level of uplift to address Economic Growth and Housing Need has reduced significantly and that it is this that has for the most part reduced the overall OAN from 693dpa to – 654dpa.

1.6 The consideration of economic factors in determining the OAHN is to ensure that there is sufficient housing to support the employment growth scenarios set out in the Plan. The fact that Guildford Borough Council (GBC) appear to have decided that economic growth in Guildford will not be as strong as previously expected does not necessarily mean the Council should reduce its housing requirement accordingly. It has to assess the matter in the context of the HMA as a whole and consider the implications of reducing the housing requirement in the context of the demographic baseline and affordability issues. To do otherwise would ignore wider trends and market signals which as set out below clearly demonstrate a need to increase, not decrease the housing requirement.

1.7 In the context of the above PPG indicates that housing need numbers suggested by household projections should be adjusted if market signals or other market indicators point to an imbalance between the supply and demand for housing. The 2017 SHMA update acknowledges that:

- A significant number of households in the Borough – 517 per annum - require financial support to meet their housing needs.
- To meet the affordable housing need in full based on 40% affordable housing delivery would notionally require almost 1,300 homes per annum to be built across the Borough.
- Longer-term house price growth in the Borough has been above regional/ national averages
- Lower quartile house prices are 11.5 times earnings in the Borough

1.8 Paragraph 8.14 of the 2017 SHMA addendum goes on to advise ‘The evidence conclusively supports an upward adjustment to improve affordability, taking account of the market signals and affordable housing needs evidence.’ Yet only a 9% increase to the housing requirement (as adjusted to address economic growth) is proposed to address the issue of affordability. Given the above we do not consider the adjustment to the Initial Demographic Projections to provide for Improving Affordability to be realistic or justified.

1.9 In the context of the above we note that the Local Plans Expert Group has advised the Government that where the house price median ratio is above 8.7 then a 25% uplift should be applied. In Guildford the lower quartile ratio stands at 11.5[2], while the median ratio stands at 12. At present the PSLP provides a 9% adjustment which equates to an additional 52 homes a year. We consider that the affordability adjustment needs to be much greater i.e. 25% in order to begin to have a material effect on improving affordability.

1.10 In this regard we note that at the recent Waverley LP examination the Inspector recommended a market signals uplift of 25% above the 2014 population projections (plus 4.7% vacancy rate) to improve affordability in line with the requirements at NPPG (ID2a-019). As Guildford is in the same HMA and as the affordability issues are not dissimilar we believe a comparable uplift should be applied here. Thus the true OAN is circa 746dpa.

1.11 The failure of the PSLP to look to address the needs of London is also in our opinion foolhardy and prejudicial to the credibility of overall housing strategy. One cannot ignore London and its effects in terms of housing requirements across the South East. The Inspectors report into the Further Alterations to the London Plan is clear as to the need for the GLA to engage with the authorities in the South East and the fact the housing strategy advocated in the London Plan is likely to be material to the preparation of plans outside London. Whether or not this is ultimately addressed through an uplift to address market signals, the SA should look to address this to ensure the PSLP is seen to be positively prepared, justified and effective.

B) The unmet needs of the HMA

1.12 The DTC Topic Paper (paragraph 4.41) notes that: ‘There is currently unmet need arising within our HMA from Woking Borough Council. It has an adopted housing requirement of 292 dwellings (2010 – 2027) against an OAN of 517. There is therefore a shortfall of 225 homes per year between 2013 and 2027, a total of 3,150 homes’. At the recent Waverley LP examination the Inspector recommended that Waverley accommodate 50% of Woking’s unmet need. i.e. 1,575 dwellings. During the debate on the unmet need he also made it clear that in his opinion Guildford BC should be looking to accommodate a significant proportion of the residual unmet need. Even if one were to suggest that only 60% of the remaining unmet need (i.e. 945 dwellings) were to be accommodated in Guildford that would equate to an additional 50dpa (945/19). Such that the overall housing requirement should, as set out below be circa 800dpa (15,200 dwellings across the plan period (2015-2034)).

1.13 If the full extent of the remaining unmet need from Woking were to be accommodated (821 dwellings – 75dpa) the overall requirement would be 15,599 (821dpa).
1.14 In the context of the above we note that the topic paper on the DTC advises at paragraph 4.49 that: ‘Pursuant to the MoU, the three authorities have also agreed a Statement of Common Ground on housing delivery (Appendix 5). This recognises that there is unmet need within the HMA and commits the three authorities to continued future joint working to ensure that as far as possible, and subject to the policies in the NPPF, housing needs across the HMA are met in full.’ Appendix 5 of the topic paper on the DTC is however based upon GBC providing for 693 homes per annum not the 654 now proposed. No updated DTC statement has been published.

1.15 We also note that the Topic Paper on the DTC states at paragraph 4.50 that GBC ‘do not consider that we can sustainably accommodate any unmet need arising from Woking’. This is however the wrong approach. The fact is GBC’s capacity to accommodate 564 dpa (+) is a different matter to its assessment of its OAHN. The SA should be identifying the need and then assessing whether the authority have the capacity to accommodate it given the findings of the LAA etc. not determining the OAHN based upon the boroughs alleged capacity to accommodate it. The council’s decision to provide no additional housing over and above the 564 figure to address the unmet needs of Woking needs to be justified if the plan is to be seen to be positively prepared, effective and consistent with national policy.

1.16 Given the above we do not consider the basis for the calculation of the OAHN to be realistic or justified. The issue of how to deal with any necessary uplift to address Economic Growth and Housing Need, and Affordable Housing and Market Signals, does not reflect the advice in national policy, and suggests a plan that has not been positively prepared. Likewise the approach to the issue of the unmet needs of Woking does not in our opinion reflect the advice in national policy guidance, rather it suggests a plan that is not positively prepared, will not be effective and is thus unsound. The overall OAN should be adjusted to circa 746dpa, and the plan should look to provide for an additional 50dpa (minimum) to meet Woking’s unmet needs.

2 The rational for a higher level of housing growth.

2.1 The evidence base provides various reasons why, in addition to the issues of an uplift to address Economic Growth and Housing Need, and Affordable Housing and Market Signals, that the housing target should be significantly greater than proposed in the PSLP. These include the following:

1) Enterprise M3 have made it clear that Guildford is the main town and economic powerhouse for the Borough and plays a key part in the wider Enterprise M3 area; and that it needs to be able to accommodate new development to ensure the future vitality and prosperity of the town and its surroundings.[3] They have also stated: - ‘Elmbridge, Guildford and Runnymede remain the least affordable locations in the Enterprise M3 area... The cost of renting a home is also relatively high in the Guildford area (some 20% higher than the average for Enterprise M3 area overall). We therefore welcome Local Plan policies that encourage development of more homes...’[4]
In commenting upon the 2016 PSLP Enterprise M3 state:- ‘On balance, Enterprise M3 LEP is supportive of Guildford’s Proposed Submission Local Plan and welcomes the strategy put forward to allow Guildford to continue to play a pivotal role in the economic prosperity of the M3 Corridor as one of the LEPs key Growth Towns.’[5]

2) Paragraph 6.3.10 of the 2016 SA states that: ‘Guildford Borough Council is committed to delivering its OAN figure [693dpa at the time], having established that there is no potential to justifiably ‘under-deliver’ and rely on neighbouring authorities to meet the shortfall (under the Duty to Cooperate). Whilst Guildford Borough is heavily constrained environmentally, it does not stand-out as relatively constrained in the sub-regional context [6] This conclusion is reached on the basis of Duty to Cooperate discussions, past SA work (notably spatial strategy alternatives appraisal in 2013/14 – see discussion above), an understanding of precedents being set elsewhere, and other sources of evidence. It is evidently the case that under-supplying in Guildford would lead to a range of socio-economic problems, given that Woking is already under-supplying within the HMA. There is an argument for under-supplying to be preferable from an environmental perspective; however, this argument is far from clear cut given an assumption that unmet needs would have to be met elsewhere within the HMA (i.e. within Waverley, which is heavily constrained) or elsewhere within the heavily constrained sub-region. For these outline reasons options that would involve planning for a level of growth significantly below that necessary to meet OAN are considered unreasonable at the current time.”
Which would suggest that there is the capacity to accommodate more than is currently planned for to try and assist in meeting the unmet needs of others/ address the issues of improving affordability/ to take ac-count of market signals etc.

3) P44 of the 2016 SA indicates that: ‘There is a strong argument for ruling out the ‘bookend’ options, notably - Option 1[7] - which performs poorly in terms of socio-economic objectives, with a number of significant negative effects predicted;

It also advises that; ‘As such, it can be seen that there is no clear best performing, or ‘most sustainable’, option. Rather, there is a need to establish a preferred approach after having determined how best to ‘trade-off’ between competing objectives, and in-light of wide ranging perspectives.’ Paragraph 8.2.1 of the 2016 SA continues: ‘The Council’s preferred approach is Option 4,[8] which the appraisal finds to perform relatively well, in that it stands out as performing well in terms of certain objectives (notably ‘communities’ and ‘employment’) and does not stand-out as performing poorly in terms of any objective.’

4) The 2016 SA goes on at p46 to advice:

‘Housing - The preferred option performs well as it will put in place a strategy for meeting the borough’s OAN; however, it is recognised that the strategy will likely result in unmet housing needs within the HMA (on the assumption that the Waverley Local Plan will not provide for all unmet needs arising from under-supply in Woking). Higher growth options would perform better, but would be problematic in terms of a range of environmental (and transport) issues/objectives, given local sensitivities. It is far from clear that Guildford is relatively unconstrained / suited for growth above OAN in the sub-regional context. This is the finding of the SA work, but it is also worth noting that the Council’s work to consider safeguarding options has also led to the same conclusion.’

2.2 Despite the above the findings on the preferred approach, the PSLP 2016 only sought to deliver 13,860 additional homes by 2033. In this respect we note that:

1) Paragraph 10.5.1of the 2016 SA states:

‘The proposed housing growth quantum, determined in order to provide for objectively assessed needs (OAN), performs well on the basis that the OAN figure was determined after having taken into account the number of homes needed locally to ensure that growth in the local workforce keeps pace with jobs growth. However, there are arguments to suggest that a higher level of housing growth could have merit, recognising that Guildford residents will also work in Woking and elsewhere in the Functional Economic Area (FEMA), and that at the FEMA-scale there is set to be an undersupply of housing (albeit there may also be an undersupply of employment land / jobs growth).’

2) Paragraph 10.9.12 of the 2016 SA states:

‘The plan sets out to meet the objectively assessed housing need (OAN) figure identified for the borough by the SHMA, and as such significant positive effects are predicted. However, the decision has been taken not to deliver a higher level of growth in order to address undersupply at the housing market area (HMA) scale (emanating from Woking). There are also some question-marks regarding the housing trajectory (and in particular the supply of housing in the early part of the plan period); however, these are detailed matters that will benefit from open discussion during the plan’s examination.’

[7] Option 1 OAN (693 dpa) plus 0% buffer i.e. 13,844 dwellings across the plan period
[8] Option 4 – 2016 SA - OAN (693 dpa) plus 14% buffer i.e. 15,844 dwellings across the plan period

2.3 Paragraph 8.2.1 of the 2017 SA advises that the councils preferred choice is option 1 i.e. OAN (654 dpa) plus 9.4% buffer which equates to 13,600 dwellings across the plan period. Paragraph 10.9.15 of the 2017 SA indicates that: ‘The proposal is to provide for a reduced housing quantum; however, as this is in response to a lowered OAHN figure, it is not possible to conclude that this is a ‘negative’ in terms of ‘Housing’ objectives. The proposed reduction in the quantum of homes provided for in the plan period is in fact greater than the reduction in the OAHN figure, but this again is does not indicate a ‘negative’.’ This in our opinion defies logic and has no regard to the severe and worsening housing needs of the area.

2.4 Given the above we do not consider the rational for the housing target to be realistic or justified. The evidence base, rather than support the figure adopted in the PSLP actually supports a higher figure. The PSLP cannot therefore be said to be positively prepared, is not consistent with national policy, and is thus unsound. The overall OAN should be adjusted to circa 746dpa, and the plan should look to provide for an additional 50dpa (minimum) to meet Woking’s unmet needs.

3 The need for a stepped trajectory as proposed by policy S2.

3.1 Policy S2 suggests a stepped trajectory, with 450 dpa proposed in years 2019/20 and 2020/21, 500dpa proposed in years 2021/22 to 2024/2025, 600dpa proposed in year 2025/2026, 700dpa proposed in years 2026/2027 to 2028/2029, 800dpa proposed in year 2029/2030, 810dpa proposed in year 2030/2031 and 850dpa proposed in year 2031/32. In this regard we note that whilst paragraph 4.1.9a of the PSLP suggests that the stepped trajectory set out in the Annual Housing Target table adds up to a sum total of 12,426 homes, this is factually incorrect as it only equates to 9,818 homes. That said, if one includes 654dpa in years 2015/16 – 2018/19 the overall figure is 12,426 dwellings. We also note given the figures set out in the Annual Housing Target table that of the 12,426 dwellings proposed across the plan period, circa 50% are to be delivered in the last 8 years of the plan period (2026/27 (+)). In addition it is clear from the housing trajectory on p21 of the 2016 LAA that the stepped trajectory will result in housing delivery running below the housing requirement year on year until 2027/28 – some 13 years into the plan period – which does not suggest a plan that is positively prepared, effective, or consistent with national policy.

3.2 We also note that paragraphs 4.1.9a and 4.1.9b of the PSLP seek to justify the stepped trajectory on the basis that:-
- ‘This is due to the likely rate of delivery, particularly on the strategic greenfield sites, which is dependent upon the delivery of necessary infrastructure expected to occur towards the end of the plan period’; and that
- ‘This phased approach is necessary in order to ensure that the Council is able to demonstrate a rolling five-year supply of housing from the date of adoption, as required by national policy’

3.3 Whilst, given the clear and significant housing need in the borough a stepped trajectory seems irrational and contrary to the spatial vision of the PSLP, we note that the 2016 LAA suggests that some 9045 dwellings (net)[9] could be delivered in the first 10 years of the plan period, and a further 1,342 homes with planning permission are expected to deliver new homes in the next 5 years. Thus there is no reason why circa 10,387 dwellings could not be delivered by 2027/28. Indeed added to that which has already been delivered in 2015/16 and 2016/17 (668 dwellings), the plan should be looking to deliver 11,065 dwellings by 2027/28 not 6,926. Thus not only is the rational for the back loading of housing delivery unjustified, but the evidence from the 2016 LAA suggests that the area is in fact capable of delivering over 900 dpa (11065/12 = 922) and does not need to rely on a stepped trajectory that will in effect deliver just 62.5% of that which could be delivered.

[9] P17 2016 LAA

3.4 Whilst the 2017 LAA update provides no comparable assessment of predicted net completions despite the fact it looks to address the addition of new sites to the LAA and deletion of, or changes to, the housing capacity or phasing of existing sites; we note that the housing trajectory suggests cumulative completions of 13,581 which compares to a cumulative completion figure of 15,459 for the period 2015/16 to 2032/33 in the 2016 LAA i.e. is some 2,000 units less. It is however still some 1,000 units above the proposed housing target and given the fact certain assumptions made about former allocations will no doubt be the subject of debate at the EIP, demonstrates that GBC can clearly deliver more than they are looking to plan for – which does not demonstrate positive planning/ a plan that is justified and sound. Furthermore it appears that the level of housing proposed year on year in the PSLP 2017 encompasses a significantly greater gap to the housing requirement in the early part of the plan than that proposed in the PSLP 2016, despite the reduced housing requirement and extended plan period. This appears to be by and large as a result of the rejection of sites that had previously been allocated and again points to a plan that has not been positively prepared.

3.5 Given the above, and having regard to the scale of the housing need in the area, both market and affordable – as evidenced by the SHMA, the affordability ratio, the persistent history of under delivery and the current 5 year Housing Land supply situation (see below), there is no justifiable reason why GBC cannot allocate additional sites to help address its housing requirements/ look to liaise with those with extant consents to try and increase the density of development to improve delivery. The lack of any credible consideration of this approach to help balance the trajectory means the plan is not positively prepared or consistent with national government guidance.

4 The five year housing land supply

4.1 The 2017 LAA and 2017 Housing Topic Paper (HTP) suggest a 5 year HLS of 2.36 year. The HTP also advises at paragraph 4.206 that: ‘Our five year supply as at April 2017 is set out below. This indicates a slight improvement since April 2016. This is primarily as a result of a slightly lower OAN and a reduced period of deficit.’ The 2016 figure was 2.1 years[10].

4.2 Paragraph 47 of the NPPF is clear that:
To boost significantly the supply of housing, local planning authorities should:

identify and update annually a supply of specific deliverable sites sufficient to provide five years worth of housing against their housing requirements.

4.3 Paragraph 033 Reference ID: 3-033-20150327 of the NPPG is also clear in that ‘The examination of Local Plans is intended to ensure that up-to-date housing requirements and the deliverability of sites to meet a 5 year supply will have been thoroughly considered and examined prior to adoption’

4.4 Paragraph 035 Reference ID: 3-035-20140306 of the NPPG also advises that LPA’s should ‘deal with undersupply within the first five years of the plan period where possible’

[Table]

4.5 Whilst we are not commenting upon the content of the HLS i.e. its deliverability, and the lack of any flexibility to take into account any non-delivery/ delay in delivery rates; the simple fact is the failure of the PSLP to be able to demonstrate a 5 year HLS and the continued shortfall against the housing requirement indicates a plan that is not positively prepared or consistent with National Policy. Whilst we appreciate the fact that GBC have excluded GB sites from the 5 year HLS calculation as they are not yet allocated, even using the trajectory at p8 of the 2017 LAA, the position would, against GBC’s own target be:

4.6 Paragraph: 022 Reference ID: 3-022-20140306 of the NPPF advises that:
‘Where constraints have been identified, the assessment should consider what action would be needed to remove them (along with when and how this could be undertaken and the likelihood of sites/broad locations being delivered). Actions might include the need for investment in new infrastructure, dealing with fragmented land ownership, environmental improvement, or a need to review development plan policy, which is currently constraining development.’

Paragraph: 026 Reference ID: 3-026-20140306 of the NPPF continues:
‘It may be concluded that insufficient sites/broad locations have been identified against objectively assessed needs. Plan makers will need to revisit the assessment, for example changing the assumptions on the development potential on particular sites (including physical and policy constraints) including sites for possible new settlements.’

4.7 Given the above, GBC need to undertake a further review of the LAA/ a further call for sites to identify sites that can be delivered earlier in the plan period. Whilst this may well mean reviewing the site constraints and looking at ways said constraints could be addressed/ looking to allocate a number of smaller sites that are able to deliver more quickly, this is a prerequisite of national guidance, and GBC cannot adopt an unjustified and negative approach to plan making. In this respect we note that The Housing White Paper (HWP) recognised the importance of smaller sites to maintaining consistent supply and we would support the Government’s proposal in the HWP in this regard.

4.8 As currently drafted we do not believe the PSLP has followed the advice in the NPPF, and that the LAA makes generalised and in some cases questionable assumptions about the connection between levels of housing provision, benefits and impacts. Furthermore it fails to consider the extent to which the issues identified might be resolved or mitigated through for example highways and footway improvements, sewerage infrastructure improvements, selective development of parts of sites, the incorporation of green buffers/ SANGS and other measures.

4.9 In the context of the above, as it is clear from the 2016 LAA that GBC have failed to meet the annual housing target of 322dpa established by the SEP for the past 7 years. The cumulative shortfall over the period 2008/9-2014/15 is circa 832 dwellings[11] (63% of the requirement). This is a significant shortfall and demonstrates why GBC should adopt a 20% buffer to address past undersupply. It also goes some way in explaining why there is such an acute housing need in the Borough now. This shortfall should be addressed, and the implications on the current 5 year HLS taken into account.
In this regard it is in our opinion imperative that any shortfall accrued in the early part of the plan is addressed as soon as possible thereafter – not pushed back to the end of the plan period via the use of the Sedgefield method of calculating the 5 year HLS situation. Pushing delivery to the latter part of the plan period will just mean that there is a higher risk of the plan failing to meet its housing requirement should any of the major sites being relied on not deliver to schedule. It also leaves less time for the Council to address such shortfalls in delivery through its contingency plans.

[11] P6 of the 2015/16 AMR indicates that 1,422 houses were delivered in the period 2008/9 – 2014/15. The requirement being 2254 (6 x 1322)

4.9 In addition to the above, we have to say that whilst GBC readily accept they do not have a 5 year HLS, there is nothing in the evidence base to suggest that they have discussed this with neighbouring authorities under the DTC or that they have looked to demonstrate how the matter was to be addressed if they are not able to deal with it themselves. The fact that GBC have failed to address this matter is such that the plan is unsound

8.1 We are disappointed to note the reduction in the overall housing target from the 693dpa proposed in the 2016 PSLP to 654dpa as proposed in the 2017 PSLP given the dire housing needs of the area. In addition we do not believe the level of housing growth proposed in policy S2 of the PSLP necessarily reflects the true OAHN of the area as the 2015 SHMA is based on out of date household projections, does not in our view look to address the issue of market signals and other indicators that point towards an imbalance between supply and demand, and no assessment has been undertaken of migration rates, the effects of London and the level of provision to address the unmet needs of adjacent authorities, esp. Woking. The 2017 addendum does not address this as it is not a true SHMA of the HMA – it merely assess housing need in Guildford without looking at the wider HMA. As such the OAHN has not in our opinion been justified and the resultant PSLP is not positively prepared or in accordance with the aims and objectives of National Policy, as required by Paragraph 182 of the NPPF.

8.2 We are also concerned that the plan does not take account of past under performance. This undersupply, which is in the region of 832 dwellings should be addressed in the housing strategy. If it is not the PSLP will not in our opinion be positively prepared.

8.3 We are concerned that the plan provides no flexibility – some flexibility needs to be incorporated into the plan to ensure it is effective and accords with the aims and objectives of national government guidance; and to ensure delivery. Furthermore we are concerned that despite what is said in the 5 year HLS statement of July 2016, the LPA do not have a 5 year HLS and that this matter has not been considered when addressing the DTC.

8.4 Given our position on the housing requirement and existing levels of supply/ the need to address past rates of undersupply, we believe additional land needs to be identified to meet this need. If additional sites are not allocated we believe the PSLP as drafted is unsound and should not proceed to examination as it is not positively prepared/ justified. It should be the subject of further evidence gathering and consultation on additional allocations before it proceeds to submission.

8.5 In addition to the above we do not believe the additions to policy A29 to be justified, or to accord with national government guidance in terms of the CiL regulations.

I have written before with a lot to say in objection to previous local draft plans to build such an earth shatteringly MONSTROUS number of new homes ON GREENBELT LAND and basically want to emphasise AGAIN that if we go ahead and build all these new homes and new towns, like THREE FARMS MEADOWS, WISLEY AIRFIELD IN ADDITION to other parts of the borough down here - with all due respect my blood runs cold if I so much as take THE HOGSBACK ALONE for instance, and see what the plans are THERE, LET ALONE the local plan as a whole, bearing in mind what PRECIOUS LITTLE of greenbelt and proper countryside we have left for our lungs, our peace and sanity, our general health and longevity, healthy home grown produce, village character and community spirit NOT TO MENTION it's no small antidote to juvenile delinquency and obesity and good for the economy as far as education and tourism goes and if we ill-fulfil this local plan, I feel we will stand to ill-impact ALL the good things I've mentioned, or hinted at tied to our GOD GIVEN natural heritage that was put here LONG BEFORE we were thought of - FOR A REASON and as part of a divine plan in the beginning, our infrastructure will implode and all the things about this BEAUTIFUL county of ours that make it so attractive to move into will be gone and people won't WANT to move here anymore and won't be able to FLEE the place fast enough.

There are ways we can impress upon the government the need to tighten our borders and draw a line on birthrates and help restore a balance in this already imploding under the strain infrastructure of ours.

And last but not least the ALREADY MANIC South East is already MORE than developed enough not to need ANY MORE HOUSEBUILDING ESPECIALLY DOWN HERE and If we MUST build, there are more than enough brownfield sites and empty standing properties to MORE than accommodate for now at least but I can't emphasise enough the PRIORITY OF PRIORITIES to preserve what little is left of our countryside!

It is extremely doubtful that the proposal of 13,000 plus houses to be developed are reasonable and sustainable, particularly in view of Brexit. I therefore object to the Brough Wide Strategy (Policy S2). National Planning Policy promotes sustainable development, which this local plan lacks.

What is driving the need for housing in and around the villages of Guildford? I suspect it is the greed of our Borough Council to build more business premises and attract more people to live in the area, which is ludicrous as the road infrastructure is overloaded as it is.

Policy S2: Borough Wide Strategy

The Strategic Housing Market Assessment (SHMA) derived annual objectively assesses housing need (OAN) of 693, and the Local Plan calls for 13,860 homes to be built, which is the OAN multiplied by the 20-year term of the Plan (20 x 693 = 13,860). OBJECT to this level of planned housing on the following grounds:

- The Council has taken no steps to verify that the OAN is a valid estimate.
- Two recent reports (one by myself) have identified that derivation of the OAN in the SHMA was based on mutually inconsistent sources of data for the housing need arising from economic growth. Both reports also raised queries on the assumption that the ONS SNPP data for 2012 should be regarded as having a zero value for Unattributable Population Change.
- The assessed annual OAN has been superseded by the result of the EU referendum.
- The calculation of windfalls does not take proper account of the likely increase in ad hoc infill developments given the large scale insetting of villages from the Green Belt.
- The OAN has been carried forward directly into the Plan as the housing target, without applying the very real constraint of the Green Belt (which covers some 89% of the borough).

Document: Proposed Submission Local Plan: strategy and sites 2017 / Policy S2

Do you consider this section of the document; complies with the Duty to Cooperate? ( ), is Sound? ( ), is Legally Compliant? ( )

OBJECT (on 4 distinct grounds)

1. Paragraph 1 of the Policy states that the Local Plan will make provision for 12,426 homes over the period from 2015 to 2034. However the table of annual housing targets over the period 2019 to 2034 totals 9,810 homes, which is 2,616 fewer than the figure in paragraph 1. This difference implies that an average of 654 homes (2,616 / 4) were built in each year of the four years between 2015 to 2019 – which is almost certainly incorrect, as Guildford has never delivered completed homes at anything approaching this rate. I therefore object to this Policy on the grounds that the numbers don’t add up.

2. Additionally, and quite separately, the change in the planned number of homes from 13,860 (based on the West Surrey SHMA Final Report, September 2015) to 12,426 (based on the West Surrey SHMA Guildford Addendum Report, March 2017) is not supported by other credible and well-qualified assessments. In particular the reports produced by Neil McDonald Strategic Solutions (NMSS) in both 2016 and 2017 demonstrate that the SHMA assessments of the objectively assessed housing need (OAN) have been considerably over-stated, mainly because of:

   a) The particular circumstances of Guildford being a modest-sized town hosting a large university and other further education colleges with a correspondingly large population of students, and

   b) Errors in the assessment of the housing need arising from economic growth.

Planning Practice Guidance paragraph: 005 Reference ID: 2a-005-20140306 makes it clear that where appropriate Local Planning Authorities may depart from the standard methodology for deriving the OAN, and Guildford’s circumstances certainly justify that approach.
I therefore object to this Policy on the grounds that the OAN assessment is faulty.

1. Moreover, paragraph: 004 Reference ID: 2a-004-20140306 of the Guidance states that “The assessment of development needs is an objective assessment of need based on facts and unbiased evidence. Plan makers should not apply constraints to the overall assessment of need, such as limitations imposed by the supply of land for new development, historic under performance, viability, infrastructure or environmental constraints. However, these considerations will need to be addressed when bringing evidence bases together to identify specific policies within development plans.” Policy S2 is a specific policy of the Local Plan in which constraints have not been applied, and I therefore object to this Policy on those grounds.

2. Finally, I attach a copy of ministerial advice in three separate letters from Nick Boles MP, Parliamentary Under Secretary of State (Planning), which made it clear that “Student housing makes a significant contribution towards housing supply by taking pressure off demands on housing stock. This Government has clarified guidelines to make it clear that local authorities can include student housing in the calculation of, and the monitoring against, local housing needs regardless of whether they communal or sited on a university campus.” I have found nothing in the SHMA or the draft Local Plan that indicates that the proposed housing number was calculated after taking full account of the proposed scale of new student accommodation. Therefore I object to this Policy on the grounds that the final housing number has been calculated incorrectly.

Housing Requirement

2.1 The current consultation version of the Local Plan proposes a new plan period of 2015 to 2034 and a reduced housing requirement of 12,426 (654 dwellings per annum). This represents a reduction of 1,434 dwellings compared to the previous consultation version of the Local Plan.

2.2 The West Surrey Strategic Housing Market Assessment was published in September 2015 and covered the authorities of Guildford, Waverley and Woking. This identified an annual requirement of 693 dwellings in Guildford, with 519 and 517 dwellings per annum for Waverley and Woking respectively. Clearly therefore the Council’s now proposed housing requirement falls short of the OAN for the Borough as established in the 2015 SHMA.

2.3 The Council have subsequently commissioned an Addendum Report to the SHMA (March 2017) in relation to Guildford Borough in isolation. The Addendum Report identifies an OAN for the Borough of 654 dwellings per annum and it is on the basis of this figure that the Local Plan has been prepared.

2.4 It is notable that West Oxfordshire District Council has recently sought to take a similar approach in its Local Plan Examination. The District Council independently prepared an update to the Oxfordshire SHMA on its OAN in isolation and sought to proceed on the basis of the reduced figure contained therein. This approach was not accepted by the Inspector as being sound and resulted in a lengthy suspension to the Examination to allow the Council sufficient time to undertake the necessary work to address meeting the higher OAN figure advocated in the County wide SHMA. Although the Examination has now resumed, this has resulted in over a twelve month delay in the process.

2.5 As such, given the recent experience of West Oxfordshire, it is considered that the Council’s current approach represents a significant risk to the soundness of the Plan.

2.6 The 2017 addendum to the SHMA indicates that due to changing economic circumstances the Borough’s housing need should be reduced from 693 dpa to 654 dpa. Whilst economic factors are an important consideration it is important that these are considered at a wider scale than an individual local authority level, as had been done under the previous SHMA but is not the case in the recent addendum. In addition it is noted that the demographic baseline and affordability issues suggest an increase in OAN. As such it is considered the 2017 addendum to the SHMA is an inappropriate basis on which to Plan.

2.7 At this stage, given the Council is failing to meet its own full OAN as calculated in the 2015 SHMA, the Council is also making no provision to meet the unmet needs of any adjoining authorities. In particular Woking’s Core Strategy (2012) sets out its housing requirement as 292 dpa, some 225 dpa below the OAN as established in the 2015 West Surrey SHMA.

2.8 Notably this issue has been specifically considered by the Inspector at the recent Waverley Local Plan EIP hearing sessions. During these hearings, the Inspector clearly indicated that he considered it appropriate for Waverley and Guildford to accommodate the unmet need from Woking. From our involvement in the Waverley Local Plan sessions it is expected that Waverley will be required to accommodate at least 50% of the unmet need from Woking, which amounts to 83dpa. Whilst recognising that the Guildford Local Plan would be examined separately and it would be for that Inspector to draw their own conclusions, the Inspector considering the Waverley Local Plan suggested that Guildford adopt a similar approach to take account of Woking’s unmet housing need. We would endorse the Inspector’s comments and recommend Guildford increase their housing requirement to include a proportion of Woking’s unmet needs.

2.9 If the reduced OAN for Guildford itself can be justified through the SHMA addendum (although as discussed we have concerns regarding the soundness of this approach) then consideration should have been given in any event to the ability of the Borough to meet the unmet needs of adjoining authorities, in particular Woking, before the Council decided to reduce its housing target. It is apparent that this approach has not been followed.

2.10 The importance of the duty to cooperate has been further reemphasised by the recent St Albans City and District Council decision ([2017] EWHC 1751 (Admin)). In reaching his judgment, the Judge highlighted that:
“Further, I accept the Secretary of State’s submission that once there is disagreement, I would add even fundamental disagreement, that is not an end of the duty to cooperate, especially in an area such as housing markets and housing need which involve as much art as science, and in which no two experts seem to agree. … the duty to cooperate is active, and on-going, and that to my mind means active and on-going even when discussions seem to have hit the buffers.”

2.11 Paragraph 4.1.9a of the Local Plan states:
“The figures set out in the Annual Housing Target table sum to a total of 12,426 homes. This is lower than the total supply of homes identified in the Land Availability Assessment as having potential to be delivered over the plan period. This buffer builds flexibility into the plan and demonstrates that our strategy is capable of delivering the target.”

2.12 Clearly therefore there is no justification to restrict the housing requirement on the basis of housing supply. As such it is considered the Plan should make provision for its full OAN and explore its ability to accommodate the needs of adjoining authorities. Additional allocations should be made to meet this requirement. At the current time the plan is considered to be unsound in that it is not justified, effective, positively prepared or consistent with national policy.

The phasing of development as set out in the Annual Housing Target table
2.13 We note from the Annual Housing Target table contained within Policy S2 of the Guildford Borough Proposed Submission Local Plan that the housing requirement is to vary annually from 450 dwellings per annum upon adoption, rising to 850 homes per annum at the end of the Plan period. Paragraph 4.1.9a of the Proposed Submission Local Plan seeks to justify this approach on the basis of the likely rate of delivery, particularly on the strategic greenfield sites. In addition paragraph 4.1.9b of the Proposed Submission Local Plan explains that this “phased approach is necessary in order to ensure that the Council is able to demonstrate a rolling five-year supply of housing from the date of adoption, as required by national policy.” Notwithstanding our specific concerns about this table (set out below), the Council’s approach to phasing raises a number of concerns.

2.14 The effect of the Council’s approach in this regard results in a situation where there is likely to be a shortfall in delivery of 204 dwellings per annum in the period from 2019 when compared to the objectively assessed need highlighted in the SHMA. This will lead to a situation whereby those in need of housing, in particular affordable housing, may not be able to access accommodation in the Borough until later in the Plan period. In such circumstance a population may therefore be forced to find accommodation elsewhere and this approach could result in a situation which undermines aspirations for job and economic growth within the Borough as a result of a lack of available workforce for example. We are also concerned that the Council’s phased approach seeks higher delivery rates later in the plan period. Given that the emerging Local Plan is predicated on a number of large sites, there is a significant risk that if these do not come forward at the rate envisaged then there will be less time available to remedy any shortfalls.

2.15 The Housing Topic Paper (which accompanies the emerging Local Plan) acknowledges that housing delivery is a major issue for the Borough. However, paragraph 47 of the NPPF requires Local Planning Authorities to ‘boost significantly the supply of housing’ and the National Planning Practice Guidance states that they must ‘deal with undersupply within the first five years of the plan period where possible’. Guildford Borough Council has deemed this to not be possible within the Borough. The Council identifies that there will be an overall unmet need of 3,150 homes in the period (2013/2014 – 2-236/2027). Far from dealing with an undersupply in the first five years of the Plan period, the Council’s approach seeks to delay the delivery of a significant proportion of the housing requirement. Consequently this raises concerns over whether any accrued shortfalls can be resolved.

2.16 If the Council considers that housing delivery is a major issue within the Borough, then a greater range, scale and type of sites should be identified in order to aid delivery rates.

2.17 Furthermore the paper identifies housing delivery within the first five years of the emerging Local Plan period as another major issue. The paper states that a significant shortfall in sustainable sites remains, when taking account of the deficit accrued since 2015 and the 20% buffer; the buffer applied as a result of the persistent under delivery of housing in line with Paragraph 47 of the NPPF. The Council states that this will be resolved in the later periods of the Local Plan, in line with expected infrastructure delivery and through the development of strategic sites.

2.18 The Land Availability Assessment June 2017 Addendum details the Council’s most up to date housing land supply position. The five year housing land supply position for 2016/2017 (which covers the monitoring period 1st April to 31st March 2018) is said to be 2.36 years based on the Council’s evidence, demonstrating a significant and severe deficit in housing supply. We consider that this position demonstrates the clear need to ensure that all available opportunities to identify sites to help meet the housing requirements in the Borough (including unmet needs arising within the wider Housing Market Area if necessary) are considered. The approach (explained in the previous paragraph) which arbitrarily restricts the availability of sites is fundamentally flawed.

2.19 Paragraph 4.1.9a of the Proposed Submission Local Plan states that the figures in the Annual Housing Target table (contained in Policy S2) “sum to a total of 12,426 dwellings.” We calculate that the figures sum to a total of 9,810 dwellings. It appears as though if the figure of 12,426 is achieved then the period covered by the Annual Housing Target table should be expanded to cover the four years from 2015/16 to 2019/20. It is not clear why that part of the Plan period has been excluded from the table.

2.20 We note that paragraph 4.1.9a of the Proposed Submission Local Plan states: “This [the figure of 12,426] is lower than the total supply of homes identified in the Land Availability Assessment as having potential to be delivered over the plan period. This buffer builds flexibility into the plan and demonstrates that our strategy is capable of delivering the target.”

2.21 We consider that the Proposed Submission Local Plan does not include this flexibility despite the claim at paragraph 4.1.9a.

2. I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy

a. The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

b. The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

c. The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the "West Surrey" tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, "West Surrey" is much too small. Half of Guildford borough's residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. Ashort, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West, but all lie well outside "West Surrey". Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the in-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make "West Surrey" reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guildford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour's need. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey's 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick's Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result in coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick's Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinised by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN Ire not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.
Enterprise M3 welcomes the overall vision set out in The Proposed Submission Local Plan and is committed to working with Guildford Borough Council and partners to achieve its vision during the plan period. Whilst our consultation response highlights key aspects that we feel require further consideration, we are on the whole content with the strategy set out within the document for delivering growth within Guildford up until 2033. Guildford Borough Council has worked closely with Enterprise M3 since the LEP’s inception in 2011 and is one of our key Growth Towns, as set out in our Strategic Economic Plan, 2014. Enterprise M3 wishes to continue to work collaboratively with partners at Guildford Borough Council as the Local Plan process continues and once adopted to facilitate its delivery.

New Homes
The Proposed Submission Local Plan provides for the delivery of 13,860 new homes between 2013 – 2033 in Policy S2, which equates to an average of 693 dwellings per annum during the Plan period. This is a welcome increase in housing provision since the previous consultation on Guildford’s draft Local Plan in 2014 and we note that this higher target is in line with the conclusions of the West Surrey Strategic Housing Market Assessment, 2015.

Whilst we are supportive of this policy, we note that the table showing Guildford’s Annual Housing Target in Policy S2 and the housing numbers within this do not total up to the 13,860 dwellings to be provided for. We would recommend that for consistency with the principle of the policy that this be amended to reflect the total housing numbers to be provided for during the plan period.

Enterprise M3 is pleased to see that the Plan reflects the objectively assessed need across the Borough and that it is proposing a level of housing development which can support the continued economic growth of the town. Enterprise M3 is therefore supportive of the increased housing target from 652 to 693 dwellings per annum during the Plan period.

Enterprise M3 notes that within Guildford Borough Council’s Annual Monitoring Report (AMR), 2015 there is currently 2.4 years supply against an identified housing need of 693 homes per annum (taking into account completions since 2013, a buffer and accrued deficit). Taking into consideration pending planning applications in both Ash and Tongham supply...
increases to 2.5 years, however the AMR recognises that this addition is not certain. Whilst Enterprise M3 is very supportive of the increased housing delivery target, we would like to emphasise the importance of accelerating housing delivery and ensuring that housing targets remain deliverable. This should be outlined within Guildford’s Housing Strategy for the duration of the Plan period (2013-2033). At the moment this Strategy only appears to cover the period 2015-2020. Enterprise M3 would welcome the opportunity to work with Guildford Borough Council to ensure that the increased housing target is deliverable. Enterprise M3 also notes the phased approach to housing delivery in Policy S2 but would encourage Guildford Borough Council to focus on early delivery in order to meet demand, particularly focusing on the large scale strategic housing sites. Housing affordability is a key issue across the Enterprise M3 LEP area, particularly in Guildford. The Proposed Submission Local Plan highlights that the affordability ratio in Guildford was 10.92 in 2013, higher than Surrey’s ratio of 10.89 and much greater than England’s ratio of 6.451. Guildford was also highlighted in Enterprise M3’s Housing Evidence Study, 2014 as the second most expensive district for people wishing to buy market housing. Enterprise M3 is therefore supportive of policy H2, which provides for 40% affordable housing to be accommodated on sites of five or more homes, or in excess of 0.17ha in size. However, there is the potential for this level of affordable housing provision to render some sites unviable, especially in difficult market conditions which may be exacerbated by the Brexit result. We are therefore supportive of paragraph 4.2.40 of the Plan which makes reference to the Council following a cascade mechanism to assist in the delivery of housing schemes should viability become an issue during the development process. Enterprise M3 also welcomes the proposal within policy H2, which makes reference to Guildford Borough Council providing and managing affordable homes themselves, as well as reference in section 4.2.12 to the allocation of self build plots within strategic housing development sites to help meet demand for new housing and increase supply. This provides for flexibility in delivering new homes where they are needed most and will encourage diversity within the housing market.

OBJECT: I object to the proposal to build 13,860 new homes:

This number is postulated in advance of the recent UK Referendum which now sets the course for a substantial revision of estimates for economic and population growth, including migration. A substantial downward revision will be necessary.

The number of 13,860 new homes remains unsubstantiated. The SHMA has not been scrutinised by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate, nor has there been any public consultation.

Other experts in this field of demography have not been able to reproduce this value or even close.

The Guildford Society concluded in 2014: "The premise for the housing data in the Draft SHMA published by GL Hearn looks deeply flawed and a full demographic analysis needs to be undertaken to understand the need for housing in Guildford during the Local Plan period."

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The plan fails to set a Housing Target of new homes to be built, or explain how this relates to the “Objectively Assessed Number” (OAN) for housing need.

The notion that economic growth is somehow enhanced by building houses is flawed; there would be short a term boost and vast profits for the developers, their associates and banks, but the real outcome is to increase the level of personal debt, and with the house price/income ratio now approaching pre 2008 levels, in the South East, economic instability will result, particularly following an economic shock, such as interest rate rises or a recession.

7. I object to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

GBC’s proposal for 13,860 new houses without any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The Plan is unbalanced across the borough; there’s too much development in the north east of the borough (Wisley [A35], Ripley/Send [A43] and Clandon [A25]). 36% of all the Plan’s new housing is proposed in this area, which has only 11% of the existing housing.

5,036 houses are proposed between the M25 and Burpham (about 5 miles) which will obviously lead to a merging urbanisation of identities the villages.

I object to the number of homes (14,000) that are been proposed, 690 per year till the end of the plan. This is unsustainable, the area will not cope with the additional infrastructure needed and increased traffic. It will encroach on to our greenbelt, a natural corridor for wildlife. Studies have already shown that the already existing traffic congestion cannot be solved so why on earth add more. Just think of the pollution that will affect the health of the local residents as stationary cars bellow out continuous fumes day after day. We need our greenbelt, Guildford needs it’s greenbelt.

Having read a leaflet from award winning property developers Dandara, I agree that the Council should consider smaller more proportionate development on lower quality Green Belt sites, rather than large-scale growth on some of the most sensitive Green Belt and countryside in the Borough.

For example their land adjacent to the A246, near West Horsley.

The Strategy

The supporting text to the Local Plan’s spatial development strategy – set out in paragraphs 4.1.5 to 4.1.9 - rightly identifies the pre-eminent role of Guildford within the Borough and the wider sub-region.

Para 4.1.6 identifies that Guildford Town Centre and Urban Areas is the preferred focus for development in sustainable locations, ahead of inset villages and identified Green Belt villages. In the context that these locations cannot meet all of the Borough’s development needs, the strategy, summarised at Para 4.1.8, rightly affords a role to urban extensions to Guildford, along with Ash and Tongham.

However, this strategy is not expressed in any Policy. Policy S2 simply concerns the quantum of housing and employment land and traveller pitches that are to be provided during the plan period.

As such, the Local Plan does not give the strategic direction to new development in a fashion appropriate to its role as the Development Plan. This should be corrected.

The location of future development and the strategy has been guided to a large extent by the Green Belt Study, given its extensive influence within the Borough. The Green Belt Study (Pegasus, 2013) states that opportunities to accommodate appropriate development within the designated ‘Countryside beyond the Green Belt’ located outside of the Green Belt ought to be explored prior to those located within the Green Belt. This is not consistent with national planning policy. As an approach, it ignores the emphasis in the NPPF on sustainable patterns of development being achieved when Green Belt is being reviewed. Indeed, the correct interpretation and application of Green Belt policy in the NPPF is to consider this as a factor in determining whether exceptional circumstances exist to amend the Green Belt rather than affording a priority to non-Green Belt land in the first instance.

Given the relative sustainability and accessibility advantages of Guildford, in comparison with other locations, the strategy should ensure that development opportunities around Guildford are prioritised and optimised in advance of consideration of other locations, be they beyond the Green Belt or development at villages inset within the Green Belt.

In this regard opportunities to enlarge the strategic allocation at Gosden Hill Farm should therefore be considered.

Housing Provision

The housing requirement set by the consultation document is specified in Policy S2 and intends for 13,860 new homes to be built over the plan period (2013-2033). This is derived from the October 2015 Strategic Housing Market Assessment undertaken for the West Surrey Housing Market Area. It proposes a housing requirement of 693 dwellings per annum (or 13,860 over a 20 year period). As para 4.1 of the SHMA (Guildford Summary) states, this, in accordance with the Planning Practice Guidance, take account of the level of housing provision which is expected to be needed to support economic growth and improve affordability. As a principle, this is to be welcomed.

We are aware that the DCLG published new household projections in July 2016, which are, by definition, more recent than those upon which the SHMA is based.

Nationally, over the period from 2012 to 2037, annual average household growth is projected to be 214,000 per year, higher than the 2012-based household projections figure of 210,000 per year for the same period.

For Guildford, the SHMA draws upon the 2012 based household projects, which suggested a demographic need for 517 dwellings per annum. In contrast the latest 2014 based household projection (live table 406) shows a household change averaging 600 per annum between 2013 and 2033. Prima facia, these latest household projections, which are to be the starting point in determining housing requirements, suggest that the housing requirement in the consultation document needs to be reviewed and potentially increased.

Turning to the housing supply, and in the context of the likelihood that the housing requirement will need to increase, the estimates of supply do not provide sufficient certainty that the housing requirement will be met.

The housing land supply strategy set out in Table 1 (when added to completions actual and estimated between 2013 and 2018 from the Housing Land Availability Assessment) does not provide the necessary flexibility to give surety that the overall strategic housing requirement of 13,800 additional dwellings over the plan period will be met.

With total supply estimated at 14,400 additional dwellings, this represents theoretical oversupply of less than 5% of the strategic requirement. It is important to recognise that not all sites will be developed as anticipated, not all planning permissions will be implemented, permissions may lapse or sites may be developed for alternative uses. The flexibility proposed is not considered to be adequate in the circumstances of this plan and the nature of the housing supply strategy. This is especially the case when the evidence suggests that the housing requirement may in fact be a minimum requirement.

Moreover, it is necessary for the Local Plan to be founded on satisfactorily achieving the ‘duty-to-co-operate’ requirement of the Act. In this instance, the inter-relationship with London is especially relevant, where is it already known that the City’s housing requirement is vastly greater than that which can be provided. The SHMA appears to set to one side the London Migration analysis, which would suggest an additional 568 households, in favour of the 2012 based household projections. Clearly, in the context of both the DTC and the most recent household projections this does not seem to be an appropriate assumption. This again implies a higher housing requirement will be likely.

[My particular concern relates to the excessive level of development proposed for East and West Horsley, collectively referred to as the “Horsleys” ...]

Whilst an argument could be made that some people will walk or cycle to the station following such a development, as a cyclist, it is already noticeable how poorly maintained the roads and pavements are in the Borough – the road in front of the Horsley shops and up to the station is a perfectly appropriate example of a dangerously potholed stretch of tarmac – cycling is therefore an unsafe option, especially when coupled with the poor local drainage and local flooding. Whilst an attempt has been made in some places in the Borough at marking out cycling lanes (A246, Ripley etc), it appears that the Council feels that painting a white line is “job done”. No effort is then made to repair holes in those lanes, to clear rubbish (metal, glass), to remove overhanging vegetation or to fix collapsed manhole/inspection chamber covers. Likewise pavements, especially in Horsley, are either too narrow (pedestrians at risk from being struck by vehicles/wing mirrors/flying stones), unpassable in wet weather (due to cars swamping the pavements with water) or are poorly maintained. Existing policy therefore seems orientated towards cars and, as mentioned earlier, the infrastructure will not be able to cope with this development.

Policy S2: Borough wide strategy

I totally oppose the calculation that 13,800 new homes will be needed in the borough over the planning period the number is far to high and unsustainable in the villages and countryside.

I would ask the council to reconsider the local plan reducing the number of homes, keeping the current boundaries of the greenbelt and where building is needed providing adequate infrastructure and services.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Attached documents:

1. I object to all proposals to build on the Green Belt at Send and elsewhere in the borough because all the development that is really needed can be accommodated in Guildford's urban brownfield areas much closer to existing transport hubs
2. I object to all the proposed sites in Send because they were not included in the previous consultation in 2014. Unlike the rest of the borough, Send has not been properly consulted and all its sites have been changed substantially.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

I object to the fact that 70% of the proposed 13,860 houses are targeted at the Green Belt strung along the A3 which will destroy the open amenity of the borough and produce gridlock on the A3 and surrounding roads, including the A247 which are all already at 100% capacity.

GBC has completely failed to identify sufficient brownfield sites within the urban area which should be targeted first for development before the open countryside and Green Belt. GBC have also failed to include the Town Centre Masterplan 2015 within the Local Plan.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
I write as Liberal Democrat Parliamentary Spokesperson for the five Guildford Borough wards in Mole Valley Constituency – and a resident of nearby Bookham - to express my strong support for the many hundreds of objections you have received to the Council’s latest draft local plan from the East of the Borough. I urge you to reflect carefully on both the volume and the compelling quality of those objections, especially those from local parish councils, residents’ associations and other responsible individuals and groups.

In my view there is no justification for the disproportionate housing burden being proposed for this part of the Borough; the disregard for the lack of infrastructure, the impact on already congested local roads and the carefully considered neighbourhood plans that have been or are being developed by local residents; the proposed removal of so many rural villages from the Green Belt; or the repeated insistence on retaining rejected development sites such as the former Wisley Airfield.

It is disappointing that the divided and dysfunctional Conservative group which controls Guildford Borough Council and their local MPs still appear to be incapable of working with Government and local residents, businesses and other organisations to produce and agree a sensible, balanced, proportionate and sustainable local plan for the Borough. Please try harder.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
Borough over this same period. It is clear that GBC is promoting an economic expansion which appears to underpin the housing policies in the Local Plan.

I OBJECT to Policy S2 as I do not think any economic growth promotion should be used in the projections for housing growth especially in the light of the recent outcome of the Referendum on the EU membership.

I am opposed to the Guildford Borough Proposed Submission Local Plan: Strategies and Sites 2016 (The Plan) in its current form because it:

- has a disproportionate impact on the villages,
- does not respect the character and density of the housing in the area,
- does not guarantee the creation of supporting infrastructure, while encroaching the Surrey Hills Green Belt which is a national rather than a purely local asset.

The disproportionate impact on the villages seems ludicrous. An 11% increase in housing in Guildford, versus a 35% increase in West Horsley. An increase in the population in large towns will have a lesser impact on the character of the area and the density of the housing, as well as having an advantage of having a better foundation of infrastructure. The reason for everyone I know to move to the villages, was the appeal of a ‘village’ life. Making them into suburbs and towns, destroys the character and eliminates that appeal. A simple look at the Horsley Development Sites map shows the magnitude of impact.

I object to the disproportionate amount of development in one area of the borough - why on earth would this be sensible (in terms of infrastructure and irreparable destruction) or fair? If destruction were needed (and I am not convinced it is) please share this out rather than spoiling one area. Also why on earth would you not, for example, seek to build on the edges of existing built up areas like Woking (where development would be extension rather than change) rather than changing the face of rural areas such as Ripley and the Horsleys forever?

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

I object to raising the annual number of houses built per year. With no rational reason given, one must assume these are developers' numbers for financial gain and not for social need.

I object to the disproportionate distribution of houses across Guildford Borough, by far, the North East has taken an unsustainable number, in an area where country lanes are narrow and volume of traffic now using through routes makes roads gridlocked at rush hour.

My husband and I strongly object to the 2016 Draft Local plan, particularly all erosion of the green belt.

In the plan to build 14,000 new homes many of our local villages are to be removed from the Green Belt which will allow unlimited future development and the destruction of our rural villages.

4) I object to the disproportionate allocation of housing in this particular part of the borough. Indeed, over 23% of the Plan's new housing is proposed in the immediate localities of Ockham, Ripley, Send and the Horsley's (of which 65% is allocated to FWA/TFM, an area that at present has only 0.3% of the population of GBC).

It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guildford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper account of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

- up to a 35% increase in the number of households in West Horsley.
- up to a 90% increase in housing stock taking into account the two Horsley villages, Ockham and the proposed development at Wisley airfield

The infrastructure of the Horsleys as outlined above cannot support this expansion.

In addition, 65% of new houses in the Borough are to be built on land that is currently in the Green Belt.

1) Policy S2 Borough Wide Strategy
   a) The conclusions of the revised SHMA are seriously flawed for various reasons, inter alia:- *the GL Hearn report suggests a requirement for some 654 houses per annum. This is an increase of 22% of the current housing stock for a projected population increase of just 10.4%
   b) GBC fails to make any allowance for planning constraints, particularly the Green Belt. The already overstretched infrastructure is not addressed. GBC Proposes to remove large swathes of the Green Belt, without demonstrating the required 'very special circumstances' to justify such action. GBC Is ignoring the many thousands of objections to this part of the proposed plan.

I object to the Guildford Borough Proposed Submission Local Plan (June 2016)
I object very strongly to the Guildford Borough Proposed Submission Local Plan (June 2016).
The consultation has been done under Regulation 19. There are substantial changes to the Regulation 18 consultation held in 2014 and thus a consultation limited to 6 weeks is insufficient to allow full understanding of the Proposed Submission and its evidence base. The evidence base presented has 28 documents, 14 of which have been updated since the previous consultation, which no indication provided of what has changed. The Proposed Submission without appendices is 255 pages and the evidence base (excluding other documents) is over 2500 pages. A significant amount of detail to be assimilate in 6 weeks. The Proposed Submission and its evidence base has changed too much, without any details of those changes, to fir into a regulation 19 consultation.
The reasons I object are:
1. I object to the proposed overdevelopment of Send and that Policies S1 and S2 are not sustainable
   The GBC proposal for 10395 new houses for the 15 years from 2018 to 2033 (13,860 from 2013 to 2033) is not sustainable. The outcome of the Regulation 18 consultation was the delay of the GBC Local Plan where the then GBC leader, stated that the council had taken on board the concerns of residents and the revised plan would, with support from central government, apply infrastructure and Greenbelt constraints. There is no evidence of this in the Regulation 19 Proposed submission which has not only increased the average annual housing numbers; it has increased the housing allocation for Send (which includes the settlements of Send, Send Marsh and Burnt Common) from 431 to 485. This overdevelopment of Send will damage the communities and I am concerned that an infrastructure need 4km away (i.e. a new A3 junction to enable the Wisley Airfield site) is having a disproportionate impact on Send, Ripley and Clandon. At a public meeting in Send on the 14th June, the GBC leads for planning and infrastructure confirmed that the 400 houses planned for Site A43 (Garlick’s Arch) are the price the landowner is being “paid” for gifting the land for the new A3 junction at the same site, called A43a. The price will actually be paid by the residents of Send, Ripley and Clandon, and this is not acceptable.
   Not only is this housing development inappropriate for the community, it also adds 7000sqm industrial development. This is in addition existing brownfield industrial site located at Burnt Common. This is an over-development of dwellings and employment space for such a small community.
   The evidence quotes the 400 homes as “additional homes that can be provided in the early years of the Local Plan” (Guildford Borough Flood Risk Sequential and Exception Test May 2016). Therefore in addition to allocating 400 houses in Send to satisfy an infrastructure requirement 4km away, the proposal is to also bring these forward to the early years of the plan to satisfy housing targets for the rest of the borough.
   The Plan is unbalanced across the borough; 42% of all the housing proposed from 2018 to 2033 is in Send (A44/A42/ A43/A43a), adjacent in Send (A25), or in Ripley (A35).
This proposed over-development of Send is in contradiction of the "The Rural Land Assessment" provided as evidence, which states that the GBC should:

? “Retain the distinct separate settlements of Send, Send Marsh and Ripley and avoid merging these through linear development along rural roads. Retain gaps such as along the B368 between Send and Send Marsh or between Ripley and Send Marsh along the B2215.” (page numbered 117)

? “Conserve the rural roads minimising small-scale incremental change such as signage, fencing or improvements to the road network or bridge, which would change their rural character particularly to the north and west of the area.” (page numbered 117)

I object to the disproportionate distribution of houses across Guildford Borough, the north east has taken an unsustainable number, in an area where country lanes are narrow, street lighting and pavements are limited or nonexistent. The current high density of traffic now using through routes results in them being “gridlocked” at peak times. There has also been an assumption for which there is no evidence that there will be more cyclists. The area has no cycle paths. Public transport across the area is poor and is currently being reduced which in itself will result in putting more cars on the roads.

I object to the methodology of drawing up the plan. Guildford Borough employs consultants who allegedly have planning expertise but have done so without taking account of Surrey County Council highway planners’ views, or the costs involved in improving the infrastructure, currently out side their financial capability.

The methodology is also flawed as this plan has been formulated without regard to village Neighbourhood plans. Surely, logic would suggest planning is best formed by a bottom up approach, not top down.

| POLICY S2: As I said already, the housing numbers are much too high. Also, following BREXIT, the numbers of immigrants coming into UK will go down for sure, so even the 15% projected rise is now looking too high. Also, GBC’s economic forecasts, which you use to justify all this extra housing, all of this will need to come down too. I think you really need to re-work all of your figures here. |

| The level of new housing proposed in the Local Plan is still much too high. A proposed increase in the housing stock of the borough of 22% is far too high a target to set. With Brexit almost certain to lead to lower levels of population growth, this very high level of new housing development is unnecessary and will create all sorts of problems in the borough where infrastructure is already over-stretched and where our green areas are becoming increasingly spoiled. For this reason I strongly object to the revised policy S2. |

| The local plan allocates a large percentage (over 20% ) of new housing in the local plan to the villages of Ripley, Send, Ockham and the Horsleys). This seems to be a very biased distribution and heavy penalty for these small villages to bear. Surely if more housing is needed then it should be allocated evenly across the Borough and we see no evidence that this is the case. |

Housing Numbers

There is no sound justification for the increased estimate of housing numbers from the last draft plan in 2015.

6 Alternative suggestion for allocating housing in a Local Plan

Setting aside all planning designations (including AONB, Green Belt etc), every community in the country from the smallest hamlet to the largest city should designate area(s) of land to accommodate “x %” of the number of existing dwellings. That percentage could vary every 5 years and calculated centrally to satisfy the nation’s housing shortfall.

If “brownfield land is available - then it should be used. Otherwise those people currently blessed with pleasant protected countryside should bear the same burden as any urban residents.

Nimbyism defeated at a stroke !!

from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

1. The figure of 13,860 new homes is unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinised by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA.[2] The Council say we should trust the contractors’ model because it is used by a large number of other local authorities. Wide usage, however, does not confer objectivity. Guildford’s OAN would fail the basic transparency test even if the methodology used were a universally admired ‘gold standard’. But it is not: it belongs to consultants whose website openly proclaim their pro-development agenda,[3] leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. External experts and members of the public have provided detailed critiques of the model. Its most fatal flaw, however, is that it has not been disclosed – not even to the authors of the plan, who have taken it on trust. This is irrational and unsound.

1. The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The plan fails to set a Housing Target of new homes to be built, or explain how this relates to the “Objectively Assessed Number” (OAN) for housing need. Elsewhere, the Council have said that the two are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted.[4] But they also say that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. In contravention of the NPPF, the plan fails to address these. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permission, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how can anything else be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN were not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

1. It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

[1] At the time of writing, about £8billion (40%) has been wiped off the value of the UK’s top 4 housebuilders alone.
This has been challenged by residents including, by Mr Ben Paton, as far as the Information Ombudsman. But the Council have consistently refused to seek disclosure of the model.

2. I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly consi It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The Housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the "West Surrey" tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, "West Surrey" is much too small. Half of Guildford borough's residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside "West Surrey". Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury,

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick's Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result in coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick's Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

I totally get that Surrey is the 2nd wealthiest County after London and that the Council are hellbent on making Surrey an economic epicentre of growth and development.

As a SME owner in my mid 40s I am grateful of the opportunities that are available to me and my family living in West Clandon and working in East Horsley.

I do feel that there should be some appropriate, sensitive, practical and well thought out development in the Borough of Guildford. However I am strongly opposed to the approach taken by removing the green belt and building some spurious number of houses without much consideration of the ramifications to the people who have chosen to live here and paid a premium to do so.

I strongly believe that greater effort and vision should be applied to finding sites that might suit a more exciting form of development, flats don't always need to be 1 bed, they could be 3 bed family units!

The other issue is the impact that more development will have on an already creaking infrastructure. I appreciate that infrastructure can only be afforded on the back of development but why not design the infrastructure first and then go to developers to see could facilitate it.

I do not envy you but greater vision is needed to resolve the issue of the economic growth in the South East.

Good luck

I further object to the proposed development sites at Wisley Airfield and Garlicks Arch both of which represent significant overdevelopment of Green Belt sites, disregard the availability of brown field sites and singularly fail to take account of the effect on transport infrastructure which is unsustainable.

The scheduled proposals for the Wisley site will place a wholly unacceptable weight of traffic on already congested roads in village centres and trunk road connections. Any resident who has to access the northbound A3 at peak times from Ripley or Ockham is painfully aware that the junction can barely cope at present.

The proposed size of the Wisley Development will give rise to unacceptable log-jams making viable commuting impossible.

There are no viable train connection to serve these sites and the area is already very poorly served by bus services. All transport requirements will therefore inevitably fall on the already overstretched roads. The effect of these developments on the Portsmouth Road running through Ripley and Send, which already carries a staggering volume of traffic, will be to return the road to levels of congestion which existed before the A3 Trunk Road was built.

The proposed A3 north/south junction at Burnt Common does nothing to alleviate the congestion and will simply lead to congestion where A3 traffic meets traffic on the already congested local roads. There will therefore be traffic “black spots” both to the north and south of Ripley.

I further object to the imbalance of proposed development sites which are located in the North East of the Borough. Housing needs within the Borough arise in all areas yet there are no proposals for sites to the south and west of Guildford.

Large developments of the types proposed in Wisley and Garlicks Arch are simply unsustainable. Significantly smaller developments linked to existing village envelopes, will not place stress on transport infrastructure and the amenity of the rural environment.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

In the last five years planning consent has been grant for approximately 115 new houses in the Lovelace Ward. This alone has dramatically impacted on the character and the communities in the Ward. Over 2,400 houses are proposed in the Ward over the period of the Plan. These houses will more than double the number of houses in the Ward and will totally change it, without any consideration of what the Ward actually needs.

A neighbourhood plan is currently being drafted for the Lovelace Neighbourhood Area, which follows the boundaries of the Lovelace Ward. The Plan should be redrafted once the neighbourhood plan has been prepared to reflect the local needs.

Fundamentally, the developments proposed in the Plan do not meet the needs of the local communities and the approach adopted in the Borough Wide Strategy is wrong.

In view of the comments above it would appear logical to apply constraints in line with government policy to the development being proposed to take account of the fact that 89% of the borough is in the permanent Green Belt and development is not supported by adequate major infrastructure.

The plan will cause obliteration and devastation of the beautiful countryside between the villages and cause them to

I had a very interesting piece of paper through my letterbox from dandara regarding where new development takes place. According to them they already have land next to the A246, which whilst green belt, is surrounded by urban influences including existing housing and the main road to Guildford from the east. It would be a sensible and proportionate addition to the village.

Why hasn't SCC or GBC considered this? Surely it would be much better for everyone concerned to have small and medium scale sites, in order to provide the Council with an opportunity to deliver a more equitable spread of development across the Borough?

This would limit the loss of the most important green belt land. More research needs to be done to bring to the fore, the lower quality green belt land and countryside that should be identified.

Speaking of Brexit, isn’t it likely that we may need all of our farm land to provide for our future agricultural needs? Building on farm land seems to me to be a very short sighted idea.

Finally

I should add that I am not against any development of new housing at all. Clearly we do need to increase the housing stock. 1. I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2) on the grounds that the proposed developments appear to be designed solely to meet the needs of Guildford Town rather than the needs, wishes or requirement for a peaceful life for those residents in the surrounding villages and local communities.

The Local Plan proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough, of which only 1,135 homes are designated for Guildford Town of the 12,578 homes listed on pages 123 to 126 of the Local Plan. In fact, of the total new homes proposed by the Local Plan, 3,800 are to be built on farmland outside the existing urban development and a further 5,670 are to be built on the Green Belt itself or in villages and communities surrounded by the Green Belt.

This belies the suggestion that these houses are being built to provide homes for those working in Guildford itself and suggests that many of these homes are being built for people who simply wish to relocate to this area or possibly for other immigrants to this borough.

In 2.3 of the Key facts about the borough, it states that “the population has risen steadily from 93,000 in 1951 to 137,183 in 2011. The population is predicted to reach 162,188 by 2033”. This figure is based on information provided by The Office for National Statistics (ONS) in 2016. However, these numbers are based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. At the very least, these figures now need to be considered in light of the changed circumstances and should be revised downwards, possibly quite significantly.
As identified in Policy H1 at 4.2.3, “we have an ageing population with a significant projected growth in the over 65 year olds”. It appears unlikely that these individuals will reproduce at this stage and, as the effect of the post-war baby boom runs its course, this population is likely to diminish rather than increase.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half of those who do work here live outside the borough.

A short, half-hour commute puts the borough well within the reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West, but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Each of these towns is well placed to provide labour in order to meet any real increase in demand for labour in Guildford Town by use of the existing rail infrastructure without destroying the Green Belt or adding to the traffic problems and local pollution.

Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced and detrimental.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough through the choice of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result in a coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

In summary, the borough wide strategy is poorly considered and appears to have been based either substantively or at least in part on a report prepared for the Council by Surrey Community Action, a charity that appears to be heavily conflicted in preparing a reasoned assessment of the actual needs and requirements of the borough as a whole.

Having reviewed the Local Plan we wish to express our concern that the Council has ignored objections we and other residents made in the 2014 consultation. This shows a complete lack of consideration for the impact of such extensive development in the local area.

I object to the local plan as a whole, as the Borough has failed to provide sound evidence of the needs for much of the development.

Developers should be using the many brown-field sites identified in the Borough before any other sites are even considered.

We want government at all levels to show vision and innovation in development matters, and to conduct planning with due diligence and integrity, as it is the future of their own families at stake as well.

I believe the Local Plan 2014 is flawed; lacks adequate research and evidence of need; lacks planning for infrastructure improvement already needed without further development of the area; and is being rushed through using inappropriate legislation. It must be properly reviewed and consulted under the correct Regulation 18.

I object to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2). There is too much development in Wisley (A35) Ripley/Send (A43) and Clandon (A25). The plan is unbalanced with over 5,000 houses proposed between M25 and Burpham, which will merge all the villages and their identities. This is unfair and unreasonable.

I object to all proposals to build on the Green Belt at Send, Ripley, Send Marsh, Clandon and elsewhere in the borough because all the development that is really needed can be accommodated in Guildford’s urban brownfield areas much closer to existing transport hubs. None of these areas have a decent bus service and therefore new homes will rely upon cars for transport adding to existing congestion.

I object to the complete failure of GBC to identify sufficient brownfield sites within the urban area which should be targeted first for development before the open countryside and the Green Belt and the failure to include the Town Centre Masterplan 2015 within the plan

I OBJECT to raising the annual number of houses built per year. With no rational reason given, one must assume these are developers' numbers for financial gain and not for social need.

I OBJECT to the disproportionate distribution of houses across Guildford Borough, by far the North East has taken an unsustainable number, in an area where country lanes are narrow and volume of traffic now using through routes makes roads gridlocked at rush hour.

I OBJECT to the methodology of drawing-up the plan. Guildford Borough employs consultants who allegedly have planning expertise but have done so without taking account of Surrey County Council highway planners' views, or the costs involved in improving the infrastructure, currently outside their financial capability.

The methodology is also flawed as this plan has been formulated without regard to village Neighbourhood plans. Surely, logic would suggest planning is best formed by a bottom up approach, not top down.

I OBJECT to the 2016 Draft Local Plan as it has had no regard to the number of schools required or additional health centre or hospital facilities which would make a plan sustainable.

Please note that I object to:

The number of homes that the Plan expects to deliver.

This target of 693 is much higher than the Council proposed last year and disregards the fact that the borough has such a high proportion of its area designated as Green Belt land. The roads, schools, doctors and hospitals etc. can’t support such an increase in the population.

I object to the local plan as the development proposed is not sustainable.

I object to any tinkering with the Green Belt as it was intended to be permanent and an essential protection against over-development in rural areas.

I object to the local plan as all the emphasis is placed on removing land from the green belt and then building on it.

I object to the fact that most of a very attractive rural area in the green belt will be smothered in housing from Guildford to Cobham. I object to the failure to find and allocate brown field sites for development rather than Green Belt land.

I strongly object to GBC's proposal for 13,860 new houses without any evidence that anything remotely like this number is needed. It is disproportionate to place 38% of extra houses in the area north east of Surrey. 5,036 houses between Burpham and the M25 is totally unjustified and will change the nature of the area leading to the merging urbanisation of these villages. 693 houses a year is way beyond what is needed and is more than double even than GBC's previous assessment.

I object to the proposals in the Plan being based on figures of demand, the details for which have not been disclosed. This is not justice and would not be admitted in a court of law.

I object to the complete failure of Guildford Borough Council to identify brown field sites S2, within the urban area. Why build so much on the Green Belt when there is the possibility of brownfield development in more urban areas?

Although I am totally unacquainted with David Roberts of West Horsley, I have seen a copy of his 13-page letter of objection which raises very serious matters, not least about the way the Plan appears to favour profit-making developers with no local interest rather than local residents and conservation of the character of the area. This I object to most strongly.

I object very much to the exaggerated proposal to build nearly 14,000 new homes in the Guildford area and over 5,000 between the M25 and Burpham, and in particular the reported refusal to produce evidence of how the purported need for these numbers is arrived at. It is no use saying that the firm which came up with the figures refuses to explain the figures because it would infringe their intellectual property rights. In the absence of explanation this should be refused as evidence. It is well-known in legal circles that where mystery begins Justice ends. The suspicion is that, for whatever reason, the needs of development companies have been given priority over the wishes of the local population.

The numbers proposed, or anything like that amount, are totally unsustainable, especially for Send, Ripley and Ockham where there are no railways, and the bus services would be inadequate. Almost every household would have two cars which would make a bad situation on the roads much worse. The plan is in any event unbalanced across the Borough in that 36% of the plan's housing is proposed for the north-east of the borough which has only 11% of the existing housing. Such an unbalanced situation is grossly out of proportion. The rural roads in this area are narrow, poorly maintained and most have no footpaths and are dangerously unsuitable for the likely traffic from 5000 more houses. Development should be in urban areas where there is sustainable transport. What are the Guildford Councillors thinking of in advocating the delightful area north east of Guildford being turned into a sprawling concrete jungle? They certainly have no mandate for that, as was clearly shown by residents' objections to the first edition of the Plan.

1. I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

   1. The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

   2. The Housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

   3. The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-
The borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guildford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill (Clordon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clordon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result in coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

- Traveller site allocation is inappropriate and in conflict with the Department for Communities and Local Government Policy E16: Traveller sites in GreenBelt:

  Inappropriate development is harmful to the Green Belt and should not be approved, except in very special circumstances. Traveller sites (temporary or permanent) in the Green Belt are inappropriate development.

  We are overpopulated in this part of the country. In satiable demands for new housing conflicts directly with our inadequate infrastructure. One solution would be to reverse the trend by encouraging businesses to relocate to under populated parts of the country or regeneration areas. If we don't then our quality of life and crime rates will surely degenerate.

In the main, the revised plan continues to erode the openness of the Green Belt and endangers the beauty and views in and out of the Surrey Hills AONB.

My specific objections to the 2017 Plan are:

1. I object to Policy S2 for the provision of the very high overall housing numbers of 12,426 new homes, which is only a small reduction on the previous figure of 13,860. The figure is too high as shown by the independent report commissioned for the GRA.

2. I object to the population growth figures in section 2.3, which have actually increased by 5000 over the previous plan. Downward economic pressures have not been taken into account in this new assessment.

3. I object to the fact that Policy S2 appears to include demand from London and nearby Woking in its assessment – Guildford should not become a dormitory town for either area.

1. OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy

   a. The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

   b. The Housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

   c. The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the "West Surrey" tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, "West Surrey" is much too small. Half of Guildford borough's residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour, commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside "West Surrey". Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre; is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make "West Surrey" reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour's "need". Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey's 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick's Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick's Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guilford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s ‘need’. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London’s commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. 5). I object to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2).

The proposal by Guildford Borough Council for 13,860 new houses without any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The proposals are for too much development in the north east of the borough (Wisley, Ripley & Send). I understand 36% of all the Plans new housing is proposed in this area, which has only 11% of the existing housing.

Ultimately all this new housing will merge Wisley, Ripley, Send, Clandon all together and they will cease to be villages and become one large urbanisation!

2. Surrey University should build housing units on its car parks allowing housing units in Guilford to be released from student use to use by the general population as low cost housing.

Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done.
The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand.
The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website...
The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. Please accept this email as my objection to the Local Plan. I objected to the last plan and GBC seem to have again ignored what the local people think and I fully support the Guildford residents Association response and oppose Guildford expanding by a quarter.

Brownfield opportunities are being ignored – we need homes in the centre (not 40% more shops), much more accommodation on campus for students, and homes for the elderly to free up family houses.

OBJECTIONS TO THE LOCAL PLAN

Policy S2 – Borough-wide Strategy

I OBJECT. There is no supporting evidence for the proposed number of homes (13,860). The assumptions used in the modelling are not given. It may be – as the Director of Development at GBC implies – that the Council does not know what the assumptions are. They are failing in their duty if they do not know. The data – again according to the Director of Development – is widely available, but the Council will not provide it, nor say what it is nor where it came from. There is a complete lack of transparency in the whole process.

It is unclear what the figure of 13,860 represents. The plan says it is the total number of new houses to be delivered by 2033. We do not know what numbers the model actually produced. We do not know why the plan does not take into account the routine small-scale developments and re-developments that already take place all the time within the borough.

The Director of Development wrote to the Surrey Advertiser trying to draw a distinction between the Objectively Assessed Need and the number actually achievable. It is unclear which numbers are being used in the Local Plan.

I OBJECT TO POLICY S2 (BOROUGH-WIDE STRATEGY):

- Numbers based on growth and demographic data now invalidated by Brexit.
- No justification given for 13,860 housing figure. Figure based on a secret formula used by consultants and never seen by anyone on the Council or by the public. Council has failed to seek its disclosure.
- 13,860 figure confuses the OAN with a housing target. No definite housing target given, leaving too much scope for the Council to make one up. I can’t understand how we’re being consulted when we don’t know how many houses the Council want to build, taking all the constraints into account.
- Figures based on a Housing Market Area that ignores 2 neighbouring districts (Rushmoor and Mole Valley) and is much too small, since most people commute or travel far outside the Area to shop or study. This distorts the figures: no reason why Guildford needs to build nearly twice as many large housing estates as the rest of Surrey put together, or half of all sites over 100 units.
- High numbers involved would transform character of the borough from mainly rural/Green Belt to urban, creating a corridor of development out of London as per Woking or Croydon.

I am writing to register my objections to the above plan which are ill considered and ill thought through. It is ridiculous to think that over 13,000 new homes are needed by 2033, which is an increase of 25%. To facilitate this growth huge areas of the Green Belt will be sacrificed with only around 30% of new homes being built on Brownfield land. Not only that but no thought appears to have been given to what affect all this development will have on the existing infrastructure which will surely be a breaking point with increased congestion and pollution.

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 houses being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a plan that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.

It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London's commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand.
The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

I understand there are proposals to build in excess of 500 houses on six sites in and around East and West Horsley, enlarging the village boundaries and removing the Green Belt designation within.

I strongly object to these proposals. The Horsleys have a unique character which would be hugely compromised if building went ahead on the scale proposed. The Green Belt designation should remain and on no account be removed. The Green Belt is there to protect the countryside from erosion due to urban sprawl and inappropriate building. Our countryside is precious and necessary for health and wellbeing.

Traffic is already heavy during rush hour and school pick up times, and Ockham Road through the village is always busy with traffic (including large lorries) cutting through from the M25 and A3. To add a substantial amount of local traffic to this would be totally unacceptable.

I OBJECT to the fact that GBC have not followed the correct process for Send and Ripley developments. Any significant changes to the 2014 proposals, such as the proposal S2 development of Garlicks Arch, should have required another full consultation, which did not happen. This invalidates the whole process.

I OBJECT to the Borough Wide Strategy (Policy S2)

The borough wide strategy is poorly considered. It proposes 13,860 housing being developed across the borough and does not apply any constraints to reduce the overall housing figure, which would be very reasonable and sensible. This approach differs from all the other Borough Councils in Surrey.

The housing number is based on pre-Brexit data for economic and population growth, including migration. These now need to be revised downwards, possibly quite seriously.

The housing number is based on an arbitrary Housing Market Area (HMA): the “West Surrey” tri-borough area of Guildford, Woking and Waverley. An HMA should be an area within which a majority of people live, work, shop or study. On any common sense view, “West Surrey” is much too small. Half of Guildford borough’s residents work elsewhere, and half who work here live outside the borough. A short, half-hour commute puts the borough within reach of Surbiton to the North, Haslemere to the South, Reigate to the East and Basingstoke to the West; but all lie well outside “West Surrey”. Puzzlingly, the adjacent district of Rushmoor, minutes from Guildford town centre, is outside the HMA. It is no justification to say that the tri-borough area has been used in the past, or that a similar approach is used elsewhere; unlike (say) Carlisle, Norwich or Shrewsbury, Guildford is in the London commuter belt and part of a far wider and more complex housing market.

These concerns have been raised since 2014 but the Council has failed to seek better market data. There was no public consultation on the SHMA and Councillors were not allowed to scrutinise it. The absence of a ready alternative, however, does not make “West Surrey” reliable. The area is artificial, and so therefore are the housing numbers derived from it. For instance, by juxtaposing Guilford with Woking it appears that Guildford residents are being asked to build homes on open countryside to meet its bigger, urban neighbour’s “need”. Guildford wants to build 7 sites of over 500 units, compared with only 4 across Surrey’s 10 other districts, and 26 sites over 100 units, compared with 53 across the rest of the county. This distribution is unbalanced.

The assumptions and calculations in the SHMA are widely regarded as flawed and even before Brexit, produced an inflated housing needs number. The figure of 13,860 new homes is completely unsubstantiated. It has not been scrutinized by Councillors despite repeated requests for debate. The assumptions and calculations underlying the model are hidden, protected by a claim to intellectual property by a commercial sub-contractor used in preparing the SHMA. I have serious doubts about the objectivity of the SHMA because it has been produced by consultants whose website openly proclaims their pro-development agenda leading to reasonable suspicion that the figures are inflated. Guildford’s OAN is not transparent but has been taken on trust by the authors of the plan. Given that almost every element of the plan is predicated on this OAN, the plan as a whole cannot be considered “sound”.

The status of the 13,860 figure is ambiguous. The Council has said that the housing number and the OAN are identical because the OAN is “deliverable” and is by definition objective and cannot be contradicted. The OAN is only deliverable because of the Council’s cavalier approach to the Green Belt in contravention of the NPPF, ministerial statements and local and national Conservative Party manifesto commitments. The plan also states that infrastructure or other constraints may in due course affect deliverability. It is also unlikely that the number of houses can be built at the rate proposed. In recent years, housing starts have on average been less than half the proposed rate. This is not because developers do not have the land or cannot get planning permission. Constraints in the supply chain and maintaining profit levels have been more important.

The plan cannot be considered “deliverable”. In addition, the number of homes proposed, plus existing planning permissions, plus expected “windfall” sites, exceeds the total of 13,860. So how many homes (taking account of these adjustments) do the Council want built? The plan does not say. Without this figure it is hard to see how anything else can be planned. This undermines the validity of the whole consultation. It is unreasonable to ask the public to approve a “plan” that fails to propose a target number that takes all the standard constraints and adjustments realistically into account, leaving the Council to set one without further consultation. Even if the OAN is not flawed, it is at best only a baseline figure and should not be passed off as a policy proposal.
It is unreasonable to embark on a radical transformation of the borough on the basis of an unclear housing target. Most of Guildford Borough is highly protected from development (89% Green Belt, 44% AONB and about 75% protected by SPA). Whether or not increasing the number of dwellings by up to a quarter is desirable, it would be a major and irreversible change, arguably turning a largely rural borough into a mainly urban or suburban one like Woking. The scale of the housing number increases the onus for it to be seen to be sound. A substantially lower number, on the other hand, would remove the need to build on Green Belt or open countryside, and instantly meet the single biggest public objection to the plan as a whole.

The Plan in general and this policy in particular does not address the point that Guildford exists as part of London’s commuter belt. Any increase in supply of housing in Guildford, particularly if the increase is proportionately greater than elsewhere in the commuter belt, will simply result in a shift of population into the area. It will not reduce prices or increase availability except imperceptibly. The Plan also ignores the point that many of those working in the area live elsewhere. Accordingly in considering the housing number the Plan should take into account that in this part of London’s commuter belt, demand for housing is, in practical terms, unlimited.

This policy does not take proper accounts of the constraints to development which exist, principally posed by the Green Belt and by infrastructure limitations. I believe the Council is under a duty to properly consider applying these constraints. It is clear the Council has failed to do this. This approach differs from all the other boroughs in Surrey. The Plan appears to have deliberately been manipulated towards a growth agenda without disclosing why this is being done. The housing that is needed should be concentrated on urban brown field sites and through increasing the housing density of existing built up urban areas.

The development of 13,860 homes in the Plan period with 65% in the Green Belt does not constitute sustainable development. It will have a permanently detrimental impact on the Borough in general and on West Clandon and surrounding area in particular. The developments at Garlick’s Arch and Gosden Hill Farm do not meet the needs of the local communities. The road infrastructure in and around West Clandon will be unable to cope with additional demand. The edge of urban Guildford will creep that much closer to West Clandon, thus negating the purposes of the Green Belt in the area which include safeguarding the countryside from encroachment, checking the unrestricted sprawl of large built up areas and preventing neighboring towns merging into one another.

It is clear that the strategy adopted in the Plan is out of balance, with disproportionate development in the north east of the borough resulting from the allocation Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (Ripley/Send border) (A43) and Gosden Hill Farm (Clandon) (A25) as major residential sites. The allocation of sites in the Plan will result in 36% of all new housing being located in the three Wards of Lovelace, Send and Clandon & Horsley. Whilst at present these three Wards represent only about 11% of the existing housing in the borough, they are very much rural Wards. Some 5,036 houses are being allocated between the M25 and Burpham, a distance of only about 5 miles. It will result coalescence and a merging of identities of the surrounding villages. The Plan is completely unbalanced and does not reflect the current spread of housing across the borough.

The proposed development of Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25) will have a disproportionate impact on the surrounding local villages. They will have a permanently detrimental impact on each of these communities.

I object to this policy part of the plan as the villages of Horsley and Ripley are designated as district centres, this does not reflect the facilities available at these sites.

This policy identifies a need for 12,426 new homes within the plan period (2015-2034) and the revised delivery rate of 450 dwellings per annum (dpa) in 2019/20 rising to 850 by 2033/34.

This development strategy relies on the allocation and development of Wisley Aerodrome, yet this is an isolated location and does not represent a sustainable form of development. Wisley Airfield Aerodrome is located between the settlements of Effingham and Ripley, but due to its location, very close to the A3 and its junction with the M25 people living here will be over-reliant on their car and very unlikely to use public transport.

We object to the allocation of Wisley Aerodrome for development on the grounds that:

1. This is an isolated location away from shops and services and this does not represent a sustainable form of development. The scale of development proposed (2000 houses) is not sufficiently large to support a sufficient number of shops and services in its own right and therefore residents will need to rely on the car to access other local shops, primarily in Ripley;

2. The site comprises a designated Special Protection Area (SPA), Important Bird Area, Local Nature Reserve and Registered Common Land is also located to the north of the disused airfield within Ockham Common. The northern part of the site is within the 400 meter SPA buffer where residential properties cannot be accommodated.

3. Approximately 17 ha of the airfield to the north west is safeguarded under the Surrey Waste Plan and should be preserved for this important strategic facility.

4. Aerodromes by their very nature have an open character and are within isolated locations and the character of this site, including its linear and open character does not lend itself to development.

5. The site currently serves a number of green belt purposes in terms of keeping land permanently open in accordance with Section 9 of the NPPF. It is unsound to allocate land currently within the Green Belt which serves these purposes for the following reasons:

Purpose 3: To assist in safeguarding the countryside from encroachment. The allocation of this site for development would lead to significant development encroaching into an isolated open Countryside location where there is currently very little development. It would have a detrimental impact on the open character of the area and countryside.

Purpose 5: ‘To assist in urban regeneration, by encouraging the recycling of derelict and other urban land’. The former runway represents previously developed land, but it has an open character in an isolated countryside location. Development here has the potential to make alternative regeneration sites within Guildford less attractive to developers and potentially less viable.
A far more sustainable form of development would be to release green belt sites adjacent to large villages which already benefit from existing shops and services and are within a short distance to an existing train station.

Effingham is a sustainable location for development, yet the revised Local Plan fails to allocate any significant sites for development here despite it being within cycling distance from Effingham Junction railway station and containing a number of shops and services.

We support the areas around villages as sustainable locations for housing development and suggest that more housing is allocated in these areas as this is preferable to the allocation of Wisley Airdrome.

I have been through the Guildford Local Plan and have the following high-level comments to make:-

Infrastructure must come first and delivered in the appropriate order. Due cognisance must be afforded to the work being undertaken by Highways England with regards the A3 prior to any other major roads being considered (such as the CLLR). As part of any infrastructure work constant monitoring of air quality must be paramount as Guildford has a poor record in this area.

I am also concerned that with so many new homes being planned, detailed studies are undertaken to ensure that services such as sewage, water and power are adequate to support the growth. Obviously we must build new homes where viable but GBC must ensure that a high proportion of these new homes are affordable or social housing to ensure that our young people can live in the borough.

GBC must pay due regard for the green belt, our environment and the preserving of AONB. I am totally opposed to the insetting of our villages (e.g. Jacobs Well) and removing them from the green belt.

GBC must also pay due regard and preserve our flood plains. They are there for a purpose and have served Guildford and Surrey well for hundreds of years. There should be no building of houses or roads on designated 3B flood plains or building in areas where the water tables and streams will be affected. It should be noted that AECOM high-lighted SARP as a project with significant flood risk.

With regards the many traveller pitches in the plan, for Guildford Borough, GBC must ensure that DCLG Planning Policy for Traveller Sites (August 2015) is applied.
