Policy E8: District Centres

I OBJECT to the designation of the existing shopping parades in 3 villages being designated as District Centres. Village shopping parades should serve the needs of the local residents. More extensive shopping facilities are available in Guildford Town centre, and this is where they should remain.
I OBJECT in particular to Station Parade, East Horsley, being designated a District Centre. This is a small-scale retail centre meeting the needs of the local village population and further retail development would encourage the use of this centre by residents outside the villages, with its consequent adverse impact on road use and parking.

I OBJECT to the plan to encourage further retail development on the existing retail centre or on sites on the edge of this centre. I reiterate that this is a village and the shops serve local needs. This should continue to be the case in future. Further development at this centre or on the edge of this centre would turn the village into a town.

We previously commented on your designation of East Horsley as a Rural District Centre in the draft Local Plan. We note that the designation has now changed to a District Centre and we repeat our objection to this on the grounds that the designation completely misreads the situation. The direction of main town centre uses towards the village, as a District Centre, would not only be inappropriate and unsustainable, but would be physically impossible to introduce. It should also be noted that there is already insufficient parking in the village for those using the local amenities, and there is no available space to alleviate this. The error in designating East Horsley as a District Centre is compounded by the fact that Cobham, which is in close proximity but outside the GBC boundary, is in reality the District Centre for the Horsleys and vicinity. The reason for this is the much more extensive range of services available, including two large supermarkets and branches of 4 different banks, compared to the Horsleys where there is no large supermarket and only one bank.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
Policy E8 & Policy E9

Although not objecting in total to these policies concerning District Centres and rural Local Centres, we have specific concerns. We object to the inclusion of the phrases "and other main town centre use" where it appears in both policies.

The definition of main town centre uses within these policy sections (paras. 4.4.87b and 4.4.92a) include an extremely wide ranging selection of activities, some of which are totally inappropriate to locations such as Station Parade and Bishopmead Parade, East Horsley. Examples include factory outlet centres, casinos, drive-through restaurants and night clubs. The fact that these uses will be "supported" by Policies E8 and E9 is a concern. The designation "retail and other main town centre uses" replaces the previous wording which simply said "retail development". The term "consistent with the scale and function of that centre" is insufficient protection against inappropriate development and the reference to "other main town centre uses" and the supporting definition of these uses should be removed.

POLICY E8 District centres

PART SUPPORT, PART OBJECT We think it is appropriate that these three district centres should support development consistent with the scale and function of the local centre. I think it is appropriate not to approve planning applications for main town centre uses over 100 sq m outside district centres – although this policy could and should be more clearly articulated. I do NOT support consideration of sites on the edge of district centres for town centre uses.

Policies E8/ E9: District & Local Centres

Object (not justified in respect of NPPF paragraph 182)

The Local Plan is unjustified on the basis of the proposed restriction on food takeaways (A5 uses) within 500m of schools. This is unsupported by appropriate evidence and not a reasonable material planning consideration. There does not appear to be any evidence base to support this, and no explanation is included within the reasoned justification. The same policy provision is also included within Policy E7 with respect to Guildford Town Centre, again without justification.

To place the policy into a practical context, at the Wisley new settlement, the Concept Masterplan (Appendix 2) includes a local centre (which may include A5 uses) adjacent to the proposed primary and secondary school site. There are design, transport and sustainability reasons to support this co-location. As read, this proposal would be in conflict with emerging policies E8 and E9. Indeed, it is best practice to provide critical mass at local centres to not only create a sustainable place but also to make the proposals viable.
Village Facilities

West Horsley has only two small shops at the southern end of the village, with limited parking. People using East Horsley’s shops and Library have difficulty in parking at most times of the day. Any increase in the local population will make parking and movement in the village more difficult. It can definitely not be described as a “District Centre.”

Horsley Station Parade has been designated a District Centre

The attempt to classify the small station parade as a district centre is beyond laughable. It meets virtually none of the requirements. It is not a district centre. There is only one small convenience store and a pharmacy and post office plus charity shops and a cafe. This is not the definition. It indicates that no one from the group that prepared this plans has remotely interviewed or even visited. If you live in the Horsleys, the "district centre" is effectively Cobham (ELMBRIDGE) or Leatherhead (MOLE VALLEY). There is nothing in Station Parade to make it this.

Policy E8: District Centres

I OBJECT to this policy. There appears to be a complete disjoint between the views of residents and planners. While residents of Ripley and of East Horsley appreciate their local shopping facilities, I suspect that relatively few of them would draw any real distinction between what the draft Local Plan calls District Centres and Local Centres. Most households in both these villages would certainly do their main shopping in major supermarkets in Cobham or Burpham rather than in their “District Centre”. The distinction between District Centres and Local Centres is therefore illusory, and is not helpful in planning terms. Indeed, the Settlement Hierarchy that sought to classify settlements by the facilities that they offered was comprehensively discredited in 2013-14, and now appears to have been downplayed to the point of invisibility in the current round of consultation.

It’s time to face reality, do away with nominal distinctions, and either re-write Policies E8 and E9 from scratch as a single sensible policy, or perhaps draw the distinction instead between village centres and urban centres.

Paragraph 3 of the Policy makes provision for Station Parade in East Horsley to accommodate “main town centre uses”, which are defined as retail development (including warehouse clubs and factory outlet centres); leisure, entertainment facilities the more intensive sport and recreation uses (including cinemas, restaurants, drive-through restaurants, bars and pubs, night-clubs, casinos, health and fitness centres, indoor bowling centres, and bingo halls); offices; and arts, culture and tourism development (including theatres, museums, galleries and concert halls, hotels and conference facilities).

Frankly, one wonders whether the authors of this Policy have ever bothered to visit East Horsley to see what completely inappropriate nonsense this is. Some of these uses might conceivably be appropriate, but I don’t even think GBC really intended to open the door to the inappropriate ones. There are only three District Centres, so it would have been quite possible to define the specific uses that were really being considered for each District Centre, and to agree them individually with the relevant Parish Council and with residents. As it is currently drafted, it is likely to lead to many unnecessary consultation responses. Moreover the current text fails to comply with NPPF paragraph 154 which states “Local Plans should set out the opportunities for development and clear policies on what will or will not be permitted and where. Only policies that provide a clear indication of how a decision maker should react to a development proposal should be included in the plan.”

I strongly object to this Policy on the grounds that a little sensible reconsideration could produce a draft that would be considerably more acceptable to local residents without significantly changing the planning outcome.

I also think it is inappropriate to designate the Station Parade as a district centre – the shops, although extensive, are not able to cater for all needs, necessitating additional car journeys to Cobham or Guildford. There is only one bank for example, the main food shop is a “convenience store” not a small supermarket, there are no clothing shops other than charity shops and there is no hardware store.

On a specific point, classifying East Horsley’s Station Parade as a Rural District Centre is bizarre. Friends in Effingham use their local rural centre or head to Cobham – they don’t come to Horsley. Merrow or Guildford is used by those in Clandon, Ripley, which is seen as a local centre, has more retail and commercial space. West Horsley is not an obvious development zone.

POLICY E8 - District centres

I OBJECT to the proposal that sites “on the edge” of District Centres being considered for retail developments. This is another Trojan horse policy, allowing retail hubs to be vastly expanded in order to smooth the way for vast new housing estates outside in the countryside (e.g. to meet the “everyday shopping and service needs” of the roughly 1,500 people living in the 600 new homes planned for the Horsleys).

This is a case of back-to-front priorities. Expanded local retail hubs are being proposed in order to justify more housebuilding in the villages, and in a forlorn attempt to mitigate the serious traffic and infrastructure problems this will create. The Council has no business facilitating new supermarkets in the Green Belt. Rural retail capacity should be left to local demand.

The policy proposes not a single measure to support existing rural shops and services that are the lifeblood of village communities, e.g. using business rates and other levers at the Council’s disposal.

Policy E8 – District Centres

I OBJECT. In the previous (2014) Local Plan, District Centres were defined as follows: “They have at least 30 commercial units, including a large supermarket and local services such as a bank, and are accessible by public transport. They function as district centres because of their number and range of commercial and community uses and their accessibility by public transport.”

- There is no bank in Ripley, and only one in East Horsley.
- East Horsley (Station Parade) has 25 units, many of which are services (library, bank, hairdressers, cafes and take-aways), not retail units. The number rises to 30 only if all the units between Station Parade and the station (Station Approach) are included.
- There is no “large supermarket” in East Horsley or in Ripley. Budgens in East Horsley is small enough not to come under the Sunday trading laws.
- Horsley is served by train from Guildford (4 per hour), Leatherhead and Epsom (2 per hour each), all of which do have large supermarkets accessible from their railway stations. The 478 bus service to the East Horsley village consists of three or four buses per day in each direction (0939, 1139, 1349, 1709 to Leatherhead and 1042, 1242, 1502 [school holidays only] to Guildford) which run on Mondays to Fridays only. It is very unlikely that shoppers will come by train to shop at a convenience store in Horsley. The 478 is used to travel to Tesco at Leatherhead precisely because there is no large supermarket in Horsley.
- Ripley has no railway station (the nearest one is Clandon, some 3 miles away). It does have bus services (515 about every 75 minutes to Guildford or Kingston, 462 or 463 about every hour to Guildford or Woking).
The only reason to designate these villages as District Centres seems to be to make it easier to approve planning permission for additional development adjacent to the shops. The fact that there are empty shops indicates that there is insufficient demand for the status quo. Providing viable additional shopping facilities will require a large influx of shoppers, which the infrastructure is quite unable to support. Furthermore, in East Horsley, there is no space to expand the shopping area nor to provide the inevitable parking requirements.

This would misread the nature of the facilities in the village centre and target the area for urban development. Has anyone actually visited our village and been into our very small convenience stores? This designation could have grave consequences for our village because it seems to permit a wide variety of town centre uses which are completely inappropriate for a village the size of East Horsley. This classification results from a complete misreading of the nature of the facilities in the village centre and would inappropriately target the area for future urban developments. Again, the infrastructure - roads, car parking - cannot cope with significantly more flow.

Designating Station Parade East Horsley as a District Centre: Identifying Station Parade, East Horsley as a District Centre and second in the hierarchy of retail and service centres after Guildford town centre is entirely inappropriate for this small parade of local shops in East Horsley and should be rejected. We need to retain the existing atmosphere of Station Parade and our Village. The existing Budgen’s is not a large supermarket but a convenience store which is the only reason it is allowed to open all day on Sundays. I object to policy E8 District centres

I object to the proposal that sites “on the edge” of District Centres should be considered for retail developments. This is another Trojan horse policy, allowing retail hubs to be vastly expanded in order to smooth the way for vast new housing estates outside in the countryside (e.g. to meet the “everyday shopping and service needs” of the roughly 1,500 people living in the 600 new homes planned for the Horsleys).

This is a case of back-to-front priorities. Expanded local retail hubs are being proposed in order to justify more housebuilding in the villages, and in a forlorn attempt to mitigate the serious traffic and infrastructure problems this will bring. The Council have no business preparing the way for new supermarkets in the Green Belt. Rural retail capacity should be left to local demand.

The policy proposes not a single measure to support existing rural shops and services that are the lifeblood of village communities, e.g. using business rates and other levers at the Council’s disposal.

I understand that due to a misreading of the type of facilities at the Station Parade, that this small village area could become reclassified as a ‘District Centre”, which would open it up to inappropriate development in the future. To visit the Station Parade would show that this is a thriving parade of village shops, including independent cafes and businesses, as well as bank, and chemist, and a small Budgens. The Budgens is small enough to be able to trade unrestricted hours on a Sunday. There is a library and family run butchers as well as two cafes, both independent. Any future development on a large scale would mean that the smaller businesses would be pushed out in favour of larger retail conglomerates. The whole nature of the village would be changed and we would lose a valuable and vibrant village centre. I understand that the decision to form a district centre in East Horsley would be made on the basis of a misreading of the nature of the facilities here. There is no room for any development here, and no room for the extra car parking that that would generate. This is a very concerning issue. Our village centre is just that, not a business centre.

East Horsley ‘District Centre’ - I OBJECT

The Plan proposes to designate Station Parade, East Horsley, has a ‘district centre’ which would make it vulnerable to future urban development. This is an impractical proposal since there is nowhere for any development to be built without the destruction of existing homes and premises. I also object to the inclusion of Kingtston Field as a site for possible development. This is a very important local space and a valuable community asset which should remain untouched.

5) I also object and question the proposal Policy E8 District Centres. I would argue that East Horsley does not meet the criteria of a District Centre as we do not have a large Supermarket and so should not be considered in this category, nor indeed do I desire the village to expand and develop to an extent as to be in this category.

POLICY E8 - District centres

I OBJECT to the proposal that sites "on the edge" of District Centres should be considered for retail developments. The policy proposes not a single measure to support existing rural shops and services that are the lifeblood of village communities, e.g. using business rates and other levers at the Council's disposal.

Policy E8 District centres – I PART SUPPORT, BUT PART OBJECT I think it is appropriate that these three district centres should support development consistent with the scale and function of the local centre. I think it is appropriate not to approve planning applications for main town centre uses over 100 sq m outside district centres – although this policy could and should be more clearly articulated. I do NOT support consideration of sites on the edge of district centres for town centre uses.

We previously commented on your designation of East Horsley as a Rural District Centre in the draft Local Plan. We note that the designation has now changed to a District Centre and we repeat our objection to this on the grounds that the designation completely misreads the situation. The direction of main town centre uses towards the village, as a District Centre, would not only be inappropriate and unsustainable, but would be physically impossible to introduce. It should also be noted that there is already insufficient parking in the village for those using the local amenities, and there is no available space to alleviate this. The error in designating East Horsley as a District Centre is compounded by the fact that Cobham, which is in close proximity but outside the GBC boundary, is in reality the District Centre for the Horsleys and vicinity. The reason for this is the much more extensive range of services available, including two large supermarkets and branches of 4 different banks, compared to the Horsleys where there is no large supermarket and only one bank.

Designation of East Horsley as a District Shopping Centre

The Local Plan designates East Horsley as a “District Shopping Centre”. This is extraordinary given that East Horsley houses a small collection of shops (convenience store, hairdresser, butcher, bank, pharmacy) typical of a medium sized village centre. The facilities are not in any way those of a main town centre, or urban area, from the perspective of either retail (there is no supermarket), leisure, office or arts/culture facilities. I object strongly to East Horsley being designated as a District Shopping Centre – it should be classified as a Local Centre.

Furthermore the local facilities and infrastructure would be completely overwhelmed by the scale of the proposed developments in East Horsley, West Horsley and the former Wisley airfield site. In particular the road infrastructure, East Horsley shops, health services, schooling and train transport – many of these are already stretched and in some cases inadequate for the current residential community. I see no suitable sustainable proposals on supporting infrastructure investment outlined in the Local Plan to justify the proposed level of development and therefore object to these proposed developments.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Attached documents:
The Local Plan amendments clarify definitions which in my view confirm that Station Parade, East Horsley should not be designated as a “District Centre”. Neither should this be designated as a “Strategic Employment Centre. East Horsley is a small collection of shops (convenience store, hairdresser, butcher, bank, pharmacy) typical of a medium sized village centre and should more appropriately be designated a “rural local centre”. The facilities are not in any way those of a main town centre, or urban area, from the perspective of either retail (there is no supermarket), employment, leisure, office or arts/culture facilities.

These local facilities and infrastructure would be completely overwhelmed by the scale of the proposed developments in East Horsley, West Horsley and in particular, Wisley Airfield/Ockham. The road infrastructure, East Horsley shops, health services, schooling and train transport are already stretched and in some cases already inadequate for the current residential community.

I note that in the latest version of the local plan that the Station Parade in East Horsley has been designated a District Centre which is incorrectly identifying the village facilities in order to justify inappropriate development of the area.

Additionally I object to Policy E8 – District Centres

It appears that the plan is proposing to expand in retail centres in rural areas. This is obviously to demonstrate that there is a demand for housing in said rural areas. This will harm the character of the surrounding villages I have lived in for the last 3 decades and there is no demand from the locals? Why would the borough council think this acceptable and risk moving trade out of Guildford town centre where a significant amount of money is being spent on redevelopment.

This policy will allow development for more retail spaces in rural areas with is consequent housing expansion. This is not wanted or needed and is completely unjustified in the light of the explosion of online retail businesses. Guildford’s position of the primary retail hub would be hurt by this policy. Rural shops would also be hit as they would not be able compete with larger retailers. The whole character of the villages would change and they would be subsumed into the urbanisation and sprawl which is expressly against the provisions of the NPPF.

Designating Station Parade in East Horsley as a district centre is a joke. The current shops are only suitable for ad-hoc shopping. Most residents travel to Cobham or Burpham or further for super-market shopping. The car parking in and around station parade is already close to capacity. The Medical Centre is also at capacity with difficulties now in obtaining a timely appointment, and parking is an issue also at the Medical Centre.

DEFINITION OF STATION PARADE AS A “DISTRICT CENTRE”

I OBJECT to this classification.

I, and many others, argued this point in previous letters and am rather incensed that this is still an issue. Staion Parade is in no shape or form a “district centre” and yet again one must question whether any member of the Plan’s drafting committee has bothered to come here and take a look?

Station Parade in East Horsley: The plan designates this as a “Rural District Centre”, partly because of Budgens which is described as a large supermarket. Anyone living in East and West Horsley knows that it is a very small supermarket and hence due to its size, is able to open on a Sunday. Parking is already quite difficult and if the potential number of shoppers were to increase, then particularly the elderly and less able residents would struggle to reach the shops when they needed to. This is a total misinterpretation of the local facilities.

I strongly OBJECT to the proposal that sites “on the edge” of District Centres will be considered for retail developments.

This is clearly leaving the door wide open for the expansion of retail hubs – which will become necessary to “meet everyday shopping and service needs” of the proposed new housing estates in the countryside.

This is clearly a case of “horse before carriage”. Expanded retail hubs are being proposed in order to sneakily justify expanded house construction in the villages. Yet without proper consideration of the - already existent - traffic and infrastructure problems.

Why not support existing rural shops and services instead? These have far more character and will give the villages back their historic characters, rather than turning them into “High-Street-Wannabies”.

I also object to the classification of the East Horsley Station Parade as a designated “District Centre” this is pure artistic licence by the Plans authors, it is just a small shopping parade.

25.2  I object to the proposal that sites “on the edge” of District Centres should be considered for retail developments. 25.3  This is a case of back-to-front priorities. Expanded local retail hubs are being proposed in order to justify more housebuilding in the villages, and in a forlorn attempt to mitigate the serious traffic and infrastructure problems this will bring. The Council have no business preparing the way for new supermarkets in the Green Belt. Rural retail capacity should be left to local demand.

POSITIVELY PREPARED

The draft policy is not based on any objectively assessed development requirement. It effectively assesses the requirement for hot food takeaways within 500 metres of the boundary of a school as zero, but does so without evidence of either a link between the incidence of obesity and the proximity of hot food takeaways to such places or any particular distance at which that link is demonstrated. Consequently, the development requirement has not been objectively assessed.

In fact, the distance chosen could have the effect of banning hot food takeaways from a majority of the Borough. No assessment has been made of the number of hot food takeaways that might be refused as a result of this or what the social, economic or environmental impacts of that might be, so it is not possible to balance these impacts.

The policy is negative in its assumptions, using the concept of ‘unhealthy food’, which is at best unhelpful in isolation from an understanding of the person eating the food, their health and lifestyle, and at worst is simply subjective. Furthermore, it assumes all hot food takeaways offer little choice and serve the same type and standard of food.

We are further of the view that food of high energy density or poor nutritional value is sold from and at a range of premises within a variety of other classes, including many in Class A1, such as coffee or sandwich shops, bakeries or, simply, supermarkets, and that focussing on Class A5 uses is both unhelpful and unfair.

JUSTIFIED
There is no evidence for a causal link between the incidence of obesity and proximity of hot food takeaways to schools and only limited evidence of any correlation at all, so it is unclear how refusing planning permission for hot food takeaways within 500 metres of such locations could ever be justified.

The inclusion of primary schools is particularly problematic, as it is clear that children at primary schools are not usually permitted to leave the premises at lunchtime and, given their age, are unlikely to travel to or from school unaccompanied. Outside school time, children’s diets are quite properly the responsibility their parents or guardians.

Consequently, it is far from clear how refusing planning permission for hot food takeaways within 500 metres of primary schools could ever be justified. This was the view taken by a Planning Inspector in an appeal (APP/P4415/A/11/2159082) against refusal of a restaurant and hot food takeaway in January 2012.

The Evidence Base contains no evidence of any threshold number of hot food takeaways at which the harm that the draft policy seeks to mitigate occurs or is noticeably greater, nor any threshold distance. Indeed, there is no evidence of a causal spatial link between clusters of hot food and the incidence of obesity or overweight at all.

It is better to rely on objective evidence in a retail study to set maximum proportions of hot food takeaways. Whilst these are primarily directed at protecting the retail health of designated centres, there is scope to widen their application to support the retail health of retail provision outside centres, such as standalone or parade units.

As it is usually impractical to apply a maximum frontage proportion outside centres, the 500-metre walk distance might be applied, within which the proportion (rather than number) of units, be they in- or out-of-centre, used as hot food takeaways would not be permitted to exceed the same threshold as set for centres.

In adopting such an approach, it would be preferable to consider optimal proportions of all retail uses that could contribute to healthy centres or to a healthy offer generally, whether in- or out-of-centre, instead of focussing on particular uses considered to be a problem, apparently for wider social reasons unrelated to retail planning.

On a practical point, there is a significant difficulty in using distance radii in that it takes no account of real barriers, physical or perceptual, so that premises on the other side of a line feature such as a canal or busy road could be affected despite in reality being more than a 500m walk away. It is far better to use real walk isochrones.

EFFECTIVE

For the reasons set out, it is unclear how refusing permission for hot food takeaways within 500 metres of primary schools could ever be effective.

Some hot food takeaways, together with restaurants, pubs and shops are clearly a source of cheap, energy dense and nutrient poor foods, however, not all hot food takeaways, restaurants, pubs and shops are, and the planning system is ineffective in distinguishing between those that are and those that are not.

The area that would be affected by the policy could cover a large and variable part of the Borough, so it is hard to see how the effectiveness of its extent could be monitored. Would poor or negative achievement against objectives result in reduction or expansion of the zones? What other corrective action might be taken short of its withdrawal?

Diet is clearly a key determinant both of general health and obesity levels. Exercise is the other key determinant and must be considered for a complete picture. Focussing on improving access to open space, sport and recreation facilities would be a far more effective strategy for reducing childhood obesity.

CONSISTENT WITH NATIONAL POLICY

We consider that no regard has been given to national policy and advice in preparing Policy E8 because no National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF) policies deal with dietary issues.

Specifically, taking into account proximity of hot food takeaways to schools has no basis in national policy and national practice guidance simply refers to a briefing paper containing case studies on the issue. Indeed, restricting accessibility to services and facilities is directly contrary to national policy.
The NPPF recognises the role planning takes in better enabling people to live healthier lifestyles. However, it seeks to do this by creating, not restricting choice, by increasing access to recreation and health services, and by ensuring developments are within walkable distances of local facilities and public transport to other facilities.

POLICY E8 District centres

GROUNDS FOR OBJECTION We think it is appropriate that these three district centres should support development consistent with the scale and function of the local centre. We think it is appropriate not to approve planning applications for main town centre uses over 100 sq m outside district centres – although this policy could and should be more clearly articulated. We do NOT support consideration of sites on the edge of district centres for town centre uses.

The re-designation of our small parade of shops to 'District Centre' is surely misleading as that implies 'a group of shops separate from a TOWN centre' when surely we are a 'Local Centre'? This labelling can only imply that the retail facilities are greater than they currently are?

I OBJECT TO POLICY E8 (DISTRICT CENTRES):

- Too much scope to expand rural retail centres to justify major housing expansion across the countryside, despite lack of demand. Will spoil character of villages while harming Guildford's role as a retail hub.
- No measures to support existing rural shops and services, e.g. through business rates.

Designating station road as a district centre is wrong. It results from a complete misreading of the nature of the facilities in the village centre and would inappropriately target the area for future urban developments.

Designation of East Horsley as a ‘District Centre’ - I understand that a district centre can be described as ‘a LARGE group of shops, together with supporting non-retail facilities and services. They normally feature not less than 50 units’. We are a village with a handful of shops and therefore should not be classed as a district centre.

I OBJECT to the proposal that sites “on the edge” of District Centres should be considered for retail developments. This is absolutely crazy. Shops in existing villages are closing and being converted into residential property. So there must be another reason, it could well be let build shops, then we have a good reason to build a lot more houses. This nothing more than creeping urbanisation one of the reason the Green Belt policy was established after the Second World War. This is another Trojan horse policy, allowing retail hubs to be established and expanded in order to smooth the way for vast new housing estates outside in the countryside, and in a forlorn attempt to mitigate the serious traffic and infrastructure problems large housing developments will bring. The Council has no business preparing the way for new supermarkets in the Green Belt. Rural retail capacity should be left to local demand. The policy proposes not a single measure to support existing rural shops and services that are the lifeblood of village communities, e.g. using business rates and other levers at the Council’s disposal.

I OBJECT to the proposal that sites “on the edge” of District Centres should be considered for retail developments. This is another Trojan horse policy, allowing retail hubs to be vastly expanded in order to smooth the way for vast new housing estates outside in the countryside (e.g. to meet the “everyday shopping and service needs” of the roughly 1,500 people living in the 600 new homes planned for the Horsleys). This is a case of back-to-front priorities. Expanded local retail hubs are being proposed in order to justify more housebuilding in the villages, and in a forlorn attempt to mitigate the serious traffic and infrastructure problems this will bring. The Council have no business preparing the way for new supermarkets in the Green Belt. Rural retail capacity should be left to local demand. The policy proposes not a single measure to support existing rural shops and services that are the lifeblood of village communities, e.g. using business rates and other levers at the Council’s disposal.

Guildford Borough Local Plan – Proposed Submission Local Plan: strategy sites 2016

I am writing on behalf of the Surrey/Hants Borders Branch of CAMRA, the Campaign for Real Ale, in relation to the above consultation.

As you would expect, CAMRA’s chief concern is that the Local Plan will afford suitable protection, in planning terms, for public houses. The continuing loss of traditional pubs, both in urban and rural settings, is in our view having a very negative effect on the communities concerned. The planning system affords a potentially powerful line of defence against the efforts of some pub owners to make short-term financial gains at the expense of valuable community facilities. Our hope would be that the Local Plan will include policies which support the retention of community assets like pubs and resist applications for

I am also pleased to note that Policy E5, contains a specific mention of public houses in terms of businesses that will be supported for retention in rural areas. I would agree that pubs they often essential in maintaining the local economy in rural villages. However, this can equally apply in urban areas, such as for example the suburbs of Guildford, where whole communities often have a single pub to act as the focus of the community. I would therefore like to see this policy extended to cover all communities, not just rural areas.

The identification of Ripley as a District Centre is supported, however, the opportunities to expand the facilities, shops and services in Ripley are limited.
Site Allocation A45: Land at the rear of the Talbot, High Street, Ripley provides an opportunity to deliver 90 sqm of new floorspace within the shopping frontage. The Council should include this additional floorspace on the Table at Page 28.

The policy should, however, allow flexibility for new units to come forward for a flexible range of; A1, A2, A3, A4, A5, B1a or D class uses. These uses will support the vitality and viability of the District centre.

SUPPORT subject to an amendment to the text stating: “In order to strengthen the liveliness and economic resilience of the borough’s District Centres, retail developments or other suitable District Centre uses including; restaurants, takeaways, small scale offices and community uses, consistent with the scale and function of that centre, will be supported in the Primary Shopping Area.”

POLICY E8: DISTRICT CENTRES

1.76 The identification of Ripley as a District Centre is supported, however, the current opportunities to expand the facilities, shops and services in Ripley are limited.

1.77 Site Allocation A45: Land at the rear of the Talbot, High Street, Ripley provides a rare opportunity to deliver 90 sqm of new floorspace within the shopping frontage.

1.78 The specific support for both retail and 'other main town centre uses’ within the Borough District Centres is supported. For clarity the Council should make it clearer what uses will be specifically supported. The definition at 4.4.87b is deemed to be largely irrelevant for the District Centres identified and accordingly it would be more realistic to set out a range of realistically deliverable uses which would logically include D Class uses and also in appropriate circumstances office use (B1a)

SUPPORT subject to an amendment to the text stating: “In order to strengthen the liveliness and economic resilience of the borough’s District Centres, retail developments or other suitable District Centre uses including; restaurants, takeaways, small scale offices and community uses, consistent with the scale and function of that centre, will be supported in the Primary Shopping Area.”

We have no “local centre” to provide our local community with everyday shopping and service facilities. It is suggested that a part of the upper High Street and the adjoining parts of Epsom and London Road be given a suitable designation to encourage the location of everyday retail and service facilities there, together with Council intervention to ensure rentals are affordable. Burpham: King Post Parade is only half the Local Centre, the other half is London Road Parade.
It is noted that Jacobs Well is missing as a Local Centre from the Plan, as are the proposed Local Centres at Wisley, Gosden Hill and Blackwell Farm.

We object to Policy E9 Local centres We object (for the reasons given under Policy E8 above) to the proposal for retail development adjacent to the 6 rural centres, and sites on the edge of designated centres. This is creeping urbanisation, damaging to the Green Belt and to Guildford town revival as a thriving urban hub. POLICY E9 - Local centres

I OBJECT (for the reasons given under Policy E8 above) to the proposal for retail development adjacent to the 6 rural centres, and sites on the edge of designated centres. This is creeping urbanisation, damaging to the Green Belt and to Guildford town revival as a thriving urban hub. It will contribute to local urban decay and depopulation, just as expansion of the suburbs did to mid-20th century London.

I object to this policy.

How can GBC prevent the vacancy rate from increasing? There is a marked shift away from traditional retail, and it has been predicted by the BRC that up to one third of people employed in traditional retail will loose their jobs by 2015. Given this background, how can GBC possibly stop the vacancy rate from rising?

This is a King Canute policy.

Policy E9 - Local Centres

We have noted that Epsom Road, Merrow appears in the list of 14 existing Local Centres in this policy.

We support this policy which must be interpreted both positively and flexibly to allow these centres to retain financial viability and so that they are not swamped by businesses that are peripheral to the main objectives of providing for everyday shopping and service needs.

I OBJECT to this policy
I think that neither retail development adjacent to the 6 rural centres is appropriate, nor sites on the edge of designated centres.

I OBJECT (for my reasons given under my Policy E8 response) to the proposal for retail development adjacent to the 6 rural centres, and sites on the edge of designated centres. This is creeping urbanization, damaging to the Green Belt and to Guildford town role as a thriving urban hub. It will contribute to urban decay and depopulation, just as expansion of the suburbs did to mid-20th century London.

This is another Trojan horse policy, allowing retail hubs to be vastly expanded in order to smooth the way for vast new housing estates outside in the countryside (e.g. to meet the “everyday shopping and service needs” of the roughly 1,500 people living in the 600 new homes planned for the Horsleys).

This is a case of back-to-front priorities. Expanded local retail hubs are being proposed in order to justify more house building in the villages, and in a forlorn attempt to mitigate the serious traffic and infrastructure problems this will create. The Council has no business facilitating new supermarkets in the Green Belt. Rural retail capacity should be left to local demand.

The policy proposes not a single measure to support existing rural shops and services that are the lifeblood of village communities, e.g. using business rates and other levers at the Council’s disposal.

The designation "retail and other main town centre uses” replaces the previous wording which simply said "retail development”. The term "consistent with the scale and function of that centre” is insufficient protection against inappropriate development and the reference to "other main town centre uses” and the supporting definition of these uses should be removed.

4.4.92 ‘Over the plan period, four new Local Centres are planned to be built at each of the strategic sites of Gosden Hill, the former Wisley airfield, Blackwell Farm and Normandy and Flexford. The precise location of each centre will be determined by planning application. Once built, these new local centres will be treated as local centres within the context of this Plan, and subsequently designated as new Local Centres in the next Local Plan review.

Worplesdon Road, Stoughton Ash Vale Parade, Ash The Street, Tongham

I cannot see how these already congested ‘local centres’ can be helped by the addition of attracting more traffic to new centres like Normandy and Flexford. GBC haven shown how infrastructure costs can be met to alleviate the stress already on the sites.

E9 Local Centre
There is no “local centre” to provide the local community in which I live with everyday shopping and service facilities. Perhaps a part of the upper High Street and the adjoining parts of Epsom and London Road could be given a suitable designation to encourage the location of everyday retail and service facilities there.

Local centres exist to cater for retail needs of the locality. Some of the Local Centres have vacant premises. Under these circumstances it is not appropriate to encourage new developments on the edge of Local Centres, nor does this constitute exceptional circumstances for encroaching into the Green Belt.

Policy E8 & Policy E9

Although not objecting in total to these policies concerning District Centres and rural Local Centres, we have specific concerns. We object to the inclusion of the phrases "and other main town centre use" where it appears in both policies.

The definition of main town centre uses within these policy sections (paras. 4.4.87b and 4.4.92a) include an extremely wide ranging selection of activities, some of which are totally inappropriate to locations such as Station Parade and Bishopmead Parade, East Horsley. Examples include factory outlet centres, casinos, drive-through restaurants and nightclubs. The fact that these uses will be "supported" by Policies E8 and E9 is a concern. The designation "retail and other main town centre uses" replaces the previous wording which simply said "retail development". The term "consistent with the scale and function of that centre" is insufficient protection against inappropriate development and the reference to "other main town centre uses" and the supporting definition of these uses should be removed.

The University recognises the role that local centres play in providing a focus for everyday shopping and service needs.

The University agrees with the strategy to encourage provision of new homes above ground floor non-residential uses.

The University is broadly supportive of paragraph 4.4.92 of the supporting text to this policy.

Policies E8/ E9: District & Local Centres

Object (not justified in respect of NPPF paragraph 182)

The Local Plan is unjustified on the basis of the proposed restriction on food takeaways (A5 uses) within 500m of schools. This is unsupported by appropriate evidence and not a reasonable material planning consideration. There does not appear to be any evidence base to support this, and no explanation is included within the reasoned justification. The same policy provision is also included within Policy E7 with respect to Guildford Town Centre, again without justification.

To place the policy into a practical context, at the Wisley new settlement, the Concept Masterplan (Appendix 2) includes a local centre (which may include A5 uses) adjacent to the proposed primary and secondary school site. There are design, transport and sustainability reasons to support this co-location. As read, this proposal would be in conflict with emerging policies E8 and E9. Indeed, it is best practice to provide critical mass at local centres to not only create a sustainable place but also to make the proposals viable.

As a separate point, WPI supports the proposed designation of a local centre at the Wisley new settlement, as outlined in paragraph 4.4.92.

OBJECT (on 2 distinct grounds)

1. For this Policy, which includes Bishopsmead Parade in East Horsley, the same objection applies as that stated for Policy E8. At least paragraph 5 of this Policy states that the main town centre uses must be “consistent with the scale and function of [the] centre”. Even so, it would be far better to review the list of main town centre uses, and then explicitly identify the acceptable subset of those uses – though in Bishopsmead Parade I suspect that the subset might be quite small.
2. Paragraph 4.4.96 suggests that a “reasonably flexible approach to ground floor main town centre uses” would be appropriate. However, that is not sufficiently specific in planning terms and again fails to comply with NPPF paragraph 154.

We object to Policy E9 Local centres

We object (for the reasons given under Policy E8 above) to the proposal for retail development adjacent to the 6 rural centres, and sites on the edge of designated centres. This is creeping urbanisation, damaging to the Green Belt and to Guildford town revival as a thriving urban hub. It will contribute to local urban decay and depopulation, just as expansion of the suburbs did to mid-20th century London.

POSITIVELY PREPARED

The draft policy is not based on any objectively assessed development requirement. It effectively assesses the requirement for hot food takeaways within 500 metres of the boundary of a school as zero, but does so without evidence of either a link between the incidence of obesity and the proximity of hot food takeaways to such places or any particular distance at which that link is demonstrated. Consequently, the development requirement has not been objectively assessed.

In fact, the distance chosen could have the effect of banning hot food takeaways from a majority of the Borough. No assessment has been made of the number of hot food takeaways that might be refused as a result of this or what the social, economic or environmental impacts of that might be, so it is not possible to balance these impacts.

The policy is negative in its assumptions, using the concept of ‘unhealthy food’, which is at best unhelpful in isolation from an understanding of the person eating the food, their health and lifestyle, and at worst is simply subjective. Furthermore, it assumes all hot food takeaways offer little choice and serve the same type and standard of food.

We are further of the view that food of high energy density or poor nutritional value is sold from and at a range of premises within a variety of other classes, including many in Class A1, such as coffee or sandwich shops, bakeries or, simply, supermarkets, and that focussing on Class A5 uses is both unhelpful and unfair.

JUSTIFIED

There is no evidence for a causal link between the incidence of obesity and proximity of hot food takeaways to schools and only limited evidence of any correlation at all, so it is unclear how refusing planning permission for hot food takeaways within 500 metres of such locations could ever be justified.

The inclusion of primary schools is particularly problematic, as it is clear that children at primary schools are not usually permitted to leave the premises at lunchtime and, given their age, are unlikely to travel to or from school unaccompanied. Outside school time, children’s diets are quite properly the responsibility their parents or guardians.

Consequently, it is far from clear how refusing planning permission for hot food takeaways within 500 metres of primary schools could ever be justified. This was the view taken by a Planning Inspector in an appeal (APP/P4415/A/11/2159082) against refusal of a restaurant and hot food takeaway in January 2012.

The Evidence Base contains no evidence of any threshold number of hot food takeaways at which the harm that the draft policy seeks to mitigate occurs or is noticeably greater, nor any threshold distance. Indeed, there is no evidence of a causal spatial link between clusters of hot food and the incidence of obesity or overweight at all.

It is better to rely on objective evidence in a retail study to set maximum proportions of hot food takeaways. Whilst these are primarily directed at protecting the retail health of designated centres, there is scope to widen their application to support the retail health of retail provision outside centres, such as standalone or parade units.
As it is usually impractical to apply a maximum frontage proportion outside centres, the 500-metre walk distance might be applied, within which the proportion (rather than number) of units, be they in- or out-of-centre, used as hot food takeaways would not be permitted to exceed the same threshold as set for centres.

In adopting such an approach, it would be preferable to consider optimal proportions of all retail uses that could contribute to healthy centres or to a healthy offer generally, whether in- or out-of-centre, instead of focussing on particular uses considered to be a problem, apparently for wider social reasons unrelated to retail planning.

On a practical point, there is a significant difficulty in using distance radii in that it takes no account of real barriers, physical or perceptual, so that premises on the other side of a line feature such as a canal or busy road could be affected despite in reality being more than a 500m walk away. It is far better to use real walk isochrones.

EFFECTIVE

For the reasons set out, it is unclear how refusing permission for hot food takeaways within 500 metres of primary schools could ever be effective.

Some hot food takeaways, together with restaurants, pubs and shops are clearly a source of cheap, energy dense and nutrient poor foods, however, not all hot food takeaways, restaurants, pubs and shops are, and the planning system is ineffective in distinguishing between those that are and those that are not.

The area that would be affected by the policy could cover a large and variable part of the Borough, so it is hard to see how the effectiveness of its extent could be monitored. Would poor or negative achievement against objectives result in reduction or expansion of the zones? What other corrective action might be taken short of its withdrawal?

Diet is clearly a key determinant both of general health and obesity levels. Exercise is the other key determinant and must be considered for a complete picture. Focussing on improving access to open space, sport and recreation facilities would be a far more effective strategy for reducing childhood obesity.

CONSISTENT WITH NATIONAL POLICY

We consider that no regard has been given to national policy and advice in preparing Policy E9 because no National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF) policies deal with dietary issues.

Specifically, taking into account proximity of hot food takeaways to schools has no basis in national policy and national practice guidance simply refers to a briefing paper containing case studies on the issue. Indeed, restricting accessibility to services and facilities is directly contrary to national policy.

The NPPF recognises the role planning takes in better enabling people to live healthier lifestyles. However, it seeks to do this by creating, not restricting choice, by increasing access to recreation and health services, and by ensuring developments are within walkable distances of local facilities and public transport to other facilities.

Whilst we support additional clarity, we consider that food of high energy density or poor nutritional value is sold from and at a range of premises within a variety of other classes, including many in Class A1, such as coffee or sandwich shops, bakeries or, simply, supermarkets, and that focusing on Class A5 uses is both unhelpful and unfair.

I OBJECT (for the reasons given under Policy E8 above) to the proposal for retail development adjacent to the 6 rural centres, and sites on the edge of designated centres. This is creeping urbanisation, damaging to the Green Belt and to Guildford town revival as a thriving urban hub. It will contribute to local urban decay and depopulation, just as expansion of the suburbs did to mid-20th century London. In Send since the turn of the century four shops have gone from the village, Chemist, shoe shop and a electrical contractor supplier, these have been demolished and replaced by offices and residential, where the local post office and general provision store has been converted in residential use.

Guildford Borough Local Plan – Proposed Submission Local Plan: strategy sites 2016

I am writing on behalf of the Surrey/Hants Borders Branch of CAMRA, the Campaign for Real Ale, in relation to the above consultation.
As you would expect, CAMRA’s chief concern is that the Local Plan will afford suitable protection, in planning terms, for public houses. The continuing loss of traditional pubs, both in urban and rural settings, is in our view having a very negative effect on the communities concerned. The planning system affords a potentially powerful line of defence against the efforts of some pub owners to make short-term financial gains at the expense of valuable community facilities. Our hope would be that the Local Plan will include policies which support the retention of community assets like pubs and resist applications for change of use unless there is very clear evidence that the facility is no longer wanted or needed.

I am also pleased to note that Policy E5, contains a specific mention of public houses in terms of businesses that will be supported for retention in rural areas. I would agree that pubs they often essential in maintaining the local economy in rural villages. However, this can equally apply in urban areas, such as for example the suburbs of Guildford, where whole communities often have a single pub to act as the focus of the community. I would therefore like to see this policy extended to cover all communities, not just rural areas.

Document: Proposed Submission Local Plan: strategy and sites 2017 / Policy E9

Do you consider this section of the document; complies with the Duty to Cooperate? ( ), is Sound? ( ), is Legally Compliant? ( )
On behalf of our client, Sainsbury’s Supermarkets Ltd, we have considered the above document and at this stage we would like to make comments in respect of the Retail Impact Assessment threshold outlined within Policies E7, E8 and E9.

These policies state that retail and leisure proposals over 500 sq m (gross) located outside of Guildford town centre, local or district centres, and where the site is not allocated, must be supported by a retail impact assessment.

The National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF) provides that Local Planning Authorities can set local thresholds above which proposals for town centre uses outside of town centres should be subject to an impact assessment. National Planning Practice Guidance provides clarification around the setting of local thresholds for retail impact. It states: “In setting a locally appropriate threshold it will be important to consider the:

• scale of proposals relative to town centres • the existing viability and vitality of town centres

• cumulative effects of recent developments • whether local town centres are vulnerable

• likely effects of development on any town centre strategy

• impact on any other planned investment” The impact threshold is supported by recommendations made within the Retail and Leisure Study Update 2014 prepared by Carter Jonas, however we note that this report considers that the district and local centres are mainly reliant on convenience goods shopping (9.22) and that the main food store anchors are important generators of linked trips. We also note that Carter Jonas do not identify any capacity for new convenience space for the time being. At para 9.23, Carter Jonas state that ‘in general terms, national retailers… have requirements for units of 500sqm gross and above.’ and that ‘stores with floorspace over 500sqm gross are unlikely to be a purely local facility and will tend to draw from outside of their immediate local catchment’. We consider that these statements are too general and, indeed, not correct. Sainsbury’s, for example, operates over 700 “Sainsbury’s Local” stores the majority of which have a floor area of under 500sqm – and this remains a key element of their ongoing requirements across the Country. Some Sainsbury’s Local stores have floorspace over 500sqm – but still cater to a local market. Whilst we acknowledge that the capacity assessment in the report suggests limited capacity in the coming years, we can see no evidence to suggest that there is a case for lowering the threshold to 500sqm gross. Indeed, we consider that a threshold as low as 500sqm would unduly stifle the convenience retail market and would deprive locations of valuable local facilities that are just as likely (if not more likely) to compete with out of town supermarkets as they are with town and district centres.

Carter Jonas later go on to suggest that a floorspace threshold below 500sqm would be too inflexible, but we would suggest that even 500sqm is too inflexible – particularly without any caveat on the locations where such an assessment would be required.

On the basis of the above, we object to the proposal to lower the threshold to 500sqm gross as there is insufficient evidence to support such a low threshold and because it would unduly restrict and stifle a competitive, but locally focussed, convenience retail market.

We request that we be kept fully informed of any further changes to the Local Plan and all other future LDF documents produced for consultation. In the meantime please please do not hesitate to contact us should you have any queries.

Proposed Submission Local Plan Regulation 19 representations (2016 and 2017)

Document part: Policy D1 - Place shaping
Policy D1: Making better places

There is much to be welcomed in this policy and text.

4.5.5 and 3.5.6 We need a Local Plan Development Management Policies Document urgently. We will be vulnerable without development control and design policies in place. Can relevant policies in the 2003 Plan be saved, at least to fill the gap?

The policy to “provide convenient and safe routes through the development and to nearby areas for pedestrians and cyclists” is particularly welcome given experience of developers failing to provide this.

We warmly welcome the addition of promoting green approaches to 4.5.8 which reads “The relationship of the built environment to the landscape must be taken into account and the transition from urban to rural character will need to be reflected in the design of new development with the green approaches to settlements respected.”

However, this approach should go beyond respecting to promoting. We propose that green approaches – both soft green edges to settlements and greenery along roads into settlements - are such a valued, distinctive feature of Guildford that this should be in the policy itself to guide developers. For example, “green approaches to settlements and” could be inserted after “with” in the following:

“All developments will:…promote and reinforce local distinctiveness to create a sense of place, with [green approaches to settlements and] innovative architecture encouraged and supported in the appropriate context.” We suggest “and supported” is superfluous.

Green approaches to settlements are just as important as innovative architecture in Guildford. Promoting green approaches is a dynamic concept not a brake on development. It affects how you do things and applies equally well to the design of settlement extensions and to managing change in established areas. We rely so heavily on green approaches to shape change for the better at inquiries and when responding to applications. It will become more important during a period of growth if we want to retain the qualities that distinguish Guildford and prevent it being a “could be anywhere” town.

Monitoring Indicators

Again we are concerned to avoid perverse consequences, with the possibility of reluctance to refuse due to poor design to avoid the risk of unsuccessful appeals.

Object: seeking improvements

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
We oppose the proposed deletion of the last paragraph of D1. Getting design and character right in larger schemes will be as important for the economy of Guildford as broadband.

D1 – Making better places

nnnn) The title to Policy D1 has been amended from ‘Making better places’ to ‘Place Shaping’. This seems to be a positive step inasmuch as the policies have been tightened up, but there must also be a recognition of the scope for major regeneration to transform areas and this would be properly described as Place Making. We would like to suggest this heading be ‘Place Making and Place Shaping’ oooo) At 4.5.1 there is an amendment from ‘urban areas’ to ‘settlements’ which we agree with as the original was too restrictive. We are concerned, however, that the Settlement Profiles Report is so poor that it provides little or no support to this policy and the character assessments are hopelessly out of date.

pppp) The Settlement Profiles Report lets down the Guildford Urban Area the most as it comprises a facile agglomeration of the entire urban area – more than 50% of the residents in the Borough – into a collection of general comments that do not ring true for any Residents Association area or even for the Town Centre.

qqqq) We approve of the strengthening of Policy D1(1) with the use of ‘must’ but we disagree with the substitution in Policy D1(2) of ‘must’ with ‘should’.

rrrr) We agree with the introduction of Policy D1(2)(e).

ssss) We are concerned about the deletion of the section of Policy D1 that commences ‘All developments will...’ and paragraph 4.5.8, which have largely been moved to Policy D4. This deals with new development which, on the face of it, seems more appropriate, but our concern remains that this does not cover changes of use and may not cover refurbishments. We would like to see some safeguards, perhaps by including such works in a definition of new development at Policy D4.

I object to Policy D1 Making better places

I would support this if this were about regeneration which is what it should be about. Instead GBC would like us to think that building 3 sites of approx 2000 homes and two of approx 1000 can be considered 'better places than the countryside they currently occupy? The only site of the 5 that I would support as a form of regeneration is Slyfield.

The monitoring indicator might be better served to take on board the number of objections based on poor design rather than appeals?

I am pleased to see a policy that acknowledges older people in Guildford but I am concerned about the blurring between urban and rural living and design. It is not appropriate to create better living spaces in town at the expense of villages whose character and quality of life is being eroded due to coalescence and traffic. Better places is not just about bricks and mortar, it must allow village life to remain just that and not become urbanised. The policy is one-sided and narrow, it does not take on board the many aspects of life that create 'better places', but instead concentrates on the appearance of buildings. I believe this is a good start but this policy needs developing.

1. We require All new developments must to achieve high quality design and enhance the environment in which they are set.
   If only the same direct statements were made throughout. There are still too many statements of intent without a real outcome in this plan.
   Support

2. Residential developments of 25 or more dwellings should:
   This is an example of a direction that has been diluted, to ensure directions are followed, MUST is stronger than 'should'.
   Object

Key evidence
Removal of NPPF
NPPF has been removed, but should be included -- see paragraphs 56--68 of NPPF which outlines the importance of good design not only for the building itself but also for its surroundings.
Object

GBC's Landscape Character Assessment has been included, this should also include any independent work relating to design / assessment ie Richard Bate's assessment of Blackwell Farm landscape and those submitted by GSoc / Guildford Vision Group and other Resident's groups / parish Councils and experts (Bibhas Neogi).
Object

Monitoring Indicators
Built for Life is helpful but this does not account for the setting or the appropriateness of the development within the setting. It is therefore useful to leave information relating to previous applications, which will have this additional information.

79. This policy is all very well in relation to new developments but the Plan overall will not make Guildford a better place – quite the opposite. A major constraint on the housing number is needed.

Residential developments ‘of 25 or more dwellings’ fail to make mention of suitable space ‘off road’ for parking of all vehicles.

The ‘over 25 homes sites’ are all some distance from the main employment centres. As there can be no provision for multi location destination public transport, personal transport is a must to get to work.

Place shaping: This is not a good title as it implies coercion.

Policy D1

Sub section (2) should contain “must” as opposed to “should”.

A statement should be inserted stating that the terms of adopted Neighbourhood Plans must be complied with.

Furthermore there is a need for an air impact assessment policy.

4.5.8

Policy D1: Making better places.

Developments should include sufficient open recreational spaces proportionate to their overall size and scale. These open spaces should be designed and managed to support biodiversity alongside their sometimes other primary uses. Useful guidance on ensuring relative sufficiency is Natural England’s Access to Natural Greenspace Standard (ANGSt) and your monitoring of Policy D1 could therefore usefully incorporate the achievement of ANGSt.

A town proud of its heritage and economic contribution should be building to the very highest design standards. I continue to be dismayed that whilst we have long and necessary arguments about the principle of building we fail to concentrate on the design of those buildings.

A town with so many constraints should not shy away from dense housing development. The often falsely accepted wisdom is that high density means poor development when the opposite can be true. Where we do have brownfield sites they should be used to the maximum: with good design, evidence shows the end result can be far more attractive, in keeping with the local environment and reduce the need for building in more sensitive areas and without taking the easy option of building upwards.

To ensure that the Local Plan isn’t a static document, design of our built environment should include the ability to gather information about how people's lives could be improved: noise, footfall, humidity, air quality, traffic congestion and where people go for their leisure time.

Policy D1 Place Shaping

I object to 4.5.8 which formerly was a reference to development, responding to local character, history or vernacular architecture. This direction has been removed, indeed GBC appear to be encouraging unsuitable modern buildings in sensitive sites.

GBC have removed all reference to sensitive development, including being aware of and noting the characteristics of an area, constraints such as hedges and trees, and local distinctiveness.

This policy is endorsed, but safeguards to make sure that high quality traditional building in keeping with surroundings is strictly enforced need to be included. There is a lot of motherhood and apple pie in the sentiments of the current statements in Policy D1, which are also occasionally conflicting: e.g. the Blairite, ‘third-way’ fudge: ‘reflecting the identity of its surroundings whilst allowing for innovative and forward thinking design’ (paragraph 4.5.8). That just allows a gigantic loophole for developers to jump through. Also it is not clear how the emphasis of the Draft Local Plan on development in rural villages can possibly aid the stated objective: ‘to facilitate and promote walking, providing a high quality environment for pedestrians, and where possible allowing short walking distances to amenities’; employment and major amenities will generally not exist within short walking distances of rural villages. Those moving to proposed new houses in the rural villages (existing or proposed at Wisley airfield) will mostly have jobs elsewhere, and quite likely children will go to schools elsewhere. Car use can only increase under the assumptions of the Draft Local Plan. No quantitative assessment has been made by GBC of the effect of the proposals on car use in the Borough in the future.

Object

While we support the emphasis on views, natural features, local distinctiveness, and layout of surrounding buildings, there need to be some good design criteria for Guildford and its setting, which should have mandatory planning enforcement.

The monitoring of this policy is inadequate, and should result in more sympathetic and better designed buildings.

I object to the deletion in Policy D1 of the following wording:

“All developments will:
• respond meaningfully and sensitively to the site, its characteristics and constraints, and the layout, grain, massing and height of surrounding buildings
• be laid out to make the best use of the natural features such as trees and hedges and levels, and enhance views into and out of the site
• promote and reinforce local distinctiveness to create a sense of place, with innovative architecture encouraged and supported in the appropriate context
• be expected to have regard to and perform positively against Building for Life 12 criteria, and be expected to use art and materials of a nature appropriate to their setting.”

The requirements listed above would have improved the design of developments and reduced their adverse impact on the environment. There is no justification for their deletion.

We all accept the inevitability of change, however, the rate of change is a critical element. Changes must be assimilated whilst retaining the essential character of the area. We contend that the rate of change during the last twenty years has been too fast and we are now confronted with a step change. If the plan proceeds in its current form the essential character of the area will be lost for ever.

The latest plan indicates over 530 new homes for The Horsleys. This level of new housing would completely change the character of the village, not to mention the impact it will have on its infrastructure.

When I look at the map identifying the proposed developments in the North-West periphery of Guildford ie sites 60, 61, 62, 63, 64 and 65 it is clear that you are allowing Guildford to sprawl outwards thereby substantially diminishing the green space separating Guildford from the outlying villages. This is precisely what the Green Belt was designed to prevent. With the exception of site 63 (Slyfield) I therefore object to all these developments.

I object to the density of the proposed housing as this is not in line with the current village design and character that is one of low density and a varied housing stock which has evolved over the years. The village also contains a considerable number of historic buildings. I believe it is possible to reduce the planned density within the rural areas of the borough by providing higher density homes and student accommodation within Guildford town. Students are less likely to want gardens and parking compared to those in rural communities. This would free up housing stock without having such an impact on the rural communities. New well-designed low-rise developments within the urban setting with good landscaping would be ideal and desirable for students and first time buyers/renters.

LOCAL CHARACTER & DISTINCTIVENESS
I consider it essential that West Horsley’s local character, context and distinctiveness is clearly defined and then protected, or indeed enhanced, and reinforced within the Proposed Local Plan. Mediocrity in design or execution of any new housing should, and will, not be accepted.

I therefore SUPPORT Policy D1: Making better places; where these sentiments are reinforced by stating that “All developments will: …be laid out to make the best use of the natural features such as trees and hedges and levels, and enhance views into and out of the site…promote and reinforce local distinctiveness to create a sense of place….be expected to use art and materials of a nature appropriate to their setting”

Any new development should work to retain existing natural features and trees, rather than being allowed to clear all existing features, such as mature trees or hedgerows, to facilitate the standardised approach of volume house builders.

High density homes per hectare may be considered appropriate for an urban setting in central Guildford, but is generally inappropriate, and certainly not on this scale, for a village setting. A more appropriate level should be determined for semi-rural villages, in keeping with their existing characteristics, with some limited higher density housing perhaps included for the first-time buyers, elderly or those choosing to downsize, but wishing to continue to live locally. Such properties could include terraced houses and apartments within units designed to look like existing detached properties i.e. with domestic appearance and scale.

There is no reference to vernacular or historic design guidelines, even in Conservation Areas and we object to the absence of this from this policy.

Most of the borough, especially the rural areas, has vernacular design guidelines which are available to give suggestions as to appropriate design. These should have mandatory planning force.

The monitoring of this policy is inappropriate. We do not believe this policy will result in a reduction of the number of appeals for poor design.

My wife and I are most concerned about your willingness to do away with parts of the green belt in this latest version of your Local Plan. Destroy that, and this region will become just like Croydon, an extended urbanisation from London; you will have destroyed what are some of the most attractive aspects of living in this area, which are also much appreciated by Londoners when they have time off.

I object. Is this whole section actually needed? Now that a large part of it has been moved to Policy D4, it makes it more apparent that the remainder should probably be there too, as it all seems to be about design. Unless this is also meant to include re-design of existing areas, but that isn’t clear. The title “Place Shaping” sounds a bit woolly new age anyway.

I object to the absence of any reference to vernacular or historic design guidelines, even in Conservation Areas. The proposed densities for all the site appear to be based on a ‘one size fits all’ which is recognised as a flawed policy. Indeed the government’s figures of 30 -50 dph have yet to be achieved (TPCA – policy statement). In fact densities below 20dph are stated to be more conducive to a rural setting, whereas above this figure an ‘urban context may be achieved.

POLICY D1 TO D4: Design
I object to the fact that proposed new towns are not environmentally or socially sustainable. They would bring congestion and misery.

I object to the omission of protection of the Green Belt amongst all the ‘green’ pronouncements.

Our village has no lights and everyone feels safe. Plus we have little light pollution. This is good for the environment. I object to the fact that light pollution and waste of energy for lighting is not included.

Recycling is extremely important but I object to the fact that recycling of land ie Brown field is not mentioned here.

I object to the insetting of villages and removal of Green Belt.

I object to the Local Plan because it does not protect our Borough for future generations and does not respect our historic villages and their individual characters. We are very fortunate to have such individual historic villages so near to London and the M.25. Why does GBC want to over develop them and lose their individuality?

Horsley is a quaint village community with its own unique character and filling it with so many houses will completely destroy the nature, ambience, and present dynamics of village life.

The scale of the proposed developments would, however, have a detrimental impact on the rural characteristics that define life in this Surrey village. Any development needs to be proportionate in scale and not be at the expense of the quality of life of those of us already resident here.

I object to Policy D1 and D2. This is a weak Policy because no thought or vision has been attached to conservation areas or historic value which makes an area unique. By building outside the Town Centre and urban area, The Plan encourages congestion on our road network so I can't see how the reduction of the Borough's footprint is actually going to work. building outside the Town Centre and urban areas is not sustainable development and will not reduce the carbon footprint. The roads will just become more and more congested because all of the development is outside of the town and urban areas. Any changes to the way energy infrastructure is supplied should be made to the Town and urban areas first because high density building uses more energy.

For the Horsleys, this proposed scale of housebuilding would so enlarge the villages as to overwhelm and destroy their existing charm. Instead of living in a village, residents would end up living in an expanding, suburbanising conglomeration with entirely inadequate local infrastructure.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

I object to the large areas of land identified for possible development which, combined with the significantly increased housing density and extension of the village boundaries, will completely change the character of the individual villages concerned. These individual villages are a valued part of the Surrey environment and their destruction by accumulation into an amorphous sprawl cannot be undone once it has taken place - the atmosphere will charge irreversibly.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

We generally support this policy.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
15. I object to policy D1. Firstly, the deletion of the word “must” in para 2. This means that the policy will be unenforceable (see earlier comments). The word “must” has to be retained.

16. I object to the deletion of the wording in para 2 of policy D1 which must remain in full and I also object to the deletion of para 4.5.8.

17. I agree with the insertion of para 4.5.8 regarding the need for an efficient broadband connection but would add that the needs of current residents should take precedence. The state of broadband provision in parts of the borough (e.g. Ockham) is frankly dire.

We lived in Guildford Park Avenue when our children were small and I was able to manage family life easily with no car at my disposal. Almost all of those ideal family homes are now multi-occupied student lets. Meanwhile, you plan to solve the problem by allowing urban sprawl over our precious countryside and by destroying our grandchildren’s natural environment. Please do not try to solve our present problems by creating a grid-locked, soulless suburbia where no one will want to live anyway! I have taken the trouble to write . I hope you will take the trouble to listen. Wishing you vision and foresight in your difficult task and sending my best wishes to you in your endeavour.

Policy D1: Making Better Places

Object (not effective in respect of NPPF paragraph 182)

WPI supports the majority of the meaning and intention of the design policy. The design principles outlined are sound and reflect better practice.

A technical objection is raised with respect to the bullet points on residential developments of 25 or more dwellings. This reflects comments made by WPI on draft policy H1 (Homes for All). It is typical for new residential developments to have regard to character and context considerations. However, the opportunity to embrace distinctive new character and density should be reflected in the policy. WPI has made a similar representation with respect to draft policy D1 (Making Better Places).

The same principle applies to the use of art and materials "of a nature, appropriate to their setting". Major new developments have the potential to create place and setting.

In order to be effective, amendments are required to this draft policy. This would best be achieved by simply recognising the potential design benefits offered by major strategic development.

Housing

The density of housing proposed is out of keeping for the East and West Horsley Village. This size of increase would dramatically change the character of where we live. New residential development needs to respect the Village character and be limited in size by the availability of local facilities and infrastructure. Not the other way round. West Horsley appears to have a huge 35% increase, compared to other areas – eg Ash/Tongham 16% ? Also the impact of the proposed 2000 houses in Ockham/Wisley will ricochet into the Horsley facilities dramatically!

I PART SUPPORT, BUT PART OBJECT. I support the emphasis on views, natural features, local distinctiveness, and layout of surrounding buildings. There is no reference to vernacular or historic design guidelines, even in Conservation Areas and we object to the absence of this from this policy. Most of the borough, especially the rural areas, have vernacular design guidelines which are available to give suggestions as to appropriate design. These should have mandatory planning force. The monitoring of this policy is inappropriate. Why should this policy result in a reduction of the number of appeals for poor design – should it not result in better designed buildings?

D1 - Making better places:

The development of sites within West Horsley containing 25+ new homes to be inclusive of a mix of uses, to promote a sense of community. and to provide facilities and services is a policy I will wholly support.

Similarly I will support the creation of meeting places, play and recreation areas, and public spaces, complimentary to acceptable housing developments in West Horsley.

I do not presently see that the objective of facilitating and promoting walking, with short walking distances to and from facilities, is sufficiently addressed in the plans for West Horsley. Again, the following sections in this consultation response attempt to potentially address these issues with some positive suggestions.

Ease of access, promotion of a healthy lifestyle, and safety for pedestrians and cyclists are laudable objectives. I do not, however, see them sufficiently addressed in the plans for West Horsley, and there follow some suggestions to potentially address these issues.
There is, in my view, a critical need for a study of West Horsley as a village to go hand in hand with individual site developments. The injection of investment into the village should enable positive improvements to be effected to the wider environment, to be achieved through Section 106 agreements. Such improvements are likely to make otherwise potentially controversial developments more acceptable to local people.

The sad event of all these proposed dwellings will result in the villages merging to such an extent that they will lose their individuality as there will be no boundaries evident. Can I ask why all of these proposals have to be within this small area. Why not other surrounding villages like Worplesdon, Farnham, Godalming etc?

I do hope some of these fears, which I know are shared by many, get listened to.

Policy D1 (Making Better Places) is also to be commend for safeguarding and protecting local distinctiveness, as is your support for the Surrey Hills A.O.N.B.

The Milestone Society is particularly interested in retaining historic street furniture. This importance is recognised in English Heritage's (now Historic England) publication "Designating Heritage Assets - Street Furniture" (2011).

The Society wishes to re-iterate its view that the Guildford Plan should include specific reference to the importance of retaining historic street furniture in road and development schemes.

I have (believe it or not!) studied the Draft Local Plan which I fear has been designed to be totally inaccessible and incomprehensible on purpose for many local people to even wish to read. It is incredibly lengthy and overlooks the fundamental principle that there exist many brown field sites within the borough which are not being developed upon.

The insetting of local villages such as East and West Horsley, Ripley, Send, Clandon, to name but a few is just, it seems to me, a tactic to their removal from the Green Belt allowing increased and inappropriate development thereon.

Green Belt by its very name is defined as "an area of open land around a city" - there will be no open land around Guildford if the local plan is ratified.

• The loss of the Green Belt in the East Horsley area due to propose new housing developments for >500 new houses (noted below) would significantly change the character of the village and further shrink the Green Belt, will radically change what is supposed to be a 'conservation area' and it will inevitably lead to further urbanisation in years to come and a have serious impact on life in our villages.

1. The number of houses proposed for the main sites in East/West Horsley is far too many and will change the distinct nature of the villages.

D1 – Making Better Places

Culturally we rely on our cars and suggesting that people are going to walk or cycle would mean a cultural shift. How is this going to be encouraged, monitored and enforced? The roads around the Horsleys are narrow and pot-holed, with poor street lighting.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Overall the proposed developments are wholly out of proportion with the existing villages and infrastructure and will destroy local communities, change irreversibly the character of the villages for which generations of local residents have chosen to settle here.

I object to Policy D1 Making better places

I object to the absence of any reference to vernacular or historic design guidelines, even in Conservation Areas. Most of the borough, especially the rural areas, has vernacular design guidelines that are available to give suggestions as to appropriate design. These should have mandatory planning force.

The monitoring of this policy is inappropriate. Why should this policy result in a reduction of the number of appeals for poor design? Should it not result in better-designed buildings?

• The building of such high density houses in the village in quite a concentrated area will destroy what is a quiet and rural village, which has been in existence for hundreds of years. These developments clash in style and density to the existing character of the village and will change the village forever. The increase in housing equates to an increase of approx. 35% in existing West Horsley households, an increase larger than any other in the Guildford Borough.

I object to all the pockets of green breathing space being infilled in East and West Horsley, and surrounding villages. This would completely spoil the feel and look of the village. There must be some brownfield sites in larger towns like Guildford and Woking? Why does everybody have to be accommodated in the South East. Are Sheerness and the Isle of Sheppey and the Isle of Grain overloaded like we are in danger of being? Maybe some new towns with agriculture and light industry could be encouraged there. Or further north using up some of their green spaces.

<td>I object to the fact that the proposed plan does not meet the requirements of local communities. Neighbourhood Plans have not been taken into account. The semi-rural aspect, clean air and country lanes are important to local residents and most want to retain them. Ripley has already accommodated more than a 10% increase in housing in the last few years and it will only take a little more to change its character dramatically. Thousands of new houses are proposed in the immediate vicinity, plus more over the northern border of the borough in Woking. This will mean congested roads and the destruction of the rural aspect.</td>

Guildford is a nice place to live - nice countryside (currently) and close to London. Therefore, Guildford council need to stop trying to meet all housing requirements and except that the town may not be able to meet these growth targets unless they ruin what is currently appreciated by residents – please stop trying to run the town as a business obsessed with growth, making money and purely business/commercial interests. Residents should have more of a voice.

Policy D1 – OBJECT: UNSOUND – Not Positively Prepared or Justified:

The Council has included this policy within the Plan, which is clearly worded as a Development Management policy. Bewley considers that the inclusion of such a policy is not warranted at this stage given the clear intention set out by the Council to deal with Development Management policies in a separate Development Plan Document.

In any event the wording of the policy is overly restrictive in that it states that developments of 25 dwellings or more ‘must’ comply with all of the bullet point criteria listed. This approach fails to recognise the individual merits of development proposals and the fact that not every scheme will be able to, or indeed should, comply with all of the criteria listed in their entirety.

It is therefore considered that the policy should be deleted from the Plan and included in the later Development Management document in due course. If however the policy is to remain the wording of the introductory sentence should be amended to read as follows:

Residential developments of 25 or more dwellings should’

The National Trust fully supports this policy. However since this is the key policy dealing with design in the plan we suggest that the wording of the first and fifth bullet points in the last section is amended to:

All developments will

- respond meaningfully and sensitively to the site, its characteristics and constraints, and the layout, grain, massing and height of surrounding buildings taking into account the context in which they are sited.
- Be expected to use art, materials and landscaping of a nature appropriate to their setting.

I write to object to the proposed development of six sites in East and West Horsley. The proposal to allow the building of an additional 533 properties is completely unsuitable for this area. The area lies in the green belt, and there are also a number of conservation areas with in this area, this is completely incompatible with the proposal. I appreciate the government is placing councils under pressure to build more homes, but the type of homes that will no doubt be built - if these developments are allowed to go ahead - will be identikit mini Surrey mansions, completely unsuitable for the sort of starter homes at are actually needed. This is because the developers will need to maximise their profits and starter homes don't do it for them.

I'm sure I do not need to say any more, we pay a premium to live in a village and what you are proposing to do is going to turn our lovely villages into a town, and myself like many others bought our houses away from the hustle and bustle of busy towns, I see this is not a government proposal and only a Guildford borough council one, I strongly disagree with what you are wanting to do, it would make many people viewing your plans very angry and see GBC as being greedy and just thinking of the profits many more houses would bring in. This is a protest from my household not only myself and that's 5 people.

We do not wish to live in a large town hence we moved to a village in the green belt.

There are sufficient brown sites available and Woking and Guildford are already inundated with tower blocks of new flats.

We strongly object to the way Guildford B.Council is attempting to reduce green belt and built houses and incur congestion where it is not appropriate.

Policy D1: Making better places

5.10 We agree that high quality design should be sought in all new developments. We are supportive of the good design principles outlined in the policy outlining that all developments will:

- promote and reinforce local distinctiveness to create a sense of place. Innovative architecture will be encouraged and supported in the appropriate context;
- be expected to have regard to and perform well against Building for Life criteria;
- be expected to use art and materials of a nature appropriate to their setting;
- take account of the context in which they are sited.

5.11 We also agree that in schemes of 20 or more dwellings or 0.5 hectares or more developments should make provision for a mix of uses, and the facilities and services needed by the new community. We agree that this should include places for communities to meet and interact, such as play and recreation and other public spaces.

5.12 We agree that new development should be designed to facilitate and promote walking and cycling by providing a high quality environment for pedestrians, convenient and safe routes through the development and to nearby areas for cyclists and that where possible, residential development should allow short walking distances to amenities.

5.13 We are in agreement that priority to non-car based modes of transport should be given, and we wish to emphasise that park and ride facilities make an important contribution to non-car modes of transport into Guildford centre. This is the case for both neighbouring residents who can walk/cycle to the facilities, as well as those from further afield who drive and park, who would otherwise drive into the centre of Guildford. Park and Ride facilities provide an important and significant reduction in automobile traffic, congestion, fumes and pollution in Guildford and thus enhance the environmental quality of Guildford town centre.

I was horrified to read when I was in Ripley yesterday that there is a plan afoot to create a massive amount of new homes in the Guildford Borough. Although we do not live in the Borough, we frequently visit Ripley, Send and Clandon and so appreciate these lovely ancient villages. As a family we are all too aware that new homes have to be built to accommodate an ever increasing population BUT there must be other sites that would not ruin our beloved villages. Once they are gone, they will never return and it is villages like these that make our country special.

Objections to the 2016 local Plan

Following the approval of the revised Local Plan by the full council of Guildford Borough Council on 24th May, I would like to make it clear that I object to the provisions set out in the Local Plan as they threaten to destroy the established nature and identity of our villages by building on Green Belt land and will add considerably to the already unacceptable levels of traffic on the A3, A247 and M25 and many other roads in the borough.

6 I object to the Borough wide strategy for over 13,000 new houses without any constraints. This differs to all the other borough councils in Surrey and is over twice the figures for previous years. There is already too much new development in Wisley, Ripley and Clandon. If the proposed development goes ahead then these villages would lose their individual identities.

POLICY D1 -Making better places

I OBJECT to the absence of any reference to vernacular or historic design guidelines, even in Conservation Areas. Most of the borough, especially the rural areas, has vernacular design guidelines that are available to give suggestions as to appropriate design. These should have mandatory planning force.

The monitoring of this policy is inappropriate. Why should this policy result in a reduction of the number of appeals for poor design? Should it not result in better-designed buildings?

I am born and bred a Guildfordian, I suspect, unlike many of those proposing the acceptance of this housing explosion in our area. Many come here because it is a lovely town still surrounded by greenbelt countryside, yet having a diversity of employment suitable to most, this but still outside the sprawling London suburbs they have left. Surely to retain that attraction we have to maintain it, not destroy it! We are already seeing the awful effects around us of home extensions and the anything goes policy of planning applications. Destroying the character of many areas. Perhaps we are looking at this from the wrong end. Maybe we should be looking at Local Authority/Government built housing, to satisfy the huge demand by that end of the market! Be it shared housing or rented. Control and asset ownership then is in the hands of the people/ council. My experience is that housing markets are dictated by first time buyers. This is a way of controlling that process. Building thousands of houses at the £600,000 to £1 million pound end around Guildford is not the way forward. This just to satisfy the pockets of the developers, the ego of council development officers and the niche end of the market.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
11.16 Policy D1 of the Proposed Submission Local Plan requires “all new developments to achieve high quality design and enhance the environment in which they are set.”

11.17 Whilst the requirement for ‘high quality design’ by the Council is supported and is in accordance with Paragraph 56 of the NPPF which “attaches great importance to the design of the built environment” (Paragraph 56) it is noted that the NPPF states that “it is important to plan positively for the achievement of high quality inclusive design” (Paragraph 57).

11.18 The Council is therefore seeking to apply a much greater requirement on new development in respect of design than is set out in the NPPF by requiring proposals to not only “achieve high quality design” but also “enhance the environment in which they are set”. This requirement is more closely aligned to the protection given to historic environments which as set out in Policy D3 of the Proposed Submission Local Plan should be ‘conserved and enhanced’.

11.19 No suitable justification has been provided by the Council to support this approach and as such the wording of Policy D1 should be revised to align with the requirements of the NPPF and not afford all development sites the same level of status as heritage assets, which are dealt with in Policy D3.

11.20 As set out previously in these representations whilst the insertion of ‘Policy D4: Development in urban areas and inset villages’ is supported it is considered that the wording of the Policy should be revised to avoid unnecessary duplication with other policies in the Local Plan.

11.21 In particular Policy D4 requires new development to “conserve locally and nationally important heritage assets and conserve and enhance their settings” however this matter is addressed explicitly in ‘Policy D3: Historic environment’ which relates to all developments not just those in urban areas and inset villages.

11.22 Policy D4 also requires new development to have “no unacceptable effect on the amenities enjoyed by the occupants of buildings in terms of privacy, noise, vibration, pollution, dust, smell and access to sunlight and daylight.”

11.23 Whilst there is no objection raised to the requirements of this text from Policy D4 it is noted that Policy D4 is explicitly stated to relate to ‘urban areas and inset villages’. This amenity requirement should be applicable to all forms of development within the Borough and as such should be incorporated into a different policy such as Policy D1.

11.24 The additional repetition of matters addressed elsewhere in the policies of the Local Plan is unnecessary and unjustified. The policies in the Proposed Submission Local Plan should therefore be revised accordingly.

I am writing to object to the inappropriate proposals to develop a large number of houses on Wisley Airfield and in the villages of East and West Horsley.

Collectively, you have failed to take into account the widespread resentment of your proposals in the local communities. In particular,

1) the residents within these communities have chosen to live in rural/semi rural surroundings. If they had wanted urbanisation then they would be living in better serviced and valued areas like Guildford or Surbiton. Our area is a magnet to visiting tourists from London and the surrounding areas to enjoy its beauty, unique wildlife and beautiful vistas in harmony with their surroundings. The amount of cyclists using our area is ever increasing and that is just one example of why it is important to protect our environment. This has a social and economic value.

As any good citizen I understand the need to develop housing – especially that which is affordable for key workers. However, development must surely always be kept in check with the tone and style and density of the local spaces as well as the amenities that serve those communities. The suggested development areas earmarked in the Horsleys and the surrounding areas particularly Gosden Hill Farm and Wisley Airfield are completely out of proportion of the existing neighbourhoods and would change the feel of the local area irrevocably. And of course, other knock-on effects such as increased traffic and pollution are inevitable along with immense strain on services.

I suggest you really do listen to the voices of people from the communities that you serve and withdraw and then fundamentally rethink your proposed 2016 plan. Furthermore I would suggest that you truly engage with the communities that you serve and embrace their good ideas and criticism. The proposed submission is completely out of keeping with the local rural neighbourhoods and would be ruinous for generations to come, who will not get to enjoy the bucolic green spaces that their parents moved here for.

POLICY D1 Making better places

GROUNDs FOR OBJECTION We support the emphasis on views, natural features, local distinctiveness, and layout of surrounding buildings.

There is no reference to vernacular or historic design guidelines, even in Conservation Areas and we object to the absence of this from this policy. Most of the borough, especially the rural areas, have vernacular design guidelines which are available to give suggestions as to appropriate design. These should have mandatory planning force.
The monitoring of this policy is inappropriate. Why should this policy result in a reduction of the number of appeals for poor design – should it not result in better designed buildings?

I also object to the proposed housing sites at A40, A41, A38, A39. These are all important open areas of land which contribute to the rural character of West Horsley. Two adjoin Ancient Woodland and are prone to flooding and are likely to create more surface water flooding along East Lane, Green Lane and Oakham Road.

This amount of development is not sustainable in this area.

These proposed developments completely destroy the green belt barrier separating Guildford from Burnt Common, Ripley and several other villages in the area!! I am astonished that such a proposal could be considered. These are huge areas of development that would completely destroy the countryside and change the nature of the surrounding villages, wildlife passing through etc. Almost completely removing this band of green belt entirely!! Green belt was brought in to protect our countryside and I object very strongly to these proposals. Please think again. I live on Potters Lane, I love the mix of village and countryside that characterise this area and these proposals would completely change the nature of the village, neighbouring countryside and opportunities for wildlife to survive. Surely we owe something to future generations to stop building over the countryside.

The allocation of the land to the strategic sites of Wisley Airfield, Garlicks Arch (Ripley/Send border) and Gosden Hill (Clandon) is not sustainable. The proposed development of these sites will have a negative impact on the surrounding local villages and each of these communities.

All this to say nothing of the devastating impact it would have on a small rural village being transformed into something just short of urban! I will not here endeavour to point out the obvious impact on the beautiful countryside, lying as it does in an area of Outstanding Natural Beauty on the North Downs. I believe that any visitor to the village would agree it would be utterly abhorrent to encroach on the countryside around West Horsley! Surely Beatrix Potter, celebrated children’s author who used to stay at a cottage in the village with her uncle and aunt and did many of her paintings and wrote some of her books there, will be turning in her grave at the prospect of these plans for turning West Horsley into suburbia!

West Clandon and the villages and amenity areas around it constitute at present pleasant and peaceful semi-rural habitation. The proposed housing changes would evidently change all of that, resulting in a quasi-urban environment which is not what the local peoples wish for. I understand that there may be a need for increased housing, but would question whether that should be done at the cost of destroying much of the quality of life of existing residents. There are other areas where such developments could be done without such consequences.

Most surveys conducted by parish council and local groups show a need and tolerance for no more than 50 - 100 new homes. Such a number could be slotted in around / within existing housing areas and if planned and executed sensitively, will have hopefully minimal impact on the character and practical functioning of the village

Do the right thing and save Send and Ripley's hugely important Green Belt. I feel it is important to honour promises made and that this development Plan will cause a loss of trust by all residents. It will disrupt the idealistic village environment currently enjoyed and destroy the desirability to live in such an incredible area.

Expansion should be limited to protect character of town

The evidence for expansion is exaggerated (GRA report on housing) and the consultation period has been limited.
We should value the unique beauty of our market town and its surrounding areas. It is these green spaces that allow us as a community to thrive. It is wrong to deny future generations the same advantages.

Both the physical and mental health of the community will be impaired by such an outlandish and disproportionate level of development.

There is much to be welcomed in this policy and text.
4.5.5 and 3.5.6 We need a Local Plan Development Management Policies Document urgently. We will be vulnerable without development control and design policies in place. Can relevant policies in the 2003 Plan be saved, at least to fill the gap?

The policy to “provide convenient and safe routes through the development and to nearby areas for pedestrians and cyclists” is particularly welcome given experience of developers failing to provide this.

We warmly welcome the addition of promoting green approaches to 4.5.8 which reads “The relationship of the built environment to the landscape must be taken into account and the transition from urban to rural character will need to be reflected in the design of new development with the green approaches to settlements respected.”

However, this approach should go beyond respecting to promoting. We propose that green approaches – both soft green edges to settlements and greenery along roads into settlements - are such a valued, distinctive feature of Guildford that this should be in the policy itself to guide developers. For example, “green approaches to settlements and” could be inserted after “with” in the following:

“All developments will:…promote and reinforce local distinctiveness to create a sense of place, with [green approaches to settlements and] innovative architecture encouraged and supported in the appropriate context.” We suggest “and supported” is superfluous.

Green approaches to settlements are just as important as innovative architecture in Guildford. Promoting green approaches is a dynamic concept not a brake on development. It affects how you do things and applies equally well to the design of settlement extensions and to managing change in established areas. We rely so heavily on green approaches to shape change for the better at inquiries and when responding to applications. It will become more important during a period of growth if we want to retain the qualities that distinguish Guildford and prevent it being a “could be anywhere” town.

Monitoring Indicators

Again we are concerned to avoid perverse consequences, with the possibility of reluctance to refuse due to poor design to avoid the risk of unsuccessful appeals.

Object: seeking improvements

East Horsley with its characteristic mix of Lovelace buildings, thatched properties, woodland and farmland, together with West Horsley are two of Surrey's most desirable villages. I have just read the Guildford Local Plan and feel I must register my objection on a number of important issues :-
The proposal to remove Ripley, Send and Clandon from the Greenbelt will completely change the character of the local environment. I do not believe there are any special circumstances to allow you to do this. Once these villages are removed from the green belt their unique identities will be lost forever as more properties will be built.

Significant changes to the character of the village - The plan aims to build 593 new houses.  The national plan states that gaps in housing could be infilled but the proposed plan would irreversibly alter the character of the village, increasing the number of houses and population by 50%.

I must object in the strongest terms to the proposed development in the Clandon, Ripley and Send areas. Whilst I do not live locally I have many friends who do and I was connected to the Ripley Cricket Club, one of the oldest in the world, for many years.

The English countryside is a resource that must be, for obvious reasons, preserved and cherished. Should you allow this project to happen then, in my opinion, you will alter forever the character of the above villages and you will be making a mistake that it will be impossible to rectify.

I object to 4.5.8 which formerly was a reference to development, responding to local character, history or vernacular architecture. This direction has been removed, indeed GBC appear to be encouraging unsuitable modern buildings in sensitive sites.

All this proposed development will not only ruin the essence of the villages but it will make one vast sprawling city out of Woking and Guildford which will be almost joined together. Perhaps GBC is thinking of re-naming the new city, Wokford or Guilding. Bus services are sparse. The proposed increase of up to 35% of new homes compared to existing homes in West Horsley is greater than any other single area in the Borough. The proposals for West Horsley are unbalanced and unsustainable and would change the character of the village forever.
The NPFF requires that residential development must respect the character and density of the housing in the area and be limited in quantity by the availability of infrastructure and local facilities

I OBJECT to the absence of any reference to vernacular or historic design guidelines, even in Conservation Areas. Most of the borough, especially the rural areas, has vernacular design guidelines that are available to give suggestions as to appropriate design. These should have mandatory planning force.
The monitoring of this policy is inappropriate. Why should this policy result in a reduction of the number of appeals for poor design? Should it not result in better-designed buildings?

As a duty of care to existing residents what are you doing to support our quality of living? Is the borough strategy to compromise everything to 'below average'? The unbalanced nature of the plans can surely only have a negative result for a village of great character - on your watch will another location of great character turn into generic concrete sprawl.

POLICY D1: MAKING BETTER PLACES

The broad principles of this policy are supported, however, our Client has some concerns regarding the implications of practically applying some of the potentially ambiguous objectives and how the council may seek to apply these general principles in future detailed development control policies.

Our Client support the objective to deliver high quality design and the enhancement of the environment on all new developments. There are, however, a number of aspects of the more prescriptive policy text that should be clarified/adapted as follows:

The threshold of 25 dwellings or more is too low and does not reflect a scale of development which may in all instances:

- Deliver a mix of uses; and
- Provide play, recreation and other public spaces for the local

These objectives should be focused on larger scale residential development, particularly in the context of some of the significant sites proposed as part of the Council’s housing supply. A more realistic approach would be to set a threshold of 100 units where these objectives ‘must’ be provided and provide encouragement for these objectives on smaller sites.
With regard to the provision of play and recreation space and the tangible changes that can realistically be made in terms of prioritising non-car travel in new village sites of less than 100 units will be limited.

That aside the first objective for an “integrated mix of uses” and the provision of facilities and services is an objective which may be achievable on some medium scale sites 20-40 units within central town or village locations. In supporting housing schemes through infill development and the rounding off of village settlements there will be a clear role in ensuring the provision of new supporting services and facilities. Site A45 represents an opportunity to provide housing alongside new retail or commercial use.

POLICY D1: PLACE SHAPING

1.79 The broad principles of this policy are supported, however, our Client continues to have some concerns regarding the implications of practically applying some of the potentially ambiguous objectives and how the council may seek to apply these general principles in future detailed development control policies.

1.80 Our Client support the objective to deliver high quality design and enhancement of the environment on all new developments. There are, however, a number of aspects of the more prescriptive policy text that should be clarified/adapted as follows:

1.81 The Council have not addressed the previous concerns raised regarding the proposed threshold of 25 dwellings. The threshold is set too low and does not reflect a scale of development which may in all instances:

- Deliver a mix of uses; and
- Provide play, recreation and other public spaces for the local community.

1.82 These objectives should be focused on larger scale residential development, particularly in the context of some of the significant sites proposed as part of the Council’s housing supply. A more realistic approach would be to set a threshold of 100 units where these objectives ‘must’ be provided and provide encouragement for these objectives on smaller sites.

UNSOOUND: As currently drafted the policy could limit the deliverability and potential of smaller sites and as such would fail the test of being Positively Prepared or Effective.

Recommended Change: Increase the policy threshold to 100 units.

We request that the following bullet points that have been deleted are retained. These are important to Albury and its outer lying hamlets which have a well-defined character, with many buildings constructed of local stone. We believe the retention of these guidelines will better inform householders, developers, builders and architects to protect and preserve Albury Conservation area and environ, buildings of note and Conservation areas in the Borough. These are:

- Respond meaningfully and sensitively to the site, its characteristics and constraints and the layout, grain, massing and height of surrounding buildings.
- Be laid out to make the best use of the natural features such as trees and hedges and levels and enhance views into and out of the site
- Promote and reinforce distinctiveness
- Use material appropriate to setting

The changing of the wording of point (2) from ‘must’, to ‘should’ allows the required flexibility for each development to be considered on a case by case basis.

The inclusion of 4.5.8a should include wording to ensure the viability of a development is not hampered, or is considered within any viability argument over deliver of the site.

D2. Sustainable design, construction and energy. P97.

The designation of areas where new developments must make provision for connection to CHP networks needs clarification. Some of our established residential area, including Charlotteville, fall within the designated town centre “Heat priority Area”. Only isolated new developments, and extensions, are expected in these areas, and it does not make sense to impose connection requirements on these. No mention is made of provision of Solar PV Power; this needs to be included as an objective, particularly for large business buildings. Where good quality buildings are demolished to allow larger or more “contemporary” buildings to be built the loss of the embedded energy needs to be included in the energy assessment of proposals.

In Policy D2 there are four instances where ‘must’ has been deleted and replaced with ‘are required to’. If this is a Statutory obligation, the legal instrument should be quoted. Otherwise, we would prefer the use of ‘must’.

The Guildford Society is very concerned about the availability of energy infrastructure in Guildford Borough and also the lack of provision for the generation of renewable energy and the shortage of facilities for charging electric vehicles.

Policy D2 (9) refers to a reduction in carbon emissions in new developments, but does not take account of existing building stock. There is a target of 20% for carbon reductions for new developments but no indication is given in the policy as to the baseline for this measure, albeit this is explained at 4.5.30. It would be helpful if the baseline were included in the policy itself.

We do not understand why there is a blanket exemption in Policy D2(10) for retail developments in the Town Centre, and although this is partly explained in paragraph 4.5.37a, there should be a recognition in these paragraphs rather than a specific policy exemption (after all, exactly the same argument could have been applied to Affordable Housing). We would recommend the removal of Policy D2(10).

At 4.5.30a there is reference to a financial viability test. There must be some form of hierarchy of viability tests to establish the sequence in which policy requirements (subject to viability) are withdrawn. For example, does the energy requirement come before or after Affordable Housing? It would be helpful to have a specific, clear policy on Viability as part of the Local Plan.

Otherwise we broadly agree with the amendments to Policy D2.

I object to Policy D2 Sustainable design, construction and energy Sustainability should be an overarching ambition, conditioning the whole local plan and running through it, as claimed in the NPPF, “like a golden thread”. It should be set out clearly in Policy S1, not buried away as a minor detail in Policy D2. This policy amounts to “greenwashing”, expounding aspirational environmental targets while ignoring the plan to build dormitory towns across the Green Belt that are environmentally and socially unsustainable. These settlements will bring vastly increased car use and will lead to unacceptable traffic congestion, overstretched social infrastructure, and more greenhouse gas emissions, noise and light pollution. This policy should not be just about saving energy but about preserving the borough’s stock of natural capital, especially the countryside, from attempts to rig the housing market. This policy’s emphasis on Combined Cooling Heating and Power and communal heating networks is difficult to understand, since no such networks are available locally.

I am unsure of how 4.5.27 will apply to strategic sites with mixed development without a pool? Surely by their very nature ie 1000 houses plus, they will use a lot of energy and create a lot of waste?

Future proofing some houses for independent living for elderly should also be built into new builds at the planning stage. Given the ageing population, this would appear to be a serious omission. Elderly relatives can be looked after by relatives if a percentage of smaller bespoke homes are built for this purpose. This might also free up much needed family homes. The introduction of technology to new homes such as telecare / medicine would also help future proof homes and as Surrey is a leader in faster broadband applications this should be viable.

80. This policy is another example of hypocrisy. While it says many fine things it ignores the fact that the Plan involves putting housing estates in the countryside generating a huge amount of additional traffic and greatly increasing carbon emissions. A major constraint on the housing number is needed.

We welcome and support this policy, and the importance the Borough places on such matters through its inclusion and prominence in the plan.
I object to retail developments being excluded from the carbon reduction requirement. The justification in 4.5.37a makes no sense and simply reflects GBCs attempt to increase town centre retail development, unnecessarily, and push housing into the countryside. This is the opposite of sustainable construction. It means that brownfield town centre sites will be wasted when they could be used to meet housing need in a much more sustainable way than the proposals in this draft local plan.

4.5.38 admits to the “particular issue of increasing pressure on water stocks in an area already classed as being under serious water stress” but seems to imply that improvements in standards of the way we use water will happen one day and that will be sufficient. Any improvement in standards is likely to be very small in comparison to the massive increase in domestic water consumption, locally, that will arise under this draft local plan. I object to the lack of a constraint based on water consumption and supply. This is an issue for planning in South-east England in general as well as for Guildford.

Policy D2: Sustainable design, construction and energy

" - reasonably achievable - ".Building regulations uses the term 'reasonable' against requirements, as otherwise trouble can be caused, and it should be used here.

It would really be much more sensible and in line with Governmental thinking to aim at compliance with national legislation, Building Regulations [ and national and NH BC technical requirements as developed], and leave it there. This can be done by way of referencing such sources.

There is a sort-of ‘arms race’ between Local Authorities [ the 'Merton effect ’ -though I understand that Merton has withdrawn from its extreme position] to demonstrate they are more 'sustainable' than their neighbours. The intention is wholly admirable. However a mass of experience is building up to show that premature or ill advised 'sustainable' works do not save the energy suggested in the original calculations and create expensive problems for the future. Solar electricity is now a well known example - the essential inverters tend to fail after about ten years [ eg through degradation of capacitors], 'spares' for that model of installation are then no longer available, and Fire Brigades are reportedly very cautious about entering to extinguish if such house do catchfire, due to the risk of roof collapse.

Another area fraught with disasters is dry lining of elderly houses.

GBC has insufficient expert scientific industry knowledge to evaluate highly technical schemes of this kind. Apart from disappointing performance , there is the side risk of GBC being sued over future failure if the works were installed as a result of formal requirement. Much better left to the Building Regulations Ad visory Committee and et al, as the Government then carries the risk.

It should be noted that the Government is becoming uneasy about the over-enthusiastic application of European legislation, and we may see changes following Brexit.

I have commented to this effect in the last 2014 round of consultation, and see that no notice has been taken. Would it be helpful if I gave references to technical articles?

Applicants for planning permission are not required to provide ‘sustainability statements’ in terms of the construction, internal layout and performance of dwellings. <td></td>

| There are many things wrong with the first part of the policy. For example (but not exhaustively), the Council cannot require that an applicant demonstrates that the “lowest level of carbon emissions” has been achieved since the applicant is only required to meet Part L 2013. Similarly, the applicant does not need to show how the highest levels of water efficiency have been achieved since the applicant is only required to meet the optional technical standard for water efficiency that the council has elected to adopt which is 110 litres per person per day (paragraph 4.5.20). The Council cannot require more than this because national policy in the WMS does not allow for this (“local planning authorities... should not set out in their emerging Local Plans…any additional local technical standards or requirements relating to the construction, internal layout or performance of new dwellings”

CHP

The policy also requires that all new developments must connect to (C)CHP distribution networks where they exist, or incorporate the necessary infrastructure for connection to future networks. We consider this to be contrary to national policy. The Government’s Productivity Plan (Fixing the Foundations, HM Treasury, July 2015) announced the government’s decision not to proceed with its zero carbon Allowable Solutions carbon offsetting scheme, or with its proposed 2016 increase in on-site energy efficiency standards (page 46). The purpose of this announcement was to reduce the burden of regulation on housebuilders which was ‘hindering competition by raising barriers to entry, adaptation and expansion’ (page 43). The government is concerned that the growing burden of demand is inhibiting the growth of smaller housebuilders (page 46). It is the HBF’s view that having suspended the Allowable Solutions scheme and the 2016 increase in energy efficiency standards, developers are only required to meet Part L 2013 of the Building Regulations. This will not require provision of or connection to CHP systems. Generally, meeting Part L 2013 does not require providing or connecting to CHP systems or contributing to other offsite energy efficiency measures.

The announcement in the Government’s productivity plan post-dates the NPPF. We are aware that paragraph 96 of the NPPF allows local authorities adopt local policies for the support of decentralised energy schemes but we consider that the direction of Government policy has been set by the Productivity Plan. It would not be appropriate for the local authority to specify the manner by which developers achieve their energy requirements under the Building Regulations.

Aside from the question as to whether the Council’s approach accords with national policy, there are potentially viability implications associated with this policy requirement. The DCLG document Housing Standards Review: Cost Impacts (for the DCLG by EC Harris, September 2014) provides the latest costs associated with building to the new Part L 2013. We note that the Council’s Viability Assessment has modelled the cost of building to current Part L 2013 (see paragraph 5.3.20). However, it is hard to know whether this would cover the costs associated with building CHP systems, or connecting to these. The EC Harris report referred to above does conclude that there are costs associated with renewable technologies. Since this is a local plan policy requirement the Council should calculate what it might cost for all schemes to provide CHP systems or to connect up to these.

Carbon reduction

- The Council requires a reduction in carbon emissions of at least 15%. This is unclear. Firstly, it is unclear what the baseline measurement is. Secondly, and more importantly, the policy is unsound because applicants are only required to achieve Part L 2013. The Council is unable to set any other standards relating to the performance of new dwellings other than the three optional technical standards (WMS, 25 March 2015).

Applicants are not required to demonstrate how they have achieved Part L 2013 through energy statements. As the WMS states:

“local planning authorities (will) also need to review their local information requirements to ensure that technical detail that is no longer necessary is not requested to support planning applications.”

In paragraph 4.5.16 the Council refers to zero carbon development. The Government, However, has determined that zero carbon development is unfeasible for the time-being, hence its suspension of the 2016 zero carbon homes requirement. This reference should be deleted from the Local Plan.

Water efficiency
We note paragraph 4.5.20. If the Council wishes to adopt the optional standard for water efficiency then it needs to put this in policy. It cannot introduce this via SPD. It will also need to address the tests set out in the NPPG. One of those tests is viability. It is unclear from the Viability Assessment that has been published (December 2014) whether the Council has assessed this cost.

Paragraph 4.5.21

The Council indicates within this paragraph that it may impose other requirements on developers, and lists what these might be. It proposes to decide these on a case-by-case basis. This is contrary to the NPPF in paragraphs 15, 17 and 154 and the underlying principle of the plan-led system. The Local Plan ought to provide clarity for applicants so that decisions can be made without delay. The local plan should not to be starting point for negotiation.

This policy contains a FLA (4 letter acronym) (C)CHP, which is indecipherable.

This is a thirty year document so FLA’s and TLA’s should be spelt out early in the text so in 25 years time it is still understandable on the first read.

“Combined Cooling, Heat and Power (CCHP)
Combined Cooling, Heat and Power (CCHP), or trigeneration as it is also known, is the most economical and environmentally sound way to generate electricity, heat and cooling, making it the ideal solution for organisations which have significant cooling requirements.

CCHP energy schemes integrate Combined Heat and Power (CHP) systems with absorption chillers.

Waste heat provides energy to produce chilled water which is then used for cooling.”

While this policy is ‘admirable’ in thought, in ‘UK practice’ the proposal would work in large factories and barracks style / student accommodation where one central supplier has a responsibility for the whole operation.

For domestic houses (owner occupied) - this ‘communist style’ communal power and heating process is highly contentious. This type of system requires a central ‘boiler/engine/generator’ to feed a number of properties and thus requires a central service provider ‘on site’. We do not believe the policy itself is ‘sustainable’ as it will require the setting up of an ‘independent’ power station with associated company and staff. None of this is mentioned within the overall plan.

As there is no Plan Policy, Proposal, or Aspiration within the plan for such CCHP infrastructure this Policy fails the basic soundness test of being integrated with the rest of the Plan or in fact being deliverable in the life of the Plan.

CCHP for commercial premises is a sound policy, and is welcomed. However for disconnected owner occupied properties, the implications are a challenge. The distribution of hot and cold(chilled) water is unsustainable over wider ranges.
Web research has shown that this ‘new version’ of the old idea has less than 1,000 units worldwide. It is an unproven project notwithstanding the principles are excellent.

This policy needs seriously re-wording to make development sustainable and energy efficient, but not overly onerous on developers never mind the owner occupiers.

I hope GBC will anticipate societal trends and advancing technology. A great deal of work is being done with so called 'smart cities' to enhance people's quality of life and increase efficiency of services to lower cost. We should be looking at new materials that allow buildings to be built faster and cheaper than traditional forms of building. We should be setting standards to reduce the need for lighting and heating. These ideas need to be embraced in the final Local Plan.

There is a wealth of new technology being explored and in new forms, eg roads that can now be laid with solar panels to generate energy. I understand Greenwich is networking solar panels, energy from water (the Thames) and other sources as it becomes a test bed for smart city energy technology. This information can be used continually to inform and improve people's quality of life in every new building.

We object to Policy D2 Sustainable design, construction and energySustainability should be an overarching ambition, conditioning the whole local plan and running through it, as claimed in the NPPF, “like a golden thread”. It should be set out clearly in Policy S1, not buried away as a minor detail in Policy D2. This policy amounts to “greenwashing”, expounding aspirational environmental targets while ignoring the plan to build dormitory towns across the Green Belt that are environmentally and socially unsustainable. These settlements will bring vastly increased car use and will lead to unacceptable traffic congestion, overstretched social infrastructure, and more greenhouse gas emissions, noise and light pollution. This policy should not be just about saving energy but about preserving the borough’s stock of natural capital, especially the countryside, from futile attempts to rig the housing market. This policy’s emphasis on Combined Cooling Heating and Power and communal heating networks is meaningless, since no such networks are available locally.

D2 Sustainable design construction and energy

What is sustainability? Surely it means that the infrastructure of an area is also considered when development is planned
I object to the fact the GBC has taken none of these considerations into account when drawing up its Draft Local Plan and encouraging a further approximately 30,000 cars onto the local roads.

There are no plans for better roads apart from the A3.

There are no plans for extending the Hospital

There are no plans for sufficient school places (Wisley proposed a couple of schools, but only after 500 houses were built, where, in the meantime will the children from these houses go?)

There are no plans for more surgeries (The above statement also applies here)

There will be a considerable increase in light pollution

There will be a considerable increase in noise pollution

There will be a considerable increase in exhaust pollution. (The Wisley site is already polluted severely from the A3/M25 junction)

There are no facilities to supply the Combined Cooling, Heating and Power and Communal Heating networks proposed by GBC

All measures to improve energy efficiency by better insulation etc. are laudable. However, this policy should explicitly preclude the possibility of building wind-farms or solar electricity farms in the Borough, which are extremely inefficient forms of energy production. Both suffer from the intermittency problem, and, as a consequence for wind turbines, even the contributions to reducing carbon dioxide emissions are highly dubious. Those analyses rigorously demonstrate that wind developments of various sizes cause extra fuel consumption (and hence carbon dioxide emissions) instead of fuel saving, when compared to electricity production with modern high-efficiency gas turbines only. However, power from so-called renewable sources receives large Government subsidies which are attractive to landowners, and, under the proposed policy D2 would be allowed.

The emphasis on CCHP (Combined Cooling Heating and Power) and communal heating networks is misplaced when no such networks are currently locally available.

The imposition of aspirational environmental targets ignores the fact that building dormitory communities is environmentally unsustainable. These all require increased car use and will lead to increased congestion with associated air pollution and higher carbon dioxide emissions; a few solar panels on roofs will not compensate for the considerable environmental cost.

I object to Policy D2 Sustainable design, construction and energy

Sustainability should be an overarching ambition, conditioning the whole local plan and running through it, as claimed in the NPPF, “like a golden thread”. It should be set out clearly in Policy S1, not buried away as a minor detail in Policy D2.

This policy amounts to “greenwashing”, expounding aspirational environmental targets while ignoring the plan to build dormitory towns across the Green Belt that are environmentally and socially unsustainable. These settlements will bring vastly increased car use and will lead to unacceptable traffic congestion, overstretched social infrastructure, and more greenhouse gas emissions, noise and light pollution. This policy should not be just about saving energy but about preserving the borough’s stock of natural capital, especially the countryside, from futile attempts to rig the housing market.

This policy’s emphasis on Combined Cooling Heating and Power and communal heating networks is meaningless, since no such networks are available locally.

I OBJECT to this policy

The emphasis on energy and waste hierarchies and reduction of carbon emissions as part of building design are welcomed.

However, the emphasis on CCHP (Combined Cooling Heating and Power) and communal heating networks seems curious – no such networks are currently locally available.
There is an element of “greenwashing” – the imposition of aspirational environmental targets while ignoring the simple fact that building dormitory towns is environmentally unsustainable.

These all require increased car use and will lead to increased congestion and so air pollution and higher carbon dioxide emissions and a few solar panels on roofs will not compensate for the considerable environmental cost.

One of the reasons for me moving to West Horsley 3 years ago was to move to a more rural location, with less traffic, for health reasons as I have a chronic illness. I am concerned that the proposals to add houses, and with a much greater density than currently, would lead to an increase in air pollution in the area as there would be more people using cars.

I object to Policy D1 and D2. This is a weak Policy because no thought or vision has been attached to conservation areas or historic value which makes an area unique. By building outside the Town Centre and urban area, The Plan encourages congestion on our road network so I can't see how the reduction of the Borough's footprint is actually going to work. building outside the Town Centre and urban areas is not sustainable development and will not reduce the carbon footprint. The roads will just become more and more congested because all of the development is outside of the town and urban areas. Any changes to the way energy infrastructure is supplied should be made to the Town and urban areas first because high density building uses more energy.

8.1 MGH objects to the requirement under ‘Sustainable development’ which requires proposals for development to be supported by the submission of a sustainability statement. In particular, the requirement to set out how they will deliver “the lowest level of carbon emissions (direct and embodied) that is achievable” is in conflict with the NPPF and is unsound.

8.2 Having regard to the high standards of energy and water required by national Building Regulations, it is unreasonable in our view to require developers to provide evidence of viability and feasibility in support of planning applications for development.

Policy D2: Sustainable Design

Object (not justified, effective nor consistent with national planning policy in respect of NPPF paragraph 182)

WPI considers that Policy D2 is unjustified and contrary to national planning policy on the basis that it is largely repetitive of matters which should be covered by the Building Regulations (Part L). The policy requirement for all developments to be zero carbon, based on regulated energy use, would place the Borough as out of step with many Districts.

The Government’s Ministerial Statement of 25 March 2015 set out that that from the date the Deregulation Bill is given royal assent (26 March 2015), Local Plans should not include any additional (to the new “optional building regulations” and the new national space standards) local technical standards or requirements relating to the construction, layout or performance of new dwellings. As set out within GBC’s own Sustainability Topic Paper:

"Written ministerial statements are material planning considerations. The Deregulation Bill has now been given royal assent so Local Plans should not set technical standards for construction, layout or performance of dwellings except the optional building regulations, the planning space standard and energy performance requirements up to the equivalent of Code for Sustainable Homes Level 4, without a compelling reason to do so."

The whole purpose of the Standards Review was to impose consistency across the country, to assist with the delivery of development and thus matters such as water and energy efficiency are addressed by the Building Regulations. Paragraph 95 of the NPPF states that when setting local requirements for a building's sustainability, local planning authorities must do so in a way consistent with the Government’s zero carbon buildings policy and adopt nationally described standards. Following the royal assent of the Housing and Planning Bill the Government’s proposed Zero Carbon Standard has been deleted and in its stead, the Government has introduced a clause to the Bill which commits to a review of the energy efficiency standard for new homes in building regulations. There is no time scale nor is there any specific criteria for the review.

As set out within the Planning Practice Guidance (PPG), local planning authorities have the option to set additional technical requirements exceeding the minimum standards required by Building Regulations in respect of access and water. However, in doing so the local planning authority will need to gather evidence to determine whether there is a need for additional standards in their area, and justify setting appropriate policies in their Local Plans (Reference ID: 56-002-20160519). It is not clear where the evidence behind the requirements of Policy D2 is located within the Local Plan evidence base.

The requirement for all developments to connect or make provision for Combined Heat and Power (CHP) is unjustified, and un-evidenced. There are some locations where CHP can be made both viable and feasible, however, these are typically higher density developments, in urban locations. There are limited, if any, examples nationally of major and large scale developments of lower densities (below 50 dph) enabling CHP. NPPF paragraph 173 states that pursuing sustainable development requires careful attention to viability and costs in plan-making and decision-taking.

WPI understands that Policy D2 is intended to align with national legislation, policy and guidance by offering strong support for low and zero carbon and decentralised energy with a particular focus on Combined Heat and Power (CHP). However, WPI suggests that the wording of Policy D2 be amended to make clear the policy is ‘encouraging’ rather than requiring measures to be met.

Finally, the policy is ineffective, as it makes no reference to viability or feasibility factors, in requiring the implementation of zero carbon. There are no references to any ‘allowable solutions’, which are off-site sources of energy generation, which may count towards carbon offset.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Attached documents: 160715_Local_Plan_Reps_July_2016_and_Appendices.pdf (11.0 MB)
4.24. Furthermore, the WMS made it clear that the optional new national technical standards should only be required through any new local plan policy if they address a clearly evidenced need and where their impact on viability has been considered. GBC, in its updated Sustainability Topic Paper (June 2017), has acknowledged that it should not seek to exceed the Building Regulations requirements unless there is a compelling reason to do so (para 2.14). Essentially there needs to be a specific, well evidence, local justification for setting standards that are above those in the Building Regulations.

4.25. The Updated Sustainability Topic Paper refers to national objectives and targets but there is limited, if any, local justification provided and with the exception of brief references to the 2013 Guildford Borough Environmental Sustainability and Climate Change Study (ESCC), it is not clear where the evidence to support the Council’s approach is located.

4.26. GBC’s argument for the approach in policy D2 is that there is no “quantifiable target” but rather, a design standard that is set by a “qualitative standard” to achieve the lowest level of carbon emissions or the highest level of efficiency. Whilst no specific figures are stated in the policy, the policy continues to enable GBC to raise objections to development on the basis that standards, in excess of those set out in the Building Regulations, are not being met, and thus enables GBC to exceed the requirements of the Standards Review, the purpose of which was fundamentally to assist with the faster delivery of development. The policy, or associated text should at the very least, make it clear that the targets being sought will reflect current Building Regulations requirements.

4.27. The Focused Amendments have sought to make the policy wording clearer and in some instances more flexible, and this results in a policy that is more effective. However, whilst it is agreed that the wording is clearer, carbon reduction targets have increased, without the relevant local justification being provided. Although some flexibility has now been inserted into the policy paragraph 9, WPI’s objection is maintained in respect of policy D2 as regards the carbon requirements.

4.28. WPI recommended, in representations to the Submission GBLP that the policy requirement for Combined Heat and Power (CHP) was amended to be encouraging. It was highlighted that WPI believed this to align more appropriately with national policy and guidance supporting carbon reduction and decentralised energy, and ensuring that viability of CHP was considered. It is disappointing to see that there has been no change to policy D2 in relation to CHP provision and therefore the flexibility required to policy D2 is not in place. Subsequently, WPI maintains their objection on the basis that the NPPF clearly recognises that pursuing sustainable development requires careful attention to viability and costs (para 173).

4.29. WPI also recommended that policy D2 was updated to include reference to viability and feasibility in relation to support for zero carbon development. However, no reference to such factors is included, and subsequently, WPI remain of the view that the policy is ineffective.

Changes Sought

4.30. The policy should reflect the Housing Standards Review, and therefore require a fair and reasonable approach to carbon reduction, which takes full account of economic viability and technical feasibility factors.

4.31. The requirement for CHP connection for any development should be amended, to make clear that the policy is ‘encouraging’ rather than requiring CHP to be provided.

4.32. Carbon reduction requirements should be returned to 15% as per the Submission Plan, unless GBC can provide sufficient, local justification to require this standard.

The policy should reflect the Housing Standards Review, and therefore require a fair and reasonable approach to carbon reduction, which takes full account of economic viability and technical feasibility factors.

The wording of Policy D2 should be revised to reflect the Housing Standards Review and not repeat or seek to conflict with Part L of the Building Regulations.

The requirement for CHP connection for any development should be amended, to make clear that the policy is ‘encouraging’ rather than requiring so that it states that "...all new developments are encouraged to connect to CHP...."

(Pages 109 and 110).

The policy (paragraph 9) has changed to required 20% rather than 15% carbon reduction. However, measures are to be provided in the locality rather than on site.

A new paragraph 10 has been added to the policy. This states that “A Use Classes” in Guildford will not be subject to the requirements of para 9.

Wording of policy D2 has slightly changed from “must” to “are required to”.

The suggested text relating to CHP connections has not been included in the Focused Amendments.

WPI welcome the clarification to the policy to provide additional flexibility, and hence the policy is more effective.

Clarification Requested (Objection Maintained). However, WPI question the justification for a carbon reduction increase in the amendment policy.

Policy D2: Sustainable Design, Construction and Energy

I ACCEPT this policy as far as it goes, but it needs some extension.

It is important to include a specific comment that the higher initial construction cost of energy efficient homes will not be allowable as a grounds for viability waivers.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Partly SUPPORT / partly OBJECT (on 3 distinct grounds)

1. The almost certain uptake of electric vehicles will require charging points in the vast majority of dwellings within the timescale of the Local Plan. Therefore this Policy should make provision for electric charging points to be installed in all new dwellings and in conversions of existing buildings to domestic residences.
2. Paragraph 4.5.18b is poorly worded. How is it proposed (within the planning system) to offset the carbon that will be emitted during the occupied life of a building?
3. In paragraph 4.5.30, why is Guildford town centre exempted from the requirement for new buildings to “achieve a reasonable reduction in carbon emissions of at least 20 percent …”? Similarly, the second half of paragraph 4.5.37a, indicates that retail developments in the town centre will be exempted from the general requirements for low carbon development. Climate change is a serious global problem, and will not be solved unless meaningful targets are pursued on all fronts. This Policy needs to ensure that residential and businesses premises both meet the environmental standards for the benefit of everybody. Overall these paragraphs need to be significantly tightened up.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Attached documents:
2.39 The Government has adopted a clear stance of moving away from locally set standards in respect of renewable energy for housing schemes, with such matters instead addressed through the Building Regulations. As such we are concerned that the policy is unsound in that it is not consistent with national policy. In addition we have concerns regarding the practicality of implementing certain of the detailed criteria currently proposed as discussed below.

Sustainable Development

2.40 Criterion 1b requires the sustainability statement to set out how the development will deliver “the lowest level of carbon emissions (direct and embodied).” Similarly, criterion 1c requires “the highest levels of energy and water efficiency.” As currently it is considered that the proposed policy wording is ineffective.

2.41 No clarity is provided as to what constitutes the lowest or highest levels. For instance, should a new form of emerging technology be able to deliver a lower level of carbon emissions but this is not currently widely available this would seemingly fail the currently proposed policy test. Similarly if there is a form of technology available but this would be prohibitively expensive and would render the development unviable, this would again fail the proposed policy test. Further clarity and flexibility must therefore be introduced to the proposed policy wording.

Renewable, low carbon and decentralised energy

2.42 The policy requires all new developments to “connect to (C)CHP distribution networks where they exist, or incorporate the necessary infrastructure for connection to future networks, unless it can be clearly demonstrated that doing so is not feasible or that utilising a different energy supply would be more sustainable.”

2.43 Clearly (C)CHP is unlikely to be delivered in all locations. The proposed policy wording does provide some flexibility in respect of demonstrating if it is feasible, however this test needs to be applied to the site itself and the wider context. Whilst it may be feasible for the development to provide the necessary infrastructure for connection to future networks, if it can be robustly demonstrated that the location in general is not feasible for a future network to be delivered then this should equally apply. The proposed policy text should be updated to clarify this approach.

Carbon reduction

2.44 The policy also seeks to require new buildings to achieve a reduction in carbon emissions of at least 20%. If the principle of this requirement is accepted, we continue to have concerns regarding the potential implications for the viability of developments. Whilst the implications of the proposed increase to 20% have been assessed in the Assessment of the Viability of Carbon Emission Targets for New Builds (April 2017) prepared by Evora Edge, this has not been considered in combination with the other proposed revised policy requirements through an updated viability assessment. The current requirement is therefore considered to be unsound in that it is neither justified nor effective.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Attached documents:
I OBJECT. Sustainability should be an overarching ambition, conditioning the whole local plan and running through it, as claimed in the NPPF, “like a golden thread”. It should be set out clearly in Policy S1, not buried away as a minor detail in Policy D2.

This policy amounts to “greenwashing”, expounding aspirational environmental targets while ignoring the plan to build dormitory towns in the Green Belt that are environmentally and socially unsustainable. These settlements will require vastly increased car use and will lead to unacceptable traffic congestion, overstretched social infrastructure, and higher greenhouse gas emissions and noise and light pollution. This policy should not be just about saving energy but about preserving the borough’s stock of natural capital, especially the countryside, from futile attempts to rig the housing market.

This policy’s emphasis on Combined Cooling Heating and Power and communal heating networks is meaningless, since no such networks are available locally.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Policy D2 – Sustainable design, construction and energy

I OBJECT. I agree with the definitions of sustainability and I am passionate about the issues. We ourselves have installed photovoltaic cells, rainwater harvesting for use in the house and a ground-source heat pump. The Local Plan seems to be paying lip service to the need for sustainability, but the council’s track record on delivery is woeful.

The traffic resulting from the vast increases in housing will result in more cars on the already congested roads of our villages, increasing pollution levels, noise and damage to the environment.

The references to CCHP appear to have been cut and pasted from the document “Model policies for energy in neighbourhood plans” (https://www.regensw.co.uk/communities/wp-content/uploads/sites/5/2016/05/Energy-in-Neighbourhood-Planning-model-policies-with-context.pdf). Of course, GBC are using it for the Local Plan rather than a Neighbourhood Plan. The Local Plan omits the final section of the document: “Before energy policies are developed for a neighbourhood plan, a clear objective on energy for the NP needs to be established following consultation with the community. Appropriate policies for the area can then be developed through an evidence base gathering and consultation process. These policies need to be reviewed together to ensure that they form a cohesive whole – reinforcing, rather than contradicting each other."

Should this not have happened already if it is to be such an integral part of the plan?

However, the emphasis on CCHP (Combined Cooling Heating and Power) and communal heating networks seems curious – no such networks are currently locally available. There is an element of “Greenwashing” – the imposition of aspirational environmental targets while ignoring the simple fact that building dormitory towns is environmentally unsustainable. These all require increased car use and will lead to increased congestion and so air pollution and higher carbon dioxide emissions and a few solar panels on roofs will not compensate for the considerable environmental cost.</td>

Policy D2 point 9 commendable increase. New developments should also include charging points for electric vehicles. We should be planning for the future.

4.5.16a about sustainable development should say appropriate to the development instead of proportionate

4.5.30 retails buildings should not be exempt from the carbon reduction. All measures apply equally across the board. No distinctions should be made between housing and retail.

4.5.37a should be removed

4.5.30a allows for a way out of meeting carbon emission needs. It should be removed.

With regard to power requirements, sustainable solutions close to significant development should be explored such as solar, possibly on the roofs of new dwellings, and the suitability of the Downs as a site for wind turbines, especially perhaps associated with the Research Park and the University area - where a modern and progressive image is appropriate - should be explored. In many senses turbines can be aesthetically beautiful, particularly once what they achieve and what they avoid is known.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Attached documents:
Much of this section could be ‘unsustainable’ legally as it stands. The text would possibly benefit from a study of the careful drafting of the Building Regulations. An example is the deletion of “that are achievable” in 1(c). That leaves an open-ended requirement that could be taken to mean the wholly closed levels that manned space craft achieve.

Para (7) would, as written, require new dwellings everywhere [eg the country ends of East Horsley] to be ‘connection-ready’. It has to be understood that ‘connection-ready’ means a sizing of heating systems appropriate for {C}CHP, and so probably unsuitable for whatever is a more suitable method for the location [eg maybe heat pumps].

Redraft?

Para (9) now specifies a carbon emission reduction of 20% on-what? [presumably the Building Regulations, but it should say so].

It remains wholly unclear why this figure was chosen. The supporting papers contain a study which costs the extra works required – this form of study has been carried out multiple times by various authorities, there is nothing unusual about Guildford and there seems no reason therefore why Guildford should have funded a further study, with perhaps its own set of potential errors. In depth studies are always carried out by the Government’s Building Regulation Advisory Committee – most are published and linked research reports are available. Those give reasoned explanation as to choice, and it would obviously be helpful to Members if these were abstracted and made available if members are insistent on going down a particularly pace-setting path.

Meanwhile Members should be aware that there are widespread reports in the industry of building failures arising out of energy conservation requirements running ahead of the ability of the majority of designers and constructors. And of failure, sometimes remarkable failure, to achieve predicted savings, arising out of the inability of building users to use to the full what has been supplied to them.

A graphic, terrible example, is a recent fire in a high block of flats, where externally applied thermal insulation applied to upgrade the energy conservation of that block largely caused a major human tragedy. The most efficient thermal insulation nearly always is highly flammable.

It would be far more sensible, if more boring, to follow national guidance.

Obj - reconsider

Policy 02: Sustainable design, construction and energy

This policy is unsound in parts and conflicts with national policy: This policy does not support the requirements of sustainable development

Sustainable development is a golden thread which runs through the National Planning Policy Framework. As a result, all development should be achieving sustainability as part of overarching planning policy. Persimmon Homes ensure that all development sites are in sustainable locations and look to achieve the highest levels of sustainability.

This Policy states that strong support will be given to proposals for zero carbon development. As part of such development the following are set out as points that must be delivered as part of any new development:

• The highest levels of energy and water efficiency that are achievable and,
• The lowest level of carbon emissions that is achievable

As with Policy H2 regarding Affordable Homes, Persimmon would not support proposals that result in unviable development. There is ambiguity as to what 'the lowest level of carbon emissions' means and we have reservations about its enforcement. Further down in the policy there is mention of a requirement to achieve a reasonable reduction of at least 15%. It is unclear as to whether this figure relates to the lowest level of carbon emissions that is achievable or if this is a set figure which has to be achieved. In addition to this, the planning contributions SPD has an existing requirement for a reduction of 10% for carbon emissions.

Persimmon Homes have reservations that any change from the existing reduction of 10% would have an impact on the viability of future schemes. We are unsure as to whether it would be practicable for delivery of the level of housing required if an increase in reduction was required. In addition to this, Persimmon also has reservations about the practicality of having all developments connect to (C)CHP distribution networks as there are a number of areas within Guildford where such a connection will not be possible. This will therefore have a further impact on the viability of schemes and will restrict developments to particular areas, in a borough which is already heavily restricted by Green Belt. It is arguable that this policy does not a-line with sustainable development.

This policy amounts to "greenwashing", expounding aspirational environmental targets while ignoring the plan to build dormitory towns across the Green Belt that are environmentally and socially unsustainable. These settlements will bring vastly increased car use and will lead to unacceptable traffic congestion, overstretched social infrastructure, and more greenhouse gas emissions, noise and light pollution. This policy should not be just about saving energy but about preserving the borough's stock of natural capital, especially the countryside, from futile attempts to rig the housing market.

This policy's emphasis on Combined Cooling Heating and Power and communal heating networks is meaningless, since no such networks are available locally.

We object to Policy D2 Sustainable design, construction and energy. Sustainability should be an overarching ambition, conditioning the whole local plan and running through it, as claimed in the NPPF, “like a golden thread”. It should be set out clearly in Policy S1, and not presented as a minor detail in Policy D2. This policy amounts to “greenwashing”, expounding aspirational environmental targets while ignoring the plan to build dormitory towns across the Green Belt that are environmentally and socially unsustainable. These settlements will bring vastly increased car use and will lead to unacceptable traffic congestion, overstretched social infrastructure, and more greenhouse gas emissions, noise and light pollution. This policy should not be just about saving energy but about preserving the borough’s stock of natural capital, especially the countryside, from attempts to manipulate the housing market. This policy’s emphasis on Combined Cooling Heating and Power and communal heating networks is difficult to understand, since no such networks are available locally.

There is also no mention of future proofing homes for older people so that they may maintain independent living within the home. The implementation of technology that will permit telecare or telemedicine is perfectly achievable given the high level of broadband in Surrey.

• The emphasis on CCHP (Combined Cooling Heating and Power) and communal heating networks seems curious – no such networks are currently locally available.
• There is an element of “greenwashing” – the imposition of aspirational environmental targets while ignoring the simple fact that building dormitory towns is environmentally unsustainable.

These all require increased car use and will lead to increased congestion and so air pollution and higher carbon dioxide emissions and a few solar panels on roofs will not compensate for the considerable environmental cost.

GROUNDS FOR OBJECTION The emphasis on energy and waste hierarchies and reduction of carbon emissions as part of building design are welcomed. Sustainability should not be confined to just the building it should also apply to access to the buildings and with public transport slowly being reduced these settlements will bring vastly increased car use and will lead to unacceptable traffic congestion, overstretched social infrastructure, and more greenhouse gas emissions, noise and light pollution. Build dormitory towns across the Green Belt that are environmentally and socially unsustainable are totally unacceptable. The government has withdrawn the Code for Sustainable Homes to encourage development because sustainable design is appropriately and successfully regulated by the Building Regulations. Policy D2 – Sustainable design, construction and energy

The Environment Agency has designated the Thames Water region to be “seriously water stressed” which reflects the extent to which available water resources are used. Future pressures on water resources will continue to increase and key factors are population growth and climate change.

Water conservation and climate change is a vitally important issue to the water industry. Not only is it expected to have an impact on the availability of raw water for treatment but also the demand from customers for potable (drinking) water. Therefore, Thames Water supports water conservation and the efficient use of water and the references to this in paragraphs 4.5.10 and 4.5.19, but consider that there should be clearer reference in Policy D2 itself.

Thames Water support the mains water consumption target of 110 litres per head per day as set out in the NPPG (Paragraph: 015 Reference ID: 56-015-20150327) and consider that this should be covered in Policy D2.

http://www.thameswater.co.uk/save-water/3786.htm
Customers can discover how you can start saving water, help protect the environment, reduce your energy bill and even cut your water bill if you have a meter. You can calculate your water use, see how you compare against other Thames Water customers and the Government's target, and get lots of hints and tips on how to save water. Thames Water customers, can also order a range of free devices to help save water. The Policy/supporting text could make reference to this guidance.

However, managing demand alone will not be sufficient to meet increasing demand and Thames Water adopt the Government’s twin-track approach of managing demand for water and, where necessary, developing new sources, as reflected in the latest Thames Water Water Resource Management Plan.

POLICY D2 SUSTAINABLE DESIGN, CONSTRUCTION AND ENERGY

It is important that new development achieves a good level of design that respects existing character, however, the Council have a balancing exercise to ensure that they make the maximum productive use of identified sites in order to ensure that the most important ‘natural, built and heritage environments are protected.’ Including making maximum use of sustainably located sites within and adjoining existing settlements.

The Council must also be careful to ensure that unrealistic design standards or the constraints of historic character do not undermine the delivery of new growth.

2.40 The Government has adopted a clear stance of moving away from locally set standards in respect of renewable energy for housing schemes, with such matters instead addressed through the Building Regulations. The NPPG makes clear that additional requirements on technical standards can only be applied with regard to water, accessibility and nationally described space standards. As such we are concerned that the policy is unsound in that it is not consistent with national policy. In addition we have concerns regarding the practicality of implementing certain of the detailed criteria currently proposed as discussed below.

Sustainable Development

2.41 Criterion 1b requires the sustainability statement to set out how the development will deliver “the lowest level of carbon emissions (direct and embodied).” Similarly, criterion 1c requires “the highest levels of energy and water efficiency.” As currently it is considered that the proposed policy wording is ineffective.

2.42 No clarity is provided as to what constitutes the lowest or highest levels. For instance, should a new form of emerging technology be able to deliver a lower level of carbon emissions but this is not currently widely available this would seemingly fail the currently proposed policy test. Similarly if there is a form of technology available but this would be prohibitively expensive and would render the development unviable, this would again fail the proposed policy test. Further clarity and flexibility must therefore be introduced to the proposed policy wording.

Renewable, low carbon and decentralised energy
2.43 The policy requires all new developments to “connect to (C)CHP distribution networks where they exist, or incorporate the necessary infrastructure for connection to future networks, unless it can be clearly demonstrated that doing so is not feasible or that utilising a different energy supply would be more sustainable.”

2.44 Clearly (C)CHP is unlikely to be delivered in all locations. The proposed policy wording does provide some flexibility in respect of demonstrating if it is feasible, however this test needs to be applied to the site itself and the wider context. Whilst it may be feasible for the development to provide the necessary infrastructure for connection to future networks, if it can be robustly demonstrated that the location in general is not feasible for a future network to be delivered then this should equally apply. The proposed policy text should be updated to clarify this approach.

Carbon reduction

2.45 The policy also seeks to require new buildings to achieve a reduction in carbon emissions of at least 20%. If the principle of this requirement is accepted, we continue to have concerns regarding the potential implications for the viability of developments. Whilst the implications of the proposed increase to 20% have been assessed in the Assessment of the Viability of Carbon Emission Targets for New Builds (April 2017) prepared by Evora Edge, this has not been considered in combination with the other proposed revised policy requirements through an updated viability assessment. The current requirement is therefore considered to be unsound in that it is neither justified nor effective.

Policy D2 – Further clarity is required to ensure the proposed policy wording is effective. Flexibility should also be introduced into the proposed policy wording.

POLICY D2: Sustainable design, construction and energy

3.56 GVG supports the laudable policies on ensuring new development minimises the need for heat and energy through quality design and construction, and requiring developers to provide statements as to how this is to be achieved. However, GVG is concerned that the Plan has only taken a very narrow view of the “Energy” position, both in the UK and locally, only to minimum NPPF requirements. Requiring developers to utilise only Renewable Energy Sources and then not making any provision for them in the Plan will, in effect, limit the amount of new development possible in the Borough. The GBC-commissioned report by the Centre for Sustainable Energy concluded that only very limited amounts of Renewable Generation was “deployable”.

3.57 The Policy section on Energy does not extend far enough into either the general shortage of supply of any energy or the demand side. It does not allow for, amongst others, the impact of electric vehicles, the use of Smart Grids and Battery Farm Storage potential. There is also no mention of the potential for Carbon Sequestration.

3.58 GVG takes the view that a review of the general energy provision, both from the National Grid and Renewable Sources needs to be included in the plan. The Local Distribution network operator needs to be consulted as to what power availability there is to support the Borough’s aspirations for both economic and domestic development.

3.59 Options for Renewable Local Embedded Energy Centres need to be part of any Plan, along with the consideration of the application of smart grids and battery storage farms. Financial support from the CIL levy could support retrofitting on large warehouse roofs at Slyfield and other big industrial estates, for instance, as GBC is the freehold owner of a number of the industrial estates. Advanced Thermal treatment is in wide use throughout Scandinavia, Europe and the Far East and... there are an increasing number of plants in the UK. This has the potential to provide substantial renewable power and heat locally. The minimum requirement should be for all new development to be linked into Smart Grids which then manage and reduce significantly the power usage automatically.

3.60 GVG believe a far more proactive approach is needed to the consideration of energy and heat provision in the Plan, leading our town towards a low and zero carbon future whilst still promoting growth, new jobs and homes. As it is, the Plan seeks merely to pass this on to individual developers to deal with the matter on a piecemeal basis.

3.61 Only a comprehensively masterplanned town centre will enable sustainable energy to be harnessed and employed successfully and productively. The masterplan approach favoured by GVG would enable sites to be planned in a conjoined way and make it possible to deliver a unique energy network in the town centre with the ability for future phases of development to plug into this in later years of the Plan process. Piecemeal planning will not achieve that outcome and the town centre is one of only three areas in the borough where such benefits can be achieved.

3.62 Section 4 of policy D2 sets out that combined cooling heating and power (CCHP) networks will be strongly supported and encouraged. However, the current piecemeal approach being taken to different sites within the town centre by GBC will hamper the viability and deliverability of a CCHP network. The Plan is silent on any potential sites for CCHP central facilities, GVG believes the Slyfield Regeneration Proposals offers potential to provide a ‘state of the art’ CCHP facility.

3.63 Overall, the aims of this policy need to be fundamentally reconsidered and the council must recognise the role which a properly masterplanned town centre has to play in the delivery of this policy.

6.1 This policy sets out the Council’s aspirations for sustainable features to be integrated into all development in the Borough, new or existing. To this end, the Council requires that all development must be supported by a Sustainability Statement which details how the proposal will perform in terms of efficiency and embodied carbon emissions. This by itself is a further onerous requirement set by the Council and it is unclear why such measures for new build are necessary, when standards set as part of evolving Building Regulations (Part L).

6.2 This policy also introduces the requirement for connection to Combined Heat and Power (CHP) networks, where achievable. In addition the Policy seeks to achieve a reduction in carbon emissions through renewable and low carbon technologies. As part of the latest consultation document, the proposed level of renewable development sought has been increased from 15% to 20%. RPS considers that this matter has not been properly considered to date and the latest amendment only worsens the position in relation to the soundness of the policy. One of the principal soundness issues the policy faces is the consideration of viability.

6.3 The Council’s October 2016 Local Plan and Viability Study (LPVS) recognises that this policy has cost implications (Table 3.1 refers), however it has failed to capture the extent of the costs associated with development. The LPVS indicates at Paragraph 5.3.32 that the Council was considering a 15% reduction in carbon reduction, is similar to the ‘Merton Rule’, adopted by Merton Council in 2003, which seeks 10% on-site renewable provision. As a result of this, a build cost of 2.5% has been factored into the viability assumptions.
6.4 The actual position is somewhat different, as the Council is not seeking a carbon reduction, but expresses a preference for low carbon technologies. The LPVS is therefore incorrect in assuming that the Council’s previous 15% figure was akin to the Merton Rule, indeed it was 5% higher, meaning that the Council’s modelling of this in the LPVS was incorrect. The new consultation document takes this further still, requiring 20% low carbon/renewable sources should be provided with new development. There is no policy basis for this figure and the financial implications of this have not been tested by the Council to even see whether this is a viable proposition.

6.5 Merton Council no longer apply the Merton Rule, acknowledging that this planning policy has since been superseded by changes to building regulations, which seek to implement a fabric first approach to a reduction in carbon emissions, as indicated in the Council’s Energy Hierarchy. Building Regulations are constantly evolving to take into account new approaches to carbon reduction. It is therefore considered that this policy as currently drafted is not soundly based in evidence and Government policy.

Whilst in principle the increased carbon reduction requirement from 15 per cent to 20 per cent is acceptable, the inclusion of the wording in 4.5.30a ‘the financial viability of the requirements set out in Policy D2 will be considered as part of the planning application process’ is supported to recognise potential viability implications.

Guildford Borough Local Plan: Strategy and Sites 2013-2033

The Submission Local Plan seeks to achieve an appropriate balance between needs of protecting environmental qualities, including the historic environment, and the necessary growth and development to ensure Guildford’s continued vitality and economic, social and environmental sustainability. In its high incidence of references to heritage and the historic environment, and the role this plays in achieving sustainable development, the plan largely succeeds in this respect.

There are a few matters of detail that Historic England would like to see addressed in the final version of the plan, but we do not think these are fundamental impediments to its adoption.

The heritage evidence base, referred to as being contained in the GBC Historic Environment Information (April 2016) requires further work; we note this is still in draft form and could be enhanced by inclusion of assessments of significance and value of historic environment as a whole and constituent assets. It would be useful to identify any actions necessary to sustain and enhance the significances of the historic environment and, in particular, how issues affecting the long-term sustainability of heritage assets, such as this at risk, may be addressed.

A clearer explanation of how this evidence links to and underpins a positive strategy for the historic environment in the Local Plan should be included.

We support Policy P1: Surrey Hills Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty in particular the intention to protect objects of historical significance.

Re. Policy E7: Guildford Town Centre; we broadly support both the Vision (p 84) and policy for the town centre. A key characteristic of and a significant factor in its success is the historic environment, focussed on the setted High Street, and the range and concentration of heritage assets and features (ref. para 4.4.68). However, it will be important to proactively sustain these qualities and integrate their protection and enhancement into efforts to improve the retail and associated offer of the town, and we would like to see the wording of the policy strengthened in this respect; for instance, by the addition of an additional bullet point to this effect in the first paragraph of the policy or by explicitly connecting this policy to Policy D3.

We support Policy D1: Making better places.

We think that Policy D3: Historic environment is weak in its wording though supported by a good introduction and an appropriate reasoned justification. The weakness in the policy arises from its focus being reactive, and we would suggest a more proactive form of wording is sought that reflects some of the intentions set out para 4.5.45. As with other areas of policy, the NPPF requires the local plan to actively promote and support actions to sustain, enhance and enjoy the historic environment (ref. paras 126 and 157, final bullet) addressing, in particular, heritage at risk.

We support Policy D4: Development in urban areas and inset villages. In view of the proposed removal of a number of historic villages form the Green Belt it is suggested, where appropriate, that conservation area appraisals are updated and revised to ensure any new development respects and reinforces the character, distinctiveness and setting of the settlements (this could be linked to Policy D3).

Allocated Sites - with regards to allocated sites, Historic England will be pleased to advise on development proposals as they come forward in respect of any effects on the historic environment or heritage assets within or in proximity to the sites. Some of the more significant (strategic) sites will require archaeological investigation / assessment prior to development especially where there is known to be historical activities that may be retain structures or remains of heritage significance (e.g. at former Wisley Airfield, heritage assessment needed in relation to the sites historic association with aviation development/innovation).

Artington’s contribution to the Borough’s heritage

Residents passionately believe that Mount Browne and The University of Law sites should be considered as an integral part of the wider environmental setting. This setting represents a unique feature of the Borough's heritage, yet disappointingly is not recognised as a separate entity in the Draft Local Plan.

Broadly, the setting covers the area contained within the boundaries of the small parish of Arlington, other important features of which include:

- to the north, the historic North Downs Way and also Sandy Lane, the latter with several houses of great architectural interest;
- to the east, the River Wey crossed by North Downs Way, with St Catherine’s Hill and its chapel;
- to the south, outstanding views over a rural landscape and more houses of architectural interest along the Old Portsmouth Road.

With its interconnecting network of footpaths, the whole of this area is very attractive and accessible to visitors, with the attendant benefits they bring to the Borough.

104. The Guildford Society response to this consultation will include both the Town Centre and Urban Guildford.

105. The Guildford Society has a well-publicised suite of policy documents seeking to protect and enhance the character of Guildford, which depends considerably upon its Heritage Buildings, its Conservation Areas and its Topography as a Gap Town within an Area of Outstanding Beauty and our aspirational policy of “Greening the Approaches”.

106. The Local Plan is very dependent on the provision of infrastructure, which if it is delivered at all, will be towards the end of the plan Period. The Design & Heritage Knowledge Group reiterates the concern to ensure that development does not take place until the necessary infrastructure is approved.

107. Constraints cannot be managed on a site by site basis. Good or bad, early proposals will succeed and later proposals will fail— without control, this will not provide the degree of control or predictability that would be expected from a Local Plan process.

108. Large infrastructure projects and modal shift will take many years to achieve, and the plan does not seem to allow for this delay.

109. Once again, the D&H Group echoed that Social Housing is needed throughout the Borough and is concerned about how to enforce the 40% aspiration.

110. Section 3.2 in the LP Document refers to "exemplary design". This reads well, but; “Exemplary Design” means very good and suitable to be copied. It does not require designs to be fit for purpose or respect the character of the area. This is an example of weak language creating loopholes for inappropriate development. [see also comments under Planning Group regarding the South East Regional Design Panel]

111. It also says "All development within the town centre will need to respect and enhance the unique setting and historical character of the town and be of the highest design and environmental standards." This is welcome; But what about respecting the setting and historical character of the rest of Guildford Borough. It is not just Conservation Areas that need respect. Where people live is also important.

112. Policy P1 uses the phrase “conserve and/or enhance the setting and views of the AONB” is weak, especially to someone not familiar with the topography of Guildford. Parts of the AONB are visible from the Town Centre and there are views from the AONB across Guildford Town, in particular the views from Henley Fort, the Chantries and through the Wey Gap. I would suggest that “conserve and/or enhance the setting and views into and out of the ANOB” would be clearer and therefore easier to manage.

113. The Local Plan does make reference to the Central Government’s “Planning Practice Guidance on Natural Environment – Landscape”, published in March 2014. But only by saying that the AONB Management plan is a material consideration in determining planning applications within and adjacent to the AONB.

114. The Local Plan should emphasize the importance of protecting the setting of AONBs. There is a statutory duty imposed upon planning authorities by the Countryside and Rights of Way Act 2000, Paragraph 3, to have regard to the purposes of AONB designation when considering development proposals situated outside an AONB.

115. These words from the Rights of Way Act 2000 should be included in the Local Plan. “The duty is relevant in considering development proposals that are situated outside National Park or Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty boundaries, but which have an impact on the setting of, and implementation of, the statutory purposes of these protected areas”.

116. Policy D3 4.5.42 states that “Non designated heritage assets are identified by the local authority; the borough’s Local List includes over 200 buildings and structures and the Register of Historic Parks and Gardens includes 52 sites”.

117. Policy D3: Key Evidence lists the Local List, conservation area character appraisals and management plans and existing Conservation Area Character Appraisals. The Local Plan does not, however, provide any protection to these 252 heritage assets or reference any plan to get them designated.
118. In particular, many existing Conservation Areas, particularly in the town centre have no “existing Conservation Area Character Appraisal” or at least none published and accessible on the Council Website. Without a Character Appraisal it is difficult or impossible to judge the merits of a planning application in a Conservation Area, or to uphold decisions at appeal. The Local Plan should include a commitment for every Conservation Area to have a published and accessible Character Appraisal.

POLICY D3 - Historic environment

We object to this policy as it is very weak and we do not think it is clear enough in its support for the conservation of the historic environment. It provides for development which will “enhance” heritage assets. Taken together with the current Council policy of “sweating assets” we fear this policy leaves plenty of room for abuse.

This policy doesn’t go far enough. I, therefore object to policy D3 Historic Environment.

This policy clashes with the strongly pro-development agenda of the rest of the plan and fails to address the contradiction. History is unamenable to improvement, so the policy should commit the Council firmly to protecting and preserving our heritage assets from development. Instead, the specific policy pledge to “support development” that might “enhance” heritage assets leaves wide scope for abuse in the form of destructive commercialization and financial leveraging of relevant sites. This policy is based on the false premise that Guildford’s heritage is inherently in decay. This is a developer’s charter – a short step away from the idea that the historic environment needs to pay its way to be preserved. The Council’s reviews of Guildford Museum and the Electric Theatre support this interpretation. Whatever the “reasoned justification”, the actual policy wording in the blue box leaves too many loopholes. Development close to historical assets is harmful and should be expressly prohibited. This policy fails to meet the requirements of NPPF paragraphs 126 and 131-133.

We are very lucky as we have several noted historians in Guildford who really do understand history and its relevance and importance and not just in terms of buildings or how to make money from it. They are however not listed or even consulted (according to them). Indeed, their opinions are often unwelcome which does not give me faith in the sincerity of this policy.

History is more than just buildings, it can apply to gardens and aspects that have influenced the changes in the town and villages. The area next to the fire station in Guildford has one of the biggest prehistoric finds of flint weaponry, yet few know about it. GBC was given the opportunity to purchase the home that Lewis Carroll stayed in but did not, this was a lost opportunity. Quarry Street is awash with offices, yet could be a unique historic quarter if it were conserved rather than exploited.

4.5.45 I disagree that GBC meets NPPF requirements. The Conservation dept. at GBC is so small (1 permanent member of staff and possibly a part-timer, I think), that it cannot work effectively. If GBC wishes to take this policy seriously it must put adequate resources in place to make it workable. I recently notified the department of a house that met Grade II listing requirements but was pointed to the English Heritage website and hence completed all the forms and site visits and justification, myself. The Rectory in Compton is now Grade II listed, but simply stating that you support such endeavors is not good enough. Resources must be in place to permit timely and adequate response and action.

4.5.42 There is a historic monument in the grounds of Blackwell Farm, this area is completely neglected and any visitor or walker would not even know it was there as it is covered in weeds and bushes. I have seen this for myself and if GBC had the resources to send someone out on a site visit they would have to concur. Blackwell Farm is also the site of a Historic Park and given its close proximity to Watts Gallery and Limnerslease and Greyfriars, the entire area could become an area of local and National importance but instead, the University wishes to build 1,800 houses on it? How does that comply with this policy?

| Policy D3 Historic Environment | Adequate resources must be given to ensure the policies can be carried out. Conversely, to the statement that conservation and economic sustainable growth are complimentary objectives, this is not always the case and policies must be put into place to better define outcomes where the two do not co-exist. For instance, there is an ancient monument within Blackwell Farm that is overgrown and completely neglected. In what way will policies that support economic growth also support the restoration and setting of this monument and its surroundings (historic royal park)?

Many conservation reports / assessments are 20–30 years old and to date resources are not in place to keep up to date with this.

Last year I suggested that the Arts and Craft building (1912) that was the former Rectory in Compton, should be listed. It was agreed but again due to lack of resources it was necessary to source and provide all the evidence that was needed myself.

The policy does not provide a framework for the enjoyment of the historic environment and in order to fulfill 4.5.45, resources must be put into place to fulfill the programme.

The Plan is lacking inclusion of an Archaeology Policy in respect of these virgin Green Belt development sites. Noting that Gosden Hill, while having been ploughed in recent times is the second hill and adjacent hill to where the Simian Pot was found in 1892 implying potential archaeological remains could exist on this site.

I OBJECT to Policy D3 - Historic environment

I object to this policy as it is very weak and I do not think it is clear enough in its support for the conservation of the historic environment. It provides for development which will “enhance” heritage assets which I fear is a developer’s charter as it leaves plenty of room for abuse.

Policy D3: Historic environment

Para. 4.5.38: The sentence in this paragraph: “We will seek to ensure that there is an imaginative approach to ensuring that heritage assets are kept in use and do not fall into disrepair.” is so important that it should be included in Policy D3 policy box. It would be considerably strengthened if the words “seek to” were deleted.

Para. 4/5/42, bullet point 4: I fully support the sentence: “identify heritage assets that make an important contribution to the local character of the area and update our local list on a regular basis.” In any supporting document, Guildford’s Victorian heritage should be protected. Bright Hill close to the town centre is proposed to be developed with housing. Over-looking the site is a magnificent example of a Victorian school. It is a landmark building and locally listed. Also within the site is a locally listed public house. These two buildings should be preserved and the development sensitively designed with regard to these buildings. The views from the site over an AONB, as well as to Guildford Cathedral, should be protected for those walkers and drivers descending Bright Hill.

We object to policy D3 Historic Environment. This policy clashes with the strongly pro-development agenda of the rest of the plan and fails to address the contradiction. History is unamenable to improvement, so the policy should commit the Council firmly to protecting and preserving our heritage assets from development. Instead, the specific policy pledge to “support development” that might “enhance” heritage assets leaves wide scope for abuse in the form of destructive commercialisation and financial leveraging of relevant sites. This policy is based on the false premise that Guildford’s heritage is inherently in decay. This is a developer’s charter – a short step away from the idea that the historic environment needs to pay its way to be preserved. The Council’s aggressive reviews of Guildford Museum and the Electric Theatre support this interpretation. Whatever the “reasoned justification”, the actual policy wording in the blue box leaves too many loopholes. Development close to historical assets is harmful and should be expressly prohibited.
This policy fails to meet the requirements of NPPF paragraphs 126 and 131-133.

D3 Historic environment

How on earth can development enhance our heritage assets? Not NPPF paras 126 and 131-133.

Development adjacent to historic buildings or landscape damages those assets and should be prohibited.

I object to any suggestion that our heritage can be improved by development.

History is what it is..history, and historic buildings only need looking after, preventing decay, and GBC should support those who care for such properties and landscape.

Subtle improvements to access to the Museum and its links with the Castle do not need aggressive developments.

The Electric Theatre should remain a community asset, and rents based on what local, amateur groups, for whom it was created, can reasonably pay. GBC should never have considered selling it off. They should have spent some of the money wasted on useless sculptures around the Borough on improving these facilities, making the car-park more efficient and opening up the riverside to the general public.

GBC should not have spent a small fortune on improving their own offices at the expense of facilities for the public.

GBC should not have overspent on buying an office building at a price well beyond that agreed by the Council.

GBC have wasted our rates on pointless vanity projects.

1. POLICY D3

I OBJECT to the damage to the historic environment as a result of the scale of the proposed development (Policy D3)

I OBJECT to the local plan based on the impact it will have on the special countryside of the borough.

The proposed development at Garlick’s Arch (A43) will have a permanent impact on the character of the Ancient Woodland that surrounds the site on two sides and runs centrally through the site, which includes over 80 ancient oak trees.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

1. POLICY D3

I OBJECT to Policy D3 - Historic environment

I object to this policy as it is very weak and I do not think it is clear enough in its support for the conservation of the historic environment. It provides for development which will “enhance” heritage assets which I fear is a developer’s charter as it leaves plenty of room for abuse.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Object

Wording is woolly and ineffective. It needs to be stronger, and much more prominent.

I would add that any development close to historical assets is harmful and should be expressly prohibited. This policy fails to meet the requirements of NPPF paragraphs 126 and 131-133.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Object

The policy is weak and fails to get to the core issue of protecting our history and heritage against over development. The policy should protect and preserve our heritage assets and new development be sympathetic with it.

Wording need to be stronger, and much more prominent.

We would add that any development close to historical assets is harmful and should be expressly prohibited. This policy fails to meet the requirements of NPPF paragraphs 126 and 131-133.

I support the addition in paragraph 4.5.42, which recognises that “Historic landscapes are also undesignated heritage assets”. However, merely “considering” their local distinctive “through the Guildford and Surrey Landscape Character Assessments” is not enough. GBC’s Landscape Character Assessment (LCA) considers that the landscape of the Hog’s Back a key asset, which should be conserved.

Its landscape strategy states:

“The Hog’s Back Chalk Ridge landscape should be conserved, in particular the open nature of the landscape which forms a backdrop to the surrounding rural areas and Guildford, the wide and far ranging views from the many viewpoints along the ridge line and the sparse settlement pattern of traditional style and local materials.” (Page 41 - emphasis mine.)
This strategy has been disregarded in the Blackwell Farm site allocation (policy A26), which proposes to build over this open landscape and damage views from the ridge line. This policy should be strengthened to ensure that recommendations in the LCA are adopted.

1. I object to the threat the Local Plan poses to the historic rural village of Ockham and the blight on properties there. The plan calls for a village of 159 residences (with narrow lanes, no streetlights, very few pavements and many listed houses) to be subsumed into a 2,000+ dwelling development, with urban-style buildings up to five storeys high and a population density higher than most London boroughs.

I object to this policy as it is very weak and I do not think it is clear enough in its support for the conservation of the historic environment. It provides for development which will “enhance” heritage assets which I fear is a developer’s charter as it leaves plenty of room for abuse.

1. I OBJECT to the damage to the historic environment as a result of the scale of the proposed development (Policy D3)

I OBJECT to the local plan based on the impact it will have on the special countryside of the borough.

The proposed development at Garlick’s Arch (A43) will have a permanent impact on the character of the Ancient Woodland that surrounds the site on two sides and runs centrally through the site, which includes over 80 ancient oak trees.

5) I object to the threat the Local Plan poses to the historic rural village of Ockham and the blight on properties there. The plan calls for a village of 159 residences (with narrow lanes, no streetlights, very few pavements and many listed houses) to be subsumed into a 2,000+ dwelling development, with urban-style buildings up to five storeys high and a population density higher than most London boroughs.

As currently expressed, we do not consider Policy D3 to be consistent with the NPPF (paras 126 - 134) as the distinction between development that leads to “substantial” harm of a heritage asset as opposed to “less than substantial harm” is not made clear.

Paragraph 2 of draft Policy D3 states that works which would cause harm to the significance of a heritage asset, whether designated or non-designated, or its setting, will not be permitted without a clear justification to show that the public benefits of the proposal considerably outweigh any harm to the significance or special interest of the heritage asset in question.

Where there is “substantial” harm to a heritage asset the NPPF makes clear that the relevant test is whether the substantial harm is necessary to achieve substantial public benefits that outweigh the harm. However, where there is "less than substantial harm" the NPPF advises that the decision-maker should weigh the harm against the public benefits of the proposal.

We would suggest therefore that this distinction should be reflected in Policy D3 so that the second paragraph reads:

"Heritage assets are an irreplaceable resource and works which would cause substantial harm to the significance of a heritage asset, whether designated or non-designated, or its setting, will not be permitted without a clear justification to demonstrate that substantial harm is necessary to achieve substantial public benefits that outweigh the harm. Where the harm is assessed to be less than substantial this harm will need to be weighed against the public benefits of the proposal."

HISTORIC ENVIRONMENT

I, like many others, have been proud to have played an active part of the local community of West Horsley. Our village is proud of its 41 listed buildings, including the 11th century St. Mary’s Church and West Horsley Place, and it is therefore essential that we careful consider what will be appropriate for the well-being of the village, and these listed buildings, whilst planning the next phase of its history and development.

As you will be aware, both West Horsley, and neighbouring East Horsley, benefits from a number of historic individual buildings of quality and character, in particular the use of brick and flint. Any new housing proposed, in any location within the village, be it a larger proposed site or a small, single dwelling redevelopment, should therefore be of high quality design and materials, sensitively woven into the existing grain of the village. Permitting the bland ‘one style fits all’ of the volume house builders would be an unacceptable travesty.

I therefore SUPPORT Policy D3: Historic environment

I OBJECT to Policy D3 - Historic environment

I object to this policy as it is very weak and I do not think it is clear enough in its support for the conservation of the historic environment. It provides for development which will “enhance” heritage assets which I fear is a developer’s charter as it leaves plenty of room for abuse.

I object to the threat the Local Plan poses to the historic rural village of Ockham and the blight on properties there. The plan calls for a village of 159 residences (with narrow lanes, no streetlights, very few pavements and many listed houses) to be subsumed into a 2,000+ dwelling development, with urban-style buildings up to five storeys high and a population density higher than most London boroughs.

I object to policy D3 Historic Environment

This policy clashes with the strongly pro-development agenda of the rest of the plan and fails to address the contradiction. History is unamenable to improvement, so the policy should commit the Council firmly to protecting and preserving our heritage assets from development. Instead, the specific policy pledge to “support development” that might “enhance” heritage assets leaves wide scope for abuse in the form of destructive commercialisation and financial leveraging of relevant sites.

This policy is based on the false premise that Guildford’s heritage is inherently in decay. This is a developer’s charter – a short step away from the idea that the historic environment needs to pay its way to be preserved. The Council’s aggressive reviews of Guildford Museum and the Electric Theatre support this interpretation. Whatever the “reasoned justification”, the actual policy wording in the blue box leaves too many loopholes.

Development close to historical assets is harmful and should be expressly prohibited. This policy fails to meet the requirements of NPPF paragraphs 126 and 131-133.

I PART OBJECT, PART SUPPORT this policy

The policy appears reasonable.

However, conserving and enhancing the historic environment may be damaged by supporting ancillary development.

In historic locations (Chilworth Gunpowder Mills, the NT sites like Clandon Park or Hatchlands, Guildford Castle, Guildford Museum etc) this policy needs to have an overriding emphasis on protection rather than supporting development.

The emphasis on supporting some development – in the context of an authority that has already set in place aggressive reviews of Guildford Museum and the Electric Theatre – should be viewed with some caution.

The reasoned justification seems reasonable but it must be noted that it is the wording of the policy, rather than the associated explanation, that must be key.

This policy clashes with the strongly pro-development agenda of the rest of the plan and fails to address the contradiction. History is unamenable to improvement, so the policy should commit the Council firmly to protecting and preserving our heritage assets from development. Instead, the specific policy pledge to “support development” that might “enhance” heritage assets leaves ample scope for abuse in the form of destructive commercialisation and financial leveraging.

1. I object to the damage to the historic environment as a result of the scale of the proposed development (Policy D3)

I object to the local plan based on the impact it will have on the borough’s special countryside. The proposed development at Garlick’s Arch (A43) would have a permanent impact on the character of the Ancient Woodland that surrounds the site on two sides and runs centrally through the site, which includes over 80 ancient oak trees.

I OBJECT to the damage to the historic environment as a result of the scale of the proposed development (Policy D3)

I OBJECT to the local plan based on the impact it will have on the special countryside of the borough.

The proposed development at Garlick’s Arch (A43) will have a permanent impact on the character of the Ancient Woodland that surrounds the site on two sides and runs centrally through the site, which includes over 80 ancient oak trees.

I OBJECT to Policy D3 - Historic environment

I object to this policy as it is very weak and I do not think it is clear enough in its support for the conservation of the historic environment. It provides for development which will “enhance” heritage assets which I fear is a developer’s charter as it leaves plenty of room for abuse.

3) I object to the threat the Local Plan poses to the historic rural village of Ockham and the blight on properties there. The plan calls for a village of 164 residences (with narrow lanes, no streetlights, very few pavements and many listed houses) to be subsumed into a 2,000+ dwelling development, with urban-style buildings up to five storeys high and a population density higher than most London boroughs.

I object to the lack of consideration for the protection of heritage assets. There appears to be no recognition that the number of HGVs used during major construction either of infrastructure or housing has a huge negative impact on listed buildings due to shaking foundations and increase in pollution [and impact on brickwork/mortar etc].

POLICY D3 Historic environment

PART SUPPORT, PART OBJECT The policy appears reasonable. However, conserving and enhancing the historic environment may be damaged by supporting ancillary development. In historic locations (Chilworth Gunpowder Mills, the NT sites like Clandon Park or Hatchlands, Guildford Castle, Guildford Museum etc) this policy needs to have an overriding emphasis on protection rather than supporting development. The emphasis on supporting some development – in the context of an authority that has already set in place aggressive reviews of Guildford Museum and the Electric Theatre – should be viewed with some caution. The reasoned justification seems reasonable but it must be noted that it is the wording of the policy, rather than the associated explanation, that must be key.

The site has an abundance of wildlife, some of which are protected. It is home to many types of owls and bats, with the woods having cuckoos and woodpeckers. In addition there are regular sightings of badgers, deer and red kites. The development of the site will result in the loss of habitat. No wildlife report has been conducted on the site.

POLICY D3 - Historic environment

I OBJECT. This policy clashes with the strongly pro-development agenda of the rest of the plan and fails to address the contradiction. History is unamenable to improvement, so the policy should commit the Council firmly to protecting and preserving our heritage assets from development. Instead, the specific policy pledge to “support development” that might “enhance” heritage assets leaves ample scope for abuse in the form of destructive commercialisation and financial leveraging.

This policy is based on the false premise that Guildford’s heritage is inherently in decay. This is a developer’s charter – a short step away from the idea that the historic environment needs to pay its way to be preserved. The Council’s aggressive reviews of Guildford Museum and the Electric Theatre support this interpretation. Whatever the “reasoned justification”, the actual policy wording in the blue box leaves too many loopholes.

Development close to historical assets is harmful and should be expressly prohibited. This policy fails to meet the requirements of NPPF paragraphs 126 and 131-133.

1. I OBJECT to the damage to the historic environment as a result of the scale of the proposed development (Policy D3)

It appears that the historic nature of Guildford Town itself has somehow taken precedence over the historic nature of the villages, hamlets and wooded areas that surround it. I object most strongly to this. If the residents of Guildford Town really want to attract new business into the Town and wish to grow the Town into a larger urban area then that expansion must be concentrated on the Town itself and not shoved out to the Green Belt and imposed on those that live there.
In particular, Ripley is an historic village and a conservation area. Removing this village from the Green Belt will remove that protection and leave it open to further ad hoc development. Likewise, the proposed development at Garlick’s Arch (A43) will have a permanent impact on the character of the Ancient Woodland that surrounds the site on two sides and runs centrally through the site, which includes over 80 ancient oak trees.

I object to this policy as it is very weak and I do not think it is clear enough in its support for the conservation of the historic environment. It provides for development which will “enhance” heritage assets which I fear is a developer’s charter as it leaves plenty of room for abuse.

POLICY D3 Historic environment

PART SUPPORT, PART OBJECT The policy appears reasonable. However, conserving and enhancing the historic environment may be damaged by supporting ancillary development. In historic locations (Chilworth Gunpowder Mills, the NT sites like Clandon Park or Hatchlands, Guildford Castle, Guildford Museum, etc.) this policy needs to have an overriding emphasis on protection rather than supporting development. The emphasis on supporting some development – in the context of an authority that has already set in place aggressive reviews of Guildford Museum and the Electric Theatre – should be viewed with some caution. The reasoned justification seems reasonable but it must be noted that it is the wording of the policy, rather than the associated explanation, that must be key.

1. POLICY D3

I OBJECT to the damage to the historic environment as a result of the scale of the proposed development (Policy D3)

I OBJECT to the local plan based on the impact it will have on the special countryside of the borough.

The proposed development at Garlick's Arch (A43) will have a permanent impact on the character of the Ancient Woodland that surrounds the site on two sides and runs centrally through the site, which includes over 80 ancient oak trees.

I OBJECT, due to the congestion that development will cause to the local village roads and the lack of road infrastructure (Policy I1)

Our villages are already suffering from severe congestion for much of the day, for example the Newark Road & Rose Lane junction in the centre of Ripley and the A247 through West Clandon. The proposed development under the plan will cause greater congestion in and around our villages. The Plan does not provide an achievable strategy for improving capacity on these local roads.

Furthermore, many of the country lanes around the villages of Ripley, Send and Clandon are narrow and wide enough for only one vehicle at a time. In addition, the road surfaces are in a poor condition.

I OBJECT to the development proposed in the local plan, which will result in more traffic using these narrow roads and a further deterioration in the road surfaces.

Many of the affected villages, such as West Clandon, already suffer from traffic congestion. Further development around these villages will only result in more traffic and more parking problems.

With some 5,000 houses being proposed close to the village of Ripley, the roads serving the village will become even more congested. Cycling has become an ever popular past time, particularly at weekends hundreds of cyclists past through the villages on the way to the Surrey Hills. With no proper cycle lanes on the narrow local roads surrounding the village and with greater vehicle traffic being generated from these developments there is a real danger that there will be an increase in road accidents involving cyclists as a result of the development proposed under the local plan.

The narrow rural roads do not have proper pedestrian footpaths. The proposed significant levels of development will result in the road becoming ever more dangerous for pedestrians.
The council has a statutory obligation to protect the public and the additional traffic flows will bring added accidents, noise, pollution and injury of the public. In the case of West Clandon the Street often only has a narrow footpath on one side of the road making it very dangerous, especially when vehicles mount the pavements.

This policy as it is inappropriate and inadequate and fails to respond to the challenges raised by the proposed significant Green belt developments. The borough's infrastructure is already heavily strained. However the plan's determination to build large housing estates across the Guildford countryside significantly increases the need for infrastructure investment without securing the means for its provision. Placing housing in the established urban areas would reduce the need for enhanced infrastructure as would a more realistic housing number.

The policy wording says nothing about roads and traffic. The Council’s methodology for assessing traffic congestion - averaging it over periods of several hours and ignoring the effects of junctions - simply hides the problem, which will get worse as development proceeds. The schemes referred to in this policy will not solve existing congestion and the local road network has not been given sufficient consideration. Some proposed development locations would require highway schemes that are unlikely ever to happen. Adequate infrastructure provision is a pre-condition of sustainable development. But in this plan it is an afterthought buried away in Policy 11. By prioritizing greenfield over urban, brownfield regeneration, the plan creates insurmountable (and unnecessary) obstacles for itself. Common sense suggests a local plan should first assess the borough’s infrastructure capacity for sustainable development, and then tailor development accordingly. This plan, however, assumes infrastructure will follow on the heels of housebuilding as if by magic. It makes implementation critically dependent on providers outside the Council’s control and on the vagaries of CIL income. Instead of recognizing this as a key constraint, the plan is based on hope. It is also highly likely that developers faced with the imposition of large infrastructure requirements will go to court to invoke the NPPF provision that prevents authorities from imposing conditions that make a development non-viable.

Policy 11 requires the delivery of improvements to infrastructure in conjunction with development. I have grave concerns over the planning of the infrastructure requirements and that the projects identified will be implemented when required, if at all.

Despite the Garlick’s Arch site (A43) being a significant site for development, no infrastructure projects have been identified in the Infrastructure Schedule. Without improvements to the infrastructure prior to development, the existing residents’ in the locality will see their quality of life significantly deteriorate in many ways.

Many of the utilities in the Ripley and Send area are at, or very close to capacity, such as the electrical network and sewers. No plans to improve these services should mean no development of the Garlick’s Arch site.

Without proper planning and a commitment to fund new healthcare facilities, existing services such as the Villages Medical Centre, Send will have their services stretched and overwhelmed. Many of these services are already at capacity and suffering from funding cuts or freezes. Any further development without funding will place further stress upon existing health services.

Police services are seeing funding reduced. The development of the proposed 13,860 homes during the plan period will stretch the police services further and is unsustainable.

There is no provision of the increased capacity of Guildford hospital, where is this assessed and remedied?

1.1 I object to policy D3 “Historic Environment” on the grounds that;

1.2 This policy clashes with the strongly pro-development agenda of the rest of the plan and fails to address the contradiction. History is unamenable to improvement, so the policy should commit the Council firmly to protecting and preserving our heritage assets from development. Instead, the specific policy pledge to “support development” that might “enhance” heritage assets leaves wide scope for abuse in the form of destructive commercialisation and financial leveraging of relevant sites.

1.3 This policy is based on the false premise that Guildford’s heritage is inherently in decay. This is a developer’s charter – a short step away from the idea that the historic environment needs to pay its way to be preserved. The Council’s aggressive reviews of Guildford Museum and the Electric Theatre support this interpretation. Whatever the “reasoned justification”, the actual policy wording in the blue box leaves too many loopholes.

1.4 Development close to historical assets is harmful and should be expressly prohibited. This policy fails to meet the requirements of NPPF paragraphs 126 and 131-133.

WE OBJECT to Policy D3 - Historic environment

I object to this policy as it is very weak and I do not think it is clear enough in its support for the conservation of the historic environment. It provides for development, which will “enhance” heritage assets, which I fear, is a developer’s charter as it leaves plenty of room for abuse

8. I object to the damage to the historic environment as a result of the scale of the proposed development (Policy D3)

I PART OBJECT, PART SUPPORT this policy

The policy appears reasonable.

However, conserving and enhancing the historic environment may be damaged by supporting ancillary development.

In historic locations this policy needs to have an overriding emphasis on protection rather than supporting development.

I object to policy D3 Historic Environment

This policy clashes with the strongly pro-development agenda of the rest of the plan and fails to address the contradiction. History is unamenable to improvement, so the policy should commit the Council firmly to protecting and preserving our heritage assets from development. Instead, the specific policy pledge to “support development” that might “enhance” heritage assets leaves wide scope for abuse in the form of destructive commercialisation and financial leveraging of relevant sites.

This policy is based on the false premise that Guildford’s heritage is inherently in decay. This is a developer’s charter – a short step away from the idea that the historic environment needs to pay its way to be preserved. The Council’s aggressive reviews of Guildford Museum and the Electric Theatre support this interpretation. Whatever the “reasoned justification”, the actual policy wording in the blue box leaves too many loopholes.

Development close to historical assets is harmful and should be expressly prohibited. This policy fails to meet the requirements of NPPF paragraphs 126 and 131-133.

As any view of the area from the air will tell you, the Garlick’s Arch (A43) proposal would double the built area in the locality, and would irrevocably damage the character of the Ancient Woodland on the site, which includes over 80 ancient oak trees.

This area is an attractive area and forms part of one of the Borough’s most valuable assets – open green space. It should not be destroyed because a property developer is prepared to “gift” some land for a slip road.

The council often complains that a significant proportion of the Borough’s Green Belt. But this is a Good Thing! We should be grateful for it, appreciative of it, and protective towards it.

I object to the threat the Local Plan poses to the historic rural village of Ockham and the blight on properties there. The plan calls for a village of 159 residences (with narrow lanes, no streetlights, very few pavements and many listed houses) to be subsumed into a 2,000+ dwelling development, with urban-style buildings up to five storeys high and a population density higher than most London boroughs.

I OBJECT TO POLICY D3 (HISTORIC ENVIRONMENT):
• Supports overdevelopment: you can’t “enhance” history. Doesn’t ban private interests from trying to make aggressive profits from privatising, commercialising and Disneyfying public historic assets.
• Doesn’t ban development near historic assets.
• Ignores NPPF 126, 131, 132, 133.

POLICY D3 - Historic environment

I OBJECT. This policy clashes with the strongly pro-development agenda of the rest of the plan and fails to address the contradiction. History is unamenable to improvement, so the policy should commit the Council firmly to protecting and preserving our heritage assets from development. Instead, the specific policy pledge to "support development" that might "enhance" heritage assets leaves wide scope for abuse in the form of destructive commercialisation and financial leveraging of relevant sites.

This policy is based on the false premise that Guildford's heritage is inherently in decay. This is a developer's charter - a short step away from the idea that the historic environment needs to pay its way to be preserved. The Council's aggressive reviews of Guildford Museum and the Electric Theatre support this interpretation. Whatever the "reasoned justification", the actual policy wording in the blue box leaves too many loopholes.

Development close to historical assets is harmful and should be expressly prohibited. This policy fails to meet the requirements of NPPF paragraphs 126 and 131-133.

We write to make the following objection to the draft Local Plan on behalf of businesses and residents.

We note that the draft Local Plan still has no proposals to reduce the number of conservation areas. This is illogical and inconsistent with the other proposal in the draft plan to remove some villages from the Green Belt. The existing conservation areas should be reviewed, reduced in number, and concentrate only on those areas where they are integral to the character of the area. For example, the Guildford High Street should be retained (though even this has inconsistent buildings such as Sainsbury's). Some village centers, such as Shere, should be retained. Other areas, such as those outside of the Guildford High Street, where there are residential areas which have changed significantly from what they were originally, should have their conservation area status rescinded as it is no longer applicable. Any special buildings in these areas could be Listed if they are not already.

I OBJECT to Policy D3 - Historic environment

I object to this policy as it is very weak and I do not think it is clear enough in its support for the conservation of the historic environment. It provides for development which will “enhance” heritage assets which I fear is a developer’s charter as it leaves plenty of room for abuse.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

I OBJECT to the damage to the historic environment as a result of the scale of the proposed development (Policy D3)

I OBJECT to the local plan based on the impact it will have on the special countryside of the borough.

The proposed development at Garlick’s Arch (A43) will have a permanent impact on the character of the Ancient Woodland that surrounds the site on two sides and runs centrally through the site, which includes over 80 ancient oak trees.

It is vital that villages like West and East Horsley are maintained in their current size to maintain historical values that are fast diminishing. It is important that our young are able to continue to live in such beautiful, historic areas of England, where they can still see history for themselves.

   I object to the threat the Local Plan poses to the historic rural village of Ockham and the blight on properties there. The plan calls for a village of 159 residences (with narrow lanes, no streetlights, very few pavements and many listed houses) to be subsumed into a 2,000+ dwelling development, with urban-style buildings up to five storeys high and a population density higher than most London boroughs.

POLICY D3 Historic environment – I PART SUPPORT, BUT PART OBJECT The policy appears reasonable. However, conserving and enhancing the historic environment may be damaged by supporting ancillary development. In historic locations (Chilworth Gunpowder Mills, the NT sites like Clandon Park or Hatchlands, Guildford Castle, Guildford Museum etc.) this policy needs to have an overriding emphasis on protection rather than supporting development. The emphasis on supporting some development – in the context of an authority that has already set in place aggressive reviews of Guildford Museum and the Electric Theatre – should be viewed with some caution. The justification seems reasonable but it must be noted that it is the wording of the policy, rather than the associated explanation, that must be key.

1. POLICY D3

I OBJECT to Policy D3 - Historic environment

I object to this policy as it is very weak and I do not think it is clear enough in its support for the conservation of the historic environment. It provides for development which will “enhance” heritage assets which I fear is a developer’s charter as it leaves plenty of room for abuse.

development (Policy D3)

I OBJECT to the local plan based on the impact it will have on the special countryside of the borough.

The proposed development at Garlick’s Arch (A43) will have a permanent impact on the character of the Ancient Woodland that surrounds the site on two sides and runs centrally through the site, which includes over 80 ancient oak trees.

5) I object to the threat the Local Plan poses to the historic rural village of Ockham and the blight on properties there. The plan calls for a village of 159 residences (with narrow lanes, no streetlights, very few pavements and many listed houses) to be subsumed into a 2,000+ dwelling development, with urban-style buildings up to five storeys high and a population density higher than most London boroughs.

I object to policy D3 Historic Environment. This policy clashes with the strongly pro-development agenda of the rest of the plan and fails to address the contradiction. History is unamenable to improvement, so the policy should commit the Council firmly to protecting and preserving our heritage assets from development. Instead, the specific policy pledge to “support development” that might “enhance” heritage assets leaves wide scope for abuse in the form of destructive commercialisation and financial leveraging of relevant sites. This policy is based on the false premise that Guildford’s heritage is inherently in decay. This is a developer’s charter – a short step away from the idea that the historic environment needs to pay its way to be preserved. The Council’s reviews of Guildford Museum and the Electric Theatre support this interpretation. Whatever the “reasoned justification”, the actual policy wording in the blue box leaves too many loopholes. Development close to historical assets is harmful and should be expressly prohibited. This policy fails to meet the requirements of NPPF paragraphs 126 and 131-133.

I object to this policy as it is very weak and I do not think it is clear enough in its support for the conservation of the historic environment. I strongly object to the damage to the historic environment as a result of the scale of the proposed development (Policy D3)

We live close to Garlick’s Arch (A43) and this proposal would double the built area in the locality. I strongly believe that it would irrevocably damage the character of the Ancient Woodland on the site, which includes over 80 ancient oak trees.

I have noted that access to the fields have been restricted recently – a truck deposited a whole pile of soil at the access to the left of Burnt Common Lane back in June. I don’t know if there was right of way at this point of access, but it has been there as an established point of entry for a very long time.

Obviously there is going to be ill will generated and I am deeply saddened by this turn of affairs.

I OBJECT to the damage to the historic environment as a result of the scale of the proposed development (Policy D3).

I OBJECT to the local plan based on the impact it will have on the special countryside of the borough.

The proposed development at Garlick’s Arch (A43) will have a permanent impact on the character of the Ancient Woodland that surrounds the site on two sides and runs centrally through the site, which includes over 80 ancient oak trees.

I object to policy D3 Historic Environment. This policy clashes with the strongly pro-development agenda of the rest of the plan. The policy should commit the Council firmly to protecting and preserving our heritage assets from development. Instead, the specific policy pledge to “support development” that might “enhance” heritage assets leaves wide scope for abuse in the form of destructive commercialisation and financial leveraging of relevant sites. This policy is based on the false premise that Guildford’s heritage is inherently in decay. Any development close to historical assets which is harmful should be expressly prohibited. This policy fails to meet the requirements of NPPF paragraphs 126 and 131-133.

We support this policy. In terms of detailed policies for the protection and enhancement of the historic environment we understand that these will be prepared as part of the ‘Development Management Policies’ document and we look forward to contributing to this, particularly regarding continued protection for the Corridor of the River Wey, which we believe is a useful and important policy. We also look forward to assisting with the preparation of any Conservation Area Appraisals that the Council is undertaking which include or affect National Trust property, such as the River Wey, West and East Clandon and West Horsley.

The Guildford Vision Group, a group of concerned residents with very relevant commercial and professional experience, was established four years ago to press for reinvigoration of the town centre. Specifically we have called for six objectives:

1. Wider pedestrianisation of the town centre
2. Exciting new public space along a reinvigorated riverside
3. Redirection of vehicle traffic away from the centre
4. An integrated transport hub and interchange around the rail station
5. New town centre housing
6. A new and better East-West link

These are not unusual or unique objectives. They are the aim of a multitude of UK towns and cities, where many have taken positive action to bring them about. Many would envy Guildford its magnificent setting and the river running through the centre of town, yet Guildford has failed significantly over the past decades to take full advantage of its potential, especially its river. Riverside areas are taken up by surface car parks, buildings with their back to the water and suffer a legacy of piecemeal, unattractive light industrial development. Walnut Tree Close and Woodbridge Meadows, in particular, should be given over to well-planned housing and the scattered light industrial provision should be relocated to an expanded Slyfield where infrastructure and communications would be better suited.

We are thus disappointed by the lack of real ambition and aspiration in the Local Plan in respect of the town centre. There are no substantial coordinated policies or strategies in the Local Plan that will achieve the six objectives above. These objectives have received wide public support, as recognised by:

- Our 2013 document ‘Guildford on the Way’, a Vision for Guildford in 2030 (attached) as articulated by members of the public, Guildford residents and our members
- Comments and feedback from our public meetings over the past four years that have regularly attracted audiences of 200 and above
- Feedback from our frequent Newsletters to our supporters, interested parties and councillors

The council, in response to our lobbying, commissioned a masterplan for the centre. The masterplan was drawn up by Allies & Morrison, nationally-renowned masterplanners. The masterplan was approved by the council in March 2016 but is yet to be adopted. There is little recognition or acknowledgement of the masterplan in either the Local Plan policies, underpinning information or implementation strategies. We understand that the council propose an Area Action Plan (AAP) for the town centre once the Local Plan is adopted. We are concerned that the AAP will be subject to challenge if its aims are not foreshadowed in the Local Plan. We believe omission of any mention of the AAP could render the Local Plan unsound in this respect.

29 POLICY D3 HISTORIC ENVIRONMENT

29.1 I object to policy D3 Historic Environment

29.2 This policy clashes with the strongly pro-development agenda of the rest of the plan and fails to address the contradiction. History is unamenable to improvement, so the policy should commit the Council firmly to protecting and preserving our heritage assets from development. Instead, the specific policy pledge to “support development” that might “enhance” heritage assets leaves wide scope for abuse in the form of destructive commercialisation and financial leveraging of relevant sites.

29.3 This policy is based on the false premise that Guildford’s heritage is inherently in decay. This is a developer’s charter – a short step away from the idea that the historic environment needs to pay its way to be preserved. The Council’s aggressive reviews of Guildford Museum and the Electric Theatre support this interpretation. Whatever the “reasoned justification”, the actual policy wording in the blue box leaves too many loopholes.

29.4 Development close to historical assets is harmful and should be expressly prohibited. This policy fails to meet the requirements of NPPF paragraphs 126 and 131-133.

I OBJECT TO POLICY D3 (HISTORIC ENVIRONMENT):

• Supports overdevelopment: you can’t “enhance” history. Doesn’t ban private interests from trying to make aggressive profits from privatising, commercialising and Disneyfying public historic assets.
• Doesn’t ban development near historic assets.
• Ignores NPPF 126, 131, 132, 133.

POLICY D3 - Historic environment

I OBJECT. This policy clashes with the strongly pro-development agenda of the rest of the plan and fails to address the contradiction. History is unamenable to improvement, so the policy should commit the Council firmly to protecting and preserving our heritage assets from development. Instead, the specific policy pledge to "support development" that might "enhance" heritage assets leaves wide scope for abuse in the form of destructive commercialisation and financial leveraging of relevant sites.

This policy is based on the false premise that Guildford's heritage is inherently in decay. This is a developer's charter- a short step away from the idea that the historic environment needs to pay its way to be preserved. The Council's aggressive reviews of Guildford Museum and the Electric Theatre support this interpretation. Whatever the "reasoned justification", the actual policy wording in the blue box leaves too many loopholes.

Development close to historical assets is harmful and should be expressly prohibited. This policy fails to meet the requirements of NPPF paragraphs 126 and 131-133.

8. I object to the damage to the historic environment as a result of the scale of the proposed development (Policy D3)

The Garlick’s Arch (A43) proposal would double the built area in the locality, and would irrevocably damage the character of the Ancient Woodland on the site, which includes over 80 ancient oak trees.

POLICY D3 - Historic environment

We object to this policy as it is very weak and we do not think it is clear enough in its support for the conservation of the historic environment. It provides for development which will “enhance” heritage assets which we fear is a developer’s charter as it leaves plenty of room for abuse.

I OBJECT to the damage to the historic environment as a result of the scale of the proposed development (Policy D3).

I OBJECT to the local plan based on the impact it will have on the special countryside of the borough.

The proposed development at Garlick’s Arch (A43) will have a permanent impact on the character of the Ancient Woodland that surrounds the site on two sides and runs centrally through the site, which includes over 80 ancient oak trees.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

local community. In the case say, of Garlick's Arch there, is a sizeable woodland area, including ancient oak trees that will be destroyed.

They are all TPO'd and exist within an area of special scientific interests.

The impact of this loss will more exposure to the polluting effects of the A3 as well loss of vital habitat for wildlife. The NPPF allows for an overall housing target to be reduced to take account of situations like those at Garlick's Arch. Protecting wild life areas (Thames basin Heath SPA), areas of natural recreational resource, AONB, Scientific Interest Areas, Conservation areas, GB and flood risk parts; however, this Local Plan appears to completely ignore any of these requirements?

I OBJECT to Policy D3 - Historic environment

I object to this policy as it is very weak and I do not think it is clear enough in its support for the conservation of the historic environment. It provides for development which will “enhance” heritage assets which I fear is a developer’s charter as it leaves plenty of room for abuse.

POLICY D3 Historic environment

GROUNDS FOR OBJECTION conserving and enhancing the historic environment may be damaged by supporting ancillary development. In historic locations (Chilworth Gunpowder Mills, the NT sites like Clandon Park or Hatchlands, Guildford Castle, Guildford Museum etc) this policy needs to have an overriding emphasis on protection rather than supporting development. The emphasis on supporting some development – in the context of an authority that has already set in place aggressive reviews of Guildford Museum and the Electric Theatre – should be viewed with some caution. The reasoned justification seems reasonable but it must be noted that it is the wording of the policy, rather than the associated explanation, that must be key.

1. POLICY D3

I OBJECT to Policy D3 - Historic environment.

I object to this policy as it is very weak and I do not think it is clear enough in its support for the conservation of the historic environment. It provides for development which will “enhance” heritage assets which I fear is a developer’s charter as it leaves plenty of room for abuse.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

I object to the local plan based on the impact it will have on the special countryside of the borough.

The proposed development at Garlick's Arch (A43) will have a permanent impact on the character of the Ancient Woodland that surrounds the site on two sides and runs centrally through the site, which includes over 80 ancient oak trees. It is well documented that Oaks provided a habitat rich in biodiversity; supporting more life forms than any other native tree species- which each Oak hoting hundreds of species of insect, supplying many native birds with an important food source. Autumn mammals such as badgers and deer take advantage of the falling acorns. Development will see the destruction of these trees and further damage to the local biodiversity.

5. I object to the threat the Local Plan poses to the historic rural village of Ockham and the blight on properties there. The plan calls for a village of 159 residences (*with narrow lanes, no streetlights, very few pavements and many listed houses) to be subsumed into a 2,000+ dwelling development, with urban-style buildings up to five storeys high and a population density higher than most London boroughs.
*I would further object on the likelihood that such development in said or similar areas would eventually lead to the necessity of added facilities, amenities and infrastructure that could only serve in the destruction of our villages, rural areas and general way of life - envied by most of the rest of the world and thereby giving us one of the strongest tourist industries (and therefore large financial income) in Europe; damaging that would damage far more than just this borough’s income!

• Supports overdevelopment: you can’t “enhance” history. Doesn’t ban private interests from trying to make aggressive profits from privatising and commercialising public historic assets.
• Doesn’t ban development near historic assets.
• Development close to historical assets is harmful and should be expressly prohibited. Fails to meet the requirements of NPPF 126, 131, 132, 133.

6. I object to the damage to the historic environment as a result of the scale of the proposed development (Policy D3)

I object to the local plan based on the impact it will have on the special countryside of the borough.

The proposed development at Garlick’s Arch (A43) will have a permanent impact on the character of the Ancient Woodland that surrounds the site on two sides and runs centrally through the site, which includes over 80 ancient oak trees.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

I OBJECT to Policy D3 - Historic environment

I object to this policy as it is very weak and I do not think it is clear enough in its support for the conservation of the historic environment. It provides for development which will “enhance” heritage assets which I fear is a developer’s charter as it leaves plenty of room for abuse.

I object to POLICY D3 - Historic environment

- Supports overdevelopment: you can’t “enhance” history. Doesn’t ban private interests from trying to make aggressive profits from privatising and commercialising public historic assets.
- Doesn’t ban development near historic assets.
- Development close to historical assets is harmful and should be expressly prohibited. Fails to meet the requirements of NPPF 126, 131, 132, 133.

Due to the proposed development of Garlick’s Arch (A43) the built area in the locality would double. There would be irrevocable damage the character of the Ancient Woodland on the site, which includes a significant number of ancient oak trees. This is a resources that would be potentially lost forever.

I OBJECT to Policy D3 - Historic environment

I object to this policy as it is very weak and I do not think it is clear enough in its support for the conservation of the historic environment. It provides for development which will “enhance” heritage assets which I fear is a developer’s charter as it leaves plenty of room for abuse.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Attached documents:

I OBJECT to the damage to the historic environment as a result of the scale of the proposed development (Policy D3)

I OBJECT to the local plan based on the impact it will have on the special countryside of the borough.

The proposed development at Garlick’s Arch (A43) will have a permanent impact on the character of the Ancient Woodland that surrounds the site on two sides and runs centrally through the site, which includes over 80 ancient oak trees.

I OBJECT. History is unamenable to improvement, so the policy should commit the Council firmly to protecting and preserving our heritage assets from development. Instead, the specific policy pledge to “support development” that might “enhance” heritage assets leaves wide scope for abuse in the form of destructive commercialisation and financial leveraging of relevant sites.

This policy is based on the false premise that Guildford’s heritage is inherently in decay. This is a developer’s charter – a short step away from the idea that the historic environment needs to pay its way to be preserved. The Council’s aggressive reviews of Guildford Museum and the Electric Theatre support this interpretation. Whatever the “reasoned justification”, the actual policy wording in the blue box leaves too many loopholes.

Development close to historical assets is harmful and should be expressly prohibited. This policy fails to meet the requirements of NPPF paragraphs 126 and 131-133.

- I object to the damage to the historic environment - Policy D3 - as a result of the scale of the proposed

  - The proposed development at Garlick’s Arch (A43) will have a permanent impact on the character of the Ancient Woodland including over 80 ancient oak trees adjacent to the
  - The developments proposed will result in more traffic using the narrow roads in local villages and a further deterioration in the road Many of the affected villages, such as West Clandon, already suffer from traffic congestion. Further development will only result in more traffic and more parking problems.
  - Cycling has become an ever popular past time, particularly at weekends; hundreds of cyclists pass through the villages on the way to the Surrey With no proper cycle lanes on the narrow local roads and with greater vehicle traffic being generated from these developments, there is a real danger that there will be an increase in road accidents involving cyclists.

  - The narrow rural roads do not have proper pedestrian
  - The council has a statutory obligation to protect the public and the additional traffic flows will bring added risk of injury to the In the case of West Clandon, the Street often only has a narrow footpath on one side of the road making it very dangerous, especially when vehicles mount the pavements.

I object to this policy as it is very weak and I do not think it is clear enough in its support for the conservation of the historic environment. It provides for development which will “enhance” heritage assets. Taken together with the current Council policy of “sweating assets” I fear this policy leaves plenty of room for abuse.

The proposed development at Garlick’s Arch (A43) will have a permanent impact on the character of the Ancient Woodland that surrounds the site on two sides and runs centrally through the site, which includes over 80 ancient oak trees.
I object to Policy D3 - Historic environment

I object to this policy as it is very weak and I do not think it is clear enough in its support for the conservation of the historic environment. It provides for development which will “enhance” heritage assets which I fear is a developer’s charter as it leaves plenty of room for abuse.

I OBJECT to Policy D3 - Historic environment

I object to the damage to the historic environment as a result of the scale of the proposed development (Policy D3)

I object to the local plan based on the impact it will have on the special countryside of the borough.

Policy D3

“Guildford borough’s historic environment is intrinsically part of what makes Guildford the place it is. The historic environment includes many important heritage assets, both designated and undesignated, that contribute to the borough’s character, sense of place and quality of life”. Agreed. This is crucial to the identity of Guildford. One of the things that makes it feel historic is its firm boundaries. The Plan proposals elongate the town, detracting from its sense of separateness from its surrounding environment. In particular the proposals to the east (Gosden Hill and the nearby villages) mean that the definition between town and village becomes blurred and ends up as urban sprawl. It also represents a further increment towards being absorbed by outer London.

I OBJECT to the damage to the historic environment as a result of the scale of the proposed development (Policy D3). The proposed development at Garlick’s Arch (A43) will have a permanent impact on the character of the Ancient Woodland that surrounds the site on two sides and runs centrally through the site, which includes over 80 ancient oak trees.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

I OBJECT to Policy D3 - Historic environment

I object to this policy as it is very weak and I do not think it is clear enough in its support for the conservation of the historic environment. It provides for development which will “enhance” heritage assets which I fear is a developer’s charter as it leaves plenty of room for abuse.

I object to policy D3 Historic Environment

This policy clashes with the strongly pro-development agenda of the rest of the plan and fails to address the contradiction. History is unamenable to improvement, so the policy should commit the Council firmly to protecting and preserving our heritage assets from development. Instead, the specific policy pledge to “support development” that might “enhance” heritage assets leaves wide scope for abuse in the form of destructive commercialisation and financial leveraging of relevant sites. This policy is based on the false premise that Guildford’s heritage is inherently in decay. This is a developer’s charter – a short step away from the idea that the historic environment needs to pay its way to be preserved. The Council’s reviews of Guildford Museum and the Electric Theatre support this interpretation. Whatever the “reasoned justification”, the actual policy wording in the blue box leaves too many loopholes. Development close to historical assets is harmful and should be expressly prohibited. This policy fails to meet the requirements of NPPF paragraphs 126 and 131-133.

Damage will be caused to the ancient woodland of oak trees at Garlicks Arch site (A43) proposal, and the loss of green space and amenity

GBC has not published any details as how the 693 houses figure was arrived at, and has not applied any of the applicable constraints to it. This lack of transparency is not acceptable in a public consultation.

There is no schedule for Garlicks Arch (A43); the plan takes no account of the infrastructure required for this site and therefore it is not fit for purpose

I OBJECT to Policy D3 - Historic environment
I object to this policy as it is very weak and I do not think it is clear enough in its support for the conservation of the historic environment. It provides for development which will “enhance” heritage assets which I fear is a developer’s charter as it leaves plenty of room for abuse.

I OBJECT. This policy clashes with the strongly pro-development agenda of the rest of the plan and fails to address the contradiction. History is unamenable to improvement, so the policy should commit the Council firmly to protecting and preserving our heritage assets from development. Instead, the specific policy pledge to “support development” that might “enhance” heritage assets leaves wide scope for abuse in the form of destructive commercialisation and financial leveraging of relevant sites.

This policy is based on the false premise that Guildford’s heritage is inherently in decay. This is a developer’s charter – a short step away from the idea that the historic environment needs to pay its way to be preserved. The Council’s aggressive reviews of Guildford Museum and the Electric Theatre support this interpretation. Whatever the “reasoned justification”, the actual policy wording in the blue box leaves too many loopholes.

Development close to historical assets is harmful and should be expressly prohibited. This policy fails to meet their requirements of NPPF paragraphs 126 and 131-133.

We suggest that the section on the historic environment would be better placed within the "Protecting" section, rather than within the “Design” section as heritage management shares many common objectives and practices with other environmental protection policies.

Policy D8 mentions support for "development of the highest design quality”. We consider that this needs to be more clearly defined. Assessment of design quality and aesthetic appeal is of course highly subjective, but we would nevertheless recommend that at least some parameters for outlining a definition for “high quality” would be helpful in the implementation of this policy and suggest that this should be set out either in the supporting text or in an appendix. A possible approach could be for, “highest quality” to be required to satisfy the relevant "architectural interest" requirements that are commonly assessed as part of the Listing process for historic buildings (set out in “Principles of Selection for Listing Buildings”, DCMS, 2010).

The "Monitoring Indicators" table outlines that a "heritage asset register” is necessary: The Historic Environment Record can provide much of the necessary data which will be required to compile this and our Heritage Team would welcome the opportunity to assist.

We suggest this should be amended to "Developers will fund and deliver some infrastructure themselves......” rather than "Infrastructure providers will fund and deliver....."

This refers to “public” open space and yet the designation includes school playing fields to which public access is restricted.

I object to the damage to the historic environment as a result of the proposed development (policy D3).

Garlick's Arch (A43) proposal would irrevocably damage the character of the Ancient Woodland which includes 80 ancient oak trees and double the built area in locality.

I object to the Strategic Housing Market Assessment figure of 693 houses per annum in the borough being too high.

This figure has more than doubled a figure of 322 used in previous plans. As the council will not publish the SHMA report and the Plan's proposed growth is based on this, the figure cannot be verified.

I object to the local plan based on the impact it will have on the special countryside of the borough.

The proposed development at Garlick’s Arch (A43) will have a permanently damaging impact on the character and wildlife of the Ancient Woodland that surrounds the site on two sides and runs centrally through the site, which includes over 80 ancient oak trees.
References used by the Plan for the assessment of wildlife and habitats assessment is out of date – further species have been added to the BoCC 4 Amber list and Red list. Endangered species likely to be affected by the plans are:

Cuckoos
Turtle Doves
Lesser Spotted Woodpecker
Mistle Thrush
Grey Wagtail
Yellow Wagtail
Redwing (winter migrant)
Nightjar

No mention is given in the Plan or the Sustainability of specific rare and protected species resident or migrating through the area. There needs to be a full assessment of all those protected species that are likely to be in affected woodland, trees, hedgerows and heaths and those specifically found in the Thames Basin Heaths that could be dependent on these areas and their populations as wildlife corridors/stop overs/sources of food/breeding areas. Any assessment must include those species who might be difficult to see in normal circumstances – nocturnal species (bats, owls, badgers, foxes, nightjars), ground nesting animals, insects, invertebrates and birds (such as short eared owl – essentially invisible apart from when hunting), seasonal visitors, breeders and migrants, those with long gestations and short life spans, such as stag beetles, whose larvae remains under rotting trees and soil for up to 6 years before emerging as adults for a short period to mate and breed again.

I object to the threat the Local Plan poses to the historic rural village of Ockham and the blight on properties there. The plan calls for a village of 159 residences (with narrow lanes, no streetlights, very few pavements and many listed houses) to be subsumed into a 2,000+ dwelling development, with urban-style buildings up to five storeys high and a population density higher than most London boroughs.

I object to Policy D3 on historical environments. The policy is in contradiction to the idea of preserving our heritage and history, instead pledging to “support development” that might “enhance” sites of historical value, leaving room for commercial abuse and financial leveraging. This appears to put economic value over sentimental value, which is important in maintaining a sense of community. The site at Thatcher’s Hotel (Ref A36), for example, intrudes on the setting of Horsley Towers, a valuable site of local heritage.

<td>Gladman acknowledge the importance of the historic environment and the important role the Council has in ensuring its continued protection and enhancement. However, we believe that the policy as written at present is at odds with NPPF paragraph 134. Whilst it is clearly acknowledged what the NPPF states in paragraphs 132 and 133 about the substantial harm or total loss of a heritage asset policy D3 does not recognise the wording in NPPF paragraph 134. That talks about weighing the harm done to the heritage asset against the public benefits, the wording currently within D3, in our view goes a step beyond this.</td>

It is important that new development achieves a good level of design that respects existing character, however, the Council have a balancing exercise to ensure that they make the maximum productive use of identified sites in order to ensure that the most important ‘natural, built and heritage environments are protected.’ Including making maximum use of sustainably located sites within and adjoining existing settlements.

The Council must also be careful to ensure that unrealistic design standards or the constraints of historic character do not undermine the delivery of new growth.

A number of parts of the Borough do not have a Conservation Area Character Appraisal; including the Ripley Conservation Area.

To ensure the robustness of this policy the Council should produce an Appraisal which takes account of the proposed changes to the settlement boundary and planned future development.

With regard to undesignated assets these should be reviewed in light of the challenges posed by the current Plan Review process. Such assets should not prejudice the delivery of new development.

This feature is part of local distinctiveness in the borough. The proposed monitoring target does not work. It will have the perverse consequence of discouraging opposing insensitive development to avoid appeal. Suggest annual assessment of indicators by a borough design panel. If there is a desire to avoid duplication and bring all design, density and character policy into one place, it is suggested the sequence is changed so D4 becomes D2. This would assist a user of the Plan to follow the logic more clearly. The linkage between D4 (as currently labelled) and D1 should be made clearer. The expectation larger schemes will apply both policies should also be clearer.</td>

We object to this policy:

1. The policy should place much greater emphasis on residential development in the existing urban centres. In this way housing needs can be met without resorting to large developments in the Green Belt. There are urban areas in need of regeneration but these are ignored in favour of Green Belt development.
2. The policy should not be applied to the villages which should remain in the Green Belt. Unrestricted application of this policy to the villages intended to be inset will change their characters radically and for the worse. The development it encourages will increase traffic and congestion disproportionately and is not sustainable.

I object to policy D4 Development in urban areas and inset villages.

This policy that does not address the opportunity for building in the urban area. The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be “affordable”, but this does not provide any accommodation for low-paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy so-called “affordable” homes or pay an “affordable” rent. There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low-paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors (all of which this plan aspires to expand). The number of homes planned in the urban area is much too low. There is a glaring need for regeneration in many urban areas, particularly Guildford Town Centre but this is ignored in favour of building homes on greenfield sites instead. This will not address urban housing needs. It is also unsustainable, since building outside the town does disproportionate harm to road traffic, air quality and overstretched infrastructure. The plan envisages a large expansion of the retail sector, but this is hard to justify because the sector is in rapid and continuous decline.
In Compton conservation area one house is currently being built. Having experienced dust, noise, vibration, traffic lights, traffic congestion etc it is hard to see how building many more houses in other areas can avoid the same? Is policy D4 workable? Building houses is a noisy messy business or is this policy just paving the way to build the vast majority of houses on green fields?

Does planning in other areas including conservation areas have such protection? I agree that it should, but this level of protection should apply to all areas and not just in the town and inset villages.

Some areas may conduct their own landscape character assessment and this should be permissible.

Building is permitted in settlement areas in way of infill and this should be subject to the same level of protection.

Given the need for up to date design, i would say that anything written in 2004 is probably dated in terms of design (pink box)

82. This policy is another example of hypocrisy.

The proposal to inset villages will completely change them and nowhere is this more so than the Horsleys which appear to have been singled out for change from a low density village to an urban sprawl regardless of local concerns. A major constraint on the housing number is needed and the proposal to inset villages must be removed.

(The section on density has been removed and a reduced statement placed in Policy D4. We consider that the first part of the policy is unsound in relation to allocated sites because it is unjustified, ineffective and contrary to national policy.

The first part of the policy places conditions on the residential development of sites in the urban areas of Guildford, Ash and Tongham. We consider that these conditions are unnecessary in connection with allocated sites since it is the function of the local plan to weigh-up whether development in these locations is appropriate. If development is inappropriate, or there is doubt as to whether it would be, then they should not be allocated. We are concerned that the vagaries of the policy will allow the principle of residential development in these locations to be revisited. This would not provide the certainty for applicants required under our plan-led system.

We appreciate that in the case of non-allocated sites it would be necessary to stipulate these conditions. Allocated sites – those which are deemed sustainable by virtue of being allocated in the local plan – should be able to come forward without delay (NPPF, paragraph 15).

I OBJECT to Policy D4 - Development in urban areas and inset villages

The policy should place much greater emphasis on residential development in the existing urban centres. In this way housing needs can be met without resorting to large developments in the Green Belt. There are urban areas in need of regeneration but these are ignored in favour of Green Belt development.

The policy should not be applied to the villages which should remain in the Green Belt. Unrestricted application of this policy to the villages intended to be inset will change their characters radically and for the worse. The development it encourages will increase traffic and congestion disproportionately.

POLICY D4: Character and design of new development

Introduction

4.5.45a This added paragraph is welcomed.

POLICY D4 is welcomed as applying to all new development.

I support Policy D4 and paragraph 4.5.45a.

4.5.49a, 1st sentence

It is written: “We will expect development to respond to local character and history reflecting the identity of its context whilst allowing for innovative and forward thinking design.” The addition of the words ‘where appropriate’ at the end of this sentence would allow more flexibility. Whereas an innovative modern design can be a wonderful addition, it can also be a disaster in the wrong place. Modern designs which quickly deteriorate need to be avoided.

I object to the lack of flexibility in the sentence above.

Objection to Policy D4 Development in urban areas and inset villages

Development in urban areas should be vastly different to development in villages. In this the two are lumped together.

Most of Guildford's villages contribute to the openness of the countryside. Their buildings are generally low rise and widely spaced, giving views of the surrounding countryside. The nature of the Guildford countryside will be spoiled if the open character of its villages is damaged. Allowing urban density development within inset villages will damage villages. Development is possible in washed-over villages, either by using brownfield sites such as redundant garages and pubs, or permitted development, such as rural exception housing. It is these types of developments that will preserve the character of the countryside. D4 seeks to suburbanise the countryside. Indeed we have already seen the effect of this at ‘Cunningham Close’ and Beech Lane’ where the developers have been allowed to build in effect 3 story buildings using town density rates (NPPF para 86) Beech Lane was an ‘exception site’ yet problems with flooding which have been exacerbated by this build have been ignored

Policy D4: I object to the insetting of villages (meaning in fact, removal of villages from Green Belt protections) and the fact that they will suffer from higher density development and the resulting increase in traffic, increased use of infrastructure which is already under pressure. I object in particular to the insetting of West Clandon, Send and the Horsleys. This will have a detrimental impact on Green Belt openness and the views in and out of the AONB in direct contravention of Policy P1 and P2.

Response

Summary

I OBJECT. There are effectively two separate parts to this policy, both are flawed, and in the case on insetting, fatally flawed. In the case of urban development there are numerous flaws, including:

The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be affordable, but this does not provide any accommodation for low paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy “affordable” homes, nor can they pay the so-called “affordable” rent. There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors.

The number of homes planned in the urban area is too low – there is a need for regeneration in some areas, but this is ignored and instead the plan concentrates on building homes on green field sites, which does not meet the needs for housing within the town, especially with the centre. This is not a sustainable policy as building outside the town has a disproportionate effect on road traffic.

The plan envisages a large expansion of the traditional “bricks and mortar” retail sector, but this is a sector in long term decline.

Urban development

There is a fundamental flaw in the draft Local Plan, in that there are not enough dwellings planned in urban areas, in particular, Guildford town centre. This is where the demand for affordable homes is most acute, a fact which is recognised in much of the draft Local Plan. Yet the plan then envisages that most dwellings will be built outside the urban area, so there is no continuity in the plan – if the demand for affordable homes is most acute within the town, then is where these dwellings should be built. There are sites available, for example, various sites in Woodbridge Meadows, Walnut Tree Close (including the area around the station) and North Street. Yet the focus in these areas is to provide a very limited number of dwellings, with the emphasis on additional retail space and more commercial premises. Given the profound changes in traditional retail, this is not a sustainable policy. There have been many examples of bankruptcies amongst traditional retailers, the most recent examples being BHS and Austin Reed, and previously Woolworths, Comet, etc. The British Retail Consortium forecast that by 2020 up to one third of those now employed in traditional retail could lose their jobs, due to a combination of the move to the internet and higher costs, from business rates and increases in the minimum wage. Recent figures show that online sales are still growing quickly, with more than 13% of total retail sales now made over the internet. Nor does an expansion in traditional retail chime with the objective of attracting highly paid jobs to the area – the majority of jobs in retail are low paid, with zero hours contracts and usually a pay rate based on the minimum wage. So any expansion in traditional bricks and mortar retail would create a greater demand for affordable and social housing – exactly the reverse of what is needed.
Even the major grocery retail chains have been affected by changes in retail habits – Tesco, Sainsbury's, Morrisons, etc are closing some stores, with no major large stores planned. Banks and other financial institutions are still closing some branches, so changes in town centres still have some way to go – but none of these changes are recognised in the draft Local Plan, which envisages no limit to traditional retail.

There is another reason why the retail sector is unlikely to exhibit long term growth, and this is consumer debt, which has reached a level that the Bank of England have said could contribute to economic stability. This is likely to have a greater destabilising effect in the event of an economic downturn – and there will certainly be at least two of these during the life of the Local Plan. Retail spending simply cannot be maintained indefinitely at its current rate, and to plan for a large increase in consumer spending is irresponsible.

So there has to be a reappraisal of the urban development plans, with more homes provided in urban areas, in particular in the centre of Guildford, before there is any consideration of building outside the urban area. These are not separate policies to be considered separately, but hang together as part of a holistic plan. As the council own many sites in the centre, these could be made available for development within the first 5 years of the plan, with mixed housing on these sites, including new social housing, which is sorely needed. Affordable housing is simply not affordable to anyone on the minimum wage, there is a need for a considerable expansion of social housing, a need that is not adequately recognised in the draft Local Plan.

We object to policy D4 Development in urban areas and inset villages

Summary

There are effectively two separate parts to this policy, both are flawed, and in the case on insetting, fatally flawed. In the case of urban development there are numerous flaws, including:

- The plan envisages a large expansion of the traditional “bricks and mortar” retail sector, but this is a sector in long term decline.
- The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be affordable, but this does not provide any accommodation for low paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy “affordable” homes, not can they pay the so-called “affordable” rent. There is a great need for an expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors.
- The number of homes planned in the urban area is too low – there is a need for regeneration in some areas, but this is ignored and instead the plan concentrates on building homes on green field sites, which does not meet the needs for housing within the town, especially with the centre. This is not a sustainable policy as building outside the town has a disproportionate effect on road traffic.

In the case of insetting, the policy is fatally flawed, for two separate reasons.

- Firstly, it is based on an erroneous assumption. GBC justify the policy (in para 4.5.50) by suggesting, without any supporting data, that development in villages washed over by the green belt is at a lower rate than within Guildford town. This is not the case, and statistics from the ONS censuses of 2001 and 2011 show that this is assumption is incorrect. These statistics show that the growth rate in housing was higher in, for example, Effingham, a village washed over by the green belt than Merrow, a suburb of Guildford which is not washed over by the green belt. In fact, the rate of increase in housing stock in Effingham was faster than the average for the borough.

- Insetting has been based on the assumptions set out in the Green Belt and Countryside Study, but this is not referred to as part of the Evidence base. The analysis in this document was flawed to the extent that it is valueless. It has serious flaws in its methodology, includes subjective judgements, and thus its conclusions are flawed. These flaws are so serious that it should be removed from the evidence base that supports the Local Plan. However, removing the reference but retaining the decision process means that the decisions are based on flawed assumptions.

Urban development

There is a fundamental flaw in the draft Local Plan, in that there are not enough dwellings planned in urban areas, in particular, Guildford town centre. This is where the demand for affordable homes is most acute, a fact which is recognised in much of the draft Local Plan. Yet the plan then envisages that most dwellings will be built outside the urban area, so there is no continuity in the plan – if the demand for affordable homes is most acute within the town, then is where these dwellings should be built. There are sites available, for example, various sites in Woodbridge Meadows, Walnut Tree Close (including the area around the station) and North Street. Yet the focus in these areas is to provide a very limited number of dwellings, with the emphasis on additional retail space and more commercial premises. Given the profound changes in traditional retail, this is not a sustainable policy. There have been many examples of bankruptcies amongst traditional retailers, the most recent examples being BHS and Austin Reed, and previously Woolworths, Comet, etc. The British Retail Consortium forecast that by 2020 up to one third of those now employed in traditional retail could lose their jobs, due to a combination of the move to the internet and higher costs, from business rates and increases in the minimum wage. Recent figures show that online sales are still growing quickly, with more than 13% of total retail sales now made over the internet. Nor does an expansion in traditional retail chime with the objective of attracting highly paid jobs to the area – the majority of jobs in retail are low paid, with zero hours contracts and usually a pay rate based on the minimum wage. So any expansion in traditional bricks and mortar retail would create a greater demand for affordable and social housing – exactly the reverse of what is needed.

Even the major grocery retail chains have been affected by changes in retail habits – Tesco, Sainsbury’s, Morrisons, etc are closing some stores, with no major large stores planned. Banks and other financial institutions are still closing some branches, so changes in town centres still have some way to go – but none of these changes are recognised in the draft Local Plan, which envisages no limit to traditional retail.

There is another reason why the retail sector is unlikely to exhibit long term growth, and this is consumer debt, which has reached a level that the Bank of England have said could contribute to economic stability. This is likely to have a greater destabilising effect in the event of an economic downturn – and there will certainly be at least two of these during the life of the Local Plan. Retail spending simply cannot be maintained indefinitely at its current rate, and to plan for a large increase in consumer spending is irresponsible.

So there has to be a reappraisal of the urban development plans, with more homes provided in urban areas, in particular in the centre of Guildford, before there is any consideration of building outside the urban area. These are not separate policies to be considered separately, but hang together as part of a holistic plan. As the council own many sites in the centre, these could be made available for development within the first 5 years of the plan, with mixed housing on these sites, including new social housing, which is sorely needed. Affordable housing is simply not affordable to anyone on the minimum wage, there is a need for a considerable expansion of social housing, a need that is not adequately recognised in the draft Local Plan.

In the detail of Policy D4, it suggests that in urban areas and inset villages planning permission will be granted provided that a proposed development:

- “Ensures that the layout, scale, form, massing, height of buildings and structures, and materials relate to the site context and its surroundings;”.....

There are several other criteria listed and the Policy then goes on to elaborate criteria specific to inset villages, as follows:
“In addition to the above, proposals for new development within inset village areas will have particular regard to:

- The distinctive settlement pattern of the village and the important relationship between the built development and the surrounding landscape;
- Important views of the village from the surrounding landscape;
- Views within the village of local landmarks.”

There are numerous development sites proposed that mean that the first criterion cannot be met, as the developments proposed do not relate to the scale, form or massing of the site surroundings. For example, in West Horsley and East Horsley, there are number of sites where this does not apply. It is proposed that a total of 3.6 km² should be removed from the green belt, with a total of 533 houses proposed on sites in East and West Horsley on a total of 29.1 ha, an average density of 18 dwellings/ha. These proposed developments are not in scale or proportion to the existing villages, and the housing density is considerably higher than existing housing density. Effectively, if these developments were to proceed, East and West Horsley would merge and become a large urban area in the green belt, totally different in character to the existing villages, with the existing settlement pattern completely lost. Similar considerations apply to other proposed development sites, such as Flexford and Normandy. In this case, 1.3 km² would be removed from the green belt and a total of 1100 dwellings proposed on 67 ha, with an average density of 16.4 dwellings/ha. Again, the scale and form would overwhelm existing hamlets and villages, merging these to form another urban area in the heart of the green belt, with no consideration of the views of the settlements from the surrounding countryside, much of which has been given AONB status.

Thus the words of the policy statement D4 do not match the proposals contained in the draft local plan.

The “Reasoned Justification” for the policy consists of five paragraphs, 4.5.48 to 4.5.52. Of these, 4.5.48 and 4.5.49, 4.5.51 and 4.5.52 are not justifications for the policy, they are simply statements or further information. Paragraph 4.5.50 is the only attempted justification for this policy, but in fact this applies only to insetting. Paragraph 4.5.50 is factually wrong and so the justification for this policy does not bear close examination. Parts of this paragraph are taken in turn below, to show the inaccuracies this paragraph contains.

“Historically, development has been focused in the urban areas of Guildford, and Ash and Tongham only. Development in the villages has been very limited due to the Green Belt designation which previously washed over all but one of the villages.”

This depends on how development is measured. In terms of raw numbers, this may be true, but this would ignore the fact that urban area of Guildford town contains much of the housing in the borough. Taking the increase in housing stock between the censuses of 2001 and 2011 in a specific wards reveals a much more complex picture. The village and ward of Effingham, for example, had a higher rate of adding dwellings than the average for the borough and for at least some of the Guildford urban wards. Using census data collected by the ONS, between 2001 and 2011, the number of dwellings in Effingham increased by 6.6%, whereas for the borough as a whole it increased by 5.0%. Over the same period in Merrow, a ward within the urban area of Guildford, the number of dwellings increased by only 1.2%, whilst in Normandy ward the increase was 2.6%. This analysis has not been exhaustive, but it is sufficient to show that the opening statement in paragraph 4.5.47 is incorrect, and that in some cases, proportionally, considerably more development has occurred in green belt villages. It must be incumbent on GBC to assess the facts before making false statements such as this. Opinions are not facts. ONS statistics are open to all.

In the first three months of 2016, planning applications for 11 additional dwellings in Effingham have been made, in a village of approximately 525 dwellings. One of these applications has been reduced from 6 to 4 dwellings, whilst the other 5 have been approved. This shows clearly that development within villages washed over by the green belt can occur, and that organic growth is possible. There is no necessity for insetting.

“Fifteen villages are now inset from the Green Belt meaning that development is no longer, by definition, considered inappropriate”.

Guildford’s Green Belt boundaries were established in the Guildford Borough Local Plan 1987, so are well established. There has not been any justification for the extensive green belt review that accompanies the insetting of villages, or for the removal of these villages from the green belt. According to the NPPF, paragraph 83, green belt boundary changes should be made only in exceptional circumstances, as follows

“Local planning authorities with Green Belts in their area should establish Green Belt boundaries in their Local Plans which set the framework for Green Belt and settlement policy. Once established, Green Belt boundaries should only be altered in exceptional circumstances, through the preparation or review of the Local Plan. At that time, authorities should consider the Green Belt boundaries having regard to their intended permanence in the long term, so that they should be capable of enduring beyond the plan period.”

No exceptional circumstances have been demonstrated, with none given as justification in Policy D4 for the policy of insetting. Proposed green belt boundary changes are on a very large scale, as it is proposed to remove more than 6% of the existing area designated as green belt, and to create new green belt boundaries extending to more than 105 km. This is not a simple revision to the green belt, and a demonstration of exceptional circumstances is required for each change. This has not been done, not for a single proposed change.

Although Guildford Borough Council are in the process of producing a new Local Plan, this in itself is not enough to change Green Belt boundaries; the requirement to demonstrate exceptional circumstances still applies. According to a High Court judgement, Gallagher vs Solihull, issued March 30th, 2014, Case No. CO/17668/2013, there is still a requirement to prove exceptional circumstances – quotations below are from paragraph 125 of this judgement:

“However, it is not arguable that the mere process of preparing a new local plan could itself be regarded as an exceptional circumstance justifying an alteration to a Green Belt boundary. National guidance has always dealt with revisions of the Green Belt in the context of reviews of local plans…… and has always required “exceptional circumstances” to justify a revision. The NPPF makes no change to this.”

“No changes that would warrant an alteration to green belt boundaries have been demonstrated by GBC, their so called “sensitivity analysis” is shallow and subjective, and changes that may have occurred since the boundary was established was discussed. The changes proposed do not meet the standards set in this judgement. Instead, GBC maintain that it is housing need that creates blanket exceptional circumstances for changes proposed to the green belt. However, this is not the case. Following a meeting with local councillors and MPs in early 2014, Nick Boles wrote to Anne Milton MP to clarify the issue of exceptional circumstances and in this letter said:
“The written Ministerial Statement of 1 July 2013 set out the Government’s concern that some recent planning decisions have not accorded the Green Belt the level of protection that was the explicit policy intent of Ministers. It made clear that the single issue of unmet need – whether for conventional housing or for travellers sites – is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt and other harm to constitute the “very special circumstances” justifying inappropriate development in the Green Belt.”

These quotations show that the insetting process has considerable hurdles to overcome, including as it does the revision to Green Belt boundaries that accompanies insetting. Thus the most important questions are – did the flawed Pegasus “Guildford Borough Green belt and Countryside Study” show unequivocally that villages to be inset are not open villages, making no or a minimal contribution to the openness of the Green Belt; and that there were exceptional circumstances (other than unmet housing need) that justify a change to the Green Belt, creating a new boundary around all these villages – more than 105 km of new boundary? The Pegasus study did not do this, and this was just one of its many flaws (cf Annexe XX)

As shown above, development has occurred within villages, and the NPPF made it easier for additional development to take place within the green belt, via the provisions of paragraph 89, which specifically makes it easier for limited infill to occur and on a larger scale, for affordable housing to be built within villages washed over by the green belt. These provisions came into effect in 2012, when the NPPF was adopted and so the rate of increase in housing within villages is very likely to increase beyond that observed in the period between the 2001 and 2011 censuses.

It is clear from the most recent figures for planning applications to GBC in 2016 in Effingham that the pace of development within villages is changing, even with continued green belt protection. There is no requirement for insetting villages within the green belt, and the desire to increase development within the villages is not an adequate basis for insetting.

The final part of paragraph 4.5.47 is

“In accordance with national policy, the important character of these inset villages should instead be protected using other development management policies”.

This is not national policy, national planning policy is provided by the NPPF, and paragraph 86 of the NPPF is the relevant paragraph, which reads

“If it is necessary to prevent development in a village primarily because of the important contribution which the open character of the village makes to the openness of the Green Belt, the village should be included in the Green Belt. If, however, the character of the village needs to be protected for other reasons, other means should be used, such as conservation area or normal development management policies, and the village should be excluded from the Green Belt.”

There is thus no national policy that requires insetting. Instead, a judgement should be made for each village based on its contribution to the openness of the green belt. In fact, many of the villages proposed for insetting exhibit an open pattern of development, and so make an important contribution to the openness of the green belt, for example, Effingham. This has not been considered, other than in the flawed Pegasus report, and the examination of their approach reveals how this analysis was flawed. No further consideration has been given by GBC, and so GBC’s policy of wholesale insetting does not accord with national policy, as claimed.

In itself, there are many issues with insetting, and these include:

- According to the previous draft of the Local Plan, subject to the Regulation 18 consultation during summer 2014, insetting is based largely on the findings of the Pegasus study, “Guildford Borough Green Belt and Countryside Study. This report was very poor and various parts of the study criticised by many, including some borough councillors. It is perverse to continue with any recommendations of this study. In particular, a detailed review of this report for Effingham village showed that it was inaccurate and subjective.
- The settlement hierarchy was also subject to a detailed review and again this showed that scoring methods used were inaccurate and subjective.
Boundary changes are arbitrary, without an adequate detailed survey. There are no checks and balances to this, even though the positioning of the line can change the price of an acre of land from about £15,000 to over £1 million. There is no process to it, simply someone using a computer and a mouse – literally a mouse click can turn some land owners into millionaires. In some cases, the proposed boundary divides semi-detached houses, so that one is still inside the green belt and the other outside. In other cases, the boundary divides gardens, so that part of a garden is in, part out of the green belt. Due care and attention has not been given to producing proposed boundaries.

In many cases, boundaries proposed do not comply with the requirements of the NPPF, which is given in the NPPF, paragraph 85, final bullet point, which states “define boundaries clearly, using physical features that are readily recognisable and likely to be permanent”.

Given this NPPF definition, treelines, hedgerows, woodlands, etc should not be considered as potential Green Belt boundaries. In fact, in some cases proposed boundaries cross open fields, with no discernible features whatsoever. These are entirely inappropriate as a green belt boundary.

It should also be noted that GBC implicitly recognise that insetting is likely to lead to more development within villages on sites that are not identified in the draft Local Plan. But there is no recognition of this in the housing target. As is noted, insetting would mean that the rate of windfall development would increase, but GBC have not provided a proper analysis of windfall development (such as that provided by Mole Valley District Council) and they have failed to recognise a higher rate of windfall development in showing how the housing target will be met – even though, via Policy D4, they are planning for it. Windfalls should be deducted from the housing target, and the need for additional sites would thus be substantially reduced. Windfall development should be properly assessed and identified within the housing target, with an appropriate increase in the rate of windfalls in any villages that are inset.

THE BROWNFIELD OPPORTUNITY

Yes, we need a new Local Plan for our borough in order to provide a development strategy within which we can accommodate our local housing, economic and environmental needs. But first we must make 100% use of our urban brownfield before we consider building in the Green Belt or countryside. Paragraph 80 of the NPPF clearly states that Green Belt serves a key purpose, “to assist in urban regeneration, by encouraging the recycling of derelict land and other urban land”. In order to comply with central planning policy we need a brownfield strategy that states clearly. “We are committed to a brownfield first initiative whereby all applications on previously developed land are given fast track priority and every facility to promote development for residential purposes and employment purposes in order to satisfy the needs of local people. In parallel a zero CIL incentive should be given for all residential development on brownfield land. In response to the detailed objections received in the Regulation 18 process of the 2014 Local Plan and also in accordance with government policy a Guildford brownfield land register should be urgently compiled showing address, ownership, occupier, current use and detailed planning brief. A head of brownfield should be appointed at GBC with a clear briefing to deliver brownfield targets of housing and employment space.

GBC needs to accelerate the residential redevelopment at Woodbridge Meadows, Walnut Tree Close and the Station within the next 5 years. GBC needs to examine the residential development opportunity of the 25.7 acres of car parks in GBC ownership. We do not consider that the target of 1,172 homes in the town centre takes account of the need and demand for housing or the opportunities that brownfield sites present for increasing the residential development in the core of the town which will in itself help to sustain the retail core by increased economic impact. The Town Centre policy needs to maximise the potential for residential development on brownfield and include as an absolute minimum the 2,551 units proposed in by Allies and Morrison for the town centre included in the masterplan 2015 which has recently been adopted by GBC. The reality is that the Town Centre has the capacity for at least 5,000 homes. The additional target capacity of 5,000 could easily be provided within the following urban sites which have the capacity for 7,500 homes:

- 2,500 homes detailed in Masterplan 2015 including Woodbridge Meadows which can itself be increased substantially
- 500 homes at North Street
- 1000 homes on current GBC car parks (25 acres) and at the station
- 1000 homes saved in the urban area if 100% of students are accommodated on Surrey University campus (17 ha of car parks)
- 1000 homes at Slyfield on the 40 ha regeneration site
- 1000 windfall infill (50 per annum)
- 500 homes on brownfield sites in villages on sites of max. 1ha which do not impact Green Belt

I OBJECT to Policy D4 - Development in urban areas and inset villages

The policy should place much greater emphasis on residential development in the existing urban centres. In this way housing needs can be met without resorting to large developments in the Green Belt. There are urban areas in need of regeneration but these are ignored in favour of Green Belt development.

The policy should not be applied to the villages which should remain in the Green Belt. Unrestricted application of this policy to the villages intended to be inset will change their characters radically and for the worse. The development it encourages will increase traffic and congestion disproportionately.

D4 Development in urban areas and inset villages

See my comments under P2 and H1/H2

I object to any policy which proposes greenfield development over brownfield sites.

I OBJECT in the strongest terms for any Villages to be “inset”.

The need is for more truly affordable homes not mansions in the countryside, which is what will happen under GBC’s control.

The weak provisions of this policy for development within villages that have been ‘inset’ from the Green Belt by the proposals elsewhere in this draft Local Plan imply that the density of housing within the villages will inexorably increase over time, through a ratchet effect, destroying their rural character. The wording that supposedly protects such character against inappropriate development is extremely vague and weak, and needs strengthening.

I OBJECT to the fact that the same Policy is made to apply to the urban areas and the inset villages. The factors relating to the latter are quite distinctive and they merit their own Policy. I have no confidence that the three points relating specifically to the villages will be respected in practice, and I offer in evidence the proposals for Policy/Site A46, which show zero respect for the distinctive settlement pattern of the villages of Normandy and Flexford, nor for the views of the villages from the surrounding landscape, nor for the views within the villages of local landmarks, both natural and man-made.

POLICY D4 - Development in urban areas and inset villages

I OBJECT. This is a piously aspirational policy that does not address any of the obvious practical issues already touched on above:

- The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be “affordable”, but this does not provide any accommodation for low-paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy so-called “affordable” homes or pay an “affordable” rent. There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low-paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors (all of which this plan aspires to expand).
- The number of homes planned in the urban area is too low. There is a glaring need for regeneration in many urban areas, but this is ignored in favour building homes on green-field sites instead. This will not address urban housing needs. It is also unsustainable, since building outside the town does disproportionate harm to road traffic, air quality and overstretched infrastructure.
- The plan envisages a large expansion of the traditional “bricks and mortar” retail sector, but this is a sector in rapid and continuous decline.
- All the stated policy aims for “inset” villages will be negated by the excessive weight of new housing development proposed which would radically change their character forever. Against this disruptive background, it is barely relevant to talk about preserving views!

I OBJECT TO POLICY D4 (DEVELOPMENT IN URBAN AREAS AND INSET VILLAGES) • No commitment to expand social housing or accommodation for people who can’t afford so-called affordable homes. • Not enough new homes in urban areas, despite demand and need for urban regeneration and protection of Green Belt. • Objectives for inset villages cancelled out by plans for excessive housing growth there. • Too much emphasis on traditional shops, when a lot of this sector is in terminal decline.

Development should be commensurate to the size, character and function of existing settlements. Allocating a 100% increase in homes to West Horsley North is in no way commensurate to the size, character and function of this village. The local plan references the rich and varied mix of settlements and interspersed development.

We strongly object to both the change of and insetting of the Wood Street Village boundaries. We also ask you re recheck the Wood Street Village Map as common land is we believe incorrectly drafted in the local plan diagrams.

We believe increased insetting for all the villages should not be necessary as it removes protection from over development.

I OBJECT to Policy D4 - Development in urban areas and inset villages

The policy should place much greater emphasis on residential development in the existing urban centres. In this way housing needs can be met without resorting to large developments in the Green Belt. There are urban areas in need of regeneration but these are ignored in favour of Green Belt development.

The policy should not be applied to the villages which should remain in the Green Belt. Unrestricted application of this policy to the villages intended to be inset will change their characters radically and for the worse. The development it encourages will increase traffic and congestion disproportionately.

There has also been a relentless amount of infilling and house extension work. In particular, many bungalows and small houses have been torn down to make way for large houses. This should never have been permitted because older people end up living in large under-occupied houses or are being forced out of the area completely and this affects the character of the village.

POLICY D4 - Development in urban areas and inset villages

I OBJECT. This does not address any of the obvious practical issues already touched on above:

• The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be “affordable”, but this does not provide any accommodation for low-paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy so-called “affordable” homes or pay an “affordable” rent. There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low-paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors (all of which this plan aspires to expand).
• The number of homes planned in the urban area is too low. There is a glaring need for regeneration in many urban areas, but this is ignored in favour building homes on green-field sites instead. This will not address urban housing needs. It is also unsustainable, since building outside the town does disproportionate harm to road traffic, air quality and overstretched infrastructure.
• The plan envisages a large expansion of the traditional “bricks and mortar” retail sector, but this is a sector in rapid and continuous decline.
• All the stated policy aims for “inset” villages will be negated by the excessive weight of new housing development proposed which would radically change their character forever. Against this disruptive background, it is barely relevant to talk about preserving views!

Submission Summary

There are effectively two separate parts to this policy, both are flawed, and in the case of insetting, fatally flawed. In the case of urban development there are numerous flaws, including:

• The plan envisages a large expansion of the traditional “bricks and mortar” retail sector, but this is a sector in long term decline, and so is not sustainable even in the medium term.
• The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be affordable, but these will not provide appropriate accommodation for low paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy “affordable” homes, nor can they pay so-called “affordable” rent. There is a great need for an expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors.

- The number of homes planned in the urban area is too low – there is a need for regeneration in some areas of Guildford, but this is ignored and instead the plan concentrates on building homes on greenfield sites, which does not meet the needs for housing within the town, especially within the centre. This is not a sustainable policy as building outside the town has a disproportionate effect on road traffic. The analysis in Annexe 1 shows this to be the case when alternative methods of travel to work are analysed for two separate areas, one in the town centre and the second in a rural village.

   In the case of setting, the policy is fatally flawed, for three separate reasons.

   - Firstly, it is based on an erroneous assumption. GBC justify the policy (in para 4.5.47) by suggesting, without any supporting data, that development in villages washed over by the green belt has been at a lower rate than within Guildford town. This was not the case, and statistics from the ONS censuses of 2001 and 2011 show that this assumption is incorrect. These statistics show that the growth rate in housing was higher in Effingham, a village washed over by the green belt, than in Merrow, which is not washed over by the green belt. In fact, the rate of increase in housing stock in Effingham was faster than the average for the borough.

   - Secondly, setting has been based on the Green Belt and Countryside Study, but the analysis in this document was flawed to the extent that it is valueless. It has serious flaws in its methodology, includes subjective judgements, and thus its conclusions are flawed - see Annexe 2 for detailed analysis. These flaws are so serious that this study should be removed from the evidence base that supports the Local Plan.

   - Finally, although a flawed justification was provided for the setting of villages, this does not apply to all the areas selected for setting, many of which are not “villages”, such as Pirbright Barracks. These sites are listed in the text below. No attempt has been made to justify the setting of these sites, and in the absence of any justification they should remain in the Green Belt.

Urban development

There is a fundamental flaw in the draft Local Plan, in that there are not enough dwellings planned in urban areas, in particular, Guildford town centre. This is where the demand for affordable homes is most acute, a fact which is recognised in much of the draft Local Plan. Yet the plan then envisages that most dwellings will be built outside the urban area, so there is no continuity in the plan – if the demand for affordable homes is most acute within the town, then is where these dwellings should be built. There are sites available, for example, various sites in Woodbridge Meadows, Walnut Tree Close (including the area around the station) and North Street. Yet the focus in these areas is to provide a very limited number of dwellings, with the emphasis on additional retail space and more commercial premises. Given the profound changes in traditional retail, this is not a sustainable policy. There have been many examples of bankruptcies amongst traditional retailers, the most recent examples being BHS and Austin Reed, and previously Woolworths, Comet, etc. The British Retail Consortium forecast that by 2025 up to one third of those now employed in traditional retail could lose their jobs, due to a combination of factors. These included the continuation of the move to shopping via the internet and higher costs, from business rates and the introduction of the “living” wage. Recent figures show that online sales are still growing quickly, with more than 13% of total retail sales now made over the internet. Nor does an expansion in traditional retail chime with the objective of attracting highly paid jobs to the area – the majority of jobs in retail are low paid, and zero hours contracts are common. So any expansion in traditional bricks and mortar retail would create a greater demand for affordable and social housing – exactly the reverse of what is needed.

Even the major grocery retail chains have been affected by changes in retail habits – Tesco, Sainsburys, Morrisons, etc are closing some stores, with no major large stores planned. Banks and other financial institutions are still closing some branches, so changes in town centres still have some way to go – but none of these changes are recognised in the draft Local Plan, which envisages no limit to traditional retail.

There is another reason why the retail sector is unlikely to exhibit strong long term growth, and this is consumer debt, which has reached a level that the Bank of England has said could contribute to economic stability. This is likely to have a greater destabilising effect in the event of an economic downturn – and there will certainly be at least two of these during the life of the Local Plan. Consumer spending simply cannot be maintained indefinitely at its current rate, and to plan for a large increase is irresponsible.

Building the majority of homes outside urban areas is contrary to the advice of planners such as Lord Rogers, who has detailed the many advantages of increasing housing density in urban areas. The housing policy in this plan will result in a greater number of commuter journeys, creating more congestion, with an increase in air pollution across the borough.
This is examined in detail in Annexe 1.
So there has to be a reappraisal of urban development plans, with more homes provided in urban areas, in particular in the centre of Guildford. As the council own many sites in the centre, these could be made available for development within the first 5 years of the plan, with mixed housing on these sites, including new social housing, which is sorely needed.
Affordable housing is simply not affordable to anyone on the minimum wage, there is a need for a considerable expansion of social housing, a need that is not adequately recognised in the draft Local Plan.
In the detail of Policy D4, it is suggested that in urban areas and inset villages, planning permission will be granted provided that a proposed development:

• “Ensures that the layout, scale, form, massing, height of buildings and structures, and materials relate to the site context and its surroundings;”…..
  There are several other criteria listed and the Policy then goes on to elaborate criteria specific to inset villages, as follows:
  “In addition to the above, proposals for new development within inset village areas will have particular regard to:
• The distinctive settlement pattern of the village and the important relationship between the built development and the surrounding landscape;
• Important views of the village from the surrounding landscape;
• Views within the village of local landmarks.”

There are numerous development sites proposed that mean that the first criterion cannot be met, as the developments proposed do not relate to the scale, form or massing of the site surroundings. For example, the Horsleys. Here it is proposed that a total of 3.6 km² should be removed from the green belt, with a total of 533 houses proposed on sites in East and West Horsley on a total of 29.1 ha, an average density of 18 dwellings/ha. These proposed developments are not in scale or proportion to the existing villages, and the housing density is considerably higher than existing housing density. Effectively, if these developments were to proceed, East and West Horsley would merge and become a large urban area in the green belt, totally different in character to the existing villages, with the existing settlement pattern completely lost. Similar considerations apply to other proposed development sites, such as Flexford and Normandy. In this case, 1.3 km² would be removed from the green belt with a total of 1,100 dwellings proposed on 67 ha, an average density of 16.4 dwellings/ha. Again, the scale and form of new development would overwhelm existing hamlets and villages, merging these to form another urban area in the heart of the green belt, with no consideration of the views of the settlements from the surrounding countryside, much of which has been given AONB status.
Thus the words of the policy statement D4 do not match the proposals contained in the draft local plan.
The “Reasoned Justification” for the policy consists of five paragraphs, 4.5.45 to 4.5.49. Of these, 4.5.45 and 4.5.46, 4.5.48 and 4.5.49 are not justifications for the policy, they are simply statements or further information. Paragraph 4.5.47 is the only attempted justification for this policy, but in fact this applies only to insetting. Paragraph 4.5.47 is factually wrong and so the justification for this policy does not bear close examination. Parts of this paragraph are taken in turn below, to show the inaccuracies this paragraph contains.

“Historically, development has been focused in the urban areas of Guildford, and Ash and Tongham only. Development in the villages has been very limited due to the Green Belt designation which previously washed over all but one of the villages.”
This depends on how development is measured. In terms of raw numbers, this may be true, but this would ignore the fact that urban area of Guildford town contains much of the housing in the borough. Taking the increase in housing stock between the censuses of 2001 and 2011 in specific wards reveals a much more complex picture. Effingham, for example, had a higher rate of adding dwellings than the average for the borough and some of Guildford’s urban wards. Using census data collected by the ONS, between 2001 and 2011, the number of dwellings in Effingham increased by 6.6%, whereas for the borough as a whole it increased by 5.0%. Over the same period in Merrow, a ward within the urban area of Guildford, the number of dwellings increased by only 1.2%, whilst in Normandy ward the increase was 2.6%. This analysis has not been exhaustive, but it is sufficient to show that the opening statement in paragraph 4.5.47 is incorrect, and that in some cases, proportionally, considerable development has occurred in green belt villages. It should be incumbent on GBC to assess the facts before making inaccurate statements such as this. ONS statistics are open to all.
In the first three months of 2016, planning applications for 12 additional dwellings in Effingham have been made, in a village of approximately 525 dwellings. Although one of these applications has been reduced from 6 to 4 dwellings, another 5 have been approved which shows clearly that development within villages washed over by the green belt can occur, and that organic growth is possible. There is no necessity for insetting.

“Fifteen villages are now inset from the Green Belt meaning that development is no longer, by definition, considered inappropriate”.

Guildford’s Green Belt boundaries were established in the Guildford Borough Local Plan 1987, so are well established. There has not been any justification for the extensive green belt review that accompanies the insetting of villages, or for the removal of these villages from the green belt. According to the NPPF, paragraph 83, green belt boundary changes should be made only in exceptional circumstances, as follows

“Local planning authorities with Green Belts in their area should establish Green Belt boundaries in their Local Plans which set the framework for Green Belt and settlement policy. Once established, Green Belt boundaries should only be altered in exceptional circumstances, through the preparation or review of the Local Plan. At that time, authorities should consider the Green Belt boundaries having regard to their intended permanence in the long term, so that they should be capable of enduring beyond the plan period.”

No exceptional circumstances have been demonstrated, with none given as justification in Policy D4 for the policy of insetting. Proposed green belt boundary changes are on a very large scale, as it is proposed to remove 14.4 km2 from the Green Belt, more than 6% of the existing area designated as green belt, and to create new green belt boundaries extending to more than 105 km. This is not a simple revision to the Green Belt, and a demonstration of exceptional circumstances is required for each and every change. This has not been done, not for a single proposed change.

Although Guildford Borough Council are in the process of producing a new Local Plan, this in itself is not enough to change Green Belt boundaries; the requirement to demonstrate exceptional circumstances still applies. According to a High Court judgement, Gallagher vs Solihull, issued March 30th, 2014, Case No. CO/17668/2013, there is still a requirement to prove exceptional circumstances – quotations below are from paragraph 125 of this judgement:

“However, it is not arguable that the mere process of preparing a new local plan could itself be regarded as an exceptional circumstance justifying an alteration to a Green Belt boundary. National guidance has always dealt with revisions of the Green Belt in the context of reviews of local plans…… and has always required “exceptional circumstances” to justify a revision. The NPPF makes no change to this.”

“Exceptional circumstances are required for any revision of the boundary, whether the proposal is to extend or diminish the Green Belt.”

Whilst each case is fact-sensitive and the question of whether circumstances are exceptional for these purposes requires an exercise of planning judgment, what is capable of amounting to exceptional circumstances is a matter of law, and a plan-maker may err in law if he fails to adopt a lawful approach to exceptional circumstances. Once a Green Belt has been established and approved, it requires more than general planning concepts to justify an alteration.”

Each and every proposed change to the green belt boundary requires that exceptional circumstances be demonstrated, otherwise the changes are not lawful. This has not been done by GBC, not for any proposed change.

From paragraph 130 of this judgement

“In other words, something must have occurred subsequent to the definition of the Green Belt boundary that justifies a change. The fact that, after the definition of the Green Belt boundary, the local authority or an inspector may form a different view on where the boundary should lie, however cogent that view on planning grounds, that cannot of itself constitute an exceptional circumstance which necessitates and therefore justifies a change.”

“…..That, in his judgment, may now be so: but that falls very far short of the stringent test for exceptional circumstances that any revision of the Green Belt boundary must satisfy. There is nothing in this case that suggests that any of the assumptions upon which the Green Belt boundary was set has proved unfounded, nor has anything occurred since the Green Belt boundary was set that might justify the redefinition of the boundary.”

No changes that would warrant an alteration to green belt boundaries have been demonstrated by GBC, their so called “sensitivity analysis” was shallow and subjective, and no changes that may have occurred since the boundary was established were discussed. The changes proposed do not meet the standards set in this judgement. Instead, GBC maintain that it is housing need that creates blanket exceptional circumstances for changes proposed to the green belt. However, this is not the case. Following a meeting with local councillors and MPs in early 2014, Nick Boles wrote to Anne Milton MP to clarify the issue of exceptional circumstances and in this letter said:

“The written Ministerial Statement of 1 July 2013 set out the Government’s concern that some recent planning decisions have not accorded the Green Belt the level of protection that was the explicit policy intent of Ministers. It made clear that the single issue of unmet need – whether for conventional housing or for travellers sites – is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt and other harm to constitute the “very special circumstances” justifying inappropriate development in the Green Belt.”

This was reaffirmed more recently in a letter from Brandon Lewis to all English MPs, dated 07/06/2016. In this letter,
Brandon Lewis said

“The Government has put in place the strongest protection for the Green Belt. The Framework makes it clear that inappropriate development may be allowed only where very special circumstances exist, and that Green belt boundaries should be adjusted only where very special circumstances exist, through the Local Plan process and with the support of local people. We have been repeatedly clear that demand for housing alone will not change Green Belt boundaries.”

These quotations show that the insetting process has considerable hurdles to overcome, including as it does the revision to Green Belt boundaries that accompanies insetting. Thus the most important questions are – did the flawed Pegasus “Guildford Borough Green Belt and Countryside Study” show unequivocally that villages to be inset are not open villages, making no or a minimal contribution to the openness of the Green Belt; and that there were exceptional circumstances (other than unmet housing need) that justify a change to the Green Belt, creating a new boundary around all these villages – more than 105 km of new boundary? The Pegasus study did not do this, and this was just one of its many flaws. Some of these flaws are discussed in detail in Annexe 2.

As shown above, development has occurred within villages, and the NPPF made it easier for additional development to take place within the green belt, via the provisions of paragraph 89, which specifically makes it easier for limited infill to occur and on a larger scale, for affordable housing to be built within villages washed over by the Green Belt. These provisions came into effect in 2012 when the NPPF was adopted and so the rate of increase in housing within villages is very likely to increase beyond that observed in the period between the 2001 and 2011 censuses.

It is clear from the most recent figures for planning applications to GBC in 2016 in Effingham that the pace of development within villages is changing, even with continued green belt protection. There is no requirement for insetting villages within the green belt, and a desire to increase development within the villages is not an adequate basis for changing green belt boundaries to permit insetting.

The final part of paragraph 4.5.47 is

“In accordance with national policy, the important character of these inset villages should instead be protected using other development management policies”.

This is not national policy, national planning policy is provided by the NPPF, and paragraph 86 of the NPPF is the relevant paragraph, which reads

“If it is necessary to prevent development in a village primarily because of the important contribution which the open character of the village makes to the openness of the Green Belt, the village should be included in the Green Belt. If, however, the character of the village needs to be protected for other reasons, other means should be used, such as conservation area or normal development management policies, and the village should be excluded from the Green Belt.”

There is thus no national policy that requires insetting. Instead, a judgement should be made for each village based on whether the village is open, and if it makes a contribution to the openness of the Green Belt. In fact, many of the villages proposed for insetting exhibit an open pattern of development, and make an important contribution to the openness of the green belt, for example, Effingham. This has not been considered, other than in the flawed Pegasus report, and the examination of their approach included in Annexe 2 reveals how this analysis was flawed. No further consideration has been given by GBC to insetting, and so GBC’s policy of wholesale insetting does not accord with a national policy, real or imagined, as claimed.

In itself, there are many issues with insetting, and these include:

- According to the draft Local Plan, insetting is based largely on the findings of the Pegasus study, “Guildford Borough Green Belt and Countryside Study. This report was very poor and various parts of the study criticised by many, including some borough councillors. It is perverse to continue with any recommendations of this study. In particular, a detailed review of this report for Effingham village showed that it was inaccurate and subjective. This review is attached as Annexe 2.
- The settlement hierarchy was also subject to a detailed review and again this showed that scoring methods used were inaccurate and subjective.
- Proposed boundary changes are arbitrary, without an adequate detailed survey. There are no checks and balances to this, even though the positioning of the boundary line can change the price of an acre of land from about £15,000 to over £1 million. There is no process to it, simply someone using a computer and a mouse – literally a mouse click can turn some land owners into millionaires. In some cases, the proposed boundary divides semi-detached houses, so that one is still inside the green belt and the other outside. In other cases, the boundary divides gardens, so that part of a garden is in, part out of the green belt. Due care and attention has not been given to producing proposed boundaries.
- In many cases, boundaries proposed do not comply with the requirements of the NPPF, which is given in the NPPF, paragraph 85, final bullet point, which states “define boundaries clearly, using physical features that are readily recognisable and likely to be permanent”.

Given this NPPF definition, treelines, hedgerows, woodlands, etc should not be considered as potential Green Belt boundaries. In fact, in some cases proposed boundaries cross open fields, with no discernible features whatsoever. These are entirely inappropriate as a green belt boundary. The boundary proposed for Effingham village is reviewed in Annexe 3.

It should also be noted that GBC implicitly recognise that insetting is likely to lead to more development within villages on sites that are not identified in the draft Local Plan. But there is no recognition of this in the housing target. As is noted, insetting would mean that the rate of windfall development would increase, but GBC have not provided a proper analysis of windfall development (such as that provided by Mole Valley District Council) and they have failed to recognise a higher rate of windfall development in showing how the housing target will be met – even though, via Policy D4, they are planning for it. Windfalls should be deducted from the housing target, and the need for additional sites would thus be substantially reduced. Windfall development should be properly assessed and identified within the housing target, with an appropriate increase in the rate of windfalls in any villages that are inset.

Although a flawed justification was provided for the insetting of villages, this does not apply to all the areas selected for insetting, many of which are not “villages”. Some of these are adjacent to an Area of Outstanding Natural beauty (AONB) and in at least one case some areas of AONB have been included in the inset area. These areas include:
- HM Prison, Ripley Road, Send
- Keogh Barracks
- Pirbright Barracks (small areas of AONB included in inset area)
- Pirbright Institute
- Henley Business Park
- Garlick Arch

No attempt has been made to justify the insetting of these sites. In the absence of any attempt at justification there is no reason to inset these areas.

The housing policy in this plan will result in a greater number of commuter journeys, creating more congestion, with an increase in air pollution across the borough. This is examined in detail in Annexe 1.
So there has to be a reappraisal of urban development plans, with more homes provided in urban areas, in particular in the centre of Guildford. As the council own many sites in the centre, these could be made available for development within the first 5 years of the plan, with mixed housing on these sites, including new social housing, which is sorely needed. Affordable housing is simply not affordable to anyone on the minimum wage, there is a need for a considerable expansion of social housing, a need that is not adequately recognised in the draft Local Plan.

In the detail of Policy D4, it is suggested that in urban areas and inset villages, planning permission will be granted provided that a proposed development:

- “Ensures that the layout, scale, form, massing, height of buildings and structures, and materials relate to the site context and its surroundings;”

There are several other criteria listed and the Policy then goes on to elaborate criteria specific to inset villages, as follows: “In addition to the above, proposals for new development within inset village areas will have particular regard to:

- The distinctive settlement pattern of the village and the important relationship between the built development and the surrounding landscape;
- Important views of the village from the surrounding landscape;
- Views within the village of local landmarks.”

There are numerous development sites proposed that mean that the first criterion cannot be met, as the developments proposed do not relate to the scale, form or massing of the site surroundings. For example, the Horsleys. Here it is proposed that a total of 3.6 km² should be removed from the green belt, with a total of 533 houses proposed on sites in East and West Horsley on a total of 29.1 ha, an average density of 18 dwellings/ha. These proposed developments are not in scale or proportion to the existing villages, and the housing density is considerably higher than existing housing density. Effectively, if these developments were to proceed, East and West Horsley would merge and become a large urban area in the green belt, totally different in character to the existing villages, with the existing settlement pattern completely lost. Similar considerations apply to other proposed development sites, such as Flexford and Normandy. In this case, 1.3 km² would be removed from the green belt with a total of 1,100 dwellings proposed on 67 ha, an average density of 16.4 dwellings/ha. Again, the scale and form of new development would overwhelm existing hamlets and villages, merging these to form another urban area in the heart of the green belt, with no consideration of the views of the settlements from the surrounding countryside, much of which has been given AONB status.

Thus the words of the policy statement D4 do not match the proposals contained in the draft local plan.

The “Reasoned Justification” for the policy consists of five paragraphs, 4.5.45 to 4.5.49. Of these, 4.5.45 and 4.5.46, 4.5.48 and 4.5.49 are not justifications for the policy, they are simply statements or further information. Paragraph 4.5.47 is the only attempted justification for this policy, but in fact this applies only to insetting. Paragraph 4.5.47 is factually wrong and so the justification for this policy does not bear close examination. Parts of this paragraph are taken in turn below, to show the inaccuracies this paragraph contains.

“Historically, development has been focused in the urban areas of Guildford, and Ash and Tongham only. Development in the villages has been very limited due to the Green Belt designation which previously washed over all but one of the villages.”

This depends on how development is measured. In terms of raw numbers, this may be true, but this would ignore the fact that urban area of Guildford town contains much of the housing in the borough. Taking the increase in housing stock between the censuses of 2001 and 2011 in specific wards reveals a much more complex picture. Effingham, for example, had a higher rate of adding dwellings than the average for the borough and some of Guildford’s urban wards. Using census data collected by the ONS, between 2001 and 2011, the number of dwellings in Effingham increased by 6.6%, whereas for the borough as a whole it increased by 5.0%. Over the same period in Merrow, a ward within the urban area of Guildford, the number of dwellings increased by only 1.2%, whilst in Normandy ward the increase was 2.6%. This analysis has not been exhaustive, but it is sufficient to show that the opening statement in paragraph 4.5.47 is incorrect, and that in some cases, proportionally, considerable development has occurred in green belt villages. It should be incumbent on GBC to assess the facts before making inaccurate statements such as this. ONS statistics are open to all.
In the first three months of 2016, planning applications for 12 additional dwellings in Effingham have been made, in a village of approximately 525 dwellings. Although one of these applications has been reduced from 6 to 4 dwellings, another 5 have been approved which shows clearly that development within villages washed over by the green belt can occur, and that organic growth is possible. There is no necessity for insetting.

Guildford’s Green Belt boundaries were established in the Guildford Borough Local Plan 1987, so are well established. There has not been any justification for the extensive green belt review that accompanies the insetting of villages, or for the removal of these villages from the green belt. According to the NPPF, paragraph 83, green belt boundary changes should be made only in exceptional circumstances, as follows

“Local planning authorities with Green Belts in their area should establish Green Belt boundaries in their Local Plans which set the framework for Green Belt and settlement policy. Once established, Green Belt boundaries should only be altered in exceptional circumstances, through the preparation or review of the Local Plan. At that time, authorities should consider the Green Belt boundaries having regard to their intended permanence in the long term, so that they should be capable of enduring beyond the plan period.”

No exceptional circumstances have been demonstrated, with none given as justification in Policy D4 for the policy of insetting. Proposed green belt boundary changes are on a very large scale, as it is proposed to remove 14.4 km2 from the Green Belt, more than 6% of the existing area designated as green belt, and to create new green belt boundaries extending to more than 105 km. This is not a simple revision to the Green Belt, and a demonstration of exceptional circumstances is required for each and every change. This has not been done, not for a single proposed change.

Although Guildford Borough Council are in the process of producing a new Local Plan, this in itself is not enough to change Green Belt boundaries; the requirement to demonstrate exceptional circumstances still applies. According to a High Court judgement, Gallagher vs Solihull, issued March 30th, 2014, Case No. CO/17668/2013, there is still a requirement to prove exceptional circumstances – quotations below are from paragraph 125 of this judgement:

“However, it is not arguable that the mere process of preparing a new local plan could itself be regarded as an exceptional circumstance justifying an alteration to a Green Belt boundary. National guidance has always dealt with revisions of the Green Belt in the context of reviews of local plans…… and has always required “exceptional circumstances” to justify a revision. The NPPF makes no change to this.”

“Exceptional circumstances are required for any revision of the boundary, whether the proposal is to extend or diminish the Green Belt.”

Whilst each case is fact-sensitive and the question of whether circumstances are exceptional for these purposes requires an exercise of planning judgment, what is capable of amounting to exceptional circumstances is a matter of law, and a plan-maker may err in law if he fails to adopt a lawful approach to exceptional circumstances. Once a Green Belt has been established and approved, it requires more than general planning concepts to justify an alteration.”

Each and every proposed change to the green belt boundary requires that exceptional circumstances be demonstrated, otherwise the changes are not lawful. This has not been done by GBC, not for any proposed change. From paragraph 130 of this judgement

“In other words, something must have occurred subsequent to the definition of the Green Belt boundary that justifies a change. The fact that, after the definition of the Green Belt boundary, the local authority or an inspector may form a different view on where the boundary should lie, however cogent that view on planning grounds, that cannot of itself constitute an exceptional circumstance which necessitates and therefore justifies a change.”

“…..That, in his judgment, may now be so: but that falls very far short of the stringent test for exceptional circumstances that any revision of the Green Belt boundary must satisfy. There is nothing in this case that suggests that any of the assumptions upon which the Green Belt boundary was set has proved unfounded, nor has anything occurred since the Green Belt boundary was set that might justify the redefinition of the boundary.”
No changes that would warrant an alteration to green belt boundaries have been demonstrated by GBC, their so called “sensitivity analysis” was shallow and subjective, and no changes that may have occurred since the boundary was established were discussed. The changes proposed do not meet the standards set in this judgement. Instead, GBC maintain that it is housing need that creates blanket exceptional circumstances for changes proposed to the green belt. However, this is not the case. Following a meeting with local councillors and MPs in early 2014, Nick Boles wrote to Anne Milton MP to clarify the issue of exceptional circumstances and in this letter said:

“The written Ministerial Statement of 1 July 2013 set out the Government’s concern that some recent planning decisions have not accorded the Green Belt the level of protection that was the explicit policy intent of Ministers. It made clear that the single issue of unmet need – whether for conventional housing or for travellers sites – is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt and other harm to constitute the “very special circumstances” justifying inappropriate development in the Green Belt.”

This was reaffirmed more recently in a letter from Brandon Lewis to all English MPs, dated 07/06/2016. In this letter, Brandon Lewis said

“The Government has put in place the strongest protection for the Green Belt. The Framework makes it clear that inappropriate development may be allowed only where very special circumstances exist, and that Green belt boundaries should be adjusted only where very special circumstances exist, through the Local Plan process and with the support of local people. We have been repeatedly clear that demand for housing alone will not change Green Belt boundaries.”

These quotations show that the insetting process has considerable hurdles to overcome, including as it does the revision to Green Belt boundaries that accompanies insetting. Thus the most important questions are – did the flawed Pegasus “Guildford Borough Green belt and Countryside Study” show unequivocally that villages to be inset are not open villages, making no or a minimal contribution to the openness of the Green Belt; and that there were exceptional circumstances (other than unmet housing need) that justify a change to the Green Belt, creating a new boundary around all these villages – more than 105 km of new boundary? The Pegasus study did not do this, and this was just one of its many flaws. Some of these flaws are discussed in detail in Annexe 2.

As shown above, development has occurred within villages, and the NPPF made it easier for additional development to take place within the green belt, via the provisions of paragraph 89, which specifically makes it easier for limited infill to occur and on a larger scale, for affordable housing to be built within villages washed over by the Green Belt. These provisions came into effect in 2012 when the NPPF was adopted and so the rate of increase in housing within villages is very likely to increase beyond that observed in the period between the 2001 and 2011 censuses.

It is clear from the most recent figures for planning applications to GBC in 2016 in Effingham that the pace of development within villages is changing, even with continued green belt protection. There is no requirement for insetting villages within the green belt, and a desire to increase development within the villages is not an adequate basis for changing green belt boundaries to permit insetting.

The final part of paragraph 4.5.47 is

“In accordance with national policy, the important character of these inset villages should instead be protected using other development management policies”.

This is not national policy, national planning policy is provided by the NPPF, and paragraph 86 of the NPPF is the relevant paragraph, which reads

“If it is necessary to prevent development in a village primarily because of the important contribution which the open character of the village makes to the openness of the Green Belt, the village should be included in the Green Belt. If, however, the character of the village needs to be protected for other reasons, other means should be used, such as conservation area or normal development management policies, and the village should be excluded from the Green Belt.”

There is thus no national policy that requires insetting. Instead, a judgement should be made for each village based on whether the village is open, and if it makes a contribution to the openness of the Green Belt. In fact, many of the villages proposed for insetting exhibit an open pattern of development, and make an important contribution to the openness of the green belt, for example, Effingham. This has not been considered, other than in the flawed Pegasus report, and the examination of their approach included in Annexe 2 reveals how this analysis was flawed. No further consideration has been given by GBC to insetting, and so GBC’s policy of wholesale insetting does not accord with a national policy, real or imagined, as claimed.

In itself, there are many issues with insetting, and these include:

- According to the draft Local Plan, insetting is based largely on the findings of the Pegasus study, “Guildford Borough Green Belt and Countryside Study. This report was very poor and various parts of the study criticised by many, including some borough councillors. It is perverse to continue with any recommendations of this study. In particular, a detailed review of this report for Effingham village showed that it was inaccurate and subjective. This review is attached as Annexe 2.
- The settlement hierarchy was also subject to a detailed review and again this showed that scoring methods used were inaccurate and subjective.
- Proposed boundary changes are arbitrary, without an adequate detailed survey. There are no checks and balances to this, even though the positioning of the boundary line can change the price of an acre of land from about £15,000 to over £1 million. There is no process to it, simply someone using a computer and a mouse – literally a mouse click can turn some land owners into millionaires. In some cases, the proposed boundary divides semi-detached houses, so that one is still inside the green belt and the other outside. In other cases, the boundary divides gardens, so that part of a garden is in, part out of the green belt. Due care and attention has not been given to producing proposed boundaries.
- In many cases, boundaries proposed do not comply with the requirements of the NPPF, which is given in the NPPF, paragraph 85, final bullet point, which states “define boundaries clearly, using physical features that are readily recognisable and likely to be permanent”. Given this NPPF definition, treelines, hedgerows, woodlands, etc should not be considered as potential Green Belt boundaries. In fact, in some cases proposed boundaries cross open fields, with no discernible features whatsoever. These are entirely inappropriate as a green belt boundary. The boundary proposed for Effingham village is reviewed in Annexe 3.

It should also be noted that GBC implicitly recognise that insetting is likely to lead to more development within villages on sites that are not identified in the draft Local Plan. But there is no recognition of this in the housing target. As is noted, insetting would mean that the rate of windfall development would increase, but GBC have not provided a proper analysis of windfall development (such as that provided by Mole Valley District Council) and they have failed to recognise a higher rate of windfall development in showing how the housing target will be met – even though, via Policy D4, they are planning for it. Windfalls should be deducted from the housing target, and the need for additional sites would thus be substantially reduced. Windfall development should be properly assessed and identified within the housing target, with an appropriate increase in the rate of windfalls in any villages that are inset.

Although a flawed justification was provided for the insetting of villages, this does not apply to all the areas selected for insetting, many of which are not “villages”. Some of these are adjacent to an Area of Outstanding Natural beauty (AONB) and in at least one case some areas of AONB have been included in the inset area. These areas include:

- HM Prison, Ripley Road, Send
- Keogh Barracks
- Pirbright Barracks (small areas of AONB included in inset area)
- Pirbright Institute
- Henley Business Park
- Garlick Arch

No attempt has been made to justify the insetting of these sites. In the absence of any attempt at justification there is no reason to inset these areas.

Policy D4: I object to the insetting of villages (meaning in fact, removal of villages from Green Belt protections) and the fact that they will be suffer from higher density development and the resulting increase in traffic, use of infrastructure which is already under pressure. We object in particular to the insetting of West Clandon, Send and the Horsleys. This will have a detrimental impact on Green Belt openness and the views in and out of the AONB in direct contravention of Policy P1 and P2.

1. POLICY D4

I OBJECT to Policy D4 - Development in urban areas and inset villages

The policy should place much greater emphasis on residential development in the existing urban centres. In this way housing needs can be met without resorting to large developments in the Green Belt. There are urban areas in need of regeneration but these are ignored in favour of Green Belt development.

The policy should not be applied to the villages which should remain in the Green Belt. Unrestricted application of this policy to the villages intended to be inset will change their characters radically and for the worse. The development it encourages will increase traffic and congestion disproportionately.

Do you consider this section of the document; complies with the Duty to Cooperate? ( ), is Sound? ( No ), is Legally Compliant? ( Yes )

Policy D4 is a death knell for the low density character of many of the villages. With land values so high it is inevitable that there will be a large amount of infill building as large garden plots are divided and developed. The wording of the policy is so vague and subjective that the planning process will offer no firm barrier to development at all. e.g. "relate to the site context" or "has no unacceptable effect". Who is deciding these, certainly not the people living there? Consider re-wording this.

I also object to the proposal to move the village settlement boundary which has existed for several decades and when there is no justifiable reason to move it other than to make a smoother line on the village map! The boundary follows the readily recognisable boundaries of mostly residential properties on the edge of the village and a public footpath. Again, why on earth would you do this? Who benefits?

Furthermore, the Council do not appear to be listening or supporting the local residents’ wishes, which was reflected when over 700 local residents signed a petition objecting to the proposed settlement boundary change last year. This issue has widespread support throughout the entire local community, with old and young, clubs and societies all uniting behind our passionate belief that these fields should be left as they are, outside the settlement boundary.

These fields contribute to the rather unique, open character of the village and lie at the heart of village life and our community facilities which are open for all to use. The elevation of this land is the highest in the area, rising to over 32 feet above Kings Road, and so any potential development on it would dominate the entire local area and tower over the local houses and village community facilities.

Policy D4 states some vague guidelines for permitting development in urban areas and inset villages. The proposed monitoring indicator is the number of appeals allowed. This is monitoring the wrong thing; instead it should be monitoring the absolute number of appeals, as this is a better indicator of the quality of development proposals. This is a good example of the plan ignoring the needs of local communities outside Guildford and I object to the plan overall.

Policy D4

I OBJECT to the insetting of villages a.k.a. removal of villages from Green Belt protection. I OBJECT to the insetting of West Clandon, Send, East Horsley and West Horsley which will have a detrimental impact on the openness of the Green Belt and the views in and out of the AONB.

These neighbouring village developments will result in higher density development, additional road traffic and use of infrastructure in our area.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
All the stated policy aims for “inset” villages will be negated by the excessive weight of new housing development proposed which would radically change their character forever.

There are effectively two separate parts to this policy, both are flawed, and in the case on “insetting”, fatally flawed. In the case of urban development there are numerous flaws, including:

- The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be affordable, but this provides no accommodation for low paid workers, e.g. those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy “affordable” homes, nor can they pay the so-called “affordable” rent. There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors.
- The number of homes planned in the urban area is too low – there is a need for regeneration in some areas, but this is ignored and instead the plan concentrates on building homes on green field sites, which does not meet the needs for housing within the town, especially with the centre. This is not a sustainable policy as building outside the town has a disproportionate effect on road traffic.
- The plan envisages a large expansion of the traditional “bricks and mortar” retail sector, but this is a sector in long term decline.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

I object to policy D4 Development in urban areas and inset villages.

This policy that does not address the opportunity for building in the urban area.

The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be ‘affordable’, but this does not provide any accommodation for low-paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy so-called ‘affordable’ homes or pay an ‘affordable’ rent. There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low-paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors (all of which this plan aspires to expand).

The number of homes planned in the urban area is much too low. There is a glaring need for regeneration in many urban areas, particularly Guildford Town Centre but this is ignored in favour of building homes on green-field sites instead.

This will not address urban housing needs. It is also unsustainable, since building outside the town does disproportionate harm to road traffic, air quality and overstretched infrastructure.
The plan envisages a large expansion of the retail sector, but this is hard to justify because the sector is in rapid and continuous decline.

THE BROWNFIELD OPPORTUNITY

Yes, we need a new Local Plan for our borough in order to provide a development strategy within which we can accommodate our local housing, economic and environmental needs. But first we must make good use of our urban brownfield before we consider building in the Green Belt or countryside.

Paragraph 80 of the NPPF clearly states that Green Belt serves a key purpose, ‘to assist in urban regeneration, by encouraging the recycling of derelict land and other urban land’. In order to comply with central planning policy we need a brownfield strategy that states clearly. ’We are committed to a brownfield first initiative whereby all applications on previously developed land are given fast track priority and every facility to promote development for residential purposes and employment purposes in order to satisfy the needs of local people. In parallel a low CIL incentive should be given for all residential development on brownfield land.

In response to the detailed objections received in the Regulation 18 process of the 2014 Local Plan and also in accordance with government policy a Guildford brownfield land register should be urgently compiled showing address, ownership, occupier, current use and detailed planning brief

Perhaps someone could be appointed at GBC with a clear briefing to deliver brownfield targets of housing and employment space

GBC needs to accelerate the residential redevelopment at Woodbridge Meadows, Walnut Tree Close and the Station within the next 5 years

GBC needs to examine the residential development opportunity of the 25.7 acres of car parks in GBC ownership

I do not consider that the target of 1,172 homes in the town centre takes account of the need and demand for housing or the opportunities that brownfield sites present for increasing the residential development in the core of the town which will in itself help to sustain the retail core by increased economic impact.

The Town Centre policy needs to maximise the potential for residential development on brownfield and include as an absolute minimum the 2,551 units proposed in by Allies and Morrison for the town centre included in the masterplan 2015 which has recently been adopted by GBC. The reality is that the Town Centre has the capacity for significantly more homes. See details on GGG website - Guildford Greenbelt Group.

POLICY D4

I OBJECT to Policy D4 - Development in urban areas and inset villages

The policy should place much greater emphasis on residential development in the existing urban centres. In this way housing needs can be met without resorting to large developments in the Green Belt. There are urban areas in need of regeneration but these are ignored in favour of Green Belt development.
The policy should not be applied to the villages which should remain in the Green Belt. Unrestricted application of this policy to the villages intended to be inset will change their characters radically and for the worse. The development it encourages will increase traffic and congestion disproportionately.

I object to policy D4 Development in urban areas and inset villages. This policy that does not address the opportunity for building in the urban area. There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low-paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors (all of which this plan aspires to expand). The number of homes planned in the urban area is much too low. There is a glaring need for regeneration in many urban areas, particularly Guildford Town Centre but this is ignored in favour of building homes on green-field sites instead. This will not address urban housing needs. It is also unsustainable, since building outside the town does disproportionate harm to road traffic, air quality and overstretched infrastructure. The plan envisages a large expansion of the retail sector, this sector is in rapid and continuous decline.

I support the more realistic view taken as to the redefinition of some of the villages in the Green Belt. Of particular interest is the village of Effingham where for some 10 years, through a number of GBC consultation documents arguments have been presented suggesting that instead of the "washed over" Green Belt designation given to villages that each settlement should be surveyed and village boundaries and the relationship to the Green Belt needed to be reconsidered. Pleased to note that exercise has now been undertaken with the result that a site in Church Street can now be more appropriately assessed for residential development.

I object to policy D4 Development in urban areas and inset villages

Summary

There are effectively two separate parts to this policy, both are flawed, and in the case on insetting, fatally flawed. In the case of urban development there are numerous flaws, including:

- The plan envisages a large expansion of the traditional “bricks and mortar” retail sector, but this is a sector in long term decline.
- The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be affordable, but this does not provide any accommodation for low paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy “affordable” homes, not can they pay the so-called “affordable” rent. There is a great need for an expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors.
- The number of homes planned in the urban area is too low – there is a need for regeneration in some areas, but this is ignored and instead the plan concentrates on building homes on green field sites, which does not meet the needs for housing within the town, especially with the centre. This is not a sustainable policy as building outside the town has a disproportionate effect on road traffic.

In the case of insetting, the policy is fatally flawed, for two separate reasons.

- Firstly, it is based on an erroneous assumption. GBC justify the policy (in para 4.5.50) by suggesting, without any supporting data, that development in villages washed over by the green belt is at a lower rate than within Guildford town. This is not the case, and statistics from the ONS censuses of 2001 and 2011 show that this is assumption is incorrect. These statistics show that the growth rate in housing was higher in, for example, Effingham, a village washed over by the green belt than Merrow, a suburb of Guildford which is not washed over by the green belt. In fact, the rate of increase in housing stock in Effingham was faster than the average for the borough.
- Insetting has been based on the assumptions set out in the Green Belt and Countryside Study, but this is not referred to as part of the Evidence base. The analysis in this document was flawed to the extent that it is valueless. It has serious flaws in its methodology, includes subjective judgements, and thus its conclusions are flawed. These flaws are so serious that it should be removed from the evidence base that supports the Local Plan. However, removing the reference but retaining the decision process means that the decisions are based on flawed assumptions.

Urban development

There is a fundamental flaw in the draft Local Plan, in that there are not enough dwellings planned in urban areas, in particular, Guildford town centre. This is where the demand for affordable homes is most acute, a fact which is recognised in much of the draft Local Plan. Yet the plan then envisages that most dwellings will be built outside the urban area, so there is no continuity in the plan – if the demand for affordable homes is most acute within the town, then is where these dwellings should be built. There are sites available, for example, various sites in Woodbridge Meadows, Walnut Tree Close (including the area around the station) and North Street. Yet the focus in these areas is to provide a very limited number of dwellings, with the emphasis on additional retail space and more commercial premises. Given the profound changes in traditional retail, this is not a sustainable policy. There have been many examples of bankruptcies amongst traditional retailers, the most recent examples being BHS and Austin Reed, and previously Woolworths, Comet, etc. The British Retail Consortium forecast that by 2020 up to one third of those now employed in traditional retail could lose their jobs, due to a combination of the move to the internet and higher costs, from business rates and increases in the minimum wage. Recent figures show that online sales are still growing quickly, with more than 13% of total retail sales now made over the internet. Nor does an expansion in traditional retail chime with the objective of attracting highly paid jobs to the area – the majority of jobs in retail are low paid, with zero hours contracts and usually a pay rate based on the minimum wage. So any expansion in traditional bricks and mortar retail would create a greater demand for affordable and social housing – exactly the reverse of what is needed.

Even the major grocery retail chains have been affected by changes in retail habits – Tesco, Sainsburys, Morrisons, etc are closing some stores, with no major large stores planned. Banks and other financial institutions are still closing some branches, so changes in town centres still have some way to go – but none of these changes are recognised in the draft Local Plan, which envisages no limit to traditional retail.

There is another reason why the retail sector is unlikely to exhibit long term growth, and this is consumer debt, which has reached a level that the Bank of England have said could contribute to economic stability. This is likely to have a greater destabilising effect in the event of an economic downturn – and there will certainly be at least two of these during the life of the Local Plan. Retail spending simply cannot be maintained indefinitely at its current rate, and to plan for a large increase in consumer spending is irresponsible.

So there has to be a reappraisal of the urban development plans, with more homes provided in urban areas, in particular in the centre of Guildford, before there is any consideration of building outside the urban area. These are not separate policies to be considered separately, but hang together as part of a holistic plan. As the council own many sites in the centre, these could be made available for development within the first 5 years of the plan, with mixed housing on these sites, including new social housing, which is sorely needed. Affordable housing is simply not affordable to anyone on the minimum wage, there is a need for a considerable expansion of social housing, a need that is not adequately recognised in the draft Local Plan.

In the detail of Policy D4, it suggests that in urban areas and inset villages planning permission will be granted provided that a proposed development:

- “Ensures that the layout, scale, form, massing, height of buildings and structures, and materials relate to the site context and its surroundings;”.....

There are several other criteria listed and the Policy then goes on to elaborate criteria specific to inset villages, as follows:

“In addition to the above, proposals for new development within inset village areas will have particular regard to:

- The distinctive settlement pattern of the village and the important relationship between the built development and the surrounding landscape;
- Important views of the village from the surrounding landscape;
- Views within the village of local landmarks.”

There are numerous development sites proposed that mean that the first criterion cannot be met, as the developments proposed do not relate to the scale, form or massing of the site surroundings. For example, in West Horsley and East Horsley, there are number of sites where this does not apply. It is proposed that a total of 3.6 km² should be removed from the green belt, with a total of 533 houses proposed on sites in East and West Horsley on a total of 29.1 ha, an average density of 18 dwellings/ha. These proposed developments are not in scale or proportion to the existing villages, and the housing density is considerably higher than existing housing density. Effectively, if these developments were to proceed, East and West Horsley would merge and become a large urban area in the green belt, totally different in character to the existing villages, with the existing settlement pattern completely lost. Similar considerations apply to other proposed development sites, such as Flexford and Normandy. In this case, 1.3 km² would be removed from the green belt and a total of 1100 dwellings proposed on 67 ha, with an average density of 16.4 dwellings/ha. Again, the scale and form would overwhelm existing hamlets and villages, merging these to form another urban area in the heart of the green belt, with no consideration of the views of the settlements from the surrounding countryside, much of which has been given AONB status.

Thus the words of the policy statement D4 do not match the proposals contained in the draft local plan.

The “Reasoned Justification” for the policy consists of five paragraphs, 4.5.48 to 4.5.52. Of these, 4.5.48 and 4.5.49, 4.5.51 and 4.5.52 are not justifications for the policy, they are simply statements or further information. Paragraph 4.5.50 is the only attempted justification for this policy, but in fact this applies only to insetting. Paragraph 4.5.50 is factually wrong and so the justification for this policy does not bear close examination. Parts of this paragraph are taken in turn below, to show the inaccuracies this paragraph contains.

“Historically, development has been focused in the urban areas of Guildford, and Ash and Tongham only. Development in the villages has been very limited due to the Green Belt designation which previously washed over all but one of the villages.”

This depends on how development is measured. In terms of raw numbers, this may be true, but this would ignore the fact that urban area of Guildford town contains much of the housing in the borough. Taking the increase in housing stock between the censuses of 2001 and 2011 in a specific wards reveals a much more complex picture. The village and ward of Effingham, for example, had a higher rate of adding dwellings than the average for the borough and for at least some of the Guildford urban wards. Using census data collected by the ONS, between 2001 and 2011, the number of dwellings in Effingham increased by 6.6%, whereas for the borough as a whole it increased by 5.0%. Over the same period in Merrow, a ward within the urban area of Guildford, the number of dwellings increased by only 1.2%, whilst in Normandy ward the increase was 2.6%. This analysis has not been exhaustive, but it is sufficient to show that the opening statement in paragraph 4.5.47 is incorrect, and that in some cases, proportionally, considerably more development has occurred in green belt villages. It must be incumbent on GBC to assess the facts before making false statements such as this.

Opinions are not facts. ONS statistics are open to all.

In the first three months of 2016, planning applications for 11 additional dwellings in Effingham have been made, in a village of approximately 525 dwellings. One of these applications has been reduced from 6 to 4 dwellings, whilst the other 5 have been approved. This shows clearly that development within villages washed over by the green belt can occur, and that organic growth is possible. There is no necessity for insetting.

“Fifteen villages are now inset from the Green Belt meaning that development is no longer, by definition, considered inappropriate”.

Guildford’s Green Belt boundaries were established in the Guildford Borough Local Plan 1987, so are well established. There has not been any justification for the extensive green belt review that accompanies the insetting of villages, or for the removal of these villages from the green belt. According to the NPPF, paragraph 83, green belt boundary changes should be made only in exceptional circumstances, as follows

“Local planning authorities with Green Belts in their area should establish Green Belt boundaries in their Local Plans which set the framework for Green Belt and settlement policy. Once established, Green Belt boundaries should only be altered in exceptional circumstances, through the preparation or review of the Local Plan. At that time, authorities should consider the Green Belt boundaries having regard to their intended permanence in the long term, so that they should be capable of enduring beyond the plan period.”

No exceptional circumstances have been demonstrated, with none given as justification in Policy D4 for the policy of insetting. Proposed green belt boundary changes are on a very large scale, as it is proposed to remove more than 6% of the existing area designated as green belt, and to create new green belt boundaries extending to more than 105 km. This is not a simple revision to the green belt, and a demonstration of exceptional circumstances is required for each change. This has not been done, not for a single proposed change.

Although Guildford Borough Council are in the process of producing a new Local Plan, this in itself is not enough to change Green Belt boundaries; the requirement to demonstrate exceptional circumstances still applies. According to a High Court judgement, Gallagher vs Solihull, issued March 30th, 2014, Case No. CO/17668/2013, there is still a requirement to prove exceptional circumstances – quotations below are from paragraph 125 of this judgement:

“However, it is not arguable that the mere process of preparing a new local plan could itself be regarded as an exceptional circumstance justifying an alteration to a Green Belt boundary. National guidance has always dealt with revisions of the Green Belt in the context of reviews of local plans…… and has always required “exceptional circumstances” to justify a revision. The NPPF makes no change to this.”

“Exceptional circumstances are required for any revision of the boundary, whether the proposal is to extend or diminish the Green Belt.”
Whilst each case is fact-sensitive and the question of whether circumstances are exceptional for these purposes requires an exercise of planning judgment, what is capable of amounting to exceptional circumstances is a matter of law, and a plan-maker may err in law if he fails to adopt a lawful approach to exceptional circumstances. Once a Green Belt has been established and approved, it requires more than general planning concepts to justify an alteration.

Each and every proposed change to the green belt boundary requires that exceptional circumstances be demonstrated, otherwise the changes are not lawful. This has not been done by GBC, not for any proposed change.

From paragraph 130 of this judgement

“In other words, something must have occurred subsequent to the definition of the Green Belt boundary that justifies a change. The fact that, after the definition of the Green Belt boundary, the local authority or an inspector may form a different view on where the boundary should lie, however cogent that view on planning grounds, that cannot of itself constitute an exceptional circumstance which necessitates and therefore justifies a change.”

“…..That, in his judgment, may now be so: but that falls very far short of the stringent test for exceptional circumstances that any revision of the Green Belt boundary must satisfy. There is nothing in this case that suggests that any of the assumptions upon which the Green Belt boundary was set has proved unfounded, nor has anything occurred since the Green Belt boundary was set that might justify the redefinition of the boundary.”

No changes that would warrant an alteration to green belt boundaries have been demonstrated by GBC, their so called “sensitivity analysis” is shallow and subjective, and changes that may have occurred since the boundary was established was discussed. The changes proposed do not meet the standards set in this judgement. Instead, GBC maintain that it is housing need that creates blanket exceptional circumstances for changes proposed to the green belt. However, this is not the case. Following a meeting with local councillors and MPs in early 2014, Nick Boles wrote to Anne Milton MP to clarify the issue of exceptional circumstances and in this letter said:

“The written Ministerial Statement of 1 July 2013 set out the Government’s concern that some recent planning decisions have not accorded the Green Belt the level of protection that was the explicit policy intent of Ministers. It made clear that the single issue of unmet need – whether for conventional housing or for travellers sites – is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt and other harm to constitute the “very special circumstances” justifying inappropriate development in the Green Belt.”

These quotations show that the insetting process has considerable hurdles to overcome, including as it does the revision to Green Belt boundaries that accompanies insetting. Thus the most important questions are – did the flawed Pegasus “Guildford Borough Green belt and Countryside Study” show unequivocally that villages to be inset are not open villages, making no or a minimal contribution to the openness of the Green Belt; and that there were exceptional circumstances (other than unmet housing need) that justify a change to the Green Belt, creating a new boundary around all these villages – more than 105 km of new boundary? The Pegasus study did not do this, and this was just one of its many flaws (cf Annexe XX)

As shown above, development has occurred within villages, and the NPPF made it easier for additional development to take place within the green belt, via the provisions of paragraph 89, which specifically makes it easier for limited infill to occur and on a larger scale, for affordable housing to be built within villages washed over by the green belt. These provisions came into effect in 2012, when the NPPF was adopted and so the rate of increase in housing within villages is very likely to increase beyond that observed in the period between the 2001 and 2011 censuses.

It is clear from the most recent figures for planning applications to GBC in 2016 in Effingham that the pace of development within villages is changing, even with continued green belt protection. There is no requirement for insetting villages within the green belt, and the desire to increase development within the villages is not an adequate basis for insetting.

The final part of paragraph 4.5.47 is

“In accordance with national policy, the important character of these inset villages should instead be protected using other development management policies”.

"In accordance with national policy, the important character of these inset villages should instead be protected using other development management policies”.
This is not national policy, national planning policy is provided by the NPPF, and paragraph 86 of the NPPF is the relevant paragraph, which reads

“If it is necessary to prevent development in a village primarily because of the important contribution which the open character of the village makes to the openness of the Green Belt, the village should be included in the Green Belt. If, however, the character of the village needs to be protected for other reasons, other means should be used, such as conservation area or normal development management policies, and the village should be excluded from the Green Belt.”

There is thus no national policy that requires insetting. Instead, a judgement should be made for each village based on its contribution to the openness of the green belt. In fact, many of the villages proposed for insetting exhibit an open pattern of development, and so make an important contribution to the openness of the green belt, for example, Effingham. This has not been considered, other than in the flawed Pegasus report, and the examination of their approach reveals how this analysis was flawed. No further consideration has been given by GBC, and so GBC’s policy of wholesale insetting does not accord with national policy, as claimed.

In itself, there are many issues with insetting, and these include:

- According to the previous draft of the Local Plan, subject to the Regulation 18 consultation during summer 2014, insetting is based largely on the findings of the Pegasus study, “Guildford Borough Green Belt and Countryside Study. This report was very poor and various parts of the study criticised by many, including some borough councillors. It is perverse to continue with any recommendations of this study. In particular, a detailed review of this report for Effingham village showed that it was inaccurate and subjective.
- The settlement hierarchy was also subject to a detailed review and again this showed that scoring methods used were inaccurate and subjective.
- Boundary changes are arbitrary, without an adequate detailed survey. There are no checks and balances to this, even though the positioning of the line can change the price of an acre of land from about £15,000 to over £1 million. There is no process to it, simply someone using a computer and a mouse – literally a mouse click can turn some land owners into millionaires. In some cases, the proposed boundary divides semi-detached houses, so that one is still inside the green belt and the other outside. In other cases, the boundary divides gardens, so that part of a garden is in, part out of the green belt. Due care and attention has not been given to producing proposed boundaries.
- In many cases, boundaries proposed do not comply with the requirements of the NPPF, which is given in the NPPF, paragraph 85, final bullet point, which states

Given this NPPF definition, treelines, hedgerows, woodlands, etc should not be considered as potential Green Belt boundaries. In fact, in some cases proposed boundaries cross open fields, with no discernible features whatsoever. These are entirely inappropriate as a green belt boundary.

It should also be noted that GBC implicitly recognise that insetting is likely to lead to more development within villages on sites that are not identified in the draft Local Plan. But there is no recognition of this in the housing target. As is noted, insetting would mean that the rate of windfall development would increase, but GBC have not provided a proper analysis of windfall development (such as that provided by Mole Valley District Council) and they have failed to recognise a higher rate of windfall development in showing how the housing target will be met – even though, via Policy D4, they are planning for it. Windfalls should be deducted from the housing target, and the need for additional sites would thus be substantially reduced. Windfall development should be properly assessed and identified within the housing target, with an appropriate increase in the rate of windfalls in any villages that are inset.

THE BROWNFIELD OPPORTUNITY

Yes, we need a new Local Plan for our borough in order to provide a development strategy within which we can accommodate our local housing, economic and environmental needs. But first we must make 100% use of our urban brownfield before we consider building in the Green Belt or countryside.
Paragraph 80 of the NPPF clearly states that Green Belt serves a key purpose, “to assist in urban regeneration, by encouraging the recycling of derelict land and other urban land”. In order to comply with central planning policy we need a brownfield strategy that states clearly. “We are committed to a brownfield first initiative whereby all applications on previously developed land are given fast track priority and every facility to promote development for residential purposes and employment purposes in order to satisfy the needs of local people. In parallel a zero CIL incentive should be given for all residential development on brownfield land.

In response to the detailed objections received in the Regulation 18 process of the 2014 Local Plan and also in accordance with government policy a Guildford brownfield land register should be urgently compiled showing address, ownership, occupier, current use and detailed planning brief

A head of brownfield should be appointed at GBC with a clear briefing to deliver brownfield targets of housing and employment space

GBC needs to accelerate the residential redevelopment at Woodbridge Meadows, Walnut Tree Close and the Station within the next 5 years

GBC needs to examine the residential development opportunity of the 25.7 acres of car parks in GBC ownership

I do not consider that the target of 1,172 homes in the town centre takes account of the need and demand for housing or the opportunities that brownfield sites present for increasing the residential development in the core of the town which will in itself help to sustain the retail core by increased economic impact.

The Town Centre policy needs to maximise the potential for residential development on brownfield and include as an absolute minimum the 2,551 units proposed in by Allies and Morrison for the town centre included in the masterplan 2015 which has recently been adopted by GBC. The reality is that the Town Centre has the capacity for at least 5,000 homes.

The additional target capacity of 5,000 could easily be provided within the following urban sites which have the capacity for 7,500 homes:

- 2,500 homes detailed in Masterplan 2015 including Woodbridge Meadows which can itself be increased substantially
- 500 homes at North Street
- 1,000 homes on current GBC car parks (25 acres) and at the station
- 1,000 homes saved in the urban area if 100% of students are accommodated on Surrey University campus (17 ha of car parks)
- 1,000 homes at Slyfield on the 40 ha regeneration site
- 1,000 windfall infill (50 per annum)
- 500 homes on brownfield sites in villages on sites of max 1ha which do not impact Green Belt

The policy should place much greater emphasis on residential development in existing urban centres. In this way housing needs can be met without resorting to large developments in the Green Belt. There are urban areas in need of regeneration but these are ignored in favour of Green Belt development. The policy should not be applied to the villages which should remain in the Green Belt. The development it encourages will increase traffic and congestion disproportionately.

Recent figures show that online sales are still growing quickly, with more than 13% of total retail sales now made over the internet. Nor does an expansion in traditional retail chime with the objective of attracting highly paid jobs to the area – the majority of jobs in retail are low paid, with zero hours contracts and usually a pay rate based on the minimum wage. So any expansion in traditional bricks and mortar retail would create a greater demand for affordable and social housing – exactly the reverse of what is needed.

Even the major grocery retail chains have been affected by changes in retail habits – Tesco, Sainsburys, Morrisons, etc are closing some stores, with no major large stores planned. Banks and other financial institutions are still closing some branches, so changes in town centres still have some way to go – but none of these changes are recognised in the draft Local Plan, which envisages no limit to traditional retail.

There is another reason why the retail sector is unlikely to exhibit long term growth, and this is consumer debt, which has reached a level that the Bank of England have said could contribute to economic stability. This is likely to have a greater destabilising effect in the event of an economic downturn – and there will certainly be at least two of these during the life of the Local Plan. Retail spending simply cannot be maintained indefinitely at its current rate, and to plan for a large increase in consumer spending is irresponsible.

So there has to be a reappraisal of the urban development plans, with more homes provided in urban areas, in particular in the centre of Guildford, before there is any consideration of building outside the urban area. These are not separate policies to be considered separately, but hang together as part of a holistic plan. As the council own many sites in the centre, these could be made available for development within the first 5 years of the plan, with mixed housing on these sites, including new social housing, which is sorely needed. Affordable housing is simply not affordable to anyone on the minimum wage, there is a need for a considerable expansion of social housing, a need that is not adequately recognised in the draft Local Plan.

I object to Policy D4 - Development in urban areas and inset villages

The policy should place much greater emphasis on residential development in the existing urban centres. In this way housing needs can be met without resorting to large developments in the Green Belt. There are urban areas in need of regeneration but these are ignored in favour of Green Belt development. The policy should not be applied to the villages which should remain in the Green Belt. Unrestricted application of this policy to the villages intended to be inset will change their characters radically and for the worse. The development it encourages will increase traffic and congestion disproportionately.

Policy D4: Development in urban areas and inset villages.

I Object to this policy as I feel that Social housing rather than 'affordable housing', which many on very low wages cannot afford, WITHIN regenerated 'brownfield sites' in urban areas instead of concentrating on greenfield sites should be used. Jobs would be closer at hand, and added pressure on the rural roads would be obviated. The plan envisages shops and retail buildings on the brownfield sites. Use of department stores and retail space is in decline with big names closing. Why add to white elephants when the space is needed for housing people close to work and transport hubs.

1.1 We object to policy D4 Development in urban areas and inset villages

1.2 This policy that does not address the opportunity for building in the urban area

1.3 The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be “affordable”, but this does not provide any accommodation for low-paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy so-called “affordable” homes or pay an “affordable” rent. There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low-paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors (all of which this plan aspires to expand).

1.4 The number of homes planned in the urban area is much too low. There is a glaring need for regeneration in many urban areas, particularly Guildford Town Centre but this is ignored in favour of building homes on green-field sites instead.

1.5 This will not address urban housing needs. It is also unsustainable, since building outside the town does disproportionate harm to road traffic, air quality and overstretched infrastructure.

1.6 The plan envisages a large expansion of the retail sector, but this is a sad voice from the past because the sector is in rapid and continuous decline.

1.7 All the stated policy aims for “inset” villages will be negated by the excessive weight of new housing development proposed which would radically change their character forever.

2 THE BROWNFIELD OPPORTUNITY
2.1 Yes, we need a new Local Plan for our borough in order to provide a development strategy within which we can accommodate our local housing, economic and environmental needs. But first we must make 100% use of our urban brownfield before we consider building in the Green Belt or countryside.

2.2 Paragraph 80 of the NPPF clearly states that Green Belt serves a key purpose, “to assist in urban regeneration, by encouraging the recycling of derelict land and other urban land”. In order to comply with central planning policy we need a brownfield strategy that states clearly. “We are committed to a brownfield first initiative whereby all applications on previously developed land are given fast track priority and every facility to promote development for residential purposes and employment purposes in order to satisfy the needs of local people. In parallel a zero CIL incentive should be given for all residential development on brownfield land.

2.3 In response to the detailed objections received in the Regulation 18 process of the 2014 Local Plan and also in accordance with government policy a Guildford brownfield land register should be urgently compiled showing address, ownership, occupier, current use and detailed planning brief

2.4 A head of brownfield should be appointed at GBC with a clear briefing to deliver brownfield targets of housing and employment space

2.5 GBC needs to accelerate the residential redevelopment at Woodbridge Meadows, Walnut Tree Close and the Station within the next 5 years

2.6 GBC needs to examine the residential development opportunity of the 25.7 acres of car parks in GBC ownership

2.7 We do not consider that the target of 1,172 homes in the town centre takes account of the need and demand for housing or the opportunities that brownfield sites present for increasing the residential development in the core of the town which will in itself help to sustain the retail core by increased economic impact.

2.8 The Town Centre policy needs to maximise the potential for residential development on brownfield and include as an absolute minimum the 2,551 units proposed in by Allies and Morrison for the town centre included in the masterplan 2015 which has recently been adopted by GBC. The reality is that the Town Centre has the capacity for at least 5,000 homes.

2.9 The additional target capacity of 5,000 could easily be provided within the following urban sites which have the capacity for 7,500 homes:

- 2,500 homes detailed in Masterplan 2015 including Woodbridge Meadows which can itself be increased substantially
- 500 homes at North Street
- 1000 homes on current GBC car parks (25 acres) and at the station
- 1000 homes saved in the urban area if 100% of students are accommodated on Surrey University campus (17 ha of car parks)
- 1000 homes at Slyfield on the 40 ha regeneration site
- 1000 windfall infill (50 per annum)
- 500 homes on brownfield sites in villages on sites of max 1ha which do not impact Green Belt

The NPPF 82 refers

Objection to Policy D4  Development in urban areas and inset villages

Development in urban areas is vastly different to development in villages. It concerns me that the two are brought together in D4.

Most of Guildford's villages contribute to the openness of the countryside. Their buildings are generally low rise and widely spaced, giving views of the surrounding countryside. The nature of the Guildford countryside will be spoiled if the open character of its villages is damaged. Allowing urban density development within inset villages will damage villages. Development is possible in washed-over villages, either by using brownfield sites such as redundant garages and pubs, or permitted development, such as rural exception housing. It is these types of developments that will preserve the character of the countryside. D4 seeks to create urban blocks in the countryside.

NPPF para 86 refers.

The proposal to remove villages including the Horsleys from the Green Belt makes a mockery of the whole concept of the Green Belt and just seems to be a rather cynical attempt to permit more development within the village boundaries.

With regard to the proposed extension of those boundaries there appears to be no logic to them and they seem solely to be aimed at increasing the area within the village boundaries (see above) available for development.

I OBJECT TO POLICY D4 (DEVELOPMENT IN URBAN AREAS AND INSET VILLAGES)

- No commitment to expand social housing or accommodation for people who can’t afford so-called affordable homes.
- Not enough new homes in urban areas, despite demand and need for urban regeneration and protection of Green Belt.
- Objectives for inset villages cancelled out by plans for excessive housing growth there.
- Too much emphasis on traditional shops, when a lot of this sector is in terminal decline.

encouraging the recycling of derelict and other urban land’. Guildford Borough Council should ensure that all other urban land has been used and establish that there is a continuing unsatisfied demand before any Green Belt land is even considered. If the demand for affordable homes is most acute within the town, then that is where the development of affordable housing should be concentrated. Yet the emphasis in these areas is on additional retail space and more commercial premises. Considering the fact that there have been major changes in the traditional retail sector, this is not a sustainable policy.

Lead Councillor Spooner commented at the Full Council Meeting of May 24 “The traffic queues coming into Guildford each morning show the numbers of workers that must travel from far. That is why we must take action.” And yet by concentrating the building in the villages outside the town centre there will be an increase in the amount of traffic driving into the town – it doesn’t make sense and it surely isn’t sustainable.

Again we cannot support this policy due to the inexact wording. Developments “should have regard to”, should be replaced by “must”.

Old policies always stated that new developments would have to be “in character” with its surrounds – although more words are used, we feel the new definition is more vague.

On 15th June 2010 the Chief Planning Officer wrote in a letter that private residential gardens cannot be considered as “Previously Developed Land”. This should be articulated within this policy to prevent “Garden-Grabbing”

A series of design criteria have been added to Policy D4 which states that high quality design is expected in the Borough. Catesby support the Council’s ambitions to ensure that all development in the Borough is of a high quality design. Paragraph 56 of the Framework attaches great importance to the design of the built environment and states that good design is a key aspect of sustainable development, is indivisible from planning, and should contribute positively to making places better for people. Following on from this, paragraph 58 states local plans should develop robust and comprehensive policies that set out the quality of development that will be expected for the area. Catesby recognise the value and importance of good design and welcome the additional text in Policy D4.

Policy D4: Development in urban areas and inset villages

I OBJECT to this policy

In the case of urban development there are numerous flaws, including:

- The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be affordable, but this does not provide any accommodation for low paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy “affordable” homes, nor can they pay the so-called “affordable” rent. There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors.
- The number of homes planned in the urban area is too low – there is a need for regeneration in some areas, but this is ignored and instead the plan concentrates on building homes on green field sites, which does not meet the needs for housing within the town, especially with the centre. This is not a sustainable policy as building outside the town has a disproportionate effect on road traffic.
- The plan envisages a large expansion of the traditional “bricks and mortar” retail sector, but this is a sector in long term decline.

The policy should place much greater emphasis on residential development in the existing urban centres. In this way housing needs can be met without resorting to large developments in the Green Belt. There are urban areas in need of regeneration but these are ignored in favour of Green Belt development.

The policy should not be applied to the villages which should remain in the Green Belt. Unrestricted application of this policy to the villages intended to be inset will change their characters radically and for the worse. The development it encourages will increase traffic and congestion disproportionately.

Policy D4: Development in Urban Areas and Inset Villages

Paragraph 86 of the NPPF sets out the principles by which it should be decided whether villages are to be inset or not, and that issue is covered in my response to Policy P2 above.

However, there is a consideration in connection with this Policy D4 that appears to have been missed. Villages that are currently proposed for inseting, have been subject to Green Belt protection for very many years, and as a result they exhibit a character that is altogether different from urban areas, and from other non-Green Belt settlements. NPPF 86 recognises that having been inset, the character of a villages still needs to be protected, and it suggests that “other means should be used, such as conservation area or normal development management policies”. Given that inset villages exhibit a specific character as a result of their former Green Belt protection, it is clearly appropriate to consider formally whether they should be reviewed in terms of extending their conservation areas and/or instituting specific development management policies that cater for this particular situation. I can find no indication that such options have been considered, but clearly this needs to be done otherwise the character of former Green Belt villages will be irrevocably degraded. I therefore OBJECT to this policy.

I generally support this policy on a sustainable development basis as before discussed, and in particular the designation of West Horsley as an inset village.
However, the special character of West Horsley, with its north and south settlements either side of the railway line, needs to be looked at carefully to make the most of this opportunity.

POLICY D4 - Development in urban areas and inset villages

I OBJECT. This is a piously aspirational policy that does not address any of the obvious practical issues already touched on above:

The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be “affordable”, but this does not provide any accommodation for low-paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy so-called “affordable” homes or pay an “affordable” rent. There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low-paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors (all of which this plan aspires to expand).

The number of homes planned in the urban area is too low. There is a glaring need for regeneration in many urban areas, but this is ignored in favour building homes on green-field sites instead. This will not meet urban housing needs. It is also unsustainable, since building outside the town does disproportionate harm to road traffic, air quality and overstretched infrastructure.

The plan envisages a large expansion of the traditional “bricks and mortar” retail sector, but this is a sector in rapid and continuous decline.

All the stated policy aims for “inset” villages will be negated by the sheer weight of new housing development proposed which would radically change their character forever. Against this disruptive background, it is barely relevant to talk about preserving views!

We object to policy D4 Development in urban areas and inset villages

Summary

There are effectively two separate parts to this policy, both are flawed, and in the case on insetting, fatally flawed. In the case of urban development there are numerous flaws, including:

• The plan envisages a large expansion of the traditional “bricks and mortar” retail sector, but this is a sector in long term decline.

• The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be affordable, but this does not provide any accommodation for low paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy “affordable” homes, nor can they pay the so-called “affordable” rent. There is a great need for an expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors.

• The number of homes planned in the urban area is too low – there is a need for regeneration in some areas, but this is ignored and instead the plan concentrates on building homes on green field sites, which does not meet the needs for housing within the town, especially with the centre. This is not a sustainable policy as building outside the town has a disproportionate effect on road traffic.

In the case of insetting, the policy is fatally flawed, for two separate reasons.

• Firstly, it is based on an erroneous assumption. GBC justify the policy (in para 4.5.50) by suggesting, without any supporting data, that development in villages washed over by the green belt is at a lower rate than within Guildford town. This is not the case, and statistics from the ONS censuses of 2001 and 2011 show that this is assumption is incorrect. These statistics show that the growth rate in housing was higher in, for example, Effingham, a village washed over by the green belt than Merrow, a suburb of Guildford which is not washed over by the green belt. In fact, the rate of increase in housing stock in Effingham was faster than the average for the borough.

• Insetting has been based on the assumptions set out in the Green Belt and Countryside Study, but this is not referred to as part of the Evidence base. The analysis in this document was flawed to the extent that it is valueless. It has serious flaws in its methodology, includes subjective judgements, and thus its conclusions are flawed. These flaws are so serious that it should be removed from the evidence base that supports the Local Plan. However, removing the reference but retaining the decision process means that the decisions are based on flawed assumptions.

Urban development

There is a fundamental flaw in the draft Local Plan, in that there are not enough dwellings planned in urban areas, in particular, Guildford town centre. This is where the demand for affordable homes is most acute, a fact which is recognised in much of the draft Local Plan. Yet the plan then envisages that most dwellings will be built outside the urban area, so there is no continuity in the plan – if the demand for affordable homes is most acute within the town, then is where these dwellings should be built. There are sites available, for example, various sites in Woodbridge Meadows, Walnut Tree Close (including the area around the station) and North Street. Yet the focus in these areas is to provide a very limited number of dwellings, with the emphasis on additional retail space and more commercial premises. Given the profound changes in traditional retail, this is not a sustainable policy. There have been many examples of bankruptcies amongst traditional retailers, the most recent examples being BHS and Austin Reed, and previously Woolworths, Comet, etc. The British Retail Consortium forecast that by 2020 up to one third of those now employed in traditional retail could lose their jobs, due to a combination of the move to the internet and higher costs, from business rates and increases in the minimum wage. Recent figures show that online sales are still growing quickly, with more than 13% of total retail sales now made over the internet. Nor does an expansion in traditional retail chime with the objective of attracting highly paid jobs to the area – the majority of jobs in retail are low paid, with zero hours contracts and usually a pay rate based on the minimum wage. So any expansion in traditional bricks and mortar retail would create a greater demand for affordable and social housing – exactly the reverse of what is needed.

Even the major grocery retail chains have been affected by changes in retail habits – Tesco, Sainsburys, Morrisons, etc are closing some stores, with no major large stores planned. Banks and other financial institutions are still closing some branches, so changes in town centres still have some way to go – but none of these changes are recognised in the draft Local Plan, which envisages no limit to traditional retail.

There is another reason why the retail sector is unlikely to exhibit long term growth, and this is consumer debt, which has reached a level that the Bank of England have said could contribute to economic stability. This is likely to have a greater destabilising effect in the event of an economic downturn – and there will certainly be at least two of these during the life of the Local Plan. Retail spending simply cannot be maintained indefinitely at its current rate, and to plan for a large increase in consumer spending is irresponsible.

So there has to be a reappraisal of the urban development plans, with more homes provided in urban areas, in particular in the centre of Guildford, before there is any consideration of building outside the urban area. These are not separate policies to be considered separately, but hang together as part of a holistic plan. As the council own many sites in the centre, these could be made available for development within the first 5 years of the plan, with mixed housing on these sites, including new social housing, which is sorely needed. Affordable housing is simply not affordable to anyone on the minimum wage, there is a need for a considerable expansion of social housing, a need that is not adequately recognised in the draft Local Plan.

In the detail of Policy D4, it suggests that in urban areas and inset villages planning permission will be granted provided that a proposed development:

- “Ensures that the layout, scale, form, massing, height of buildings and structures, and materials relate to the site context and its surroundings;”.....

There are several other criteria listed and the Policy then goes on to elaborate criteria specific to inset villages, as follows:

“In addition to the above, proposals for new development within inset village areas will have particular regard to:

- The distinctive settlement pattern of the village and the important relationship between the built development and the surrounding landscape;
- Important views of the village from the surrounding landscape;
• Views within the village of local landmarks.”

There are numerous development sites proposed that mean that the first criterion cannot be met, as the developments proposed do not relate to the scale, form or massing of the site surroundings. For example, in West Horsley and East Horsley, there are numerous sites where this does not apply. It is proposed that a total of 3.6 km² should be removed from the green belt, with a total of 533 houses proposed on sites in East and West Horsley on a total of 29.1 ha, an average density of 18 dwellings/ha. These proposed developments are not in scale or proportion to the existing villages, and the housing density is considerably higher than existing housing density. Effectively, if these developments were to proceed, East and West Horsley would merge and become a large urban area in the green belt, totally different in character to the existing villages, with the existing settlement pattern completely lost. Similar considerations apply to other proposed development sites, such as Flexford and Normandy. In this case, 1.3 km² would be removed from the green belt and a total of 1100 dwellings proposed on 67 ha, with an average density of 16.4 dwellings/ha. Again, the scale and form would overwhelm existing hamlets and villages, merging these to form another urban area in the heart of the green belt, with no consideration of the views of the settlements from the surrounding countryside, much of which has been given AONB status.

Thus the words of the policy statement D4 do not match the proposals contained in the draft local plan.

The “Reasoned Justification” for the policy consists of five paragraphs, 4.5.48 to 4.5.52. Of these, 4.5.48 and 4.5.49, 4.5.51 and 4.5.52 are not justifications for the policy, they are simply statements or further information. Paragraph 4.5.50 is the only attempted justification for this policy, but in fact this applies only to insetting. Paragraph 4.5.50 is factually wrong and so the justification for this policy does nor bear close examination. Parts of this paragraph are taken in turn below, to show the inaccuracies this paragraph contains.

“Historically, development has been focused in the urban areas of Guildford, and Ash and Tongham only. Development in the villages has been very limited due to the Green Belt designation which previously washed over all but one of the villages.”

This depends on how development is measured. In terms of raw numbers, this may be true, but this would ignore the fact that urban area of Guildford town contains much of the housing in the borough. Taking the increase in housing stock between the censuses of 2001 and 2011 in a specific wards reveals a much more complex picture. The village and ward of Effingham, for example, had a higher rate of adding dwellings than the average for the borough and for at least some of the Guildford urban wards. Using census data collected by the ONS, between 2001 and 2011, the number of dwellings in Effingham increased by 6.6%, whereas for the borough as a whole it increased by 5.0%. Over the same period in Merrow, a ward within the urban area of Guildford, the number of dwellings increased by only 1.2%, whilst in Normandy ward the increase was 2.6%. This analysis has not been exhaustive, but it is sufficient to show that the opening statement in paragraph 4.5.47 is incorrect, and that in some cases, proportionally, considerably more development has occurred in green belt villages. It must be incumbent on GBC to assess the facts before making false statements such as this. Opinions are not facts. ONS statistics are open to all.

In the first three months of 2016, planning applications for 11 additional dwellings in Effingham have been made, in a village of approximately 525 dwellings. One of these applications has been reduced from 6 to 4 dwellings, whilst the other 5 have been approved. This shows clearly that development within villages washed over by the green belt can occur, and that organic growth is possible. There is no necessity for insetting.

Guildford’s Green Belt boundaries were established in the Guildford Borough Local Plan 1987, so are well established. There has not been any justification for the extensive green belt review that accompanies the insetting of villages, or for the removal of these villages from the green belt. According to the NPPF, paragraph 83, green belt boundary changes should be made only in exceptional circumstances, as follows

“Local planning authorities with Green Belts in their area should establish Green Belt boundaries in their Local Plans which set the framework for Green Belt and settlement policy. Once established, Green Belt boundaries should only be altered in exceptional circumstances, through the preparation or review of the Local Plan. At that time, authorities should consider the Green Belt boundaries having regard to their intended permanence in the long term, so that they should be capable of enduring beyond the plan period.”

No exceptional circumstances have been demonstrated, with none given as justification in Policy D4 for the policy of insetting. Proposed green belt boundary changes are on a very large scale, as it is proposed to remove more than 6% of the existing area designated as green belt, and to create new green belt boundaries extending to more than 105 km. This is not a simple revision to the green belt, and a demonstration of exceptional circumstances is required for each change. This has not been done, not for a single proposed change.

Although Guildford Borough Council are in the process of producing a new Local Plan, this in itself is not enough to change Green Belt boundaries; the requirement to demonstrate exceptional circumstances still applies. According to a High Court judgement, Gallagher vs Solihull, issued March 30th, 2014, Case No. CO/17668/2013, there is still a requirement to prove exceptional circumstances – quotations below are from paragraph 125 of this judgement:

“However, it is not arguable that the mere process of preparing a new local plan could itself be regarded as an exceptional circumstance justifying an alteration to a Green Belt boundary. National guidance has always dealt with revisions of the Green Belt in the context of reviews of local plans….. and has always required “exceptional circumstances” to justify a revision. The NPPF makes no change to this.”

“Exceptional circumstances are required for any revision of the boundary, whether the proposal is to extend or diminish the Green Belt.”

Whilst each case is fact-sensitive and the question of whether circumstances are exceptional for these purposes requires an exercise of planning judgment, what is capable of amounting to exceptional circumstances is a matter of law, and a plan-maker may err in law if he fails to adopt a lawful approach to exceptional circumstances. Once a Green Belt has been established and approved, it requires more than general planning concepts to justify an alteration.

Each and every proposed change to the green belt boundary requires that exceptional circumstances be demonstrated, otherwise the changes are not lawful. This has not been done by GBC, not for any proposed change.

From paragraph 130 of this judgement

“In other words, something must have occurred subsequent to the definition of the Green Belt boundary that justifies a change. The fact that, after the definition of the Green Belt boundary, the local authority or an inspector may form a different view on where the boundary should lie, however cogent that view on planning grounds, that cannot of itself constitute an exceptional circumstance which necessitates and therefore justifies a change.”

“…..That, in his judgment, may now be so: but that falls very far short of the stringent test for exceptional circumstances that any revision of the Green Belt boundary must satisfy. There is nothing in this case that suggests that any of the assumptions upon which the Green Belt boundary was set has proved unfounded, nor has anything occurred since the Green Belt boundary was set that might justify the redefinition of the boundary.”

No changes that would warrant an alteration to green belt boundaries have been demonstrated by GBC, their so called “sensitivity analysis” is shallow and subjective, and changes that may have occurred since the boundary was established was discussed. The changes proposed do not meet the standards set in this judgement. Instead, GBC maintain that it is housing need that creates blanket exceptional circumstances for changes proposed to the green belt. However, this is not the case. Following a meeting with local councillors and MPs in early 2014, Nick Boles wrote to Anne Milton MP to clarify the issue of exceptional circumstances and in this letter said:

“The written Ministerial Statement of 1 July 2013 set out the Government’s concern that some recent planning decisions have not accorded the Green Belt the level of protection that was the explicit policy intent of Ministers. It made clear that the single issue of unmet need – whether for conventional housing or for travellers sites – is unlikely to outweigh the harm to the Green Belt and other harm to constitute the “very special circumstances” justifying inappropriate development in the Green Belt.”
These quotations show that the insetting process has considerable hurdles to overcome, including as it does the revision to Green Belt boundaries that accompanies insetting. Thus the most important questions are – did the flawed Pegasus “Guildford Borough Green belt and Countryside Study” show unequivocally that villages to be inset are not open villages, making no or a minimal contribution to the openness of the Green Belt; and that there were exceptional circumstances (other than unmet housing need) that justify a change to the Green Belt, creating a new boundary around all these villages – more than 105 km of new boundary? The Pegasus study did not do this, and this was just one of its many flaws (cf Annexe)

As shown above, development has occurred within villages, and the NPPF made it easier for additional development to take place within the green belt, via the provisions of paragraph 89, which specifically makes it easier for limited infill to occur and on a larger scale, for affordable housing to be built within villages washed over by the green belt. These provisions came into effect in 2012, when the NPPF was adopted and so the rate of increase in housing within villages is very likely to increase beyond that observed in the period between the 2001 and 2011 censuses.

It is clear from the most recent figures for planning applications to GBC in 2016 in Effingham that the pace of development within villages is changing, even with continued green belt protection. There is no requirement for insetting villages within the green belt, and the desire to increase development within the villages is not an adequate basis for insetting.

The final part of paragraph 4.5.47 is

“In accordance with national policy, the important character of these inset villages should instead be protected using other development management policies”.

This is not national policy, national planning policy is provided by the NPPF, and paragraph 86 of the NPPF is the relevant paragraph, which reads

“If it is necessary to prevent development in a village primarily because of the important contribution which the open character of the village makes to the openness of the Green Belt, the village should be included in the Green Belt. If, however, the character of the village needs to be protected for other reasons, other means should be used, such as conservation area or normal development management policies, and the village should be excluded from the Green Belt.”

There is thus no national policy that requires insetting. Instead, a judgement should be made for each village based on its contribution to the openness of the green belt. In fact, many of the villages proposed for insetting exhibit an open pattern of development, and so make an important contribution to the openness of the green belt, for example, Effingham. This has not been considered, other than in the flawed Pegasus report, and the examination of their approach reveals how this analysis was flawed. No further consideration has been given by GBC, and so GBC’s policy of wholesale insetting does not accord with national policy, as claimed.

In itself, there are many issues with insetting, and these include:

- According to the previous draft of the Local Plan, subject to the Regulation 18 consultation during summer 2014, insetting is based largely on the findings of the Pegasus study, “Guildford Borough Green Belt and Countryside Study. This report was very poor and various parts of the study criticised by many, including some borough councillors. It is perverse to continue with any recommendations of this study. In particular, a detailed review of this report for Effingham village showed that it was inaccurate and subjective.
- The settlement hierarchy was also subject to a detailed review and again this showed that scoring methods used were inaccurate and subjective.
- Boundary changes are arbitrary, without an adequate detailed survey. There are no checks and balances to this, even though the positioning of the line can change the price of an acre of land from about £15,000 to over £1 million. There is no process to it, simply someone using a computer and a mouse – literally a mouse click can turn some land owners into millionaires. In some cases, the proposed boundary divides semi-detached houses, so that one is still inside the green belt and the other outside. In other cases, the boundary divides gardens, so that part of a garden is in, part out of the green belt. Due care and attention has not been given to producing proposed boundaries.
• In many cases, boundaries proposed do not comply with the requirements of the NPPF, which is given in the NPPF, paragraph 85, final bullet point, which states

Given this NPPF definition, treelines, hedgerows, woodlands, etc should not be considered as potential Green Belt boundaries. In fact, in some cases proposed boundaries cross open fields, with no discernible features whatsoever. These are entirely inappropriate as a green belt boundary.

It should also be noted that GBC implicitly recognise that insetting is likely to lead to more development within villages on sites that are not identified in the draft Local Plan. But there is no recognition of this in the housing target. As is noted, insetting would mean that the rate of windfall development would increase, but GBC have not provided a proper analysis of windfall development (such as that provided by Mole Valley District Council) and they have failed to recognise a higher rate of windfall development in showing how the housing target will be met – even though, via Policy D4, they are planning for it. Windfalls should be deducted from the housing target, and the need for additional sites would thus be substantially reduced. Windfall development should be properly assessed and identified within the housing target, with an appropriate increase in the rate of windfalls in any villages that are inset.

THE BROWNFIELD OPPORTUNITY

Yes, we need a new Local Plan for our borough in order to provide a development strategy within which we can accommodate our local housing, economic and environmental needs. But first we must make 100% use of our urban brownfield before we consider building in the Green Belt or countryside. Paragraph 80 of the NPPF clearly states that Green Belt serves a key purpose, “to assist in urban regeneration, by encouraging the recycling of derelict land and other urban land”. In order to comply with central planning policy we need a brownfield strategy that states clearly. “We are committed to a brownfield first initiative whereby all applications on previously developed land are given fast track priority and every facility to promote development for residential purposes and employment purposes in order to satisfy the needs of local people. In parallel a zero CIL incentive should be given for all residential development on brownfield land. In response to the detailed objections received in the Regulation 18 process of the 2014 Local Plan and also in accordance with government policy a Guildford brownfield land register should be urgently compiled showing address, ownership, occupier, current use and detailed planning brief. A head of brownfield should be appointed at GBC with a clear briefing to deliver brownfield targets of housing and employment space. GBC needs to accelerate the residential redevelopment at Woodbridge Meadows, Walnut Tree Close and the Station within the next 5 years. GBC needs to examine the residential development opportunity of the 25.7 acres of car parks in GBC ownership. We do not consider that the target of 1,172 homes in the town centre takes account of the need and demand for housing or the opportunities that brownfield sites present for increasing the residential development in the core of the town which will in itself help to sustain the retail core by increased economic impact. The Town Centre policy needs to maximise the potential for residential development on brownfield and include as an absolute minimum the 2,551 units proposed in by Allies and Morrison for the town centre included in the masterplan 2015 which has recently been adopted by GBC. The reality is that the Town Centre has the capacity for at least 5,000 homes. The additional target capacity of 5,000 could easily be provided within the following urban sites which have the capacity for 7,500 homes:

• 2,500 homes detailed in Masterplan 2015 including Woodbridge Meadows which can itself be increased substantially
• 500 homes at North Street
• 1000 homes on current GBC car parks (25 acres) and at the station
• 1000 homes saved in the urban area if 100% of students are accommodated on Surrey University campus (17 ha of car parks)
• 1000 homes at Slyfield on the 40 ha regeneration site
• 1000 windfall infill (50 per annum)
• 500 homes on brownfield sites in villages on sites of max 1ha which do not impact Green Belt

Annexe in relation to Green Belt Study:

Critique Update: Revisions to Green Belt and Countryside Study
Changes to this volume (Volume IV, which deals with insetting of villages) were made because of earlier criticisms of the study, particularly with regard to Effingham. Changes were summarised as follows:

- "Re-consideration of how woodland / tree belts etc impact upon openness of the villages in Green Belt terms;"
- "Reference has been removed to the specific development footprint calculations, due to the complication previously generated in the interpretation of such data; and"
- "Re-consideration of the appropriateness of insetting Effingham, due to part of the settlement lying in adjoining authorities."

In this revised version, a three stage approach was still used and the stages were given as:

"Stage 1: Assessing the degree of openness within each village through analysis of urban form, density and the extent of developed land;"

"Stage 2: Assessing the surroundings of, and potential new Green Belt boundaries at each village within Guildford Borough; and"

"Stage 3: Assessing the suitability of each village for insetting within the Green Belt and defining potential Green Belt boundaries."

There is a very slight change to the wording of Stage 2, but no change of any substance to these 3 stages between the original and the revised version. However, in this new version the only reference to the previous method used in stage 1 was to justify the removal of "the specific development footprint calculations, due to the complication previously generated in the interpretation of such data."

The only complication was created by Pegasus using the data they generated in a bizarre way. As the previous critique showed Pegasus was interpreting their data incorrectly, so they have simply dropped any reference to it. However, this was at least an attempt to show objectivity in their methodology. This means that the entire revised process became subjective and opaque. As this is such a controversial and important topic – the removal of villages from the green belt - this type of methodology is simply not acceptable. The data that was previously generated pointed towards different conclusions from the conclusions drawn by Pegasus – and this was probably the real reason for the data being excluded in a revised report.

A fair and robust methodology would ensure that anyone else performing the same task would get the same or very similar results, and this is best achieved by using objective methods that are visible and transparent. However, if different independent groups were set the same assignment using the methodology employed by Pegasus, because of the subjective nature of the tests, it is highly unlikely that the same conclusions would be reached. For an undertaking of such importance, the methodology used was entirely inappropriate and so the results from this study are unacceptable. It is notable that although the methodology changed, the outcomes were exactly the same, and this gives rise to the suspicion that results were predetermined. Instead of changing the method used in Stage 1 so that it became entirely subjective it would have been much better to tweak the methodology behind the data that was generated, to ensure it was objective and robust, and then to use data produced to provide an appropriate categorisation of villages, using results impartially. This they did not do, as it would have shown some of the villages being considered should not be removed from the green belt.

Although Pegasus claimed the methodology was changed, previous results have not changed – in other words, their conclusions have not changed. Consequently, the criticism of the methodology previously used still stands. Methodology used in Stages 2 and 3 has not changed and the previous critique is still valid for these stages.

The “new” methodology for Stage 1 in this later issue of Volume IV is discussed below.
The map used to illustrate this is exactly the same as that previously produced, with the same areas marked out, so it is not reproduced here – it is in the earlier critique. In this stage Pegasus use (as before) the concept of “perceived” village area, to justify the inclusion in the “perceived” village area of housing that is in Mole Valley – but they have not included any open areas such as Rolls Farm to be within the “perceived” village area. In fact, their concept of perceived village area is one that would be created only by viewing the area from space, or using aerial maps without boundary markings, with a determination to include as many buildings and as little open farmland as possible. On the ground, the boundary between Guildford Borough and Mole Valley is clearly marked, along the A246. So “perceived village area” is clearly a very subjective concept.

In this revised report, Pegasus have attempted to justify their sub division of areas into high, medium, low housing densities, as well as open areas, and their definitions are given below, with relevant paragraph numbers:

“13.13 Through site survey, aerial imagery and detailed OS base mapping at 1:5000 scale, areas of high, medium and low development density were identified within the village area. Such categorisation assumes development associated with a village, rather than other areas, so for example, high density areas identified would not be classed as high density within a town or city environment. The areas were defined as follows:

- High Development Density – generally includes areas of flats, terrace, detached, semi-detached or singular buildings within densely distributed clusters with enclosed street frontages, small scale garden plots enclosed by fencelines, hedgerows and other buildings. Built development forms the dominant characteristic;
- Medium Development Density – generally includes areas of detached, semi-detached or singular buildings within closely distributed clusters within medium scale garden plots, small holdings, open spaces or small fields. Built development is the prevalent characteristic interspersed with visible open areas; and
- Low Development Density – generally includes singular detached buildings that are sparsely distributed within large garden plots, country estates or open farmland. Open areas form the dominant characteristic interspersed with infrequent buildings.

13.14 Once areas of high, medium and low development density had been mapped, detailed comments regarding village form, density and openness were identified and annotated on the Stage 1 assessment map using a 1A, 1B, 1C, etc prefix.”

Pegasus persisted in not providing a numerical guide to housing density, which would be a normal approach when attempting to classify densities. This means they can classify areas in any way they see fit, without regard to actual densities. They have deliberately chosen not to use an objective approach, which would be numerical. This is evidence for an approach with a predetermined outcome – Pegasus avoided using numerical data even when it is a standard approach for this type of analysis.

However, an analysis of several areas will serve to illustrate the nonsense in their application of this classification – some analysis was given in the earlier critique and this is still valid, but more details are given below, starting with the first area, 1A, described as “High density two storey detached residential development located on Effingham Common Road within medium to large scale garden plots enclosed by Thorne Wood to the east.”

The Google earth snip shows that this description is a fantasy – the houses are not enclosed by Thornt Wood, Thornt Wood is 190m approximately north from the end house of the 6 houses. The boundary to the west is Effingham Common Road with the end house (Meadow Cottage) facing the rear garden of the first house in Leewood Way. To the north is open farmland, bordered by Thorne Wood, 190m approximately north of the other end house, Terriston. To the east is open farmland, Effingham Lodge Farm. To the south is St Lawrence playing field and another field, all open and undeveloped. The single storey St Lawrence school building is 183m to the south.

The actual density is easily calculated. The 6 houses are set in an area of 1.73 acres (0.7 ha) so the calculated density is 3.5 houses/acre, or 8.6 dwellings/ha. Under no circumstances could this be considered as high density, or as enclosed. The description provided by Pegasus was inaccurate and can best be described as a fantasy, developed to ensure a predetermined conclusion was reached.
Area 1K. “High density two storey detached and semi residential development located on Orchard Gardens, Mount Pleasant, Norwood Road, Norwood Close, Strathcona Avenue, Woodlands Road and Links Way. Properties located within small scale garden plots enclosed by fencelines, hedgerows and buildings.”

The area shown is 23.9 ha, 59.1 acres, and has approximately 434 buildings in total, predominantly residential but including several commercial buildings. Thus the density is 18.2/buildings ha, or 22.7/acre. This density is lower than being put forward in Effingham’s Neighbourhood plan by the Parish Council, and much lower than developments in villages given planning permission by GBC during 2013/14, at 71 dwellings/ha. So although high by comparison to most of the rest of Effingham, density in this area would be considered low to medium by current standards. The highest housing density in the Berkeley Homes proposal was 31.2 dwellings/ha, and this was described as low density.

The north eastern boundary of this area is the A246, but across that road are the open areas of Browns Field, King George V playing fields and recreation area, as well as (to the west) an open field on Rolls Farm. The southern boundary is open farmland, and the western boundary Effingham golf course. This means that even in this area, there is a sense of openness and connection with the green belt beyond the village, which is obvious in the Google earth snip given in Figure 2.

Note the disparity between these two areas, both described by Pegasus as high density – in area 1A, the actual density is 8.6/ha but in 1K is 18.2/ha. Even in their contrived categorisations Pegasus were not consistent.

Finally, a third area, to further illustrate how poor and subjective this analysis was – area 1I, housing on Manorhouse Lane.

Area 1I “Medium density single and two storey detached residential development on Manorhouse Lane with medium to large scale garden plots enclosed by hedgerows and treebelts to the east of King George V playing fields.”

There are 8 houses in this area, an area of 1.53 ha, 3.8 acres, so that the density is 5.2 houses/ha, or 2.1/acre. Pegasus would have had to come from a strange parallel universe to believe that this could be described as medium density housing. To the north, the boundary is a hedge beyond which is the extensive gardens of Manor House school; to the east the boundary King George V playing fields. Spring gales showed just how fragile the treeline in this (and other areas) is – one tree was taken down by the gale and another felled as it was unsafe. To the west is the lane, and beyond the lane, open farmland. The short southern boundary is the A246. So this area is not enclosed, there is a very strong connection to the open green belt beyond the houses – and their hedges.

Of the 14 areas defined on their stage 1 map, Pegasus identified 3 as high density – but again without any numerical definition of high density. Analysis above shows how misplaced these definitions were. 7 areas were classed as medium density – and again, an example above shows how misplaced these were. Three areas were classed as low density, and just one as open farmland. Note that Browns Field and King George V playing fields were classed as low density. A detailed analysis of all areas should not be needed to show that in many cases (if not all) the categorisation was wrong. But in the parallel universe occupied by Pegasus, three areas defined as high density were enough to decide that the whole of the perceived village area exhibited a high density of development. This was a conclusion that even George Orwell’s Ministry of Truth would have found questionable.

It was wrong because Pegasus had an outcome in mind, and mere facts were not going to prevent their fixed conclusion from being reached.

In the Stage 3 insetting criteria, the only change was that the reference to the calculation of the built area was dropped, no doubt because this was clear evidence of bias in their analysis. No other changes were made, so that the “score” remained the same – one plus and two negatives for Effingham, so they were able to reach the conclusion that Effingham should be inset. Pegasus did inset a suggestion that this should be done only after consultation with the neighbouring Local Authority, Mole valley District Council. No notes of any such meeting have been provided.
The actual position remains the same as in the earlier critique – Effingham is an open village, with a great deal of open space within the village. There are strong connections to the green belt beyond the village and so the village makes an important contribution to the openness of the green belt.

In reaching the conclusion that Effingham should be inset, Pegasus had to totally ignore reason and fact, and produced a report that was shameful in its bias. It is highly likely that this same bias was evident when recommending other villages should be inset into the green belt, so that the real contribution other villages make to the openness of the green belt is unknown. Preconceptions throughout this report are evident, and the kindest thing that can be said about it is that its determination to ignore facts in order to reach the destination of fixed conclusions is heroic. However, it is a discreditable report, and it should have no place in the Evidence Base that informs the Local Plan process.

Policy D4: I object to the insetting of villages (meaning in fact, removal of villages from Green Belt protections) and the fact that they will be suffer from higher density development and the resulting increase in traffic, use of infrastructure which is already under pressure. I object in particular to the insetting of West Clandon, Send and the Horsleys. This will have a detrimental impact on Green Belt openness and the views in and out of the AONB in direct contravention of Policy P1 and P2.

OBJECT There are effectively two separate parts to this policy, both are flawed, and in the case on insetting, fatally flawed. In the case of urban development there are numerous flaws, including:

- The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be affordable, but this does not provide any accommodation for low paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy “affordable” homes, nor can they pay the so-called “affordable” rent. There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors.
- The number of homes planned in the urban area is too low – there is a need for regeneration in some areas, but this is ignored and instead the plan concentrates on building homes on green field sites, which does not meet the needs for housing within the town, especially with the centre. This is not a sustainable policy as building outside the town has a disproportionate effect on road traffic.
• The plan envisages a large expansion of the traditional “bricks and mortar” retail sector, but this is a sector in long term decline.

I OBJECT to Policy D4 - Development in urban areas and inset villages

The policy should place much greater emphasis on residential development in the existing urban centres. In this way housing needs can be met without resorting to large developments in the Green Belt. There are urban areas in need of regeneration but these are ignored in favour of Green Belt development.

The policy should not be applied to the villages which should remain in the Green Belt. Unrestricted application of this policy to the villages intended to be inset will change their characters radically and for the worse. The development it encourages will increase traffic and congestion disproportionately.

- No commitment to expand social housing or accommodation for people who can’t afford so-called affordable homes.
- Not enough new homes in urban areas, despite demand and need for urban regeneration and protection of Green Belt.
- Objectives for inset villages cancelled out by plans for excessive housing growth there.

- Too much emphasis on traditional shops, when a lot of this sector is in terminal decline.

1.5 This will not address urban housing needs. It is also unsustainable, since building outside the town does disproportionate harm to road traffic, air quality and overstretched infrastructure.

1.6 The plan envisages a large expansion of the retail sector, but this is a sad voice from the past because the sector is in rapid and continuous decline.

1.7 All the stated policy aims for “inset” villages will be negated by the excessive weight of new housing development proposed which would radically change their character forever.

This policy that does not address the opportunity for building in the urban area

The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be “affordable”, but this does not provide any accommodation for low-paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy so-called “affordable” homes or pay an “affordable” rent. There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low-paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors (all of which this plan aspires to expand).

The number of homes planned in the urban area is much too low. There is a glaring need for regeneration in many urban areas, particularly Guildford Town Centre but this is ignored in favour of building homes on green-field sites instead.

This will not address urban housing needs. It is also unsustainable, since building outside the town does disproportionate harm to road traffic, air quality and overstretched infrastructure.

The plan envisages a large expansion of the retail sector, but this is a sad voice from the past because the sector is in rapid and continuous decline.

All the stated policy aims for “inset” villages will be negated by the excessive weight of new housing development proposed which would radically change their character forever.

THE BROWNFIELD OPPORTUNITY

Yes, we need a new Local Plan for our borough in order to provide a development strategy within which we can accommodate our local housing, economic and environmental needs. But first we must make 100% use of our urban brownfield before we consider building in the Green Belt or countryside.

Paragraph 80 of the NPPF clearly states that Green Belt serves a key purpose, “to assist in urban regeneration, by encouraging the recycling of derelict land and other urban land”. In order to comply with central planning policy we need a brownfield strategy that states clearly, “We are committed to a brownfield first initiative whereby all applications on previously developed land are given fast track priority and every facility to promote development for residential purposes and employment purposes in order to satisfy the needs of local people. In parallel a zero CIL incentive should be given for all residential development on brownfield land.

In response to the detailed objections received in the Regulation 18 process of the 2014 Local Plan and also in accordance with government policy a Guildford brownfield land register should be urgently compiled showing address, ownership, occupier, current use and detailed planning brief.

A head of brownfield should be appointed at GBC with a clear briefing to deliver brownfield targets of housing and employment space.

GBC needs to accelerate the residential redevelopment at Woodbridge Meadows, Walnut Tree Close and the Station within the next 5 years.

GBC needs to examine the residential development opportunity of the 25.7 acres of car parks in GBC ownership.

I do not consider that the target of 1,172 homes in the town centre takes account of the need and demand for housing or the opportunities that brownfield sites present for increasing the residential development in the core of the town which will in itself help to sustain the retail core by increased economic impact.

The Town Centre policy needs to maximise the potential for residential development on brownfield and include as an absolute minimum the 2,551 units proposed in by Allies and Morrison for the town centre included in the masterplan 2015 which has recently been adopted by GBC. The reality is that the Town Centre has the capacity for at least 5,000 homes.
The additional target capacity of 5,000 could easily be provided within the following urban sites which have the capacity for 7,500 homes:

- 2,500 homes detailed in Masterplan 2015 including Woodbridge Meadows which can itself be increased substantially
- 500 homes at North Street
- 1000 homes on current GBC car parks (25 acres) and at the station
- 1000 homes saved in the urban area if 100% of students are accommodated on Surrey University campus (17 ha of car parks)
- 1000 homes at Slyfield on the 40 ha regeneration site
- 1000 windfall infill (50 per annum)
- 500 homes on brownfield sites in villages on sites of max 1ha which do not impact Green Belt

POLICY D4 DEVELOPMENT IN URBAN AREAS

I object to policy D4 Development in urban areas and inset villages

This policy that does not address the opportunity for building in the urban area

The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be “affordable”, but this does not provide any accommodation for low-paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy so-called “affordable” homes or pay an “affordable” rent. THE BROWNFIELD OPPORTUNITY

Yes, we need a new Local Plan for our borough in order to provide a development strategy within which we can accommodate our local housing, economic and environmental needs. But first we must make good use of our urban brownfield before we consider building in the Green Belt or countryside.

It is not clear what design of infill housing is proposed. East Horsley has uniquely varied quality housing, and standard block builds would detract from this.

The policy should place much greater emphasis on residential development in the existing urban centres. In this way housing needs can be met without resorting to large developments in the Green Belt. There are urban areas in need of regeneration but these are ignored in favour of Green Belt development.

The policy should not be applied to the villages which should remain in the Green Belt. Policy D4: I object to the insetting of villages (meaning in fact, removal of villages from Green Belt protections) and the fact that they will suffer from higher density development and the resulting increase in traffic, increased use of infrastructure which is already under pressure. I object in particular to the insetting of West Clandon, Send and the Horsleys. This will have a detrimental impact on Green Belt openness and the views in and out of the AONB in direct contravention of Policy P1 and P2.

Development in urban areas and inset villages OBJECT. As mentioned before, I object to the insetting of East Horsley from the Green Belt. Development in inset villages is unsustainable as it does disproportionate harm to the environment, increases road traffic, worsens air quality and puts unreasonable demands on already overstretched services, such as schools and medical centres. The infrastructure of East Horsley is just not able to support the additional housing being proposed.

POLICY D4- Development in urban areas and inset villages

I OBJECT. This is a piously aspirational policy that does not address any of the obvious practical issues already touched on above:

• The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be “affordable”, but this does not provide any accommodation for low-paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy so-called “affordable” homes or pay an "affordable" There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low-paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors (all of which this plan aspires to expand). The number of homes planned in the urban area is too low. There is a glaring need for regeneration in many urban areas, but this is ignored in favour building homes on green-field sites instead. This will not address urban housing needs. It is also unsustainable, since building outside the town does disproportionate harm to road traffic, air quality and overstretched infrastructure. The plan envisages a large expansion of the traditional "bricks and mortar" retail sector, but this is a sector in rapid and continuous decline. All the stated policy aims for "inset" villages will be negated by the excessive weight of new housing development proposed which would radically change their character forever. Against this disruptive background, it is barely relevant to talk about preserving views!

The plan calls for a village of 159 residences (with narrow lanes, no streetlights, very few pavements and many listed houses) to be subsumed into a 2,000+ dwelling development, with urban-style buildings up to five storeys high and a population density higher than most London boroughs.

The policy should place much greater emphasis on residential development in the existing urban centres. In this way housing needs can be met without resorting to large developments in the Green Belt. There are urban areas in need of regeneration but these are ignored in favour of Green Belt development.

The policy should not be applied to the villages which should remain in the Green Belt. Unrestricted application of this policy to the villages intended to be inset will change their characters radically and for the worse. The development it encourages will increase traffic and congestion disproportionately.

POLICY D4 Development in urban areas and inset villages – I OBJECT. There are effectively two separate parts to this policy, both are flawed, and in the case on insetting, fatally flawed. In the case of urban development there are numerous flaws, including:

- The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be affordable, but this does not provide any accommodation for low paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy “affordable” homes, nor can they pay the so-called “affordable” rent. There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors.
- The number of homes planned in the urban area is too low – there is a need for regeneration in some areas, but this is ignored and instead the plan concentrates on building homes on green field sites, which does not meet the needs for housing within the town, especially with the centre. This is not a sustainable policy as building outside the town has a disproportionate effect on road traffic.
- The plan envisages a large expansion of the traditional “bricks and mortar” retail sector, but this is a sector in long term decline.

Policy D4

I OBJECT to the removal of Send from the Green Belt because the village and its countryside provides a necessary buffer between Woking and Guildford. The village and the countryside behind the A247 should all be protected.

I OBJECT to three particularly vulnerable areas of high quality amenity land being taken out of the Green Belt around Send which include:

1. The land behind the schools including playing fields and woodland.
2. The land to the right of Cartbridge by the River Wey Navigation up to the new boundary fence with Vision Engineering.
3. Land to the left of Cartbridge going up to the old depot on the Wey Navigation.

I object.

Low paid workers won't be able to afford the 'affordable' rent on 'affordable' homes. These should be built in the urban areas. The villages will suffer with the congestion and infrastructure strains and their character changed adversely for ever.

I object to policy D4 Development in urban areas and inset villages This policy that does not address the opportunity for building in the urban areaThe plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be “affordable”, but this does not provide any accommodation for low-paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy so-called “affordable” homes or pay an “affordable” rent. There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low-paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors (all of which this plan aspires to expand). The number of homes planned in the urban area is much too low. There is a glaring need for regeneration in many urban areas, particularly Guildford Town Centre but this is ignored in favour of building homes on green-field sites instead. This will not address urban housing needs. It is also unsustainable, since building outside the town does disproportionate harm to road traffic, air quality and overstretched infrastructure. The plan envisages a large expansion of the retail sector, but this is hard to justify because the sector is in rapid and continuous decline. THE BROWNFIELD OPPORTUNITY Yes, we need a new Local Plan for our borough in order to provide a development strategy within which we can accommodate our local housing, economic and environmental needs. But first we must make good use of our urban brownfield before we consider building in the Green Belt or countryside. Paragraph 80 of the NPF clearly states that Green Belt serves a key purpose, “to assist in urban regeneration, by encouraging the recycling of derelict land and other urban land”. In order to comply with central planning policy we need a brownfield strategy that states clearly. “We are committed to a brownfield first initiative whereby all applications on previously developed land are given fast track priority and every facility to promote development for residential purposes and employment purposes in order to satisfy the needs of local people. In parallel a low CIL incentive should be given for all residential development on brownfield land.In response to the detailed objections received in the Regulation 18 process of the 2014 Local Plan and also in accordance with government policy a Guildford brownfield land register should be urgently compiled showing address, ownership, occupier, current use and detailed planning briefPerhaps someone could be appointed at GBC with a clear briefing to deliver brownfield targets of housing and employment spaceGBC needs to accelerate the residential redevelopment at Woodbridge Meadows, Walnut Tree Close and the Station within the next 5 yearsGBC needs to examine the residential development opportunity of the 25.7 acres of car parks in GBC ownership.GBC needs to examine the potential for residential development on brownfield land and include as an absolute minimum the 2,551 units proposed in by Allies and Morrison for the town centre included in the masterplan 2015 which has recently been adopted by GBC. The reality is that the Town Centre has the capacity for significantly more homes. See details on GGG website - Guildford Greenbelt Group

There is no commitment to expand social housing or homes for people who can't afford so called "affordable homes".

There is a demand for urban regeneration and protection of the Green Belt, but there is not enough new homes planned in urban areas. There is a pressing need for these but it is ignored favouring instead homes built on green field sites, which will be not be affordable for low paid workers who work in the towns. This policy has been drawn up to help developers where it allows them to build on green fields which is 'easier' and potentially more profitable for them than helping to provide more urban housing.

Any aims for inset villages would be cancelled out by the plan for excessive housing. It is also unsustainable as building outside the town causes increased harm to roads, air quality and overstretched infrastructure.

The plan for more retail buildings would be inappropriate in view of the continual decline in this sector.

Inset villages and Urban areas have been swept up into a single planning statement. This does not reflect the nature of the so called inset villages as rural environments and completely negates the Green Belt nature that existed in these villages beforehand. I cannot therefore see that these areas are being declared as urban areas and that development of that nature will follow.

I object to this policy on the following grounds:

1. The policy should place much greater emphasis on residential development in the existing urban centres. In this way housing needs can be met without resorting to large developments in the Green Belt, and the per person infrastructure investment can be reduced, e.g. fewer pavements, sewers, utility ducting per household than in the open countryside. There are urban areas in need of regeneration but these are ignored in favour of Green Belt development. Living in a town with good access to public transport reduces the desire for personal transportation.
2. The policy should not be applied to the villages which should remain in the Green Belt. Unrestricted application of this policy to the villages intended to be inset will change their characters radically and for the worse. The development it encourages will increase traffic and congestion disproportionately and is not sustainable.

POLICY D4 (DEVELOPMENT IN URBAN AREAS AND INSET VILLAGES) – I object. Despite the need to meet urban demand, regenerate our run-down town and protect the countryside, there isn’t a high enough proportion of new homes planned for urban areas. There’s no encouragement given to expand social housing or genuinely affordable homes. The aims set out for inset villages would be nullified by the excessive level of new housing to be built there. Once again there is too much encouragement for traditional types of shopping that are now out of date.

THE BROWNFIELD OPPORTUNITY

Yes, we need a new Local Plan for our borough in order to provide a development strategy within which we can accommodate our local housing, economic and environmental needs. But first we must make good use of our urban brownfield before we consider building in the Green Belt or countryside. Paragraph 80 of the NPPF clearly states that Green Belt serves a key purpose, “to assist in urban regeneration, by encouraging the recycling of derelict land and other urban land”. In order to comply with central planning policy we need a brownfield strategy that states clearly, “We are committed to a brownfield first initiative whereby all applications on previously developed land are given fast track priority and every facility to promote development for residential purposes and employment purposes in order to satisfy the needs of local people. In parallel a low CIL incentive should be given for all residential development on brownfield land. In response to the detailed objections received in the Regulation 18 process of the 2014 Local Plan and also in accordance with government policy a Guildford brownfield land register should be urgently compiled showing address, ownership, occupier, current use and detailed planning brief. Perhaps someone could be appointed at GBC with a clear briefing to deliver brownfield targets of housing and employment space. GBC needs to accelerate the residential redevelopment at Woodbridge Meadows, Walnut Tree Close and the Station within the next 5 years. GBC needs to examine the residential development opportunity of the 25.7 acres of car parks in GBC ownership. We do not consider that the target of 1,172 homes in the town centre takes account of the need and demand for housing or the opportunities that brownfield sites present for increasing the residential development in the core of the town which will in itself help to sustain the retail core by increased economic impact. The Town Centre policy needs to maximise the potential for residential development on brownfield and include as an absolute minimum the 2,551 units proposed in by Allies and Morrison for the town centre included in the masterplan 2015 which has recently been adopted by GBC. The reality is that the Town Centre has the capacity for significantly more homes. See details on GGG website - Guildford Greenbelt Group.

The criteria required for granting planning permission for new development in urban areas and inset villages is supported by the RHS.

At this stage, we would like to reiterate the request for Wisley Gardens and Wisley Village to be included as an inset within the Green Belt.

Aside from the land owned by the RHS at Wisley Village (which is the majority lying east of the River Wey) there are significant other employers and business in the village including the National Trust Regional Offices.

I OBJECT to Policy D4 - Development in urban areas and inset villages

The policy should place much greater emphasis on residential development in the existing urban centres. In this way housing needs can be met without resorting to large developments in the Green Belt. There are urban areas in need of regeneration but these are ignored in favour of Green Belt development.

The policy should not be applied to the villages which should remain in the Green Belt. Unrestricted application of this policy to the villages intended to be inset will change their characters radically and for the worse. The development it encourages will increase traffic and congestion disproportionately.

I also object to infilling and adding houses to the Jacobs Well village when there is no other infrastructure to support this. It is already the case that living on Blanchards Hill we cannot be certain of which primary or secondary school our child would be able to attend and this uncertainty would only increase if further houses were to be built. In general if more houses are to be built across the borough then schools designed for the villages (inset or not) need to be built or existing nearby schools expanded. For example, our nearest primary school is Burpham at 0.9 miles but we are highly unlikely to receive a place and children from Jacobs Well village are forced to go to schools all over Guildford which is unacceptable and difficult for working parents. For secondary school the rules are even more ludicrous as the existence of a relatively small Church of England school, Christs College, as our nearest school, which takes 50% of christian faith and then children from several feeder schools first means that our child cannot reasonably be likely to be offered a place at this school in most if not all years. However the "nearest school" criteria used by most other schools (for example our second nearest, George Abbott) then means that we would not get into another nearby school either. Therefore until the schools situation for villages like Jacobs Well is fixed or the local schools are forced to change their admittance criteria so as to cater for people in such villages without them being left to have a place in whichever dire school still has places left each year, then I do not think that further houses should be built in such areas.

30 POLICY D4 DEVELOPMENT IN URBAN AREAS

30.1 I object to policy D4 Development in urban areas and inset villages

30.2 This policy that does not address the opportunity for building in the urban area

30.6 The plan envisages a large expansion of the retail sector, but this is a sad voice from the past because the sector is in rapid and continuous decline.

30.7 All the stated policy aims for “inset” villages will be negated by the excessive weight of new housing development proposed which would radically change their character forever.

The reality is that the Town Centre has the capacity for at least 5,000 homes.

31.9 The additional target capacity of 5,000 could easily be provided within the following urban sites which have the capacity for 7,500 homes:

- 2,500 homes detailed in Masterplan 2015 including Woodbridge Meadows which can itself be increased substantially
- 500 homes at North Street
- 1000 homes on current GBC car parks (25 acres) and at the station
- 1000 homes saved in the urban area if 100% of students are accommodated on Surrey University campus (17 ha of car parks)
- 1000 homes at Slyfield on the 40 ha regeneration site
- 1000 windfall infill (50 per annum)
- 500 homes on brownfield sites in villages on sites of max 1 ha which do not impact Green Belt

1. I object to the irreversible damage building new homes on woodland and farmland will create. A combination of brown field sites (burnt common) and small infill sites (Anderton's Farm) are available but have not been considered by the plan.
1. I object to removing villages around Guildford (such as Ripley, Send and Clandon) from the green belt. Villages will be permanently damaged by uncontrolled development. I do not want these villages to become an extension of Greater London via spreading urbanisation. Villages are the culture and heritage of our country.

POLICY D4- Development in urban areas and inset villages

I OBJECT. This is a piously aspirational policy that does not address any of the obvious practical issues already touched on above:

• The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be "affordable", but this does not provide any accommodation for low-paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy so-called "affordable" homes or pay an "affordable" There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low-paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors (all of which this plan aspires to expand).
• The number of homes planned in the urban area is too low. There is a glaring need for regeneration in many urban areas, but this is ignored in favour building homes on green-field sites instead. This will not address urban housing needs. It is also unsustainable, since building outside the town does disproportionate harm to road traffic, air quality and overstretched infrastructure.
• The plan envisages a large expansion of the traditional "bricks and mortar" retail sector, but this is a sector in rapid and continuous decline.
• All the stated policy aims for "inset" villages will be negated by the excessive weight of new housing development proposed which would radically change their character forever. Against this disruptive background, it is barely relevant to talk about preserving views!

Settlement boundary of villages

1.21 As set out in draft Policy P2 of the Proposed Submission Local Plan: Strategy and Sites June 2016 the following villages are now proposed to be inset from the Green Belt: Chilworth, East Horsley, Effingham, Fairlands, Flexford, Jacobs Well, Normandy, Peasmarsh, Ripley, Send, Send Marsh/Burnt Common, Shalford, West Horsley and Wood Street Village.

1.22 The approach of the Council to respond to the changes in national policy in respect of the Green Belt designation and to protect these areas using development management policies in accordance with the NPPF are supported.
1.23 The addition of ‘Policy D4: Development in urban areas and inset villages’ in the latest draft of the Local Plan which seeks to “promote the efficient use of land” whilst ensuring that “this does not negatively impact upon the quality of the local environment” is also supported.

1.24 Land at Polesden Lane and Send Marsh Road, Send Marsh is bordered on three sides by established housing and defensible boundaries including a footpath to the west (footpath number 46) and a second footpath to the north of the site (footpath number 45). It therefore lies within the effective framework of Send Marsh Village although it does not fall within the proposed settlement boundary as defined by the draft Local Plan.

1.25 Given the evidence presented in previous sections relating specifically to our client’s site at Polesden Lane, Send Marsh with regards to its contribution to the Green Belt and its previously developed land status, the location of the settlement boundary should be re-drawn around the entire site.

1.26 The application of the approach in our Green Belt Assessment and evidence presented in our previously developed land report demonstrates that inter alia on the basis the site would provide for more than 25 dwellings that our site should therefore be allocated for residential development. This approach would ensure the soundness of the plan and in particular policies S2: Borough Wide Strategy, P2: Green Belt and D4: Development in urban areas and inset villages.

It is essential that layout, scale, form, height and materials, as described is a primary consideration in all applications. In Guildford town no buildings should be developed that exceed 4 stories, except in circumstances where it can be clearly demonstrated that the critical views and surrounding environment will not be compromised, and then 5 stories should be the absolute limit.

We object to policy D4 Development in urban areas and inset villages. The NPPF does not include a definition of 'insetting' in its glossary and the definition used by GBC (Where a village is excluded from the Green Belt boundary. Currently the villages of Guildford are washed over by the Green Belt and form part of it) does not explain the rationale behind the choice of villages removed or 'inset? It is unclear what exceptional circumstances could warrant the removal of Greenbelt from 15 villages in one sweep? These have not been outlined. The policy lacks clarity and transparency.

This policy that does not address the opportunity for building in the urban area. The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be “affordable”, but this does not provide any accommodation for low-paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy so-called “affordable” homes or pay an “affordable” rent. There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low-paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors (all of which this plan aspires to expand). The number of homes planned in the urban area is much too low. This will not address urban housing needs. It is also unsustainable, since building outside the town does disproportionate harm to road traffic, air quality and overstretched infrastructure. The plan envisages a large expansion of the retail sector, but this is hard to justify.

The landscape character assessment suggested that Blackwell Farm be included in the AONB review, yet GBC excluded it.

A residential Guide from 2004 would be out of date wouldn't it? Technology has come on leaps and bounds since this time.

Blackwell Farm is listed as SW Urban, when it is open and beautiful countryside? This is mis-leading.

Policy D4 implies that the occupants of buildings should continue to be able to enjoy the amenities. This would be best stated explicitly. It is fundamental to there being “no unacceptable effect on the amenities in terms of privacy, noise, vibration, pollution, dust, smell and access to sunlight and daylight.”

For the proposal for East Horsley I object in that there would be a reduction in the enjoyment of amenities by the occupants of buildings due to:

1) Local medical facilities being stretched already
2) Roads are narrow and clogged during peak periods
3) There is no plan to change those roads to ease congestion

4) Insufficient car parking in the community and shopping areas for the intended additional residents. This would be exacerbated if the Wisley Airfield draft plan is actioned.

5) Various roads in East Horsley have no, or narrow footpaths. Increasing the local population will increase the chances of accidents

THE BROWNFIELD OPPORTUNITY

Yes, we need a new Local Plan for our borough in order to provide a development strategy within which we can accommodate our local housing, economic and environmental needs. But first we must make good use of our urban brownfield before we consider building in the Green Belt or countryside. Paragraph 80 of the NPPF clearly states that Green Belt serves a key purpose, “to assist in urban regeneration, by encouraging the recycling of derelict land and other urban land”. In order to comply with central planning policy we need a brownfield strategy that states clearly. “We are committed to a brownfield first initiative whereby all applications on previously developed land are given fast track priority and every facility to promote development for residential purposes and employment purposes in order to satisfy the needs of local people. In parallel a low CIL incentive should be given for all residential development on brownfield land. In response to the detailed objections received in the Regulation 18 process of the 2014 Local Plan and also in accordance with government policy a Guildford brownfield land register should be urgently compiled showing address, ownership, occupier, current use and detailed planning brief. Perhaps someone could be appointed at GBC with a clear briefing to deliver brownfield targets of housing and employment space. GBC needs to accelerate the residential redevelopment at Woodbridge Meadows, Walnut Tree Close and the Station within the next 5 years. GBC needs to examine the residential development opportunity of the 25.7 acres of car parks in GBC ownership. I do not consider that the target of 1,172 homes in the town centre takes account of the need and demand for housing or the opportunities that brownfield sites present for increasing the residential development in the core of the town which will in itself help to sustain the retail core by increased economic impact. The Town Centre policy needs to maximise the potential for residential development on brownfield and include as an absolute minimum the 2,551 units proposed in by Allies and Morrison for the town centre included in the masterplan 2015 which has recently been adopted by GBC. The reality is that the Town Centre has the capacity for significantly more homes. See details on GGG website - Guildford Greenbelt Group.

POLICY D4 - Development in urban areas and inset villages

We object to this policy:

1. The policy should place much greater emphasis on residential development in the existing urban centres. In this way housing needs can be met without resorting to large developments in the Green Belt. There are urban areas in need of regeneration but these are ignored in favour of Green Belt development.

2. The policy should not be applied to the villages which should remain in the Green Belt. Unrestricted application of this policy to the villages intended to be inset will change their characters radically and for the worse. The development it encourages will increase traffic and congestion disproportionally.

• No commitment to expand social housing or accommodation for people who can’t afford so-called affordable homes.
• Not enough new homes in urban areas, despite demand and need for urban regeneration and protection of Green Belt.
• Objectives for inset villages cancelled out by plans for excessive housing growth there.
• Too much emphasis on traditional shops, when a lot of this sector is in terminal decline.

POLICY D4 - Development in urban areas and inset villages

I OBJECT. This does not address any of the obvious practical issues already touched on above:

• The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be “affordable”, but this does not provide any accommodation for low-paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy so-called “affordable” homes or pay an “affordable” rent. There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low-paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors (all of which this plan aspires to expand).
• The number of homes planned in the urban area is too low. There is a glaring need for regeneration in many urban areas, but this is ignored in favour building homes on green-field sites instead. This will not address urban housing needs. It is also unsustainable, since building outside the town does disproportionate harm to road traffic, air quality and overstretched infrastructure.
• The plan envisages a large expansion of the traditional “bricks and mortar” retail sector, but this is a sector in rapid and continuous decline.
• All the stated policy aims for “inset” villages will be negated by the excessive weight of new housing development proposed which would radically change their character forever. Against this disruptive background, it is barely relevant to talk about preserving views!

3.1.3 Impact of the proposed density of housing and Policy D4.

A large development such as proposed for site A46, with urban housing density, will impact significantly on wildlife within the ancient woodland and veteran trees on the site. The damage to both the environment and its wildlife would be immeasurable regardless of whether buffer zones are put in place.

Not only would the woodland wildlife on the site be harmed, but also wildlife in the woodland next to the site, i.e. the North end of Walden's Copse and Pussey's Copse. Furthermore, it is very important not to break the canopy in any of the existing connections between these woodlands for fear of wildlife isolation. Dormice, for example, do not often like to come down to the ground preferring to move through the canopy.

With the proposed development will come cars, noise, light and air pollution all of which are hazardous to wildlife. As well as increased human activity, there are likely to be approximately 187 extra cats in the area, cat ownership currently being 17 out of 100 households, together with a large number of dogs (see section 3.1.1. above). These animals would undoubtedly have a serious impact on the wildlife of the woodland areas no matter how well the woodland are protected by fencing for example (it is well known that people cut fencing to facilitate access).

The elimination of farmland on site A46, which has traditionally been used for grazing, would also be disastrous since it provides habitat for a variety of wildlife including hedgehogs (which are seriously in decline), bats, owls, and woodpeckers. The open fields are important hunting grounds for barn owls, which can only hunt over open space, and birds of prey such as red kite, buzzard and kestrel. Bats have been seen to hunt by the avenue of ancient oaks and on the wooded edges.

At present, the majority of houses in the villages of Normandy and Flexford have fairly large gardens, which support large numbers of wildlife species. The increased density in housing will come with gardens of much reduced size. There is also a trend in such housing developments for areas to be paved over for parking. Taken together, this results in a further reduction in the amount of green space, and the value of the gardens for wildlife declines.

GBC are of the opinion that the size of garden is irrelevant when it comes to maintaining biodiversity (see answer given by GBC to question 26 at the meeting organised by Normandy Parish Council on 24 February 2016). This is incorrect. According to an internet article compiled by Ken Thompson and Steve Head, entitled 'Gardens as a resource for wildlife' (Wildlife Gardening Forum) It has been shown that total vegetation is a major determinant of diversity and abundance of... wildlife. In this article the potential national significance of gardens as a resource for wildlife is clear, but that as garden size decreases, the area occupied by trees, hedges and tall shrubs also declines, with a resulting decline in biodiversity.

Policy D4 anticipates that new possible development sites will be proposed in inset villages (which will include Normandy and Flexford if the Plan is adopted) in addition to current site locations. Whilst they state that they aim to protect the important character of these inset villages using other development management policies, it is inevitable that any such development, if granted, will further increase housing density, with greater impacts on wildlife (as above).

GBC state in the Plan that they have a responsibility to use natural resources, such as land, wisely. They are of the view that increasing densities of housing is one such wise use of land, because it makes development more sustainable. However they fail to take account of the impact of such development on wildlife and the environment, both within the proposed development site and on statutory and non-statutory designated sites in and around Normandy and Flexford.

POLICY D4 Development in urban areas and inset villages

GROUND FOR OBJECTION There are effectively two separate parts to this policy, both are flawed, and in the case on insetting, fatally flawed. In the case of urban development there are numerous flaws, including:

- The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be affordable, but this does not provide any accommodation for low paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy “affordable” homes, nor can they pay the so-called “affordable” rent. There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors.
- The number of homes planned in the urban area is too low – there is a need for regeneration in some areas, but this is ignored and instead the plan concentrates on building homes on green field sites, which does not meet the needs for housing within the town, especially with the centre. This is not a sustainable policy as building outside the town has a disproportionate effect on road traffic.
- The plan envisages a large expansion of the traditional “bricks and mortar” retail sector, but this is a sector in long term decline.

It would make logical sense to build on existing Brownfield site first rather than destroying the valuable Greenfield sites. There are many Brownfield sites in Guildford city centre created from redundant office spaces and this area could be used to build extra houses, where services and transport links are close by and where there are many local secondary schools nearby. This would be a more sustainable solution as you can regenerate disused areas rather than depleting Greenfield sites. Furthermore, the roads in the centre are able to accommodate increased traffic rather than creating more traffic in a rural area with a single lane underpass. It is vital that the Flexford and Normandy area is kept as a rural, spacious area and that the greenbelt areas are not built on.

16. POLICY D4

I OBJECT to Policy D4 - Development in urban areas and inset villages.

The policy should place much greater emphasis on residential development in the existing urban centres. In this way housing needs can be met without resorting to large developments in the Green Belt. There are urban areas in need of regeneration but these are ignored in favour of Green Belt development.

The policy should not be applied to the villages which should remain in the Green Belt. Unrestricted application of this policy to the villages intended to be inset will change their characters radically and for the worse. The development it encourages will increase traffic and congestion disproportionately.

Policy D4: we object to the insetting of villages (meaning in fact removal of the villages from greenbelt protection) and the fact that they will suffer from higher density development and the resulting increase in traffic, use of infrastructure etc., which is already under pressure. We object in particular to the insetting of West Clandon, Send and the Horsleys. This will have a detrimental impact on greenbelt openness and the views in and out of the area of natural beauty and indirect contravention of Policy P1 and P2.

Policy D4 (Development in urban areas and inset villages) requires that: “proposals for new development within inset village areas will have particular regard to: the distinctive settlement pattern of the village and the important relationship between the built development and the surrounding landscape; important views of the village from the surrounding landscape and views within the village of local landmarks.” As previously mentioned this proposal does not fulfill this requirement particularly in the area of the distinctive settlement pattern of the village.

I wanted to draw your attention to my objection to the proposed developments in West and East Horsley and the surrounding areas. It seems there have been no sound reasons given for the proposed changes which seem to be aimed solely at increasing land available within the settlements for future additional development.

I am also opposed to the village’s removal from the Green Belt by insetting and extending the 003 Local Plan Settlement Area boundaries. West Horsley Parish is one of a rich and varied mix of established lo housing density settlements with a considerable number of historic buildings. Positioned on the north side of the North Downs, partly in the Surrey Hills AONB, it attracts a considerable number of recreational visitors through the seasons each year. This added to your proposed circa 3,000 additional houses will ensure the Village infrastructure falls apart.

I OBJECT. This policy that does not address any of the obvious practical issues already touched on but it is essential, that a reasonable amount of affordable housing is available for purchase but it also essential that there should property that are affordable for rent. Yet recently when any development has taken place in Send affordable is the last thing on the developers mind. Tice the builder, house and yard was recently redeveloped with four-bed room houses. A police house was redeveloped, Skene Close was the result with six houses selling for between £630 to 690,000, and a plot in Send Marsh, which was two houses away from some cottages, had a detached house built which sold for £1005000. The site could have accommodation two pairs of semi-detached cottages, which would have stood some chance of being affordable.

Low-paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy so-called “affordable” homes or pay an “affordable” rent. There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low-paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors.

The number of homes planned in the urban area is too low. There is a glaring need for regeneration in Guildford and not retail or office space, but this is ignored in favour building homes on green-field sites instead. This will not address urban housing needs. It is also unsustainable, since building outside the town does disproportionately harm to road traffic, air quality and overstretched infrastructure. The plan envisages a large expansion of the traditional “bricks and mortar” retail sector, but this is a sector in rapid and continuous decline. All the stated policy aims for “inset” villages will be negated by the excessive weight of new housing development proposed which would radically change their character forever. Against this disruptive background, it is barely relevant to talk about preserving views!

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
POLICY D4 DEVELOPMENT IN URBAN AREAS

I object to policy D4 Development in urban areas and inset villages.

This policy that does not address the opportunity for building in the urban area.

The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be 'affordable', but this does not provide any accommodation for low-paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy so-called ‘affordable’ homes or pay an ‘affordable’ rent. There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low-paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors (all of which this plan aspires to expand).

The number of homes planned in the urban area is much too low. There is a glaring need for regeneration in many urban areas, particularly Guildford Town Centre but this is ignored in favour of building homes on green-field sites instead.

This will not address urban housing needs. It is also unsustainable, since building outside the town does disproportionate harm to road traffic, air quality and overstretched infrastructure.

The plan envisages a large expansion of the retail sector, but this is hard to justify because the sector is in rapid and continuous decline.

THE BROWNFIELD OPPORTUNITY

Yes, we need a new Local Plan for our borough in order to provide a development strategy within which we can accommodate our local housing, economic and environmental needs. But first we must make good use of our urban brownfield before we consider building in the Green Belt or countryside.

Paragraph 80 of the NPPF clearly states that Green Belt serves a key purpose, ‘to assist in urban regeneration, by encouraging the recycling of derelict land and other urban land’. In order to comply with central planning policy we need a brownfield strategy that states clearly. ‘We are committed to a brownfield first initiative whereby all applications on previously developed land are given fast track priority and every facility to promote development for residential purposes and employment purposes in order to satisfy the needs of local people. In parallel a low CIL incentive should be given for all residential development on brownfield land.

In response to the detailed objections received in the Regulation 18 process of the 2014 Local Plan and also in accordance with government policy a Guildford brownfield land register should be urgently compiled showing address, ownership, occupier, current use and detailed planning brief.

Perhaps someone could be appointed at GBC with a clear briefing to deliver brownfield targets of housing and employment space.

GBC needs to accelerate the residential redevelopment at Woodbridge Meadows, Walnut Tree Close and the Station within the next 5 years.

GBC needs to examine the residential development opportunity of the 25.7 acres of car parks in GBC ownership.
I do not consider that the target of 1,172 homes in the town centre takes account of the need and demand for housing or the opportunities that brownfield sites present for increasing the residential development in the core of the town which will in itself help to sustain the retail core by increased economic impact.

The Town Centre policy needs to maximise the potential for residential development on brownfield and include as an absolute minimum the 2,551 units proposed in by Allies and Morrison for the town centre included in the masterplan 2015 which has recently been adopted by GBC. The reality is that the Town Centre has the capacity for significantly more homes. See details on GGG website - Guildford Greenbelt Group.

POLICY D4

I OBJECT to Policy D4 - Development in urban areas and inset villages

The policy should place much greater emphasis on residential development in the existing urban centres. In this way housing needs can be met without resorting to large developments in the Green Belt. There are urban areas in need of regeneration but these are ignored in favour of Green Belt development.

The policy should not be applied to the villages which should remain in the Green Belt. Unrestricted application of this policy to the villages intended to be inset will change their characters radically and for the worse. The development it encourages will increase traffic and congestion disproportionately.

Policy D4: I object to the insetting of villages (meaning in fact, removal of villages from Green Belt protections) and the fact that they will suffer from higher density development with the resulting increase in traffic, and additional unacceptable pressure on infrastructure. I object in particular to the insetting of West Clandon, Send, West Horsley and East Horsley. This will have a detrimental impact on Green Belt openness and the views in and out of the AONB in direct contravention of Policy P1 and P2.

I OBJECT. This is a piously aspirational policy that does not address any of the obvious practical issues already touched on above:

- The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be “affordable”, but this does not provide any accommodation for low-paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy so-called “affordable” homes or pay an “affordable” rent. There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low-paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors (all of which this plan aspires to expand).
- The number of homes planned in the urban area is too low. There is a glaring need for regeneration in many urban areas, but this is ignored in favour building homes on green-field sites instead. This will not address urban housing needs. It is also unsustainable, since building outside the town does disproportionate harm to road traffic, air quality and overstretched infrastructure.
- The plan envisages a large expansion of the traditional “bricks and mortar” retail sector, but this is a sector in rapid and continuous decline.
- All the stated policy aims for “inset” villages will be negated by the excessive weight of new housing development proposed which would radically change their character forever. Against this disruptive background, it is barely relevant to talk about preserving views!

I object to policy D4 Development in urban areas and inset villages. This policy that does not address the opportunity for building in the urban area. The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be “affordable”, but this does not provide any accommodation for low-paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy so-called “affordable” homes or pay an “affordable” rent. THE BROWNFIELD OPPORTUNITY Yes, we need a new Local Plan for our borough in order to provide a development strategy within which we can accommodate our local housing, economic and environmental needs. In response to the detailed objections received in the Regulation 18 process of the 2014 Local Plan and also in accordance with government policy a Guildford brownfield land register should be urgently compiled showing address, ownership, occupier, current use and detailed planning brief. Perhaps someone could be appointed at GBC with a clear briefing to deliver brownfield targets of housing and employment space. GBC needs to accelerate the residential redevelopment at Woodbridge Meadows, Walnut Tree Close and the Station within the next 5 years. GBC needs to examine the residential development opportunity of the 25.7 acres of car parks in GBC ownership. Do not consider that the target of 1,172 homes in the town centre takes account of the need and demand for housing or the opportunities that brownfield sites present for increasing the residential development in the core of the town which will in itself help to sustain the retail core by increased economic impact. The Town Centre policy needs to maximise the potential for residential development on brownfield and include as an absolute minimum the 2,551 units proposed in by Allies and Morrison for the town centre included in the masterplan 2015 which has recently been adopted by GBC. <td>I o b j e c t to Policy D4 on Urban Development. The proposed supply for affordable housing is not meeting the demand where it is needed the most: in urban areas. Social housing is needed where there is a greater concentration of low paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors nearby. Instead the Draft Local Plan focuses on building homes on greenfield sites over regeneration of urban areas with 8,086 new houses planned for the Green Belt, but only 1,135 for Guildford urban area. This f a i l s to meet the h o u s i n g needs within the town and is u n s u s t a i n a b l e as it leads to increased road traffic into town centres.</td>

I object to this policy on the following grounds:

1. The policy should place much greater emphasis on residential development in the existing urban centres. In this way housing needs can be met without resorting to large developments in the Green Belt, and the per person infrastructure investment can be reduced, e.g. fewer pavements, sewers, utility ducting per household than in the open countryside. There are urban areas in need of regeneration but these are ignored in favour of Green Belt development. Living in a town with good access to public transport reduces the desire for personal transportation.

2. The policy should not be applied to the villages which should remain in the Green Belt. Unrestricted application of this policy to the villages intended to be inset will change their characters radically and for the worse. The development it encourages will increase traffic and congestion disproportionately and is not sustainable.

Policy D4 of the Proposed Submission Local Plan sets out the approach to development in inset villages. The Inset villages were ‘washed over’ by Green belt allocations until recently and are still characterised as small settlements in rural areas. Send and Send Marsh / Burnt Common are already been subject to significant allocations that will fundamentally change the character of the settlements.

Para 4.3.12 of the Proposed Submission Local Plan notes that where villages are inset from the Green Belt, other development management policies should be used to restrict any inappropriate development. Policy D4 as phrased would allow proposals for development to come forward in addition to the site allocations identified in the Proposed Submission Local Plan.

Proposed changes to the Local Plan

The Parish Council request that Policy D4 is amended to defer to a neighbourhood plan where there is one in place, allowing this to establish sites for appropriate infill development in line with the general principles of strategic policy. Otherwise this policy could essentially override any sites identified by neighbourhood plans.

Policy D4: I object to the insetting of villages (meaning in fact, removal of villages from Green Belt protections) and the fact that they will be suffer from higher density development and the resulting increase in traffic, use of infrastructure which is already under pressure. I object in particular to the insetting of West Clandon, Send and the Horsleys. This will have a detrimental impact on Green Belt openness and the views in and out of the AONB in direct contravention of Policy P1 and P2.

I object to policy D4 Development in urban areas and inset villages

This policy that does not address the opportunity for building in the urban area

The plan envisages that 40% of homes built will be “affordable”, but this does not provide any accommodation for low-paid workers, for example, those on the minimum wage, who cannot afford to buy so-called “affordable” homes or pay an “affordable” rent. There is a need for some expansion in social housing, especially in urban areas, where there is a greater concentration of low-paid workers such as those employed in the retail, warehousing and distribution sectors (all of which this plan aspires to expand).

The number of homes planned in the urban area is much too low. There is a glaring need for regeneration in many urban areas, particularly Guildford Town Centre but this is ignored in favour of building homes on green-field sites instead.

This will not address urban housing needs. It is also unsustainable, since building outside the town does disproportionate harm to road traffic, air quality and overstretched infrastructure.
The plan envisages a large expansion of the retail sector, but this is hard to justify because the sector is in rapid and continuous decline.

THE BROWNFIELD OPPORTUNITY

Yes, we need a new Local Plan for our borough in order to provide a development strategy within which we can accommodate our local housing, economic and environmental needs. But first we must make good use of our urban brownfield before we consider building in the Green Belt or countryside.

Paragraph 80 of the NPPF clearly states that Green Belt serves a key purpose, “to assist in urban regeneration, by encouraging the recycling of derelict land and other urban land”. In order to comply with central planning policy we need a brownfield strategy that states clearly. “We are committed to a brownfield first initiative whereby all applications on previously developed land are given fast track priority and every facility to promote development for residential purposes and employment purposes in order to satisfy the needs of local people. In parallel a low CIL incentive should be given for all residential development on brownfield land.

In response to the detailed objections received in the Regulation 18 process of the 2014 Local Plan and also in accordance with government policy a Guildford brownfield land register should be urgently compiled showing address, ownership, occupier, current use and detailed planning brief

Perhaps someone could be appointed at GBC with a clear briefing to deliver brownfield targets of housing and employment space

GBC needs to accelerate the residential redevelopment at Woodbridge Meadows, Walnut Tree Close and the Station within the next 5 years

GBC needs to examine the residential development opportunity of the 25.7 acres of car parks in GBC ownership

I do not consider that the target of 1,172 homes in the town centre takes account of the need and demand for housing or the opportunities that brownfield sites present for increasing the residential development in the core of the town which will in itself help to sustain the retail core by increased economic impact.

The Town Centre policy needs to maximise the potential for residential development on brownfield and include as an absolute minimum the 2,551 units proposed in by Allies and Morrison for the town centre included in the masterplan 2015 which has recently been adopted by GBC. The reality is that the Town Centre has the capacity for significantly more homes. See details on GGG website - Guildford Greenbelt Group

Policy D4 anticipates that new possible development sites will be proposed in inset villages (which will include Normandy and Flexford if the Plan is adopted) in addition to current site locations. Whilst they state that they aim to protect the important character of these inset villages using other development management policies, it is inevitable that any such development, if granted, will further increase housing density, with greater impacts on wildlife (as above).

POLICY D4: DEVELOPMENT IN URBAN AREAS AND INSET VILLAGES

Our Client is supportive of the proposed changes to the Urban Area and Settlement boundary shown around Ash; specifically the inclusion of Site A28. However, whilst the overall objectives of the policy guidance set out at Policy D4 are acknowledged and broadly supported by Our Client it is considered that the tone of the policy could serve to curtail rather than encourage the development of the specific site allocations identified in the Plan. Paragraph 4.5.46 suggests that the policy is targeted to windfall opportunities, however, the wording could still be applied to ‘all new development’ including site allocations. Our Client contend that this would undermine the delivery of Site Allocations and impact on the delivery of the Council’s housing target.

The expansion and development of edge of settlement sites will necessitate some changes in scale, massing and height. It will also be necessary to build at increased densities in order to ensure the most effective use of land. Whilst it will be important to ensure that new development successfully integrates within areas and does not impact on the amenities of neighbours the Borough requires a step change in the delivery of housing, particularly in urban areas. As such settlements and places will need to sensitively evolve.

POLICY D4: CHARACTER AND DESIGN OF NEW DEVELOPMENT

1.86 Whilst the overall objectives of the updated policy guidance set out at Policy D4 are acknowledged and broadly supported by our client it is considered that the tone of the amended policy is now even more likely to serve to curtail rather than encourage the development of the specific site allocations identified in the Plan.

1.87 The Council do provide some much-needed clarity in broadening the policy to refer to all new development, however, our Client remain concerned that the policy has the potential to undermine the delivery of Site Allocations and impact on the delivery of the Council’s housing target.

1.88 The distilled reference to site density in this policy (moved from Policy H1- see earlier comments) when read in the context of the other policy restrictions will not serve to maximise the potential of the specifically identified site allocations. The policy should make a clear commitment to a density target which would be more clearly set out in Policy H1. It should also be made clear that the Site Allocations are expected to meet the projected density targets set out in the Pro-formas as a minimum.

1.89 The expansion and development of edge of settlement sites will necessitate some changes in scale, massing and height. It will also be necessary to build at increased densities in order to ensure the most effective use of land. Whilst it will be important to ensure that new development successfully integrates within areas and does not impact on the amenities of neighbours the Borough requires a step change in the delivery of housing, particularly in urban areas. As such settlements and places will need to sensitively evolve. Policy D4 in conjunction with Policy H1 needs to provide more of a driver for development.
UN SOUND: As currently drafted the policy will not be EFFECTIVE in securing the delivery of Site Allocations. It is suggested that the relevant aspects of the policy are re-worded as follows.

“High quality design is expected in the borough. All developments will:

d) Take appropriate account of the; existing grain street pattern, layout, scale, form, massing, height and materials of surrounding buildings and structures;

e) Deliver a minimum density of 30 dwellings per hectare on all allocated sites to ensure the most efficient use of the land. Unallocated sites should target a minimum density of 30 dwellings per hectare unless this would be of significant detriment to local character and context

l) Conserve, and where possible enhance designated heritage assets

m) Ensure that the amenities enjoyed by the occupants of buildings are protected.”

And the following additional text added for clarity:

“Development will be deemed acceptable in principle for all of the Site Allocations identified at pages 123-126. The approximate site densities should be achieved wherever possible subject to compliance with other plan policies.

The criteria set out for new development should also not serve as a brake on the delivery of Site Allocations.”

OBJECT. To the concept of insetting villages – see P3 above. 40% of new homes will be ‘affordable’ is not realistic as the plan proposes on green field sites and should be concentrated in urban areas local to places of work.

Insetting East and West Horsley flies in the face of reality. 385 homes is an increase of 35%, greater than anywhere else (16% Ash & Tongham and 11% in Guildford Town) and will face legal challenge.

The planned development will swamp the Horsleys with extra cars and people using the schools, shops, station, sports, medical centre, etc., they are dramatically unbalanced, unsustainable and the Plan does not address the provision, or even consider the need for expanding local services.

M&G welcomes this new design policy that will apply to all new development, notably the encouragement given to innovative architecture in the appropriate context, and use of appropriate density to make the most efficient use of land whilst responding to local character and context.

M&G requests that the wording of bullet D4(1n) on space standards be amended as follows, to repeat the approach used for D4(i). It is noted that the application of the standard should not compromise viability, and therefore there may be circumstances where full compliance is not possible and some flexibility in the application of the policy is necessary.

Q+A Planning Ltd act on behalf Aviva Investors in respect of White Lion Walk shopping centre in Guildford town centre.

Policy D4 has been significantly changed and concerns the character and design of new development. This includes a series of detailed design requirements and presumably is intended to replace, at least in part, the previous requirements concerning density in Policy H1. We have objected to Policy H1 to the removal of sensible support for high density residential developments in Guildford town centre. This sentiment has not been replaced in Policy D4.

The only response to density in the Plan concerns an open-ended requirement at criterion (d) of Policy D2 that seeks to ensure appropriate density to make the most efficient use of the land whilst responding to local character and context. Whilst as a concept, this is sensible, this gives little guidance on local circumstances or the general starting point on for density, particularly in the residential sector. Consistent with our comments on Policy H1, this is inconsistent with the requirements of local authorities in paragraph 47 of the NPPF to ‘set out their own approach to housing density to reflect local circumstances’.
It is requested that the overarching support for high density residential development in Guildford town centre ought to be re-introduced, since this properly responds to local circumstances and reflects the aim to deliver more housing in the town centre.

POLICY D4: CHARACTER AND DESIGN OF NEW DEVELOPMENT

The aspiration for high quality design as set out in the criteria at Policy D4 is generally supported. In particular criteria m) which seeks to ensure appropriate density to make the most efficient use of the land whilst responding to local character and context. Criteria m) deals with the effect of development on the amenity enjoyed by the occupants of buildings. Whilst this general statement is supported, it is important that conclusions are not drawn disproportionately at the outline stage, rather that due consideration is made at the detailed planning stage. Therefore it is considered that an amendment to this criterion should be made to clarify the role of the detailed design stage.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Attached documents:

Surrey Police welcome the inclusion of part c) which states that amongst other considerations that all developments will ‘create attractive, safe and accessible places that discourage crime and disorder through design’. This policy would currently be ineffective at reducing crime unless there was specific reference included to ‘Secured by Design’ standards. Inclusion of SBD in either Chapter 3 (Spatial Vision) or Policy D4 (Character and design of new development) would be essential to ensure there is sufficient policy justification to make new developments safe and minimise opportunities for crime and disorder. Secured by Design is actively promoted by our Crime Prevention Design Advisors who work with applicants to ensure opportunities for crime are minimised through good design.

Surrey Police recommend that Policy D4 should be amended to state that high quality design is expected in the borough. All developments will:

c) create attractive, safe and accessible places that discourage crime and disorder through design and the application of Secured by Design standards.

SBD has been adopted in a variety of schemes in the Borough of Guildford. A number of examples are listed below:

- 14/P/02259 | Erection of twelve residential dwellings with change of use from D1/D2 to C3 wing demolition existing social club. | Corporation Club,

- 06/P/02309 | Outline planning application is sought for a mixed use scheme adjacent to the railway line within an E-shaped courtyard development rising from three floors to five floor levels with basement parking, providing office units & residential on ground floor and first floors with residential above (in total 177 residential units) following demolition of two existing office units. | 1-2, Station View, Guildford, GU1

- 14/P/00474 | Redevelopment of existing garage site and replace with four x 1 bedroom apartments (amended plans received 08/05/14 showing two windows in the eastern elevation of the building) | Park Barn Drive Garages, Park Barn Drive Access To Garages, Guildford

- Mixed use development (Waitroise) including the erection of 45 flats and 3 town houses at the site formally known as the Bellerby Theatre, the Guildford Youth and Community Centre and the Live and Let Live PH.
Secured by Design is the UK Police flagship initiative, supporting the principles of ‘designing out crime’ by use of proven crime prevention measures and measurable and appropriate security standards. Creating a sense of place where residents and legitimate users are able to go about their daily routine without unduly fearing crime or insecurity is a key element of the Secured by Design initiative for New Homes. This is reflected by the National Planning Policy Framework 2012 (NPPF 2012) where its purpose is to provide ‘a social role – supporting strong, vibrant and healthy communities, by providing the supply of housing to meet the needs of present and future generations; and by creating a high quality built environment, with accessible local services that reflect the community’s needs and support its health, social and cultural well-being;’ (para. 7). Sustainable development seeks to ‘improve the conditions in which people live, work, travel and take leisure’ (para. 9). Core planning principles should ‘always seek to secure high quality design and a good standard of amenity for all existing and future occupants of land and buildings’ (para. 17).

Crime should not be seen as a standalone issue, to be addressed separately from other design considerations. That is why guidance on crime has been embedded throughout the guidance on design rather than being set out in isolation.

Section 17 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 requires all local authorities to exercise their functions with due regard to their likely effect on crime and disorder, and to do all they reasonably can to prevent crime and disorder. The prevention of crime and the enhancement of community safety are matters that a local authority should consider when exercising its planning functions.

To ensure more developers are aware of SBD and that the principles of SBD are adopted in future development proposals, direct reference to ‘Secured by Design’ within development management policies is strongly recommended. Among the many benefits of SBD for future occupants, direct reference to SBD would ensure local plan compliance with the relevant paragraphs of the NPPF and NPPG guidance. We have suggested a recommended wording for an emerging development management policy to ensure reference to SBD is appropriately worded and to ensure that the Local Plan is compliant with the relevant policies of the NPPF concerning policing.

Unfortunately developers stating in their Design and Access Statement that they have ‘provided measures to achieve a development that responds to the key principals of Secured by Design’ does not ensure SBD will be adopted in the development.

Local Authorities must ensure that an application is made for a full Secured by Design (SbD) award and ensure that a planning condition be applied to require the development to SBD standards. Our Crime prevention design advisors will then work with applicants to ensure an assessment on all SBD matters is achieved and that the required standards are met to achieve a completion certificate.

Access for emergency vehicles

Surrey Police consider that reference to providing sufficient access for emergency service vehicles should be included within Policy D4 of the local plan. All developments will:

- Ensure sufficient access is provided for emergency services – police, fire service and ambulance services.

This is an important planning consideration for assessing new housing developments. Minimising obstructions to emergency vehicles is essential to help reduce response times and the ability of emergency services to access new homes and casualties in need.

With new developments including adopted and non-adopted roads, developers should ensure that there are no obstructions or reductions in road widths which would impact the ability of emergency service crews to service developments. Providing reference to access for emergency services to new development within local planning policy is considered necessary to raise awareness of this issue and ensure compliance with the relevant paragraphs of the NPPF.

The changes to Policy D4 are deemed appropriate to reflect housing across the borough and not just the urban areas of Guildford, and Ash and Tongham, and inset villages.

Whilst the inclusion of the wording for high quality design expected in the borough is welcomed, the council should take a balanced view on the enforcement of each individual point, so that they are not to the detriment of the development coming forward. Each site should be considered on a site-by-site basis with various levels of weight attributed to each policy, to ensure the correct design of development.
