E1. Sustainable Employment. P63

While the town centre can be a suitable location for Offices (use B1a) – assuming that journeys to it are not made by car - it may not be so for Research and Development (B1b), which requires spacious sites and usually some industrial equipment and has comparatively low employee numbers. We ask for suitable qualification of this policy.

Guildford has had very low unemployment figures and in recent surveys has emerged as one of the wealthiest and best educated communities in Britain with successful high economic growth rates.

This successful development has been largely due to skilled worker inputs with very high value-added labour, especially around a cluster of economic activities outside the traditional town centre based on the Surrey Research Park, the University and hospital.

There is now a serious scarcity of housing for skilled workers who are key to the maintenance of existing facilities and enterprises such as schools, hospitals, public administration and of course highly specialised technical enterprises who not only make a great contribution to the Guildford economy but are also important to the British economy.

There are reliable reports that new companies are now reluctant, due to high housing costs, to establish themselves here.

While there is a need for welfare housing, recently the Office of National Statistics reported Guildford as the least deprived community in Britain.

This does not mean there are no problems in this area, but it needs to be seen in perspective with the need to sustain and encourage an efficient economy without which welfare social and environmental improvements cannot be sustained.

ddd) The Guildford Society agrees that Guildford has been one of the most economically successful towns over the past 30 years, and supports the importance of the University, Surrey Research Park and The Pirbright Institute as key enablers of the growth of high value enterprises with high value jobs. The Society also supports efforts to expand and retain existing corporate and professional services operations, particularly in the town centre.

ee) Employment provision is under threat from infrastructure deficit, there is evidence that businesses are put off by congestion, and a lack of high quality commercial space and affordable housing.

fff) The Guildford Society also notes the emerging desire, via LEPs and County Councils, to collaborate in an arc of towns around London, stretching from Cambridge via Oxford to Reading, Guildford and Ashford. This is a major opportunity for high tech businesses to collaborate. Guildford, with the right vision and leadership, can build on Guildford’s strengths. The Guildford Society believes the plan should have clear proposals to participate in this LEP driven strategy to ensure the town attracts high value employment to the town.

ggg) We are concerned the council has yet to plan for changes in the need for Retail space. Recent developments indicate retail is moving either to mega shopping centres e.g. White City Westfield type developments and to on-line shopping. It is also noted that the Gross Value Added of Retail employment is low. The Guildford Society believes the local plan needs to be built on an explicit aim to bring high value employment to the borough with retail development being restricted to local requirements e.g. supermarket expansion, and expansion of small retail offers or market space and restaurant space to support leisure in the town centre. The local plan makes no mention of these strategic choices, assuming ‘business as usual’.

hhh) The current Plan proposes a Guildford with a quantum leap in shopping space, in the town centre that will be inaccessible due to inadequate transport provision. New housing is scattered around the edges of the town centre, also with inadequate transport and other facilities. Proposed employment centres may exacerbate transport difficulties e.g. more cross-town commuting.

iii) Policy E1 has been revised to reflect the change in the lifetime of the Local Plan. However, as a result, the number of class B1 jobs has been increased from 3,200 to 4,100. The reason for this increase is unclear and has not been referenced within the summary of changes to the Local Plan which accompanies the document. However, in direct contradiction to this increase, the amount of floorspace allocated for these jobs has decreased from a range of 37,000-47,000 sq m to a range of 36,100 - 43,700. Again, the reason for this change remains unclear and requires further clarification.

jjj) The Guildford Society believes in enabling economic growth but it should be high quality, high value whilst delivering environmental quality for the community. The current draft Local Plan fundamentally fails to consider how this can be achieved in the planning area as a whole.

jjj. a) There needs to be a statement on employment priorities which highlights that professional workers with high GVAs have been largely responsible for Guildford’s impressive economic growth.
jjj. b) Due to high housing costs, many of these types of employees cannot afford to live here. jjj. c) Companies and Government utilities, hospitals and schools cannot recruit skilled staff.
jjj. d) Priority should be given to the provision of skilled worker housing. This does not eliminate the need for supporting less skilled workers, or for welfare housing, but recognises the need to strike a balance between them. Without promoting the most productive labour skills the others will not prosper.

POLICY E1 - Meeting employment needs

We object to this policy.

1. We object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.

1. The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and contains ancient woodland and is unsuitable for development.

1. We object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Gosden Hill Farm. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

5. Employment Land Allocations in Send, Send Marsh, and Burnt Common

5.01 Send Parish Council object to the following proposals related to employment designations and allocations included within the 2017 draft Guildford Local Plan:

- Send Business Centre – designation changed from “Locally Significant Employment Site” to “Strategic Employment Site”.
- Site A58 – Land around Burnt Common warehouse – “Strategic Employment Site” providing a minimum of 7,000sqm employment floorspace.

The reasons for objections are set out below.

Send Business Centre – changed designation

5.02 As discussed in Section 4, the 2014 draft version of the Guildford Local Plan proposed to inset the Send Business Centre and the adjacent employment land, Site Allocation 67, from the Green Belt. The employment land proposed at Site Allocation 67 would have effectively extended the existing Business Centre by approximately 1.4ha. However, despite this proposed enlargement, in the 2014 draft Local Plan Policy 13 did not include Send Business Centre in the list of new Strategic Employment Sites.

5.03 The 2015 Employment Land Needs Assessment [ELNA], prepared as part of the evidence base for 2016 draft Guildford Local Plan, includes Send Business Centre in its list of Non-Strategic Employment Sites. The 2015 ELNA states that Send Business Centre has “indirect” strategic road access, “poor” access to amenities and facilities, and “very poor” access to public transport [see Table 4.2 of the 2015 ELNA]. The report also states that there is no identified potential for intensification and/or additional floorspace. It is clear from this assessment that Send Business Centre is not an appropriate site for the development of further employment land.

5.04 In the 2016 draft version of the Local Plan, employment land Site Allocation 67 was removed, as was the proposal to inset Send Business Centre from the Green Belt. As discussed in Section 4.04 of this document, the reason for this was the allocation’s location in high sensitivity Green Belt. The removal of Send Business Centre’s proposed extension and insetting from the Green Belt reflected the findings of the 2015 ELNA, which correctly identified the shortcomings of the site with regard to further employment land development. In line with this, Policy E1 of the 2016 draft Local Plan included Send Business Centre in its list of Locally Significant Employment Sites.

5.05 The 2017 ELNA was prepared as part of the evidence base to the 2017 draft Guildford Local Plan and now includes the Send Business Centre in its list of Strategic Employment Sites. The 2017 ELNA states that Send Business Centre has “indirect” strategic road access, “good” access to amenities and facilities, and “good” access to public transport [see Table 4.1 of the 2017 ELNA]. The report also states that there is potential for intensification and/or additional floorspace to be provided.

5.06 Send Parish Council contest that the findings of the 2017 ELNA are completely unfounded and mark a significant departure from the findings of the 2015 ELNA published just two years previously.

5.07 Firstly, Tannery Lane, which forms the main access point to the Business Centre from Send village, is a rural single-track road with only irregular passing places for vehicles and as such is not appropriate for significant use by commercial vehicles. It provides no street lighting or infrastructure for pedestrians or cyclists and, as is correctly stated in the 2015 ELNA, constitutes poor access to the local amenities available in Send village. There have been no significant alterations to this road since the publication of the ELNA and, thus, it is unclear why the classification of access to amenities from Send Business Centre has changed from “poor” to “good” within two years. It is the opinion of Send Parish Council that a single-track country lane with no street lighting and no pedestrian or cycling infrastructure does not constitute the “good” access to amenities stated in the 2017 ELNA. In fact, it represents an unsafe environment for non-car users wishing to make use of local amenities and an inappropriate environment for a significant increase in vehicular traffic due to the characteristics of the road. As an access route for a Strategic Employment Site, Tannery Lane is fundamentally inappropriate, and as such the findings of the report need to be re-examined with relation to Send Business Centre.

5.08 In light of the changed designations at Send Business Centre, and the increase in housing numbers at Clockbarn Nursery, we would also suggest that the 2016 Strategic Flood Risk Assessment is revisited to include Send Business Centre in order to consider the impact of development on Tannery Lane’s flooding issues. The susceptibility of the area to groundwater flooding was clearly set out in the environmental statement [Volume 8, Water, prepared by Johns Associates.] submitted with the marina application.

5.09 Secondly, as correctly stated in the 2015 ELNA, access to public transport provision at Send Business Centre is very poor. The closest bus stop, which has only hourly bus services to Guildford and Woking, is located in Send village centre and is accessed by a ten-minute walk along the aforementioned Tannery Lane, lacking pedestrian infrastructure, cycle infrastructure, or street lighting. For the 2017 ELNA to refer to this situation as constituting “good” access to public transport does not make logical sense. It represents an unsafe environment for non-car users and, as such, would put increased traffic pressures on Tannery Lane. Send Parish Council calls on the findings of the report related to Send Business Centre to be re-examined.

5.10 Finally, the 2015 ELNA states that there is no potential for intensification and/or additional floor space at the Send Business Centre. This reflects the constrained nature of the site in light of its setting within high sensitivity Green Belt. In the 2017 ELNA, it is stated that there is potential at Send Business Centre for intensification and/or additional floor space. The report does not give an indication as to why this stance has altered in the two years that passed between the 2015 ELNA and the 2017 ELNA, nor how potential intensification and/or additional floorspace would be catered for at the Centre. It does not explain why such growth could not be accommodated in more appropriate locations.

5.11 There are no explanations readily available in the 2017 ELNA which seek to justify why Send Business Centre is proposed to be enlarged and re-classified as a Strategic Employment Site, nor why the classification of its access to public transport and local amenities have been upgraded so significantly when no improvements or alterations have occurred. with regard to these matters between 2015 and 2017. Send Parish Council believe that these changes are unfounded in available facts and represent a questionable approach to assessing the Borough’s current and future stock of employment land.

5.12 Policy E1 of the 2017 draft Local Plan includes Send Business Centre within its list of Office (B1a) and Research & Development (B1b) Strategic Employment Sites. No explanations for this change of designation are included in the Local Plan document itself. The Employment Topic Paper, prepared as part of the evidence base for the 2017 draft Local Plan, identifies the 1.4ha Tannery House site adjacent to the Send Business Centre. It states, “Although it [the Tannery House site] remains in high sensitivity Green Belt the unique nature of the site and the existing infrastructure in place means it is considered appropriate for development” [paragraph 4.43 of the Employment Topic Paper]. The Topic Paper goes on to state that significant investment, which has already been secured, will help create an estimated 400 new direct and indirect jobs [paragraph 4.47]. In addition to this in states that “longer term there is potential for significant expansion of 6-7,000sqm on the land adjacent [paragraph 4.49], although it is unclear where this expansion would occur.

5.13 Send Parish Council deem this change of Send Business Centre’s designation and its proposed enlargement wholly inappropriate and unjustifiable. Send Business Centre is located in high sensitivity Green Belt unsuitable for significant development and accessed via infrastructure that is simply unsuitable for supporting the proposed changes at the Centre.

5.14 The Employment Topic Paper states that funding in the Send Business Centre could create an estimated 400 new direct and indirect jobs. Assuming that at the very least 300 of these are direct jobs, this would mean 300 additional employees accessing the Centre. Given the inadequacy of the public transport offer, the likely means of accessing the site is by private car (even if we assume that some employment could be generated locally). The existing car park at the Centre is insufficient for such demand. The single-track Tannery Lane appears unable to deal with such an increase in traffic stress that these movements would bring, without factoring in any additional commercial vehicles visiting the centre. As discussed above, access to local amenities and local public transport provision is similarly inappropriate, with no street lighting provided on Tannery Lane and no pedestrian and cycling infrastructure. Furthermore, the Topic Paper states that there is potential for a significant expansion of 6-7,000sqm of employment space on the land adjacent to the Centre, yet it is unclear whether the jobs created from this floorspace is included within the aforementioned 300+ jobs. If not, then this would mean even greater stress on infrastructure that seems simply unable to cope.

5.15 Changes sought to make the Local Plan sound:

- Remove the proposal to change the designation of Send Business Centre from Locally Significant Employment Site to Strategic Employment Site;
- Remove the proposal to enlarge Send Business Centre by insetting Centre and adjacent land from Green Belt

A58 – Land around Burnt Common warehouse – a minimum of 7,000sqm employment (B1c/B2/B8) floorspace

5.16 The 2014 draft version of the Local Plan included Site Allocation 74, which proposed employment-led mixed-use development on the land around Burnt Common warehouse. This allocation was subsequently removed from the 2016 draft version of the Local Plan, with proposed housing and employment development relocated to the newly created Site Allocation 43 – Garlick’s Arch. This allocation proposed 400 new homes and up to 7,000sqm of commercial (B1c/B2/B8) uses (our emphasis). During the consultation process for the 2016 draft Local Plan, Send Parish made representations against this proposal, which was inappropriate for the site.

5.17 The draft 2017 Local Plan removes the allocation for commercial development from Garlick’s Arch and relocates it back to the land around the Burnt Common warehouse site. Policy E1 includes the land around Burnt Common warehouse within its list of proposed Strategic Employment Sites, while Policy A58 outlines the allocation for the site for a “minimum of 7,000sqm of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2), and storage and distribution (B8) with a potential for further industrial floorspace to meet future borough needs” (our emphasis). No residential element is included in this site allocation.

5.18 Send Parish Council does not object to the principal of employment land development on this site. Indeed, in representations made to the draft 2016 version of the Local Plan, Send Parish Council proposed that Guildford Borough Council re-instate the previous allocation for industrial development on Land around Burnt Common Warehouse.
However, Policy A58 does not provide an appropriate limit to the scale of industrial development to take place on this site. The previous allocation for employment land at Garlick’s Arch stated that up to 7,000sqm of employment floorspace would be created. No such maximum exists within Policy A58, with at least 7,000sqm of employment land proposed on Land around Burnt Common Warehouse. Send Parish Council deem this approach unacceptable as it opens the door to a significant intensification of employment uses on the site which would not be suitable for the site.

5.19 Proposed changes to make the Local Plan sound:

- Provide an upper limit for the amount of employment floorspace to be created within Policy A58 – Land around Burnt Common warehouse.

Summary of Employment Land Provision within Send

5.20 Send is a village of approximately 2,300 people, while Send Marsh/Burnt Common has a population of approximately 1,900. In the May 2014 Settlement Hierarchy Document prepared by Guildford Borough Council as part of the evidence base for the 2014 draft Local Plan, Send, Send Marsh/ Burnt Common are considered to be large villages. Chapter 4 of this document recognises that Send Marsh/Burnt Common is only identified as a large village due to its proximity to Send’s services. Send itself has modest public and commercial amenities, with few additional amenities provided in Send Marsh/Burnt Common. Both villages have limited access to public transport – served only by hourly bus services which pass through the villages en route between Woking and Guildford – but have good links to the strategic road network.

5.21 The draft Local Plan proposes the creation of two Strategic Employment Sites in the Send Parish. On Send’s current designated Employment Sites, there exists 7,800sqm of employment floorspace. The creation of two Strategic Employment Sites in the Send Parish would increase the employment floorspace within designated employment sites within the Parish to at least 21,000sqm should only the minimum 7,000sqm be provided at Burnt Common. This figure is likely to rise should further employment land be developed at Burnt Common.

5.22 While Send Parish Council recognises the importance of developing a strong rural economy, this significant increase in employment land within the Parish is unsustainable and uncalled for. Send Parish does not have the requisite amenities, facilities, and infrastructure to support two Strategic Employment Sites within its boundaries.

5.23 Changes sought to make the Local Plan sound:

- Maintain existing designation of Send Business Centre as Locally Significant Employment Site.
- Provide an upper limit for the amount of employment floorspace to be created within Policy A58 – Land around Burnt Common warehouse.

POLICY E1: Sustainable employment

WHPC supports the general policy statements made in this policy. However sustainability is not served by the location of the new office space and industrial land area proposed being on the opposite side of the Borough to West Horsley, giving rise to more to / from work car journeys for residents of the proposed new housing developments in the village. This does not fit with sustainable development as set out in NPPF para 7.

Do you consider this section of the document; complies with the Duty to Cooperate? ( ), is Sound? ( ), is Legally Compliant? ( )

I confirm that I act on behalf of the tenants of No. 4 Kernel Court, Walnut Tree Close, Alifabs Design & Construction Limited and Aluminium Building Products Limited and am instructed by them to submit comments in respect of The Local Plan.

Background

The site is presently in industrial/warehouse use and under Policy A13 on Page 153, the allocation is for 100 homes.

Para 2.8: Under paragraph 2.8 of the draft Local Plan, it is pointed out that the number of jobs in the Borough continues to grow and that new employment land is required to sustain such growth. Employment land is categorised as Bla & Blb (in effect offices) and then Blc, B2 & B8 which is, in effect, industrial and warehousing.

Notwithstanding the acknowledgement that new employment land is required, The Local Plan does not provide sufficient Blc, B2 & B8 to meet the employment needs, with a mere 4.7 - 5.3 hectares being allocated over the plan period. This would account for a new supply of approximately 1,500 sq m per annum, which does not comply with Policy El in which it is stated that "we will support the retention, creation and development of small local businesses by encouraging a range of types and sizes of new premises, including incubator units, managed workspace and serviced office accommodation. "

The opening paragraph of Policy El states that the purpose of the Policy is to "ensure an adequate supply of land is available for employment purposes".

Firstly, the allocation fails to support existing businesses, but secondly fails to make provision for employment for the new population which will arrive with the additional houses that are to be built. Thirdly it is proposed to remove this and other sites from employment use without adequate replacements. We believe that that Borough Council has a duty to provide sufficient land for Blc, and it has failed to do so.

Do you consider this section of the document; complies with the Duty to Cooperate? ( ), is Sound? ( ), is Legally Compliant? ( )

Page 20 sets out a vision and ambition and in particular, proposes an extension to The Surrey Research Park of approximately 11 hectares, to comprise 35,000 sq m of business premises.

The Property & Transport side of the Guildford Business Forum considers the University and The Surrey Research Park to be tremendous assets to the town and their expansion should be encouraged. However, the University is not an organisation that is prepared to build speculatively and therefore, reacts to a relatively small number of organisations who are able to plan, say two years ahead. This represents only a fraction of the market place for new occupiers, the vast majority of whom rely on premises being available in a three-six month period.

In the existing 2003 Local Plan, the Borough Council allocated their own property holdings at the Slyfield Industrial Estate as the new land supply. Once again, the land was placed in the hands of an organisation who would not build speculatively and therefore, did little to assist in providing expansion facilities for existing companies, let alone new ones. We believe that you cannot put all your eggs in one basket and this is, therefore, a flawed policy.

Under Policy E1 an average of 5 hectares is being provided over the plan period for B1c, B2 & B8 amounting to approximately 1,486 sq m per annum. We consider this allocation to be totally insufficient to cater for existing businesses, let alone an expanded workforce and a balanced economy.

Furthermore, this document proposes losing existing B1c, B2 & B8 sites and the allocation is not adequate for their replacement, let alone expansion of the economy or catering for the needs of local businesses.

Under the section headed "B Class Uses" and in particular strategic employment sites, there are sites that are missing from here that are of major significance. For example, whilst you have identified the Guildford Business Park, you have not included nearly 16,000 sq m of offices known as G2000 and G3000 where Regus and Avaya are.

Under the heading "Industrial (B1c, B2 & BB) Strategic Employment Sites" you have noted The Guildway on the Portsmouth. This, in fact, is an office site not industrial. Within the same Policy, there is a heading "Locally Significant Employment Sites". Specific sites are mentioned at 32 Chertsey Street and 1-7 Stoke Road, Andrews House, College Road, College House, Stoke House, Leapale House and Bell Court and 65 Woodbridge Road. However, all of these sites are located within the proposed town centre boundary and therefore, surely should fall under the definition of Strategic Employment Sites in the Guildford Town Centre Employment Core.

Another site described as a locally significant employment site is The Courtyard at Wisley. It would be surprising if this totalled more than 1,000 sq m, but significantly the Plan seeks to remove a site several times larger at Broadford Park, Shalford. This provides an unusual mix of light industrial and office accommodation, which is not typically provided elsewhere in the Borough and therefore, represents a scare resource. We wonder why this is being taken away from employment use. We believe that it falls within the definition set out in 4.4.7.

Under the section "Monitoring Indicators", the source for monitoring is Planning Applications and Appeals. However, these are simply pieces of paper and not buildings within which people can obtain jobs. The Monitoring Indicators should, therefore, be buildings constructed.

5. OBJECT to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

I object to policy E1 sustainable employment

I note that there is a significant reduction of between 71% and 79% in the previous job target and resultant 79% reduction in employment space in response to the many objections lodged in 2014 against an unsubstantiated agenda for economic expansion in the last draft and based on new findings by Aecom in the latest ELNA 2015.I have concern as to the ill-informed clustering of all B classes in terms of the clarity of market evidence required to inform effective planning and a failure to provide a clear understanding of business needs required under Section 160 of the NPPF. I also note the dramatic reduction in assessed demand by two Employment Land Needs Assessment Reports carried out under the same terms of reference within a period of 2 years which calls into question the general reliability of the process of collection and interpretation of data in the overall forward planning process by GBC. I am concerned however that the research undertaken by Aecom is generally superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and that no reliable individual analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space. No proper analysis has been made of data held by GBC in respect of different B classes in terms of planning applications granted or evidence gathered by the economic development function at GBC and no robust assessment of local market demand apart from fairly brief references to freely available market research undertaken by commercial estate agents such as Lambert Smith Hampton covering a much wider area.GBC appear to fail to appreciate the fundamental rationale of the Use Classes Order as a planning tool in terms of useful property market research or forward planning. What we are left with is a fairly clumsy and poorly informed plan which clusters B classes without any appreciation of widely different employment impact and economic sustainability. E.g. B1 generates at least 5 times as much employment as B8. The lack of appreciation as to the opportunity for widely different uses being generated within B class clusters defeats the whole point of proper planning of employment uses and can significantly endanger previously good planning put forward in the previous 2003 plan. E.g. the creation of a research and development park linked to the University but now has the threat of being downgraded into a general business park (see below).Little regard has been given in the plan to the economic reality of falling demand for B2 industrial space which is clustered with other B classes almost randomly throughout the plan. Little regard is given to the opportunity of B1b space as an opportunity for research and development which needs to be nurtured and preserved without the detrimental and confused clustering with other B classes both in terms of planning and promotion of a research hub. I note that the past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 derived from VoA analysis and that the calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7% over the plan period up to 2033. I support the concept of seeking increased investment in our local knowledge-based, high technology economy. This will provide well paid, creative jobs and generate the funding necessary to pay for the infrastructure and environment this sort of industry requires. We need to distinguish between wanting to increase the added value of the economy and physical expansion, especially given the scarcity of land in Guildford. Guildford is not the place for large space hungry businesses. So I should target high added value small and medium sized enterprises rather than the headquarters of larger corporations.

Policy E1

Replacement of 'Sustainable employment needs' with 'Meeting employment needs'

I object to this omission. It is up to local authorities to balance the economic guidance received with the need to provide a sustainable plan. It is therefore important to retain sustainability at the heart of the plan and not forget that LEPs are one of many formal consultees. Failure to balance the needs of all could result in a plan that is LEP / economy driven and balance would be lost.

The criteria used to determine the significance of an employment site appears to be based on space and the amount of land it takes up and does not account for value / number of people it employs? This means farms with relatively low turn over and staff numbers are mapped whilst their contribution to the economy is relatively small? All sites meeting the criteria are added to the list, which currently only lists 9 sites? Protection of sites must surely be based on a much wider remit than space alone and I would recommend that this policy be reviewed to encourage efficient use of space and monitoring indicators based on the contribution to our economy.

Indicators

I am concerned that the emphasis on B8 class jobs (storage & distribution) will lead to land hungry warehousing and increases in large trucks and lorries on our roads which are already amongst the most congested roads in the UK. Very few jobs are generated from warehousing and the salaries commensurate with this business class add to pressure on affordable housing. I would prefer to see a greater emphasis on A2 and B1

Comment

I object to the ongoing poor quality of the updated research undertaken by Aecom. The Employment Land Needs Assessment 2017 is superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and no reliable analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of the categories ie. office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space.

The Employment Land Needs Assessment update 2017 (ELNA) states “that the pipeline for employment floorspace defined by planning permissions yet to be implemented and prior approvals suggests the potential for an additional 33,607sqm of B use class floorspace to come forward. This figure comprises a net loss of 4,750sqm of B1a use class floorspace and a net gain of 38,357sqm in B1c, B2 or B8 use class space.”

38,357sqm of B1c, B2 or B8 use class is quite sufficient supply for the plan period and does not justify the need for new development of industrial space on the Green Belt in such areas as Burnt Common. The reality of demand for industrial space is that it is both nationally and locally in decline and this is evidenced in part by old existing permissions that have not been taken up and developed. The ELNA alludes incorrectly to the poor quality of existing space being a “constraint” on supply and fails to acknowledge that this assertion cannot apply to potential newly developed space e.g. the undeveloped pipeline of 38,357sqm.

I object

67. I am not satisfied that the evidence is sound and it appears to me that, rather than meet existing employment needs in an area of low unemployment and concentrate on what Guildford is good at (i.e. high tech), this is a policy to create more employment needs to justify excessive housing growth in an area that cannot support it. The second paragraph – “The Plan aims….” Seems contrary to the likely outcome if this plan goes ahead. The Plan is likely to create conditions that make Guildford less attractive to businesses.

4.4.3(a) mentions the role of the Enterprise M3 LEP in determining local priorities. The LEP is an unelected body covering a wide area and should have no power or influence over planning priorities in Guildford especially as they are focussed on growth for their area regardless of consequences for local people. I object to the influence that the LEP is having on the local plan process.

Policy E1: Meeting employment needs

One unlisted locally significant employment site uses and supplements former pig rearing sheds on Manor Farm alongside the old Portsmouth Road at Artington. It has achieved its present position by stealth. It is most unsightly [fly boards and other tat along the road, as well as the unattractive hoardings on the sheds] but occupies very high amenity land - Green Belt and River Valley. Now quite inappropriate. It would be good to have it removed or reverted to agriculture or used for car parking behind trees and hedges [as the existing Artington P&R, which now is quite well hidden and so not inappropriate for its placing].

This policy is another indication of illogical thinking. The only ‘Sustainable Employment’ is in the food supply chain, no other jobs can be considered ‘sustainable’ – they are simply here for the present and gone in the future.

Stagecoach manufacture, busy in the 1700’s, vanished in the 1800’s, when trains arrived. These were destroyed in the 1960’s by Beeching. Now we have the motor car.
This policy should have the wording changed to reflect the transitory nature of the work place over the next 20 years. The word ‘Sustainable’ should be removed from its title.

Reinstate full description of EM3 MEP

Note: Too many unfamiliar TLA’s confuse the reader throughout the document; it should be a policy of the documents layout to use no abbreviations unless they are in common use.

4.4.5

Industrial expansion figures are miscalculated with knock on effect to employment and housing, etc. The SHMA, as previously stated, is incorrect so industrial requirements are also mismatched.

4.4.6

Retain definition of ‘ELNA’ at least once.

Policy E1

As the SHMA housing figure is excessive by 30%, consideration needs to be made to the resultant change in the required level of industrial floor space and subsequent jobs ‘needed’ to create ‘full’ employment. A rough calculation would indicate a reduction in employment requirements to 3,200 jobs.

Item ‘D’ does not make sense.

Within this policy, SCC depot was planned to be moving to the Slyfield Industrial Estate extension. No mention is made of this in this policy. In previous iterations of the Plan this proposal was included. Is this proposal still current? Is it no longer proposed that SCC would move sites? Furthermore, what is the knock on effect to the expansion of Slyfield Industrial Estate, which was primarily based on both GBC and SCC effectively amalgamating onto the extension site?

4.4.7

‘ELNA’ should be left expanded for ease of reading in all cases specifically within the definitions section.

4.4.8

There is no safe-guarded land for infrastructure: with both Burnt Common and Gosden Hill identified for some industrial use a strong infrastructure link to the A3 is a basic requirement. However no rational provision has been made for northbound (A3) access to Gosden Hill or southbound Burnt Common, nor access to Gosden Hill from Burnt Common. Thus, should a company decide for whatever reason to take up opportunities on both sites they are unable to access one from the other without considerable mileage in both directions for what is less than a quarter of a mile as the crow flies. Does the statement below tally with the current SCC waste management plan considering that SCC is apparently not moving from Merrow Business Park? Currently the waste management plan is under review, thus item 10 is ambiguous.

4.4.7 The figure for meeting employment needs is one third higher than required as homes needed is approximatly 7,000 not 10,000.

BDES 2013 – 2031 (old dates) (3) enterprise M3 2014;

The document has not been publically scrutinised by the community and is not available under that description on the GBC Local Plan website. The document promote’s Guildford as a ‘growth town’, yet there is no mention of this growth town in the Local Plan; nor have the residents of the Borough been consulted about this status. Does this document fundamentally affect the Local Plan? If so why is it not more widely published within the evidence base? There is no mention of what these ‘improvements’ mean in respect of the Local Plan provisions.

This document is promoting rail infrastructure with no cooperation with Network Rail. This misleads the LPA in that no station is planned at Gosden Hill within the life of the Local Plan.

[Image]

[Image]

[Image]

[Image]

No other mention of these proposals is included within the rail report, yet specific mention is made of other projects including CrossRail and Heathrow southern link, suggesting Network Rail give the proposal little merit.

Enterprise M3 statements referring to Guildford; Not one aspect of the strategic package has been consulted on with the community of Guildford and the document is not available on GBC web site. This organisation appears to have undue influence on the Local Plan while being totally unaccountable to the community which will be affected.

[Image]

The alleged Interchange improvements are not going to happen until post 2030 according to Highways England and their commitments schedule. No details exist in the public forum to allow them to be studied in detail.

[Image]

Again, this document is supporting a non-existent, non-achievable goal [see above]. Clearly the writer of this M3 document has little knowledge off the situation in Guildford, as they refer to corridor improvements ‘near’ Guildford when in reality the improvement is needed to be ‘along the length of the A3 through Guildford.
So the unaccountable Enterprise M3 can ask for road improvements to be accelerated yet, when the community ask for the same improvements, they are ignored.

I OBJECT to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Gosden Hill Farm. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.

The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

Policies E1 – E3 – we note that the required provision of new office and research & development floorspace and industrial land has been revised based on the updated Employment Land Needs Assessment and that three additional strategic employment sites have been designated. We support this robust analysis and these policies. We would however still be concerned about the delivery of the economy policies if one or more of the key development sites for employment use were not able to proceed due to transport or other reasons.

This should be renamed Employment or “Sustainable Employment” defined.

As the majority of the large scale employment is office based and not dependant upon being in Guildford the biggest threat to continuing employment is poor transport provision. If the owners of businesses no longer enjoy being in Guildford they can simply move their operation to a location that has appropriate transport infrastructure and move their jobs with them. The Plan is unsound as it does not address the existing infrastructure problems or provide infrastructure to deal with economic growth.

Policy E1: Sustainable employment

Response

I OBJECT because:

- the evidence base is unreliable
- there is unclear differentiation between B class uses
- only high added-value business uses are desirable, not low grade, low employment warehousing which is land hungry
- industrial and commercial businesses must be concentrated in the urban area, or existing business parks (eg Slyfield) not in the rural environment which the infrastructure is unable to support
- the rural environment must support micro or high tech businesses, agricultural industries, and tourism, and these sectors must not be damaged by general industrial development which is inappropriate

Detailed response:

I OBJECT to this policy.

I need to distinguish between wanting to increase the added value of the economy and physical expansion, especially given the scarcity of land in Guildford. Guildford is not the place for large space hungry businesses. I believe Guildford should target high added-value small and medium sized enterprises or the headquarters of larger corporations, but not provide low added value warehousing and industrial space.

GBC appear to fail to appreciate the fundamental rationale of the Use Classes Order as a planning tool in terms of useful property market research or forward planning.

No proper analysis has been made of data held by GBC in respect of different B classes in terms of planning applications granted or evidence gathered by the economic development function at GBC without any attempt at real market demand apart from vague references to freely available market research undertaken by commercial estate agents. (See definitions of B classes at end of this policy response).

What I are left with is a fairly clumsy and poorly informed plan which clusters B classes without any appreciation of widely different employment impact and economic sustainability. E.g. B1 (mostly local office use/R&D) generates at least 5 times as much employment as B8 (distribution and warehousing).

This draft Local Plan is partly based on new findings by Aecom in the latest ELNA 2015 [Employment Land Needs Assessment 2015]. This includes the recasting of the ELNA by Aecom in 2015 which updated the ELNA 2013 prepared by GBC. I have had regard to the evidence base provided by Aecom in the 2015 ELNA and find it a more reliable evidence base for overall projected employment in the borough over the plan period in overall numbers than done previously by GBC in 2013. However, I have concern that the survey work by Lambert Smith Hampton is in the form of high level free property research that is used for the purposes of marketing their services over a wide area not specifically commissioned for the borough of Guildford and undertaken for ELNA purposes.

However, I am concerned that the research undertaken by Aecom is generally superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and that no reliable individual analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space.

The lack of appreciation by GBC as to the opportunity for widely different uses being generated within B class clusters defeats the whole point of proper planning of employment uses and can significantly endanger previously good planning put forward in the previous 2003 plan. I support the concept of seeking increased investment in our local knowledge-based, high technology economy. This will provide well paid, creative jobs and generate the wealth necessary to fund the infrastructure and environment this sort of industry requires.

I need to promote the idea of new knowledge transfer in incubator units and small premises for new start up enterprises. We need to be on the wave of innovative new technology as opposed to older established businesses. High value-added industry is desirable; low tech, land-hungry older businesses which will increase congestion are not desirable.

I have concern as to the ill-informed clustering of all B classes. This is unclear in terms of market evidence required to inform effective planning. There is a failure to provide a clear understanding of business needs within the relevant area as required under Section 160 of the NPPF.

Little regard has been given in the plan to the economic reality of falling demand for B2 industrial space which is clustered with other B classes almost randomly throughout the plan.

Little regard is had to the opportunity of B1 b space as an opportunity for research and development which needs to be nurtured and preserved without the detrimental and confused clustering with other B classes both in terms of planning and promotion of a research hub.

I do not support the policy of creating Strategic Employment sites outside the urban centres.

Some of the strategic industrial sites would be better classified as brownfield land suitable for use as a residential area, eg Woodbridge Park, Woodbridge Road and Merrow Lane.

This study varies very significantly from the previous Guildford Borough Council ELNA 2013, which after two years has been completely re-written. This leads us to question the reliability of the evidence base here which has been used to justify the assumptions and plans; it is unclear that the current evidence base is any more reliable than that used previously. This calls into question the general reliability of the process of collection and interpretation of data in the overall forward planning process by GBC.

DEFINITIONS:

B1 Business

B1 building use is use for all or any of the following purposes:

(a) as an office other than a use within class A2 (financial and professional services),

(b) for research and development of products or processes, or

(c) for any industrial process, being a use which can be carried out in any residential area without detriment to the amenity of that area by reason of noise, vibration, smell, fumes, smoke, soot, ash, dust or grit.

General Industrial

B2 building use is for the carrying on of an industrial process other than one falling within class B1 above or within classes B3 to B7 below. (Note: B3-B7 relates to very heavy industry such as oil refining, smelting etc).

Distribution or Storage

B8 building use is for storage or as a distribution centre.

B8 building use is for storage or as a distribution centre.

We note that there is a significant reduction of between 71% and 79% in the previous job target and resultant 79% reduction in employment space in response to the many objections lodged in 2014 against an unsubstantiated agenda for economic expansion in the last draft and based on new findings by Aecom in the latest ELNA 2015. We have concern as to the ill-informed clustering of all B classes in terms of the clarity of market evidence required to inform effective planning and a failure to provide a clear understanding of business needs required under Section 160 of the NPPF. We also note the dramatic reduction in assessed demand by two Employment Land Needs Assessment Reports carried out under the same terms of reference within a period of 2 years which calls into question the general reliability of the process of collection and interpretation of data in the overall forward planning process by GBC. We do not support the policy of creating a Strategic Employment site at Garlick's Arch (A43) in the Green Belt which is completely unnecessary due to the overall decrease in demand for industrial space which could be easily accommodated at Slyfield. We are concerned however that the research undertaken by Aecom is generally superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and that no reliable individual analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space. No proper analysis has been made of data held by GBC in respect of different B classes in terms of planning applications granted or evidence gathered by the economic development function at GBC and no robust assessment of local market demand apart from fairly brief references to freely available market research undertaken by commercial estate agents such as Lambert Smith Hampton covering a much wider area. GBC appear to fail to appreciate the fundamental rationale of the Use Classes Order as a planning tool in terms of useful property market research or forward planning. What we are left with is a fairly clumsy and poorly informed plan which clusters B classes without any appreciation of widely different employment impact and economic sustainability. E.g. The lack of appreciation by GBC as to the opportunity for widely different uses being generated within B class clusters defeats the whole point of proper planning of employment uses and can significantly endanger previously good planning put forward in the previous 2003 plan. E.g. the creation of a research and development park linked to the University but now has the threat of being downgraded into a general business park (see below). Little regard has been given in the plan to the economic reality of falling demand for B2 industrial space which is clustered with other B classes almost randomly throughout the plan. Little regard is had to the opportunity of B1 b space as an opportunity for research and development which needs to be nurtured and preserved without the detrimental and confused clustering with other B classes both in terms of planning and promotion of a research hub. We note that the past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 derived from VoA analysis and that the calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7% over the plan period up to 2033. We support the concept of seeking increased investment in our local knowledge-based, high technology economy. This will provide well paid, creative jobs and generate the funding necessary to pay for the infrastructure and environment this sort of industry requires. We need to distinguish between wanting to increase the added value of the economy and physical expansion, especially given the scarcity of land in Guildford. Guildford is not the place for large space hungry businesses. So we should target high added value small and medium sized enterprises rather than the headquarters of larger corporations. We need to promote the idea of new knowledge transfer in incubator units and small premises for new start up enterprises. They need to be on the wave of innovative new technology as opposed to older established businesses. We object to the policy of creating a Strategic Employment at Garlick's Arch (A43) in the Green Belt. The stated requirement of 7,000 sq m (B1c, B2 and B8) could easily be accommodated at the Slyfield Regeneration site of 40 ha.

1. POLICY E1

I OBJECT to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Gosden Hill Farm. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.

The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

E1 Meeting employment needs

I object to a policy which promotes low employment warehousing

Industrial development should be concentrated in existing areas of development such as Slyfield, not placed in the rural environment.

Rural environments should be used for small businesses in redundant farm or other existing buildings or for tourism.

I object to site Policy E1 Burnt Common, which has now become a ‘Strategic Employment Site’ for the reasons set out in the submission of West Clandon Parish Council. As a consequence of the change, the overall burden on West Clandon, in terms of traffic and congestion, of the proposed minimum (my italics) of 7000sq m of industrial space is greater than the now deleted up-to (my italics) 7000 sq m from the neighbouring site A43 Garlick’s Arch. This is a net gain in traffic and congestion in this area.

Contrary to national trends, too much potential development land within the town centre is being allocated for retail or commercial development rather than housing. High added value businesses are welcome in the borough, but much of the employment land is designated for retail or low added value employment floorspace, which only exacerbates current issues such as lack of low cost housing and heavy traffic. Sites such as the Burnt Common Triangle, currently in the Green Belt, are inappropriate for heavy industry.

I object to the changed statement in para 4.4.4 of the introduction to policy E1 that:

“Innovative industries have emerged and clustered, some based at the Surrey Research Park and the University of Surrey and others in the town centre, such as electronic gaming, stem cell research and satellite technology. The borough has benefited from strong cluster growth in high tech innovative businesses including healthcare and bioscience and satellite technology.”

The rhetoric around the Surrey Research Park being a “hub” or “cluster” for these specialist industries is a myth created by the owner, the University of Surrey. The “hub” for these sectors is not in Guildford, but the whole of the South-East, including places such as Whitehill & Bordon, Basingstoke, Bracknell and Reading, and the East Midlands (in terms of satellite technology). The developer of Send Business Park is using this same rhetoric, claiming its Tandridge Studios site is a “hub” for the digital-creative sector:
“Tandridge Studios is complementary to the science park and has the scale to become the creative hub for the area, and this development will provide opportunities with the M3 graduates… Guildford is the centre of a unique supply chain, with educators, including ACM and Surrey University, as well as being the centre of the video games, virtual effects and animation sectors that currently lacks a hub - a gap we seek to meet.” George Hamburger (Borough, Economy and Infrastructure Executive Advisory Board, 20 April 2017).

It should also be noted that a number of organisations have moved away from the Surrey Research Park, notably Microsoft (with Lionhead studios) last year. Individual members of staff also have mixed feelings about working in Guildford, with an example of what should be a 30 minute commute, taking 70:

“I commute in from Hampshire and sadly work on the research park. The traffic situation is intolerable and I am at the point where I might just change jobs simply because the current morning rush hour puts me in such a foul mood for the rest of the day.” (Email from Chris Twin to Karen Stevens, dated July 18, 2017).

1. POLICY E1

I OBJECT to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Gosden Hill Farm. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.

The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

Employment land – POLICY E1, E2

Contrary to national trends, too much potential development land within the town centre is being allocated for retail or commercial development rather than housing. High added value businesses are welcome in the borough, but much of the employment land is designated for retail or low added value employment floorspace, which only exacerbates current issues such as lack of low cost housing and heavy traffic. Sites such as the Burnt Common Triangle, currently in the Green Belt, are inappropriate for heavy industry.

POLICY E1 - Meeting employment needs

I OBJECT because:

• The evidence base is unreliable;
• There is unclear differentiation between B class uses;
• Only high value-added business uses, contributing to a modern “knowledge economy”, are desirable, not low-grade, low-employment warehousing which is also land hungry;
• Industrial and commercial businesses must be concentrated in the urban area or existing business parks (e.g. Slyfield) not in the rural environment which the infrastructure is unable to support;
• The rural environment must support micro- or high-tech businesses, agricultural industries, and tourism, and these sectors must not be damaged by general industrial development which is inappropriate.

I OBJECT to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Gosden Hill Farm. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.

The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

Policy E1 seeks to provide an additional 3,200 jobs by 2033. I agree with the need to provide jobs, but it seems inconsistent to provide 3,200 jobs whilst seeking to construct 13,860 new homes over the same period. This implies either that the housing need is overestimated or that it is expected that the majority of workers will travel outside the Borough with a consequent increase in traffic and use of public transport. The travel infrastructure is inadequately addressed in the plan and, as previously stated, policy P2 is based on flawed housing needs. Accordingly, I object to the local plan.

We object because

- the evidence base is unreliable
- there is unclear differentiation between B class uses
- only high added-value business uses are desirable, not low grade, low employment warehousing which is land hungry
- industrial and commercial businesses must be concentrated in the urban area, or existing business parks (e.g. Slyfield) not in the rural environment which the infrastructure is unable to support
- the rural environment must support micro or high tech businesses, agricultural industries, and tourism, and these sectors must not be damaged by general industrial development which is inappropriate

We note that there is a significant reduction of between 71% and 79% in the previous job target and resultant 79% reduction in employment space in response to the many objections lodged in 2014 against an unsubstantiated agenda for economic expansion in the last draft and based on new findings by AECOM in the latest ELNA 2015

I object to policy E1 sustainable employment.

I note that there is a significant reduction of between 71% and 79% in the previous job target and resultant 79% reduction in employment space in response to the many objections lodged in 2014 against an unsubstantiated agenda for economic expansion in the last draft and based on new findings by Aecom in the latest ELNA 2015.

I have concern as to the ill-informed clustering of all B classes in terms of the clarity of market evidence required to inform effective planning and a failure to provide a clear understanding of business needs required under Section 160 of the NPPF.

I also note the dramatic reduction in assessed demand by two Employment Land Needs Assessment Reports carried out under the same terms of reference within a period of 2 years which calls into question the general reliability of the process of collection and interpretation of data in the overall forward planning process by GBC. I am concerned however that the research undertaken by Aecom is generally superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and that no reliable individual analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space.
No proper analysis has been made of data held by GBC in respect of different B classes in terms of planning applications granted or evidence gathered by the economic development function at GBC and no robust assessment of local market demand apart from fairly brief references to freely available market research undertaken by commercial estate agents such as Lambert Smith Hampton covering a much wider area.

GBC appears to fail to appreciate the fundamental rationale of the Use Classes Order as a planning tool in terms of useful property market research or forward planning.

What we are left with is a fairly clumsy and poorly informed plan which clusters B classes without any appreciation of widely different employment impact and economic sustainability. E.g. B1 generates at least 5 times as much employment as B8.

The lack of appreciation as to the opportunity for widely different uses being generated within B class clusters defeats the whole point of proper planning of employment uses and can significantly endanger previously good planning put forward in the previous 2003 plan. e.g. the creation of a research and development park linked to the University but now has the threat of being downgraded into a general business park (see below).

Little regard has been given in the plan to the economic reality of falling demand for B2 industrial space which is clustered with other B classes almost randomly throughout the plan.

Little regard is given to the opportunity of B1 b space as an opportunity for research and development which needs to be nurtured and preserved without the detrimental and confused clustering with other B classes both in terms of planning and promotion of a research hub.

I note that the past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 derived from VoA analysis and that the calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7% over the plan period up to 2033.

I support the concept of seeking increased investment in our local knowledge-based, high technology economy. This will provide well paid, creative jobs and generate the funding necessary to pay for the infrastructure and environment this sort of industry requires.

We need to distinguish between wanting to increase the added value of the economy and physical expansion, especially given the scarcity of land in Guildford. Guildford is not the place for large space hungry businesses. So I should target high added value small and medium sized enterprises rather than the headquarters of larger corporations.

Guildford is not the place for large space hungry businesses. High added value small and medium sized enterprises should be more in keeping with

They need to be on the wave of innovative new technology as opposed to older established businesses, this is more in keeping of the competitive advantage of Guildford. I object to the policy of creating a Strategic Employment at Garlicks Arch (A43) in the Green Belt. The stated requirement of 7,000 sq m (B1c, B2 and B8) could easily be accommodated at the Slyfield Regeneration site of 40 ha.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (Blc), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (BS) at Garlick's Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick's Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

Guildford has low unemployment. Most job creation would appear to be retail or hopefully additional hi tech research park and other office based work. Most jobs would be relatively low paid. Such employees would struggle to purchase housing from the new proposed sites. This will lead to further commuting and gridlock.

There is way too much development expected in this plan well over what can reasonably be attained.

I OBJECT because

• the evidence base is unreliable
• there is unclear differentiation between B class uses
• only high added-value business uses are desirable, not low grade, low employment warehousing which is land hungry
• industrial and commercial businesses must be concentrated in the urban area, or existing business parks (eg Slyfield) not in the rural environment which the infrastructure is unable to support
• the rural environment must support micro or high tech businesses, agricultural industries, and tourism, and these sectors must not be damaged by general industrial development which is inappropriate

Full response
I OBJECT to this policy.

One needs to distinguish between wanting to increase the added value of the economy and physical expansion, especially given the scarcity of land in Guildford. Guildford is not the place for large space hungry businesses. We believe Guildford should target high added-value small and medium sized enterprises or the headquarters of larger corporations, but not provide low added value warehousing and industrial space.

GBC appear to fail to appreciate the fundamental rationale of the Use Classes Order as a planning tool in terms of useful property market research or forward planning.

No proper analysis has been made of data held by GBC in respect of different B classes in terms of planning applications granted or evidence gathered by the economic development function at GBC without any attempt at real market demand apart from vague references to freely available market research undertaken by commercial estate agents. (See definitions of B classes at end of this policy response).

What we are left with is a fairly clumsy and poorly informed plan which clusters B classes without any appreciation of widely different employment impact and economic sustainability. E.g. B1 (mostly local office use/R&D) generates at least 5 times as much employment as B8 (distribution and warehousing).

This draft Local Plan is partly based on new findings by Aecom in the latest ELNA 2015 [Employment Land Needs Assessment 2015]. This includes the recasting of the ELNA by Aecom in 2015 which updated the ELNA 2013 prepared by GBC. We have had regard to the evidence base provided by Aecom in the 2015 ELNA and find it a more reliable evidence base for overall projected employment in the borough over the plan period in overall numbers than done previously by GBC in 2013. However, we have concern that the survey work by Lambert Smith Hampton is in the form of high level free property research that is used for the purposes of marketing their services over a wide area not specifically commissioned for the borough of Guildford and undertaken for ELNA purposes.

However, I am concerned that the research undertaken by Aecom is generally superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and that no reliable individual analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space.

The lack of appreciation by GBC as to the opportunity for widely different uses being generated within B class clusters defeats the whole point of proper planning of employment uses and can significantly endanger previously good planning put forward in the previous 2003 plan. We support the concept of seeking increased investment in our local knowledge-based, high technology economy. This will provide well paid, creative jobs and generate the wealth necessary to fund the infrastructure and environment this sort of industry requires.

We need to promote the idea of new knowledge transfer in incubator units and small premises for new start up enterprises. We need to be on the wave of innovative new technology as opposed to older established businesses. High value-added industry is desirable; low tech, land-hungry older businesses which will increase congestion are not desirable.

I have concern as to the ill-informed clustering of all B classes. This is unclear in terms of market evidence required to inform effective planning. There is a failure to provide a clear understanding of business needs within the relevant area as required under Section 160 of the NPPF.

Little regard has been given in the plan to the economic reality of falling demand for B2 industrial space which is clustered with other B classes almost randomly throughout the plan.

Little regard is had to the opportunity of B1 b space as an opportunity for research and development which needs to be nurtured and preserved without the detrimental and confused clustering with other B classes both in terms of planning and promotion of a research hub.

I do not support the policy of creating Strategic Employment sites outside the urban centres.
Some of the strategic industrial sites would be better classified as brownfield land suitable for use as a residential area, eg Woodbridge Park, Woodbridge Road and Merrow Lane.

This study varies very significantly from the previous Guildford Borough Council ELNA 2013, which after two years has been completely re-written. This leads us to question the reliability of the evidence base here which has been used to justify the assumptions and plans; it is unclear that the current evidence base is any more reliable than that used previously. This calls into question the general reliability of the process of collection and interpretation of data in the overall forward planning process by GBC.

DEFINITIONS:

B1

Business

B1 building use is use for all or any of the following purposes:

(a) as an office other than a use within class A2 (financial and professional services),

(b) for research and development of products or processes, or

(c) for any industrial process, being a use which can be carried out in any residential area without detriment to the amenity of that area by reason of noise, vibration, smell, fumes, smoke, soot, ash, dust or grit.

General Industrial

B2 building use is for the carrying on of an industrial process other than one falling within class B1 above or within classes B3 to B7 below. (Note: B3-B7 relates to very heavy industry such as oil refining, smelting etc).

Distribution or Storage

B8 building use is for storage or as a distribution centre.

I note that there is a significant reduction of between 71% and 79% in the previous job target and resultant 79% reduction in employment space in response to the many objections lodged in 2014 against an unsubstantiated agenda for economic expansion in the last draft and based on new findings by Aecom in the latest ELNA 2015.

I have concern as to the ill-informed clustering of all B classes in terms of the clarity of market evidence required to inform effective planning and a failure to provide a clear understanding of business needs required under Section 160 of the NPPF.

I also note the dramatic reduction in assessed demand by two Employment Land Needs Assessment Reports carried out under the same terms of reference within a period of 2 years which calls into question the general reliability of the process of collection and interpretation of data in the overall forward planning process by GBC. We do not support the policy of creating a Strategic Employment site at Garlick’s Arch (A43) in the Green Belt which is completely unnecessary due to the overall decrease in demand for industrial space which could be easily accommodated at Slyfield.

I am concerned however that the research undertaken by Aecom is generally superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and that no reliable individual analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space.

No proper analysis has been made of data held by GBC in respect of different B classes in terms of planning applications granted or evidence gathered by the economic development function at GBC and no robust assessment of local market demand apart from fairly brief references to freely available market research undertaken by commercial estate agents such as Lambert Smith Hampton covering a much wider area.

GBC appear to fail to appreciate the fundamental rationale of the Use Classes Order as a planning tool in terms of useful property market research or forward planning.

What we are left with is a fairly clumsy and poorly informed plan which clusters B classes without any appreciation of widely different employment impact and economic sustainability. E.g. B1 generates at least 5 times as much employment as B8.

The lack of appreciation by GBC as to the opportunity for widely different uses being generated within B class clusters defeats the whole point of proper planning of employment uses and can significantly endanger previously good planning put forward in the previous 2003 plan. E.g. the creation of a research and development park linked to the University but now has the threat of being downgraded into a general business park (see below).

Little regard has been given in the plan to the economic reality of falling demand for B2 industrial space which is clustered with other B classes almost randomly throughout the plan.

I support the concept of seeking increased investment in our local knowledge-based, high technology economy. This will provide well paid, creative jobs and generate the funding necessary to pay for the infrastructure and environment this sort of industry requires.

One needs to distinguish between wanting to increase the added value of the economy and physical expansion, especially given the scarcity of land in Guildford. Guildford is not the place for large space hungry businesses. So We should target high added value small and medium sized enterprises rather than the headquarters of larger corporations.

I object to the policy of creating a Strategic Employment at Garlicks Arch (A43) in the Green Belt. The stated requirement of 7,000 sq m (B1c, B2 and B8) could easily be accommodated at the Slyfield Regeneration site of 40 ha.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Attached documents:
12.2 I object to the inclusion of Send Business Centre/Tannery Studios Tannery Lane, Send in relation to proposed inset from the Green Belt because:

- The impact on small surrounding roads will create traffic gridlock
- The 2017 Employment Land Need Assessment shows a reduction in demand to a low of 3.7 and a high of 4.1 hectares for industrial land for the whole borough not a huge over allocation of 9.26 hectares at Burnt Common in the Green Belt
- The word “minimum” is a change from the previous “maximum” in the 2016 plan and since that time there has been a decline in demand for industrial land as shown in the Employment Land Needs Assessment 2017
- Further expansion or development at this location detracts from the openness of the Green Belt and is inappropriate.

12.3 I object to the change in Policy E1 of proposed designation of Burnt Common as an Industrial Strategic Employment Site.

- It is adjacent to the beautiful Wey Navigation
- It is effectively an old non-conforming user in an area of outstanding countryside
- There is highly restricted vehicular access along Tannery Lane in both directions
- It was deleted from the 2014 draft because of all the local objections made previously and there is no logical reason to go back on this decision
- There is no need to build industrial or warehouse development in the middle of the Green Belt when Slyfield and Guildford still have many empty sites and industrial units
- There are patently no exceptional circumstances in terms of demand for employment space to build on this important area of Green Belt which effectively separates existing development in Send and Ripley and prevents urban sprawl
- It will join up existing villages and defeat the purpose of the Green Belt

12.4 I also object to the potential inclusion at Burnt Common of a waste management facility mentioned at the change to paragraph 4.423a which lacks sufficient detail for proper consultation and is completely inappropriate

12.5 I object to the ongoing poor quality of the updated research undertaken by Aecom in the Employment Land Needs Assessment 2017 which generally is superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and that no reliable individual analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space.

12.6 I object to the fact that no reliable analysis has yet been made of data held by GBC in respect of different B classes in terms of planning applications granted or evidence gathered by the economic development function at GBC and no robust assessment of local market demand apart from fairly brief references to freely available market research undertaken by commercial estate agents such as Lambert Smith Hampton covering a much wider area.

12.7 GBC in their role as a Planning Authority appear to fail to appreciate the fundamental rationale of the Use Classes Order as a planning tool in terms of procurement of useful property market research analysis or forward planning.

12.8 What we are left with is a fairly clumsy and poorly informed plan which clusters B classes without any appreciation of widely different employment impact and economic sustainability. E.g. B1 generates at least 5 times as much employment as B8.

12.9 The lack of appreciation by GBC as to the opportunity for widely different uses being generated within B class clusters defeats the whole point of proper planning of employment uses and can significantly endanger previously good planning put forward in the previous 2003 plan. E.g. the creation of a research and development park linked to the University but now has the threat of being downgraded into a general business park (see below).

12.10 Little regard has been given in the plan to the economic reality of falling demand for B2 industrial space which is clustered with other B classes almost randomly throughout the plan.

12.11 The Employment Land Needs Assessment update 2017 (ELNA) states “that the pipeline for employment floorspace defined by planning permissions yet to be implemented and prior approvals suggests the potential for an additional 33,607sqm of B use class floorspace to come forward. This figure comprises a net loss of 4,750sqm of B1a use class floorspace and a net gain of 38,357sqm in B1c, B2 or B8 use class space."

12.12 38,357sqm of B1c, B2 or B8 use class is quite sufficient supply for the plan period and does not justify the need for new development of industrial space on the Green Belt in such areas as Burnt Common. The reality of demand for industrial space is that it is both nationally and locally in decline and this is evidenced by old existing permissions that have not been taken up and developed. The ELNA alludes incorrectly to the poor quality of existing space being a “constraint” on supply and fails to acknowledge that this assertion cannot apply to potential newly developed space e.g. the undeveloped pipeline of 38,357sqm.

12.13 Little regard is still not given to the opportunity of specific B1 b space as an opportunity for research and development which needs to be nurtured and preserved without the detrimental and confused clustering with other B classes both in terms of planning and promotion of a research hub.

12.14 I support the concept of seeking increased investment in our local knowledge-based, high technology economy. This will provide well paid, creative jobs and generate the funding necessary to pay for the infrastructure and environment this sort of industry requires. This could be on existing commercial land at Manor Farm or further afield. It does not need to be in close proximity to the University and there is no justification for expanding onto Green Belt and AONB at Blackwell Farm.

12.15 We need to distinguish between wanting to increase the added value of the economy and physical expansion, especially given the scarcity of land in Guildford. Guildford is not the place for large space hungry businesses. So i should target high added value small and medium sized enterprises rather than the headquarters of larger corporations.

12.16 We need to promote the idea of new knowledge transfer in incubator units and small premises for new start up enterprises. They need to be on the wave of innovative new technology as opposed to older established businesses.

The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. 1. I OBJECT to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

I OBJECT to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Gosden Hill Farm. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.

The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

Attached documents:
There is limited employment in the area which will mean that people will commute to other areas to work necessitating car journeys which exacerbate congestion and can hardly be described as sustainable. Local employment and infrastructure considerations should be a key factor in development decisions of this scale and this has clearly not been addressed in the local plan.

1.1 We object to policy E1 sustainable employment

1.2 We note that there is a significant reduction of between 71% and 79% in the previous job target and resultant 79% reduction in employment space in response to the many objections lodged in 2014 against an unsubstantiated agenda for economic expansion in the last draft and based on new findings by Aecom in the latest ELNA 2015.

1.3 We have concern as to the ill-informed clustering of all B classes in terms of the clarity of market evidence required to inform effective planning and a failure to provide a clear understanding of business needs required under Section 160 of the NPPF.

1.4 We also note the dramatic reduction in assessed demand by two Employment Land Needs Assessment Reports carried out under the same terms of reference within a period of 2 years which calls into question the general reliability of the process of collection and interpretation of data in the overall forward planning process by GBC. I do not support the policy of creating a Strategic Employment site at Garlick’s Arch (A43) in the Green Belt which is completely unnecessary due to the overall decrease in demand for industrial space which could be easily accommodated at Slyfield.

1.5 We are concerned however that the research undertaken by Aecom is generally superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and that no reliable individual analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space.

1.6 No proper analysis has been made of data held by GBC in respect of different B classes in terms of planning applications granted or evidence gathered by the economic development function at GBC and no robust assessment of local market demand apart from fairly brief references to freely available market research undertaken by commercial estate agents such as Lambert Smith Hampton covering a much wider area.

1.7 GBC appear to fail to appreciate the fundamental rationale of the Use Classes Order as a planning tool in terms of useful property market research or forward planning.

1.8 What we are left with is a fairly clumsy and poorly informed plan which clusters B classes without any appreciation of widely different employment impact and economic sustainability. E.g. B1 generates at least 5 times as much employment as B8.

1.9 The lack of appreciation by GBC as to the opportunity for widely different uses being generated within B class clusters defeats the whole point of proper planning of employment uses and can significantly endanger previously good planning put forward in the previous 2003 plan. E.g. the creation of a research and development park linked to the University but now has the threat of being downgraded into a general business park (see below).

1.10 Little regard has been given in the plan to the economic reality of falling demand for B2 industrial space which is clustered with other B classes almost randomly throughout the plan.

1.11 Little regard is had to the opportunity of B1 b space as an opportunity for research and development which needs to be nurtured and preserved without the detrimental and confused clustering with other B classes both in terms of planning and promotion of a research hub.

1.12 We note that the past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 derived from VoA analysis and that the calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7% over the plan period up to 2033.

1.13 We support the concept of seeking increased investment in our local knowledge-based, high technology economy. This will provide well paid, creative jobs and generate the funding necessary to pay for the infrastructure and environment this sort of industry requires.

1.14 We need to distinguish between wanting to increase the added value of the economy and physical expansion, especially given the scarcity of land in Guildford. Guildford is not the place for large space hungry businesses. So i should target high added value small and medium sized enterprises rather than the headquarters of larger corporations.

1.15 We need to promote the idea of new knowledge transfer in incubator units and small premises for new start up enterprises. They need to be on the wave of innovative new technology as opposed to older established businesses.

1.16 We object to the policy of creating a Strategic Employment at Garlicks Arch (A43) in the Green Belt. The stated requirement of 7,000 sq m (B1c, B2 and B8) could easily be accommodated at the Slyfield Regeneration site of 40 ha.

National trends show that too much retail and commercial space in the town centre has been allocated for commercial retail rather than housing. Large floorspaces of this nature will end up as white elephants and the green belt will be built over. It also exacerbates the issue of gridlocked traffic when workers commute. I object to this.

I OBJECT TO POLICY E1 (EMPLOYMENT):

- Poor evidence base.
- Too much encouragement to low added-value employment that’s needed elsewhere in the country.
- Fails to concentrate general business activity in urban areas or business parks that have the infrastructure.
- Fails to differentiate this from appropriate rural business.
- Too much encouragement of warehousing, for which Guildford is too congested.

BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT

Business development must be limited. Land is a finite resource and plans to build further business projects in a congested area must increase costs of production. Of course better utilisation of existing 'brown field sites' is always welcome.

In addition, concentration of high value (i.e. Hi-tech) industries, which require less space resources should be encouraged.

I OBJECT to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Gosden Hill Farm. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.

The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Henley Business Park - Listed as Strategic Employment Site

There is no evidence that the businesses based at Henley offer local jobs and therefore numbers of vehicles in the car parks are testament that no-one walks to this site. I would even hazard a guess that NOT ONE person working at any company based there walks to work. Access to this site is only realistically by road as the distance from any main housing is too great and the pavement access is very poor down a very fast and dark road. Therefore even adding the new housing in Policy 46 will NOT make this a sustainable. So the evidence to make Henley Business Park a Sustainable Employment for the local community is not proven.

I object to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

I understand that the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site if it was developed. However, in the wider industrial development context the 7,000 sq m of development proposed for a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is small. I note the surplus land available in the existing industrial development just to the south of the site at Burnt Common – easily sufficient to take 7,000 sq m of further development of this type. Given suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, the Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site.

E1 Sustainable Employment (P 63).

While the town centre can be a suitable location for Offices (use B1a) – assuming that journeys to it are not made by car - it is not so for Research and Development (B1b). R and D normally requires spacious sites and usually some industrial equipment and has low employee density. I ask that class B1b be removed from this policy objective.

7.1 In relation to office (B1a) and Research & Development (B1b) Strategic Employment Sites, Policy E1 states that:

“When developed, the new employment site at Gosden Hill Farm will be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.”

7.2 As explained in more detail below and detailed within the VDFD submitted with these representations, MGH’s current proposals for Gosden Hill envisage the delivery of a prime B1 office site alongside the new A3 access and Park and Ride, together with other employment provision being delivered as part of a mixed use area located at the southern end of the site, adjacent to the proposed Merrow Station.

7.3 It therefore needs to be made clear in Policy E1 that this relates only to employment land which is envisaged to be delivered alongside the A3 development access at Gosden Hill for B1a Office development.

I object to Policy E1 and E2 because it is nationally recognised there is a down turn in retail within town centres. Employment in this sector is in decline due to the rapid rise of internet shopping. It would be better used for mixed housing.

This week I received a leaflet from local supplier Afinity Water, highlighting that ‘After months of low rainfall, water resources are below average’..... ‘after months of low winter rainfall, our groundwater resources remain well below average – despite the rain in May and June’. Here is a good example illustrating that our natural resources have limits and could fail under such large scale excessive demands from new development.

No one seems to be looking at the ‘big picture’ realistically or considering the overall impact that these large developments, in close proximity to each other, will have on the area! It is downright irresponsible that this has not been factored into council plans and the overall housing numbers substantially reduced.

In conclusion I object to the unsustainable, unrealistic levels of homes the Government are pushing on Councils in the South East of England. Our roads are already running above capacity. This whole area is in serious danger of grinding to a complete standstill. The addition of 60,000 cars from new development joining the network (large scale developments in neighbouring Aldershot, Waverly, Woking and Rushmoor) would simply be too much for the area and would destroy our environment.

Land North of Slyfield Industrial Estate (Formerly Site 63): Representation on behalf of Cassidy Slyfield Ltd and Mr & Mrs Mostyn

The amendments to Policy E1 and its reasoned justification, and the underpinning updated evidence base, do not alter our assessment such that the Local Plan remains unsound for the reasons cited in our July 16 representation.

Specifically, we note that following the publication for the revised ELNA (March 2017), the allocation of industrial land (B1c, B2 and B8) has reduced further from a range of 4.7-5.1ha to 3.7-4.1ha. Policy E1 is unsound because the policy has not been positively prepared, adequately justified, is not effective in meeting the needs and therefore remains inconsistent with the NPPF, as it does not allocate sufficient land to provide a range and choice of employment premises over the plan period to accommodate growth required for the borough’s economy to develop and strengthen.

Plan Modifications Sought

In order to make Policy E1 and the Site Allocations sound in this respect:
1 The ENLA and Policy E1 should revisit the actual employment floorspace needed (which we have not revisited again);
2 Policy E1 and the Site Allocations should identify the North Slyfield Site for employment use development (if necessary prioritised ahead of land at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh and at Burnt Common, given it is a better planning option), such that:
   - Policy E1 is amended to read: "(8) When developed, the new employment site at North Slyfield, will be treated as an Industrial Strategic Employment Site";
   - An additional Site Allocation is identified within the Guildford Urban Area as set out below:

[Table]

Allocation Reasons Summary

The 4ha North Slyfield Site should be removed from the Green Belt and be allocated in the Guildford Local Plan for employment development within Classes B1c, B2 and B8, for the following summary reasons:

Employment
1 There is a quantitative need to allocate additional employment land in the Borough.
2 There is a qualitative need to provide additional employment land adjacent to SIE, Guildford’s premier industrial / warehousing location.
3 The North Slyfield Site would be more easily delivered than the other employment allocations.
4 The allocation of the North Slyfield Site would positively support other Council strategies.

Green Belt
5 Development of the North Slyfield Site would not harm the Green Belt or landscape.

Site Characteristics
6 The North Slyfield Site is preferable compared to the employment allocations in the Proposed Submission Local Plan.

Local Plan Consultation Responses
7 The allocation of the North Slyfield Site for employment purposes did not arouse a significant degree of opposition from the general public or other stakeholders.

Concluding Remarks
The 4ha North Slyfield Site should be removed from the Green Belt and be allocated in the Guildford Local Plan for employment development within Classes B1c, B2 and B8, to make the Policy E1 and the employment Site Allocations within the PSLP sound.
What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Policy E1 is amended to read: "(8) When developed, the new employment site at North Slyfield, will be treated as an Industrial Strategic Employment Site"; and

- An additional Site Allocation is identified within the Guildford Urban Area as set out below:

POLICY E1 Meeting employment needs

OBJECT because

• the evidence base is unreliable
• there is unclear differentiation between B class uses
• only high added-value business uses are desirable, not low grade, low employment warehousing which is land hungry
• industrial and commercial businesses must be concentrated in the urban area, or existing business parks (eg Slyfield) not in the rural environment which the infrastructure is unable to support
• the rural environment must support micro or high tech businesses, agricultural industries, and tourism, and these sectors must not be damaged by general industrial development which is inappropriate

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

I object to the change in Policy E1 sustainable employment because they have not addressed many of the 32,000 objections made to the 2016 plan.

I object to the inclusion of Send Business Centre/Tannery Studios Tannery Lane, Send in relation to proposed inset from the Green Belt because:

• It is effectively an old non-conforming user in an area of outstanding countryside
• It is adjacent to the beautiful Wey Navigation
• There is highly restricted vehicular access along Tannery Lane in both directions
• Further expansion or development at this location detracts from the openness of the Green Belt and is inappropriate.

I object to the change in Policy E1 of proposed designation of Burnt Common as an Industrial Strategic Employment Site.

• It was deleted from the 2014 draft because of all the local objections made previously and there is no logical reason to go back on this decision
• The word “minimum” is a change from the previous “maximum” in the 2016 plan and since that time there has been a decline in demand for industrial land as shown in the Employment Land Needs Assessment 2017
• There is no need to build industrial or warehouse development in the middle of the Green Belt when Slyfield and Guildford still have many empty sites and industrial units
• The 2017 Employment Land Need Assessment shows a reduction in demand to a low of 3.7 and a high of 4.1 hectares for industrial land for the whole borough not a huge over allocation of 9.26 hectares at Burnt Common in the Green
There are patently no exceptional circumstances in terms of demand for employment space to build on this important area of Green Belt which effectively separates existing development in Send and Ripley and prevents urban sprawl.

- The impact on small surrounding roads will create traffic gridlock
- It will join up existing villages and defeat the purpose of the Green Belt

I also object to the potential inclusion at Burnt Common of a waste management facility mentioned at the change to paragraph 4.423a which lacks sufficient detail for proper consultation and is completely inappropriate.

I object to the ongoing poor quality of the updated research undertaken by Aecom in the Employment Land Needs Assessment 2017 which generally is superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and that no reliable individual analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space.

I object to the fact that no reliable analysis has yet been made of data held by GBC in respect of different B classes in terms of planning applications granted or evidence gathered by the economic development function at GBC and no robust assessment of local market demand apart from fairly brief references to freely available market research undertaken by commercial estate agents such as Lambert Smith Hampton covering a much wider area.

GBC in their role as a Planning Authority appear to fail to appreciate the fundamental rationale of the Use Classes Order as a planning tool in terms of procurement of useful property market research analysis or forward planning.

What we are left with is a fairly clumsy and poorly informed plan which clusters B classes without any appreciation of widely different employment impact and economic sustainability. E.g. B1 generates at least 5 times as much employment as B8.

The lack of appreciation by GBC as to the opportunity for widely different uses being generated within B class clusters defeats the whole point of proper planning of employment uses and can significantly endanger previously good planning put forward in the previous 2003 plan. E.g. the creation of a research and development park linked to the University but now has the threat of being downgraded into a general business park (see below).

Little regard has been given in the plan to the economic reality of falling demand for B2 industrial space which is clustered with other B classes almost randomly throughout the plan.

The Employment Land Needs Assessment update 2017 (ELNA) states “that the pipeline for employment floorspace defined by planning permissions yet to be implemented and prior approvals suggests the potential for an additional 33,607sqm of B use class floorspace to come forward. This figure comprises a net loss of 4,750sqm of B1a use class floorspace and a net gain of 38,357sqm in B1c, B2 or B8 use class space.”

38,357sqm of B1c, B2 or B8 use class is quite sufficient supply for the plan period and does not justify the need for new development of industrial space on the Green Belt in such areas as Burnt Common. The reality of demand for industrial space is that it is both nationally and locally in decline and this is evidenced by old existing permissions that have not been taken up and developed. The ELNA alludes incorrectly to the poor quality of existing space being a “constraint” on supply and fails to acknowledge that this assertion cannot apply to potential newly developed space e.g. the undeveloped pipeline of 38,357sqm.

Little regard is still not given to the opportunity of specific B1 h space as an opportunity for research and development which needs to be nurtured and preserved without the detrimental and confused clustering with other B classes both in terms of planning and promotion of a research hub.

I support the concept of seeking increased investment in our local knowledge-based, high technology economy. This will provide well paid, creative jobs and generate the funding necessary to pay for the infrastructure and environment this sort of industry requires.
We need to distinguish between wanting to increase the added value of the economy and physical expansion, especially given the scarcity of land in Guildford. Guildford is not the place for large space hungry businesses. So I should target high added value small and medium sized enterprises rather than the headquarters of larger corporations.

We need to promote the idea of new knowledge transfer in incubator units and small premises for new start up enterprises. They need to be on the wave of innovative new technology as opposed to older established businesses.

I OBJECT to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Gosden Hill Farm. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.

The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

Employment

In 2016 Enterprise M3 LEP commissioned Regeneris to undertake a review of their 2013 Commercial Property Market Study. The final report is due to be considered at Enterprise M3’s Board Meeting in July 2016. Information relating to this is not yet in the public domain but for the purposes of this consultation has been referenced to help support our response. In light of this, Enterprise M3 requests that this response is only made public once the Commercial Property Market Study has been published.

The Enterprise M3 Commercial Property Market Study, 2016 highlights that Guildford is a highly sought after office location. Its highly skilled labour, market and transport connections to London mean that office development attracts some of the highest rental values in the LEP area and that speculative office development is therefore commercially viable. Future developments, such as the planned expansion of the University of Surrey will further enhance the appeal of Guildford as a location for inward investment.

The Commercial Property Market Study, 2016 highlights that the challenge facing Guildford is that it has a major shortage of office space within the town centre and a very limited pipeline of sites. The few vacant sites in the town centre are also under growing pressure to be converted to residential uses. It therefore follows that Enterprise M3 is therefore very supportive of employment allocations for quality, grade A office space within Guildford town centre which meets this demand. Although within the Proposed Submission Local Plan we have noted that there are a limited number of allocations for employment development within the town centre, Enterprise M3 is supportive of the Draft Guildford Town Centre Masterplan, 2015 and look forward to seeing the proposals and working with Guildford Borough Council to bring it forward. In particular, the ability of the Bedford Wharf area to provide much needed employment space within the town centre would be very much welcomed.

Nevertheless, given the recognised shortage of office space within the town centre we encourage further consideration to be given to ensuring that there is sufficient land allocated for quality office development within the town centre in order to prevent the loss of existing and new major users in the future finding no suitable land in Guildford and subsequently locating elsewhere to the economic detriment of the wider Enterprise M3 area.

The Commercial Property Market Study, 2016 also highlights that demand for industrial sites in Guildford has been strong, evidenced by the take up and development at Henley Business Park. Since 2013 the business park has achieved one pre-let and is also speculatively building out two units, with only 6,000 sq m of development space remaining.

However, the Commercial Property Market Study, 2016 recognises that there remains a persistent shortage of both available industrial space and land with development potential in most market areas within the LEP. This includes light industrial space which is suitable for SMEs, but particularly for large scale warehousing which could attract new investment to the LEP area in light of recent upwards trends in e-commerce. This undersupply of B8 space transcends LEP boundaries, with very strong demand evident for any sites that can serve the London market. We would therefore encourage further consideration to be given in planning for storage & distribution employment space to meet the needs of the warehousing/logistics sector in the South East, a region which has been recognised as experiencing a particular shortage.

Policy E1 makes reference to the need to plan for between 4.7ha and 5.3ha of industrial land (B1c, B2, and B8 uses) within Guildford during the plan period 2013 - 2033. From looking through the Site Allocations section of the Proposed Submission Local Plan, the majority of this requirement for industrial land can be met through the development of the Slyfield Regeneration Area (Allocation A24), a 40 ha site allocated for light industrial uses as well as 1,000 homes, 4 traveller pitches, a new waste management depot and sewage treatment works and community facilities. A further 7,000 sq m of land for industrial and storage & distribution uses can also be accommodated at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/ Burnt Common and Ripley (Allocation A43) and as aforementioned, 6,000 sq m of development space for storage & distribution uses also remains at Henley Business Park. This indicates that there is enough supply to meet the requirements for industrial development as set out in Guildford’s Employment Lands Needs Assessment, 2015 and we are supportive of this approach.

On balance, Enterprise M3 LEP is supportive of Guildford’s Proposed Submission Local Plan and welcomes the strategy put forward to allow Guildford to continue to play a pivotal role in the economic prosperity of the M3 Corridor as one of the LEPs key Growth Towns. As mentioned above we would encourage the Council to give further consideration on how additional employment sites to meet the demand for office space within the town centre can be incorporated to support the continued growth and prosperity of the town centre going forward. We are very supportive of the increased housing target and would very much welcome the opportunity to work with you to ensure its delivery and to continue to work with you in the positive way which we have done to date.

Enterprise M3 is very supportive of policy E4, which makes provision for a 10 ha extension to Surrey Research Park. This is one of the Borough’s largest employment areas and a centre of excellence in technology, science health and engineering. This extension is expected to provide up to 35,000 sq m of additional office and R&D floor space, which added to the remaining 9,000 sq m provides a significant amount of employment space for research, development and design activities that are complimentary to those activities undertaken at the University of Surrey. This extension will ensure the continued growth and success of the Research Park and the businesses within it, which aligns strongly within our ambitions for innovation and enterprise across the Enterprise M3 LEP area, particularly around the development of 5G technology for which the University of Surrey is playing a key part.

The Commercial Property Market Study, 2016 also highlights that demand for industrial sites in Guildford has been strong, evidenced by the take up and development at Henley Business Park. Since 2013 the business park has achieved one pre-let and is also speculatively building out two units, with only 6,000 sq m of development space remaining.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

POLICY E1 - Meeting employment needs

I OBJECT because -
the evidence base is unreliable;
there is unclear differentiation between B class uses;
only high value-added business uses, contributing to a modern “knowledge economy”, are desirable, not low-grade, low-employment warehousing which is also land hungry;
industrial and commercial businesses must be concentrated in the urban area or existing business parks (e.g. Slyfield) not in the rural environment which the infrastructure is unable to support;
the rural environment must support micro- or high-tech businesses, agricultural industries, and tourism, and these sectors must not be damaged by general industrial development which is inappropriate.

I object - Post Brexit - with its economic uncertainties renders all the data used for this Policy unreliable.

I object - Slyfield is an existing and well-served locality in which to contain and adequately serve industrial and commercial businesses, not the rural environment. Development here would be inappropriate.

I OBJECT to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Gosden Hill Farm. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.
I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.

The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

I OBJECT TO POLICY E1 (EMPLOYMENT):

- Poor evidence base.
- Too much encouragement to low added-value employment that’s needed elsewhere in the country.
- Fails to concentrate general business activity in urban areas or business parks that have the infrastructure.
- Fails to differentiate this from appropriate rural business.
- Too much encouragement of warehousing, for which Guildford is too congested.

Full response

We OBJECT to this policy.
We need to distinguish between wanting to increase the added value of the economy and physical expansion, especially given the scarcity of land in Guildford. Guildford is not the place for large space hungry businesses. We believe Guildford should target high added-value small and medium sized enterprises or the headquarters of larger corporations, but not provide low added value warehousing and industrial space.

GBC appear to fail to appreciate the fundamental rationale of the Use Classes Order as a planning tool in terms of useful property market research or forward planning.

No proper analysis has been made of data held by GBC in respect of different B classes in terms of planning applications granted or evidence gathered by the economic development function at GBC without any attempt at real market demand apart from vague references to freely available market research undertaken by commercial estate agents. (See definitions of B classes at end of this policy response).

What we are left with is a fairly clumsy and poorly informed plan which clusters B classes without any appreciation of widely different employment impact and economic sustainability. E.g. B1 (mostly local office use/R&D) generates at least 5 times as much employment as B8 (distribution and warehousing).

This draft Local Plan is partly based on new findings by Aecom in the latest ELNA 2015 [Employment Land Needs Assessment 2015]. This includes the recasting of the ELNA by Aecom in 2015 which updated the ELNA 2013 prepared by GBC. We have had regard to the evidence base provided by Aecom in the 2015 ELNA and find it a more reliable evidence base for overall projected employment in the borough over the plan period in overall numbers than done previously by GBC in 2013. However, we have concern that the survey work by Lambert Smith Hampton is in the form of high level free property research that is used for the purposes of marketing their services over a wide area not specifically commissioned for the borough of Guildford and undertaken for ELNA purposes.

However, we are concerned that the research undertaken by Aecom is generally superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and that no reliable individual analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space.

The lack of appreciation by GBC as to the opportunity for widely different uses being generated within B class clusters defeats the whole point of proper planning of employment uses and can significantly endanger previously good planning put forward in the previous 2003 plan. We support the concept of seeking increased investment in our local knowledge-based, high technology economy. This will provide well paid, creative jobs and generate the wealth necessary to fund the infrastructure and environment this sort of industry requires.

We need to promote the idea of new knowledge transfer in incubator units and small premises for new start up enterprises. We need to be on the wave of innovative new technology as opposed to older established businesses. High value-added industry is desirable; low tech, land-hungry older businesses which will increase congestion are not desirable.

We have concern as to the ill-informed clustering of all B classes. This is unclear in terms of market evidence required to inform effective planning. There is a failure to provide a clear understanding of business needs within the relevant area as required under Section 160 of the NPPF.

Little regard has been given in the plan to the economic reality of falling demand for B2 industrial space which is clustered with other B classes almost randomly throughout the plan. Little regard is had to the opportunity of B1b space as an opportunity for research and development which needs to be nurtured and preserved without the detrimental and confused clustering with other B classes both in terms of planning and promotion of a research hub.

We do not support the policy of creating Strategic Employment sites outside the urban centres.

Some of the strategic industrial sites would be better classified as brownfield land suitable for use as a residential area, eg Woodbridge Park, Woodbridge Road and Merrow Lane.
This study varies very significantly from the previous Guildford Borough Council ELNA 2013, which after two years has been completely re-written. This leads us to question the reliability of the evidence base here which has been used to justify the assumptions and plans; it is unclear that the current evidence base is any more reliable than that used previously. This calls into question the general reliability of the process of collection and interpretation of data in the overall forward planning process by GBC.

DEFINITIONS:

B1

Business

B1 building use is use for all or any of the following purposes:

(a) as an office other than a use within class A2 (financial and professional services),

(b) for research and development of products or processes, or

(c) for any industrial process, being a use which can be carried out in any residential area without detriment to the amenity of that area by reason of noise, vibration, smell, fumes, smoke, soot, ash, dust or grit.

General Industrial

B2 building use is for the carrying on of an industrial process other than one falling within class B1 above or within classes B3 to B7 below. (Note: B3-B7 relates to very heavy industry such as oil refining, smelting etc).

Distribution or Storage

B8 building use is for storage or as a distribution centre.

We note that there is a significant reduction of between 71% and 79% in the previous job target and resultant 79% reduction in employment space in response to the many objections lodged in 2014 against an unsubstantiated agenda for economic expansion in the last draft and based on new findings by Aecom in the latest ELNA 2015. We have concern as to the ill-informed clustering of all B classes in terms of the clarity of market evidence required to inform effective planning and a failure to provide a clear understanding of business needs required under Section 160 of the NPPF.

We also note the dramatic reduction in assessed demand by two Employment Land Needs Assessment Reports carried out under the same terms of reference within a period of 2 years which calls into question the general reliability of the process of collection and interpretation of data in the overall forward planning process by GBC. We do not support the policy of creating a Strategic Employment site at Garlick’s Arch (A43) in the Green Belt which is completely unnecessary due to the overall decrease in demand for industrial space which could be easily accommodated at Slyfield. We are concerned however that the research undertaken by Aecom is generally superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and that no reliable individual analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space.

No proper analysis has been made of data held by GBC in respect of different B classes in terms of planning applications granted or evidence gathered by the economic development function at GBC and no robust assessment of local market demand apart from fairly brief references to freely available market research undertaken by commercial estate agents such as Lambert Smith Hampton covering a much wider area. GBC appear to fail to appreciate the fundamental rationale of the Use Classes Order as a planning tool in terms of useful property market research or forward planning. What we are left with is a fairly clumsy and poorly informed plan which clusters B classes without any appreciation of widely different employment impact and economic sustainability. E.g. B1 generates at least 5 times as much employment as B8. The lack of appreciation by GBC as to the opportunity for widely different uses being generated within B class clusters defeats the whole point of proper planning of employment uses and can significantly endanger previously good planning put forward. in the previous 2003 plan. E.g. the creation of a research and development park linked to the University but now has the threat of being downgraded into a general business park (see below). Little regard has been given in the plan to the economic reality of falling demand for B2 industrial space which is clustered with other B classes almost randomly throughout the plan. Little regard is had to the opportunity of B1b space as an opportunity for research and development which needs to be nurtured and preserved without the detrimental and confused clustering with other B classes both in terms of planning and promotion of a research hub.

We note that the past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 derived from VoA analysis and that the calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7% over the plan period up to 2033. We support the concept of seeking increased investment in our local knowledge-based, high technology economy. This will provide well paid, creative jobs and generate the funding necessary to pay for the infrastructure and environment this sort of industry requires. We need to distinguish between wanting to increase the added value of the economy and physical expansion, especially given the scarcity of land in Guildford. Guildford is not the place for large space hungry businesses.

So we should target high added value small and medium sized enterprises rather than the headquarters of larger corporations. We need to promote the idea of new knowledge transfer in incubator units and small premises for new start up enterprises. They need to be on the wave of innovative new technology as opposed to older established businesses.

We object to the policy of creating a Strategic Employment at Garlicks Arch (A43) in the Green Belt. The stated requirement of 7,000 sq m (B1c, B2 and B8) could easily be accommodated at the Slyfield Regeneration site of 40 ha.

1. POLICY E1

I OBJECT to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Gosden Hill Farm. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.

The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (Blc), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

Do you consider this section of the document; complies with the Duty to Cooperate? ( ), is Sound? ( No ), is Legally Compliant? ( )

I object to the change in Policy E1 of proposed designation of Burnt Common as an Industrial Strategic Employment Site.

- It was deleted from the 2014 draft because of all the local objections made previously and there is no logical reason to go back on this decision
- The word “minimum” is a change from the previous “maximum” in the 2016 plan and since that time there has been a decline in demand for industrial land as shown in the Employment Land Needs Assessment 2017
- There is no need to build industrial or warehouse development in the middle of the Green Belt when Slyfield and Guildford still have many empty sites and industrial units
- The 2017 Employment Land Need Assessment shows a reduction in demand to a low of 3.7 and a high of 4.1 hectares for industrial land for the whole borough not a huge over allocation of 9.26 hectares at Burnt Common in the Green Belt
• There are patently no exceptional circumstances in terms of demand for employment space to build on this important area of Green Belt which effectively separates existing development in Send and Ripley and prevents urban sprawl
• The impact on small surrounding roads will create traffic gridlock
• It will join up existing villages and defeat the purpose of the Green Belt

I also object to the potential inclusion at Burnt Common of a waste management facility mentioned at the change to paragraph 4.423a which lacks sufficient detail for proper consultation and is completely inappropriate

I object to the fact that no reliable analysis has yet been made of data held by GBC in respect of different B classes in terms of planning applications granted or evidence gathered by the economic development function at GBC and no robust assessment of local market demand apart from fairly brief references to freely available market research undertaken by commercial estate agents such as Lambert Smith Hampton covering a much wider area.

The Employment Land Needs Assessment update 2017 (ELNA) states “that the pipeline for employment floorspace defined by planning permissions yet to be implemented and prior approvals suggests the potential for an additional 33,607sqm of B use class floorspace to come forward. This figure comprises a net loss of 4,750sqm of B1a use class floorspace and a net gain of 38,357sqm in B1c, B2 or B8 use class space.”

38,357sqm of B1c, B2 or B8 use class is quite sufficient supply for the plan period and does not justify the need for new development of industrial space on the Green Belt in such areas as Burnt Common. The reality of demand for industrial space is that it is both nationally and locally in decline and this is evidenced by old existing permissions that have not been taken up and developed. The ELNA alludes incorrectly to the poor quality of existing space being a “constraint” on supply and fails to acknowledge that this assertion cannot apply to potential newly developed space e.g. the undeveloped pipeline of 38,357sqm.

WE OBJECT to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Gosden Hill Farm. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.

The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. I object to policy E1 sustainable employment

I note that there is a significant reduction of between 71% and 79% in the previous job target and resultant 79% reduction in employment space in response to the many objections lodged in 2014 against an unsubstantiated agenda for economic expansion in the last draft and based on new findings by Aecom in the latest ELNA 2015.

I have concern as to the ill-informed clustering of all B classes in terms of the clarity of market evidence required to inform effective planning and a failure to provide a clear understanding of business needs required under Section 160 of the NPPF.

I also note the dramatic reduction in assessed demand by two Employment Land Needs Assessment Reports carried out under the same terms of reference within a period of 2 years which calls into question the general reliability of the process of collection and interpretation of data in the overall forward planning process by GBC. I do not support the policy of creating a Strategic Employment site at Garlick’s Arch (A43) in the Green Belt which is completely unnecessary due to the overall decrease in demand for industrial space which could be easily accommodated at Slyfield.

I am concerned however that the research undertaken by Aecom is generally superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and that no reliable individual analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space.

No proper analysis has been made of data held by GBC in respect of different B classes in terms of planning applications granted or evidence gathered by the economic development function at GBC and no robust assessment of local market demand apart from fairly brief references to freely available market research undertaken by commercial estate agents such as Lambert Smith Hampton covering a much wider area.

GBC appear to fail to appreciate the fundamental rationale of the Use Classes Order as a planning tool in terms of useful property market research or forward planning.

What we are left with is a fairly clumsy and poorly informed plan which clusters B classes without any appreciation of widely different employment impact and economic sustainability. E.g. B1 generates at least 5 times as much employment as B8.

The lack of appreciation by GBC as to the opportunity for widely different uses being generated within B class clusters defeats the whole point of proper planning of employment uses and can significantly endanger previously good planning put forward in the previous 2003 plan. E.g. the creation of a research and development park linked to the University but now has the threat of being downgraded into a general business park (see below).

Little regard has been given in the plan to the economic reality of falling demand for B2 industrial space which is clustered with other B classes almost randomly throughout the plan.

Little regard is had to the opportunity of B1b space as an opportunity for research and development which needs to be nurtured and preserved without the detrimental and confused clustering with other B classes both in terms of planning and promotion of a research hub.

I note that the past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 derived from VoA analysis and that the calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7% over the plan period up to 2033.

I support the concept of seeking increased investment in our local knowledge-based, high technology economy. This will provide well paid, creative jobs and generate the funding necessary to pay for the infrastructure and environment this sort of industry requires.
We need to distinguish between wanting to increase the added value of the economy and physical expansion, especially given the scarcity of land in Guildford. Guildford is not the place for large space hungry businesses. So I should target high added value small and medium sized enterprises rather than the headquarters of larger corporations.

We need to promote the idea of new knowledge transfer in incubator units and small premises for new start up enterprises. They need to be on the wave of innovative new technology as opposed to older established businesses. I object to the policy of creating a Strategic Employment at Garlicks Arch (A43) in the Green Belt. The stated requirement of 7,000 sq m (B1c, B2 and B8) could easily be accommodated at the Slyfield Regeneration site of 40 ha.

POLICY E1 SUSTAINABLE EMPLOYMENT

1.1 I object to the change in Policy E1 sustainable employment because they have not addressed many of the 32,000 objections made to the 2016 plan.

1.2 I object to the inclusion of Send Business Centre/Tannery Studios Tannery Lane, Send in relation to proposed inset from the Green Belt because:

1.3 It is effectively an old non-conforming user in an area of outstanding countryside

1.4 It is adjacent to the beautiful Wey Navigation

1.5 There is highly restricted vehicular access along Tannery Lane in both directions

1.6 Further expansion or development at this location detracts from the openness of the Green Belt and is inappropriate.

1.7 I object to the change in Policy E1 of proposed designation of Burnt Common as an Industrial Strategic Employment Site.

1.8 It was deleted from the 2014 draft because of all the local objections made previously and there is no logical reason to go back on this decision

1.9 The word “minimum” is a change from the previous “maximum” in the 2016 plan and since that time there has been a decline in demand for industrial land as shown in the Employment Land Needs Assessment 2017

1.10 There is no need to build industrial or warehouse development in the middle of the Green Belt when Slyfield and Guildford still have many empty sites and industrial units

1.11 The 2017 Employment Land Need Assessment shows a reduction in demand to a low of 3.7 and a high of 4.1 hectares for industrial land for the whole borough not a huge over allocation of 9.26 hectares at Burnt Common in the Green Belt

1.12 There are patently no exceptional circumstances in terms of demand for employment space to build on this important area of Green Belt which effectively separates existing development in Send and Ripley and prevents urban sprawl
1.13 The impact on small surrounding roads will create traffic gridlock.

1.14 It will join up existing villages and defeat the purpose of the Green Belt.

1.15 I also object to the potential inclusion at Burnt Common of a waste management facility mentioned at the change to paragraph 4.423a which lacks sufficient detail for proper consultation and is completely inappropriate.

1.16 I object to the ongoing poor quality of the updated research undertaken by Aecom in the Employment Land Needs Assessment 2017 which generally is superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and that no reliable individual analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space.

1.17 I object to the fact that no reliable analysis has yet been made of data held by GBC in respect of different B classes in terms of planning applications granted or evidence gathered by the economic development function at GBC and no robust assessment of local market demand apart from fairly brief references to freely available market research undertaken by commercial estate agents such as Lambert Smith Hampton covering a much wider area.

1.18 GBC in their role as a Planning Authority appear to fail to appreciate the fundamental rationale of the Use Classes Order as a planning tool in terms of procurement of useful property market research analysis or forward planning.

1.19 What we are left with is a fairly clumsy and poorly informed plan which clusters B classes without any appreciation of widely different employment impact and economic sustainability. E.g. B1 generates at least 5 times as much employment as B8.

1.20 The lack of appreciation by GBC as to the opportunity for widely different uses being generated within B class clusters defeats the whole point of proper planning of employment uses and can significantly endanger previously good planning put forward in the previous 2003 plan. E.g. the creation of a research and development park linked to the University but now has the threat of being downgraded into a general business park (see below).

1.21 Little regard has been given in the plan to the economic reality of falling demand for B2 industrial space which is clustered with other B classes almost randomly throughout the plan.

1.22 The Employment Land Needs Assessment update 2017 (ELNA) states “that the pipeline for employment floorspace defined by planning permissions yet to be implemented and prior approvals suggests the potential for an additional 33,607sqm of B use class floorspace to come forward. This figure comprises a net loss of 4,750sqm of B1a use class floorspace and a net gain of 38,357sqm in B1c, B2 or B8 use class space.

" 1.23 38,357sqm of B1c, B2 or B8 use class is quite sufficient supply for the plan period and does not justify the need for new development of industrial space on the Green Belt in such areas as Burnt Common. The reality of demand for industrial space is that it is both nationally and locally in decline and this is evidenced by old existing permissions that have not been taken up and developed. The ELNA alludes incorrectly to the poor quality of existing space being a “constraint” on supply and fails to acknowledge that this assertion cannot apply to potential newly developed space e.g. the undeveloped pipeline of 38,357sqm.

1.24 Little regard is still not given to the opportunity of specific B1b space as an opportunity for research and development which needs to be nurtured and preserved without the detrimental and confused clustering with other B classes both in terms of planning and promotion of a research hub.

1.25 I support the concept of seeking increased investment in our local knowledge-based, high technology economy. This will provide well paid, creative jobs and generate the funding necessary to pay for the infrastructure and environment this sort of industry requires.

1.26 We need to distinguish between wanting to increase the added value of the economy and physical expansion, especially given the scarcity of land in Guildford. Guildford is not the place for large space hungry businesses. So i should target high added value small and medium sized enterprises rather than the headquarters of larger corporations.
1.27 We need to promote the idea of new knowledge transfer in incubator units and small premises for new start up enterprises. They need to be on the wave of innovative new technology as opposed to older established businesses.

POLICY E1 SUSTAINABLE EMPLOYMENT

I object to policy E1 sustainable employment.

I note that there is a significant reduction of between 71% and 79% in the previous job target and resultant 79% reduction in employment space in response to the many objections lodged in 2014 against an unsubstantiated agenda for economic expansion in the last draft and based on new findings by Aecom in the latest ELNA 2015.

I have concern as to the ill-informed clustering of all B classes in terms of the clarity of market evidence required to inform effective planning and a failure to provide a clear understanding of business needs required under Section 160 of the NPPF.

I also note the dramatic reduction in assessed demand by two Employment Land Needs Assessment Reports carried out under the same terms of reference within a period of 2 years which calls into question the general reliability of the process of collection and interpretation of data in the overall forward planning process by GBC. I am concerned however that the research undertaken by Aecom is generally superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and that no reliable individual analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space.

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

I OBJECT to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Gosden Hill Farm. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.

The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

Meeting employment needs OBJECT. Building industrial and commercial enterprises in a rural environment is the worst of both worlds – it destroys the character of the rural environment and will again have an adverse effect on the environment as employees will have to travel to work.

POLICY E1 - Meeting employment needs

I OBJECT because -

- The evidence base is unreliable;
- There is unclear differentiation between B class uses;
- Only high value-added business uses, contributing to a modern "knowledge economy", are desirable, not low-grade, low-employment warehousing which is also land hungry;
- Industrial and commercial businesses must be concentrated in the urban area or existing business parks
- (e.g. Slyfield) not in the rural environment which the infrastructure is unable to support;

- The rural environment must support micro- or high-tech businesses, agricultural industries, and tourism, and these sectors must not be damaged by general industrial development which is inappropriate.

Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.

The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

• there is unclear differentiation between B class uses
• only high added-value business uses are desirable, not low grade, low employment warehousing which is land hungry
• industrial and commercial businesses must be concentrated in the urban area, or existing business parks (e.g. Slyfield) not in the rural environment which the infrastructure is unable to support
• the rural environment must support micro or high tech businesses, agricultural industries, and tourism, and these sectors must not be damaged by general industrial development which is inappropriate

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

I OBJECT to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Gosden Hill Farm. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.
The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

Policy E1 - Meeting Employment Needs

I object. The evidence base is not reliable. Industrial and commercial businesses must be concentrated in the urban or existing industrial areas that have infrastructure to support it rather than the rural areas.

I object on the basis of how this is being applied - The housing identified for East and West Horsley is clearly targeted to maximize profits for housing developers by all but two sites being in walking distance of a commuter station to London. Therefore these sites are targeted for London employment, and hence the policy is not being applied to the choice of locations.

I object to policy E1 sustainable employment. I note that there is a significant reduction of between 71% and 79% in the previous job target and resultant 79% reduction in employment space in response to the many objections lodged in 2014 against an unsubstantiated agenda for economic expansion in the last draft and based on new findings by Aecom in the latest ELNA 2015. I have concern as to the ill-informed clustering of all B classes in terms of the clarity of market evidence required to inform effective planning and a failure to provide a clear understanding of business needs required under Section 160 of the NPPF. I also note the dramatic reduction in assessed demand by two Employment Land Needs Assessment Reports carried out under the same terms of reference within a period of 2 years which calls into question the general reliability of the process of collection and interpretation of data in the overall forward planning process by GBC. I am concerned however that the research undertaken by Aecom is generally superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and that no reliable individual analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space. No proper analysis has been made of data held by GBC in respect of different B classes in terms of planning applications granted or evidence gathered by the economic development function at GBC and no robust assessment of local market demand apart from fairly brief references to freely available market research undertaken by commercial estate agents such as Lambert Smith Hampton covering a much wider area. GBC appear to fail to appreciate the fundamental rationale of the Use Classes Order as a planning tool in terms of useful property market research or forward planning. What we are left with is a fairly clumsy and poorly informed plan which clusters B classes without any appreciation of widely different employment impact and economic sustainability. E.g. B1 generates at least 5 times as much employment as B8. The lack of appreciation as to the opportunity for widely different uses being generated within B class clusters defeats the whole point of proper planning of employment uses and can significantly endanger previously good planning put forward in the previous 2003 plan. E.g. the creation of a research and development park linked to the University but now has the threat of being downgraded into a general business park (see below). Little regard has been given in the plan to the economic reality of falling demand for B2 industrial space which is clustered with other B classes almost randomly throughout the plan. Little regard is given to the opportunity of B1 b space as an opportunity for research and development which needs to be nurtured and preserved without the detrimental and confused clustering with other B classes both in terms of planning and promotion of a research hub. I note that the past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 derived from VoA analysis and that the calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7% over the plan period up to 2033. I support the concept of seeking increased investment in our local knowledge-based, high technology economy. This will provide well paid, creative jobs and generate the funding necessary to pay for the infrastructure and environment this sort of industry requires. We need to distinguish between wanting to increase the added value of the economy and physical expansion, especially given the scarcity of land in Guildford. Guildford is not the place for large space hungry businesses. So I should target high added value small and medium sized enterprises rather than the headquarters of larger corporations.

I OBJECT to Policy E1(Employment)

This fails to focus general business (industrial and commercial) activity in the urban areas or business parks that have the infrastructure already.

It does not make a comparison between this and appropriate rural business.
There is too much proposal for warehousing which already causes congestion for Guildford. Analysis to support the policy is weak.

1. Introduction

1.1 DMH Stallard act on behalf of ‘Ewbanks’, on planning matters in relation to the Ewbank’s Burnt Common Auction Rooms site, which is located to the south of the settlement of Send Marsh/Burnt Common. It is 3.49 hectares (8.62 acres) in area.

1.2 These representations relate to the Proposed Changes to the ‘Guildford Borough Proposed Submission Local Plan: Strategy and Sites June 2016’, which covers the period to 2034.

1.3 Our representations focus on objecting to the exclusion of the Ewbank’s Burnt Common Auction Room site from the proposed new Industrial Strategic Employment Site at Burnt Common (Policy E1(8)).

1.4 In our representations on the ‘Proposed Submission Local Plan : Strategy and Sites – June 2016; we objected to the proposed removal of the allocation of Land around Burnt Common Warehouse for employment uses, (including the Ewbank’s site). We therefore support the re-instatement of most of this allocation through the Proposed Amendment to Policy E1(8) and Site Allocation A58, but strongly object to the exclusion of the Ewbank’s site from this Proposed Amendment.

1.5 The ‘Ewbank’s Site’ has consistently been included as part of this proposed employment site in earlier versions of this Local Plan. It was in the Draft Local Plan (2014) as Site 74, and also in the Draft Version of the Proposed Submission Local Plan considered by the Guildford Borough’s Economy and Infrastructure Executive Board on 13th April 2016, and in the papers for the meeting of the Borough Council’s Executive Committee. The Report to the Executive stated about this whole site:- “Send Marsh/Burnt Common – the site is located in a yellow (medium) sensitivity land parcel. Our Employment Land Needs Assessment identifies a need for industrial land and this site is the only suitable and deliverable site identified by the Green Belt and Countryside Study that could meet this need”.

1.6 In the light of this statement, and in the subsequent decision by the Borough Council to re-instate land at Burnt Common as an Industrial Strategic Employment Site, we can see no reason why the Ewbank’s site is now excluded from this allocation. It forms an integral part of this whole site, and we submit that there are no planning policy reasons for its omission from this proposed allocation.

1.7 The suitability of including the Ewbank’s site in this strategic employment allocation was also underlined in the Guildford Borough’s Land Availability Assessment February 2016, where it stated that this ‘combined site would help towards meeting employment need, and there is no known reason why well designed commercial uses in this location should have any unacceptable impact’. We are therefore very concerned to note that in the 2017 Amendment to this Land Availability Assessment, it states that the Ewbank’s site is now excluded from this employment site, without giving any reasons. It states:-

“The sites boundary has been amended from that previously proposed on the site in the draft Local Plan (2014) to exclude a triangular-shaped parcel of land in the southwest corner and the existing distribution centre”.

“The sites boundary has been amended from that previously proposed on the site in the draft Local Plan (2014) to exclude a triangular-shaped parcel of land in the southwest corner and the existing distribution centre”.
There is only a brief reference to this change in the Employment Topic Paper – June 2017 in paragraph 4.55:-

“The site has however been reduced in area to that previously identified in 2014 which addresses the issues related to perceived coalescence”.

This statement clearly contradicts the findings of the Borough Council’s own Green Belt and Countryside Study, which gave no such concerns on coalescence, and considered this whole site suitable for exclusion from the Green Belt.

1.8 In objecting to Policy E1(8) we will be making reference throughout these submissions to the relevant ‘evidence base’ documents. These include:-

- Topic Paper : Employment – June 2017
- Topic Paper : Green Belt and the Countryside – June 2017
- Employment Land Needs Assessment – March 2017
- Guildford Borough Economic Strategy 2013 - 2031
- Guildford Borough Land Availability Assessment – February 2016 and June 2017

We will also be making reference to documents related to these ‘evidence bases’ including the Guildford Green Belt and Countryside Studies.

1.9 In the following Sections we will address the following matters in support of our submission that the “Ewbank’s Site” should be included within the proposed Industrial Strategic Employment Site at Burnt Common:-

- Proposed Amendment : New Employment Floorspace - Policy E1(1)
- Proposed Amendment : Green Belt Boundary – Policy E1(8) and site A58
- Proposed Amendment : New Site Allocation – Policy E1(8) and site A58

1.10 In addressing each of these matters, we will set out why we consider that the relevant Policy is ‘unsound’, and what changes to the Plan are required to make it sound.

2. Proposed Amendment – New Employment Floorspace (Policy E1(1))

2.1 This objection relates to the proposed amendment to Policy E1(1), which proposes changes to the proposed employment floorspace as follows:-

- Reduction in new industrial land (B1(c), B2 and B8):-
  - Lower range from 4.7 hectares to 3.7 hectares
  - Upper range from 5.3 hectares to 4.1 hectares

2.2 We submit that these reductions in new industrial land are unsound, and, rather than reducing the new industrial floorspace, it should be significantly increased. We consider that these current floorspace proposals are unsound, as these estimates are not based on a positively prepared planning strategy which seeks to meet objectively assessed development and infrastructure requirements. Nor is it consistent with national policy, as set out in the National Planning Policy Framework, which seeks to secure economic growth in order to create jobs and prosperity. This is one of the three dimensions of sustainable development, which is seen as the ‘golden thread’ running through plan making.

2.3 This need to provide sufficient employment land for the period of the Local Plan is confirmed in the Guildford Borough Employment Land Needs Assessment - March 2017. In estimating the additional industrial/storage land required in paragraph 7.2.4 of this Assessment, it recognises in paragraph 7.2.5 that:

“Demand for employment land within Guildford could be higher than these and land floorspace forecasts. Employment within the borough has the potential to grow more quickly than currently anticipated, while demand for additional space on the part of businesses already located within the borough could be higher given the extent to which employment densities have risen in recent years”.
2.4 In the light of these comments, the Local Plan should increase these estimates in Policy E1(8), to provide the flexibility to enable an increased amount of employment space to be accommodated in the Borough. This additional employment land should be focussed on identified strategic employment sites. The only strategic employment site east of Guildford town, and within easy reach of the strategic road network is Land around Burnt Common, Send. The addition of the Ewbank’s site would provide an additional 3.49 hectares of strategic employment land, which would provide this flexibility over the period of the Local Plan (to 2034).

2.5 We do not consider that the Borough Council’s Employment Topic Paper – June 2017 accurately reflects the conclusions and recommendations of the Guildford Borough Employment Land Needs Assessment – March 2017, as it limits to proposed employment floorspace for B1c/B2/B8 to the same amount as that stated in the Assessments conclusions, but without providing any allowance for flexibility (paragraphs 4.7 to 4.10). The 2017 Assessment is very clear that demand for employment land within Guildford could be higher than the forecasts, and this should be reflected in the amount of land allocated for B1(c), B2 and B8 employment in this Local Plan. No such flexibility is proposed and the Local Plan currently even proposes a reduction in both the lower and upper ranges of new B1(c), B2 and B8 floorspace, (Policy E1(8)). As such we do not consider that this part of the Local Plan is ‘positively prepared,’ and is therefore unsound.

2.6 These objections incorporate an Employment Statement by Kingstons, independent commercial agents, based in Guildford, who specialise in the office and industrial warehouse sectors in Surrey and neighbouring counties (Appendix C). This Employment Statement provides strong evidence for the need for the Local Plan to significantly increase its proposed new employment land in Policy E1(1). In addition, it explains how the Ewbank’s site is the ideal site for additional employment land, being adjacent to the currently proposed strategic employment site at Land around Burnt Common Warehouse, with the flexibility to provide a range of employment development opportunities.

2.7 In summary, this Employment Statement by Kingstons provides the following reasons why the Local Plan should provide additional employment land.

2.8 It is important that employment land allocations are spread amongst several owners, in order to ensure that there is competition between sites, and there is a mix of new employment developments serving different employment requirements.

2.9 There has been a significant loss of existing industrial sites from employment use, which will need replacement new employment floorspace within the Borough, just to maintain the existing supply. Some of these industrial sites have been of a significant size, of between 25,000 square feet and 10,000 square feet.

2.10 There is a requirement for ‘multiple sites,’ due to ‘single occupier’ take up. A single occupier, such as a major ‘on-line’ supplier, could require in the order of 150,000 square feet, which could take up the whole of the proposed new employment land in one development. This is clearly not a sustainable position, and certainly is not allowing for continuing new employment development throughout the plan period.

2.11 There is a need to provide sites of different ‘shapes,’ which will provide opportunities for small industrial and storage units over the plan period. The Ewbank’s site provides such flexibility.

2.12 One of the important evidence-base reasons for the need for additional new employment land is the significant demand from existing businesses in the Borough, with well over 50% planning to expand their operations.

2.13 Recent evidence of ‘take up’ of new employment land is significant, and the existing strategic employment sites have very little capacity for new employment development. This is clearly demonstrated in the Guildford Borough Employment Land Needs Assessment, which contains a Schedule of all the Strategic Employment Sites in the Borough. It shows that a vast majority of these sites have no potential over and above existing permissions for new employment development.

2.14 In the light of this evidence, we submit that for this Local Plan to be ‘sound’ in relation to new employment land, the proposed new employment floorspace in Policy E1(1) should be significantly increased. The addition of the Ewbank’s site of 3.49 hectares to the proposed Strategic Employment Site at Land around Burnt Common Warehouse would make a significant contribution to the required additional employment land, to ensure that sufficient land for B1(c), B2 and B8 uses is available throughout the period of the Local Plan.

POLICY E1 (EMPLOYMENT) – I object to this policy which seems to be based on shaky and obsolete (pre-referendum) data. We don’t need to encourage low value-added jobs that should go to parts of the country where unemployment is a bigger problem. There’s a lot too much about warehouses, which take up too much space and are not appropriate for Guildford. There’s nothing to protect the rural environment on which many rural businesses depend.

• The council plans for the town and employment (E1 & E2) take no account of modern trends highlighted in previous consultations. The public seem better informed than the council and its consultants about these. The council want to waste space with low-value and land-hungry enterprises, such as warehouses, that employ few people and just add to heavy traffic, ignoring Guildford’s comparative economic advantages of a well-educated labour force and location for high-value businesses, which will therefore go elsewhere. They also want to fill the town with shops, ignoring the general global trend away from town-centre shopping and the opportunity to regenerate the decaying town centre with low-cost housing, as has happened in central London. The plan fails to make any arguments for putting commercial development instead on green-field sites such as Burnt Common, which is introduced for the first time in this version of the plan without any supporting rationale.

1. POLICY E1
I OBJECT to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Gosden Hill Farm. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location, remote from any facilities of any kind, and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site. The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

Employment Led Uplift:

2.31 The uplift suggested in the Addendum report for employment projections is also considered to be too low. This matter is being dealt with in detail by others and in this respect Bewley Homes does not wish to repeat those detailed representations here.
2.32 In short there is no sound justification for such a significant reduction in the uplift applied to the Council’s figures between the previous version of the SHMA using the 2012 population projections and the more recent 2017 addendum that uses the 2014 population projections. Guildford remains the main town in the Enterprise M3 LEP area as confirmed in both the 2016 SA and 2017 SA. It should therefore remain the case that a similar level of uplift should be applied to the 2014 population projections as was the case in the context of the 2012 based figures.

1. These representations concern land at Send Business Centre, Tannery House, Tannery Lane, Send identified under draft Policy E1 as a “Locally Significant Employment Site”. In broad terms the owner of Send Business Centre (Wey Estates Ltd) supports the allocation of their site under Policy E1. However, objections are raised for 4 separate reasons:

   ◦ Wey Estates Ltd object to the fact that significant parts of the curtilage of the site has been, for some reason, excluded from the allocation (Representations under ‘A’ below).
   ◦ In view of the importance of the site in strategic terms it should be identified as a Strategic site not a Locally Significant Employment Site (B).
   ◦ Objections are also raised in relation to the wording of Policy E1 (C)
   ◦ There is a separate objection to the wording of Policy E2 which is inconsistent with the aims of Policy E1 (D).

In the representations that follow we deal with the main aspect namely the extent of the land to be identified under Policy E1 and then deal with the status of the site within the policy and then the specific wording of the policy.

Policy E1 Sustainable Employment

A  EXTENT OF LAND AT TANNERY LANE, SEND IDENTIFIED UNDER POLICY E1
2. The Proposals Map to the Submission Local Plan appears to delineate only the footprint of the main building complex at Send Business Centre and excludes important other areas which also form part of and are intrinsically linked to the industrial complex. This is at odds with the extent of land which has always been historically associated with the curtilage of the former industrial and present business use of the site. It is also at odds with the way the extent of the vast majority of the curtilage of other allocated sites have been identified under Policy E1. It is also inconsistent with the objectives of the policy itself where the retention and regeneration of these sites is encouraged and intensification where possible will be considered to be appropriate.

3. Set out below we explain why Wey Estates Ltd seek to amend the Submission Local Plan by adjusting the boundary of the “Locally Significant Employment Site” on the Proposals Map to reflect the extent of the industrial curtilage as shown on drg no. 12.067.SITE, (Document 1) an extract of which is set out below. (We deal with the important case for identifying the site as ‘Strategic’ later in these submissions).

4. In this regard it is also relevant to take account of the definition of previously developed land found in the glossary to NPPF. In defining the meaning of ‘Previously Developed Land’, Annexe 2 defines this as:

“Land which is or was occupied by a permanent structure, including the curtilage of the developed land (although it should not be assumed that the whole of the curtilage should be developed) and any associated fixed surface infrastructure”.

For the reasons that will become obvious when considering the close association of the subject land, its appearance, previous long standing and established use in connection to the adjoining factory complex there can be no doubt that the subject land should be recognised as falling within the curtilage of Send Business Centre and that it is vitally important that this curtilage is recognised as such through the Local Plan process to ensure the future prosperity and viability of the Send Business Centre.

Wey Estates Ltd seek to have the boundary of Send Business Centre amended to reflect the red line above

Historical Association of the land from forming part of the curtilage of Send Business Centre.

1. Attached to these representations are the following documents:

   • Letter from Hamburger, Director and Shareholder of Wey Estates Ltd setting out the historical association of the land and its industrial curtilage (Document 2)
   • Copy of documentation submitted as part of a planning application some 21 years ago in relation to the industrial curtilage (Document 3)
   • Representations made some 15 years ago in connection with the first Borough Local Plan also referencing the industrial curtilage of the sit (Document 4)

1. In his Statement dated 6th July 2016 (Document 2), Mr Hamburger sets out the chronology of the use of the site. It is clear from this letter that both the large hard surfaced car park and storage area opposite the main factory complex and the open storage area to the south west and rear of Cheriton have formed part of the curtilage of the industrial complex for over 55 years (since 1961) and have been continuously used as such for that period of time. The same is true also of the ‘island’ site referred to in Mr Hamburger’s letter although Wey Estates Ltd do not seek to develop this part of the curtilage other than as open land associated with the Business Centre.

2. Hamburger’s statement is corroborated in a number of documents associated with the use of the site. An example (Document 3) is a planning application submitted some 20 or so years ago for the re-use of the factory premises where the ‘red line’ of the application embraced all the land the subject of these representations with the then Chartered Surveyors acting for the owners in their Planning Policy Assessment stated that:

“The site relates to three parcels of land comprising approximately 3.75ha (9 acres) straddling both the River Wey Navigation and Tannery Lane, Send. All three parcels form the curtilage of the industrial complex” (see para 2.01)

1. The site plan attached to the planning application clearly identifies those parcels of land referred to as being part of the curtilage of the industrial complex and is the same as those parcels the subject of these representations.

2. Similarly, the owners made representations to the council regarding the status of the industrial site during the formal objection period to the Deposit Draft Local Plan in February 1999 (which eventually emerged as the adopted Borough Local Plan in 2003). In seeking to identify the site as a ‘Major Developed Site in the Green Belt’ the representations referred to the fact that it comprises a major developed factory site that pre-dates both the Green Belt description and the town and country planning system. There is also reference that during discussions with the council there had been agreement that redevelopment would be appropriate provided the advice given in Annex C of PPG2 is taken into account. The plan attached to those representations similarly identify all the land the subject of these representations. (Document 4).

3. All these factors, particularly the first hand detailed knowledge of the site of Mr Hamburger, all point to the fact that the industrial curtilage of the site embraced all parcels of land the subject of these representations.

Analysis of the extent of the curtilage of other allocated sites have been identified under Policy E1.

1. The following other sites are identified under Policy E1, either as ‘Strategic Employment Sites’ or, as in the case of Send Business Centre, ‘Locally Significant Employment Sites’:

   • 57 and Liongate Ladymead
   • Cathedral Hill Industrial Estate
   • Guildford Business Park
   • Guildford Industrial Estate, Deacon Field
   • Henley Business Park, Normandy
   • London Square, Cross Lane
   • Merrow Lane (incl Perram Works, Bridge Park, Merrow Business Centre, SCC depot)
   • Midleton Road Industrial Estate
   • North and south of Lysons Avenue, Ash Vale
   • Quadrum Park, Peasmarsh
   • Riverway, Astolat, Weyvern at Peasmarsh
   • Slyfield Industrial Estate
   • Surrey Research Park (extended)
   • The Guildway, Portsmouth Road
   • The Pirbright Institut
   • Woodbridge Meadows
   • Woodbridge Park, Woodbridge Road
   • 31 Chertsey Street and 1-7 Stoke Road, Guildford
   • Andrew House, College Road, College House (89 and 91), Stoke House, Leapale
   • House and Bell Court, Guildford
   • 65 Woodbridge Road, Guildford
   • The Pines Trading Estate, Broad Street
   • Send Business Centre, Tannery House, Tannery Lane, Send
   • Grange Court, Tongham

1. By reference to the Proposals Maps, (despite that some are very small scale), it would appear that, bar one exception, all of the above sites are identified by reference to their curtilage rather than the ‘footprint’ of the building. (Three examples are shown below). There is no explanation given as to why Send Business Centre is being treated differently, perhaps it is simply an oversight of the draughtsman. Nevertheless, we believe that this anomaly should be corrected and Send Business Centre be identified by reference to its curtilage as well so that there is consistency in the policy and to enable the objectives of Policy E1 be met in this case.

[IMAGE 5]

13. A clue perhaps as to why the Submission Plan has erroneously treated Send Business Centre differently is found in the Topic Paper accompanying the Submission Local Plan. Para 4.51, dealing with the Tannery Lane site says this:

> “An undeveloped 1.4ha site in the Green Belt, was identified in the Draft Local Plan to meet the identified employment need. It was proposed Send Business Centre would be expanded on to this site.”

14. Clearly the author of this document is under the mistaken impression that the land in question is “undeveloped” whereas the reality is it has always played an important open storage and hardstanding area role as part of the curtilage associated with the business complex Indeed, there are already two industrial buildings on it (see photos in Mr. Hamburger’s statement) as well as the rebuilt wharf. The comment that “Send Business Centre would be expanded on to this site” is also misleading since the lawful position is that the land is already intrinsically part of the established industrial curtilage and has been so for over 50 years. Moreover, in accordance with the definition found in NPPF (see para 4 above) the land can lawfully be described as ‘previously developed land’. There is therefore no ‘expansion’ into this area: it has always been associated with and used for industrial/business purposes in much the same way as the curtilage of the other identified business sites identified under Policy E1, some of which are illustrated in the site plans above.

15. It is also important to point out that the in relation to land much further to the west that was identified as a Potential Development Area (PDA), representations made at the time in respect of Send Business Centre were on the basis that the business complex and its curtilage should always be recognised as such in the emerging Submission Local Plan: whether or not the adjoining PDA land was to be agreed.

• 1. It is for that reason that the conclusions in the Topic Paper that:

> “This PDA is located within high sensitivity Green Belt and is therefore no longer considered appropriate. As a result, this site (ie SBC) is also no longer considered appropriate” is based upon a misunderstanding of the site, its curtilage, and its function.

1. The curtilage of Send Business Centre is surrounded on its southern and western sides by extensive landfill sites that were previously excavated quar. Moreover, the council granted planning permission just 9 months ago for new development including two storey workshops and chandlery buildings amounting to over 7,000 sqft (approx. 620sqm) together with a hard surfaced car park for 57 cars on land immediately adjoining the western boundary of the curtilage (ref:14/P/002289, dated 9/9/2015). By no reasonable test therefore could either the curtilage or the immediately surrounding area be accurately described as “high sensitivity Green Belt”.

1. In this regard, it is interesting to note that in considering the recent planning application for the refurbishment of the wharf at Send Business Centre (Ref: 15/P/0249) - which is located within the curtilage land - in answer to the following question on the planning application forms “Please describe the current use of the site” the answer given was “Part of the curtilage of Send Business Centre”. Following a subsequent site visit by the officers, the Head of Development Control in recommending approval of the planning application was able to advise the Planning Committee in his Report recommending approval that “There is no material change of use of the land for this application site”.

On this basis it would appear that as recently as last year the Planning Officer was of the opinion that the land forms part of the curtilage of Send Business Centre as no material change in use was proposed.

The Objectives of Policy E1 and Send Business Centre

1. There is an acknowledged lack of suitable and diverse employment sites that we believe discourages investment from new companies in the borough and encourages existing firms to relocate to other parts of the UK or overseas. Moreover, the lack of supply is hampering the aspirations of ‘start-up’ businesses. Accordingly, the Local Plan and Policy E1 through its allocations should address the need for a wide range of business and employment opportunities for current and future businesses.

1. The Employment Land Assessment (2013) concluded that the Borough’s employment needs cannot be met within existing sites and established employment areas. It concluded that provision should be made for a net additional increase in B use class floor space of between 10.5 ha (105,000 sq m) and 20 ha (200,000 sq m) to meet the Borough’s identified employment needs. Moreover, it advised that there is not enough supply of employment land to meet future growth needs and the potential capacity does not meet the lower and upper baseline requirements.

1. The Assessment also acknowledged that there is a need to provide a degree of choice and flexibility when planning for future employment needs, to ensure that the local property market can operate efficiently. The implications are that “If we do not provide enough suitable land and enough choice and flexibility, the new Local Plan may not meet the needs of the borough’s businesses. In time, this could lead to existing businesses moving out of the borough and new and small businesses, not being able to establish themselves or invest in the borough”.

1. This background work was updated by later research undertaken by Aecom and instead of expressing the need in Ha, a floor area based figure was given with a range of between 37,200sm – 47,200sqm B1 (a) and (b) sqm. In the light of this the council decided to reduce their forecast for the need for B space to be provided within the Borough. We believe that this is a wrong approach and that a more flexible approach adopted bearing in mind of the vagaries of the market, the need to provide a range of B space both in terms of size and location and the fact that this later research could not anticipate the making permanent the GPDO rights to change B1 space to residential. In the period 2013-2016, this amounted to the loss of the sizeable amount of some 12,772sqm of B1(a) space to residential. Clearly this trend will continue as more B1(a) sites come forward as leases end and opportunities for residential conversions increase thus putting pressure to provide more suitable B1 floorspace. The range of proposed floor areas given in the policy should therefore be revised upwards (a consequential change to the floorspace figures given in Policy S2 would also need to be revised).

1. Accordingly it is right to look at potential land, including those sites in the countryside to provide for sustainable development locations and provide enough employment land to meet the expected employment needs of existing and new residents. This is particularly the case where a number of established employment sites in the countryside can provide for expansion without harming countryside interests. In this regard, the earlier published ‘Issues and Options’ paper acknowledged that rural wards accounted for almost half of the new jobs created in Guildford Borough between 2002 and 2008 according to the Guildford Economic Strategy 2011 - 2031.

1. In the short term, the need for employment land may be met through the intensification and redevelopment of existing sites and the protection of employment use on key strategic sites. This relates to both urban sites and established employment sites in the countryside. However, it is acknowledged by the research undertaken by the council that this is unlikely to be sufficient in the medium to long-term and does not allow for any choice for potential occupiers or flexibility within the market. The Plan should therefore provide choice for businesses to start up as well as supporting existing businesses to expand. It comes as no surprise to learn that para 3.35 of the previously published Local Plan Strategy and Sites Issues and Options paper advised “For all of these reasons the Local Plan needs to continue to support job creation and business in rural areas.”

1. Send Business Centre presently provides for the employment needs for a number of start-up and innovative business as well as more established companies. The site is focussing on the digital sector with a view to creating a hub to meet the demand from the unique local supply chain of companies involved in activities such as studios, video, sound & post production, apps, etc. Moreover, LEP funding in place to improve fibre infrastructure and promote innovation support at the site.

1. An important part of Send Business Centre is Tannery Studios (TS). TS is collaborating with both Enterprise M3 LEP, and Surrey Research Park based start-up incubator ‘Set Squared’ to develop TS’ facilities into a globally significant hub specialising in digital media / creative companies. Successful companies at TS will interact with locally based companies such as EA Games, thereby benefitting Guildford Borough as a whole. However, site capacity within the existing buildings will be reached shortly and there is concern that the emerging Local Plan does not reflect the LEP priority of employment in a sector that Guildford is especially strong in given ACM and ‘Tonmeister’s’ stream of talented graduates.

1. TS already has numerous innovative and expanding companies such as Lifelines Limited, a recipient of the Queens Award for Commerce; My Little Eye Productions, a music video production house; Slik Pictures, a creative start-up that recently re-located from Silicon Roundabout; Tactic Games, the sales agent of the Angry Birds game; Ben Preston, the producer for Rhianna and the Harry Potter films and Roomba, the global leader in automated vacuum technolog

1. It is for that reason the Send Business Centre is concerned about the adverse economic consequences of the decision to remove parts of its curtilage as a Locally Significant Employment Site or as a Strategic site which the company believes it should be allocated. It is impracticable to suggest that TS can operate without parking and room for controlled expansion, and is contrary to the LEP’s funding initiative to stimulate employment and will act as a block on growth as TS will have no move on accommodatio

1. The additional land within the curtilage of the Business Centre is suitable for a sensitive expansion in accordance with the requirements of Policy E1 which could create additional business space for these and similar likeminded businesses. The land is available now to meet the employment needs of the Borough and its development can proceed without significantly harming countryside or other interests. As referred to in the statement of Mr Hamburger, planning permission is already in place to carry out road improvements to Tannery Lane in the vicinity of the site.

1. This approach is fully supported in the NP. As para 28 advises:

Planning policies should support economic growth in rural areas in order to create jobs and prosperity by taking a positive approach to sustainable new development. To promote a strong rural economy, local and neighbourhood plans should:

* support the sustainable growth and expansion of all types of business and enterprise in rural areas, both through conversion of existing buildings and well-designed new buildings; (para 28)

31 Accordingly the Proposals Map should be amended to reflect the established industrial/business curtilage that has been established for more than 50 years so as to allow a planned and sensitive expansion of the site in accordance with the objectives of Policy E1 and at the same time safeguard the existing parking and essential storage facilities on site.

B Allocation of Send Business Centre as a Strategic Site

1. The Enterprise M3 Local Enterprise Partnership (LEP) acknowledges that Guildford is rated as one of the UK’s top performing non-metropolitan boroughs and is the primary employment centre in Surrey with a GVA of £3bn in 2011. It is a net contributor to the Treasury of around £2bn. Economic growth has come primarily from high value high R&D sectors including ICT, healthcare and bioscience, satellite technology and computer games including high profile businesses Electronic Arts and Media Molecule.

1. We have referred to above that Send Business Centre is focusing on the digital sector with a view to creating a hub to meet the demand from the unique local supply chain of companies involved in activities such as studios, video, sound & post production. Its strategic importance in this field is acknowledged by the Enterprise M3 Local Enterprise Partnership where Government funding through the LEP is in place to improve, develop and expand the business opportunities at Send Business Centre.

1. Para 4.6 of the Submission Local Plan (under the heading ‘Definitions’) defines Strategically Important Sites as follows:

“The Strategic Employment Sites were identified in the Employment Land Needs Assessment (ELNA). The sites are all larger than 1.7ha and all have more than 7,000 sq m of employment floorspace, most have more than 10,000 sq m of floorspace. Together the sites make up more than 170ha of employment land and more than 580,000 sq m of employment floorspace”.

Send Business Centre extends to some 3.2ha, and comprises over 8000 sqm of B1 and R&D employment floorspace. In addition, para 4.4.3 advises that each of the Strategic Sites account for over 100 jobs. By comparison, Send Business Centre presently employs 195 people. It is therefore well above the minimum parameters for being designated as a Strategically Important Site. Moreover, it is the home of a number of innovative and expanding companies who provide employment and contribute significantly to the local and national economies.

1. Para 4.3 of the Submission Plan also states that the Council will support existing innovation networks such as the high technology clusters that are such a key part of our economy as well as supporting the wide range of other businesses in the borough. As referred to above in paras 27 & 28, Send Business Centre is one such location. Para 4.4.3 of the Submission Plan then continues:

The Corporate Plan supports the Council in playing an active role in Enterprise M3 Local Enterprise Partnership (LEP), supporting its wider objectives to ensure that our economy remains innovative, well-balanced and socially, environmentally and commercially sustainable.

1. Send Business Centre is a major recipient of The Enterprise M3 Local Enterprise Partnership (LEP) support and Government funding through the LEP. In 2013, the Enterprise M3 LEP Board decided to proceed with two projects as being recipients of a total of £8M funding, Tannery Studios which is an integral part of Send Business Centre was one of the two recipients. The allocated £1.3 million will be used to create a new purpose built 1,900 sq. m Innovation Centre at SBC that will deliver a range of bespoke facilities specifically designed to support the needs of high growth creative companies. The facilities will include three video studios, seven sound studios, one live room, 12 editing suites, 25 innovation units and five offices. Commenting on this project Geoff French, Chair of the Enterprise M3 Board, said:

“I am very pleased to announce that the Enterprise M3 Board has approved a further two projects to receive funding from our Growing Enterprise Fund. These projects are very exciting examples of what both the private and public sector are doing in the Enterprise M3 area to stimulate long-term economic growth.

In our Strategy for Growth, the LEP has identified four key priority areas – enterprise, skills, innovation and infrastructure – that we will be addressing to deliver economic growth in the Enterprise M3 area. Both of these two successful bids that we are announcing today is focused on at least one of these areas and therefore is a very worthy recipient of Growing Enterprise Fund funding.”

1. This all points to the strategic importance of Send Business Centre and reinforces the need for it to be recognised as such. ‘Strategic’ means “Relating to the identification of long-term or overall aims and interests and the means of achieving them”. In this regard the objectives of the Submission Local Plan can in part be met by allocating Send Business Centre as a Strategic Site. Not only does it provide significant floor space and jobs well in excess of the definition found at para 4.4.6 of the Plan but perhaps it is how that space has been and will be continued to be used that justifies its inclusion as a Strategic site. For these reasons we believe that Send Business Centre should be allocated as Strategic site under Policy E1.

C THE WORDING OF POLICY E1

1. Wey Estates Ltd generally support the wording of Policy E1, but see no real reason why the Strategic Employment Areas are treated differently from Locally Significant Employment Areas in terms of the support given by the policy

1. Strategic sites are dealt with in this way:

“The seventeen designated sites that together make up the borough’s current core supply of employment land will be protected as Strategic Employment Sites and changes of use from employment to non-employment uses resisted. The retention, intensification and employment based regeneration of these sites is encouraged”

whereas Locally Significant Employment Sites are dealt with in the following manner:

“The Locally Significant Employment Sites will be protected and within these sites changes of use to non-employment uses resisted. The retention and regeneration of these sites is encouraged and intensification where possible will be considered to be appropriate”.

1. We do not believe there should be any difference between the wording; both strategic and local sites are identified as worthy of protection because of their importance to the Borough’s economy. It follows therefore that the retention, intensification and employment based regeneration of both Strategic and Local sites is encouraged. Strategic and Local sites are located in both urban and countryside locations and therefore the policy context of those locations would also have a bearing and be taken into account in considering any subsequent planning applications.

1. Accordingly, we believe that the wording for Locally Significant Employment Sites should be changed by deleting the following text:

“The Locally Significant Employment Sites will be protected and within these sites changes of use to non-employment uses resisted. The retention and regeneration of these sites is encouraged and intensification where possible will be considered to be appropriate”.

and inserting the following text:

“The Locally Significant Employment Sites will be protected and within these sites changes of use to non-employment uses resisted. The retention, intensification and employment based regeneration of these sites is encouraged”

1. Alternatively, the policy could be recast so that the above insertion applies to both Strategic and Local sites.

17  POLICY E1 SUSTAINABLE EMPLOYMENT

17.1 I object to policy E1 sustainable employment

17.2 I note that there is a significant reduction of between 71% and 79% in the previous job target and resultant 79% reduction in employment space in response to the many objections lodged in 2014 against an unsubstantiated agenda for economic expansion in the last draft and based on new findings by Aecom in the latest ELNA 2015.

17.3 I have concern as to the ill-informed clustering of all B classes in terms of the clarity of market evidence required to inform effective planning and a failure to provide a clear understanding of business needs required under Section 160 of the NPPF.

17.4 I also note the dramatic reduction in assessed demand by two Employment Land Needs Assessment Reports carried out under the same terms of reference within a period of 2 years which calls into question the general reliability of the process of collection and interpretation of data in the overall forward planning process by GBC. I do not support the policy of creating a Strategic Employment site at Garlick’s Arch (A43) in the Green Belt which is completely unnecessary due to the overall decrease in demand for industrial space which could be easily accommodated at Slyfield.

17.5 I am concerned however that the research undertaken by Aecom is generally superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and that no reliable individual analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space.

17.6 No proper analysis has been made of data held by GBC in respect of different B classes in terms of planning applications granted or evidence gathered by the economic development function at GBC and no robust assessment of local market demand apart from fairly brief references to freely available market research undertaken by commercial estate agents such as Lambert Smith Hampton covering a much wider area.

17.7 GBC appear to fail to appreciate the fundamental rationale of the Use Classes Order as a planning tool in terms of useful property market research or forward planning.

17.8 What we are left with is a fairly clumsy and poorly informed plan which clusters B classes without any appreciation of widely different employment impact and economic sustainability. E.g. B1 generates at least 5 times as much employment as B8.

17.9 The lack of appreciation by GBC as to the opportunity for widely different uses being generated within B class clusters defeats the whole point of proper planning of employment uses and can significantly endanger previously good planning put forward in the previous 2003 plan. E.g. the creation of a research and development park linked to the University but now has the threat of being downgraded into a general business park (see below).
17.10 Little regard has been given in the plan to the economic reality of falling demand for B2 industrial space which is clustered with other B classes almost randomly throughout the plan.

17.11 Little regard is had to the opportunity of B1b space as an opportunity for research and development which needs to be nurtured and preserved without the detrimental and confused clustering with other B classes both in terms of planning and promotion of a research hub.

17.12 I note that the past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 derived from VoA analysis and that the calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7% over the plan period up to 2033.

17.13 I support the concept of seeking increased investment in our local knowledge-based, high technology economy. This will provide well paid, creative jobs and generate the funding necessary to pay for the infrastructure and environment this sort of industry requires.

17.14 We need to distinguish between wanting to increase the added value of the economy and physical expansion, especially given the scarcity of land in Guildford. Guildford is not the place for large space hungry businesses. So I should target high added value small and medium sized enterprises rather than the headquarters of larger corporations.

17.15 We need to promote the idea of new knowledge transfer in incubator units and small premises for new start up enterprises. They need to be on the wave of innovative new technology as opposed to older established businesses.

17.16 I object to the policy of creating a Strategic Employment at Garlicks Arch (A43) in the Green Belt. The stated requirement of 7,000 sq m (B1c, B2 and B8) could easily be accommodated at the Slyfield Regeneration site of 40 ha.

Document: Proposed Submission Local Plan: strategy and sites 2017 / Policy E1

Do you consider this section of the document; complies with the Duty to Cooperate? ( ), is Sound? ( ), is Legally Compliant? ( )

1.1 I object to the change in Policy E1 sustainable employment because they have not addressed many of the 32,000 objections made to the 2016 plan.

1.2 I object to the inclusion of Send Business Centre/Tannery Studios Tannery Lane, Send in relation to proposed inset from the Green Belt because:

- There is highly restricted vehicular access along Tannery Lane in both directions;
- It is effectively an old non-conforming user in an area of outstanding countryside;
- It is adjacent to the beautiful Wey Navigation;
- Further expansion or development at this location detracts from the openness of the Green Belt and is inappropriate.

1.3 I object to the change in Policy E1 of proposed designation of Burnt Common as an Industrial Strategic Employment Site due:

- The impact on small surrounding roads will create traffic gridlock;
- The 2017 Employment Land Need Assessment shows a reduction in demand to a low of 3.7 and a high of 4.1 hectares for industrial land for the whole borough not a huge over allocation of 9.26 hectares at Burnt Common in the Green Belt;
- The word “minimum” is a change from the previous “maximum” in the 2016 plan and since that time there has been a decline in demand for industrial land as shown in the Employment Land Needs Assessment 2017;
• It was deleted from the 2014 draft because of all the local objections made previously and there is no logical reason to go back on this decision:
• There is no need to build industrial or warehouse development in the middle of the Green Belt when Slyfield and Guildford still have many empty sites and industrial units:
• There are patently no exceptional circumstances in terms of demand for employment space to build on this important area of Green Belt which effectively separates existing development in Send and Ripley and prevents urban sprawl:
• It will join up existing villages and defeat the purpose of the Green Belt

1.4 I also object to the potential inclusion at Burnt Common of a waste management facility mentioned at the change to paragraph 4.423a which lacks sufficient detail for proper consultation and is completely inappropriate

1.5 I object to the ongoing poor quality of the updated research undertaken by Aecom in the Employment Land Needs Assessment 2017 which generally is superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and that no reliable individual analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space.

1.6 I object to the fact that no reliable analysis has yet been made of data held by GBC in respect of different B classes in terms of planning applications granted or evidence gathered by the economic development function at GBC and no robust assessment of local market demand apart from fairly brief references to freely available market research undertaken by commercial estate agents such as Lambert Smith Hampton covering a much wider area.

1.7 GBC in their role as a Planning Authority appear to fail to appreciate the fundamental rationale of the Use Classes Order as a planning tool in terms of procurement of useful property market research analysis or forward planning.

1.9 The lack of appreciation by GBC as to the opportunity for widely different uses being generated within B class clusters defeats the whole point of proper planning of employment uses and can significantly endanger previously good planning put forward in the previous 2003 plan. E.g. the creation of a research and development park linked to the University but now has the threat of being downgraded into a general business park (see below).

1.10 Little regard has been given in the plan to the economic reality of falling demand for B2 industrial space which is clustered with other B classes almost randomly throughout the plan.

1.11 The Employment Land Needs Assessment update 2017 (ELNA) states “that the pipeline for employment floorspace defined by planning permissions yet to be implemented and prior approvals suggests the potential for an additional 33,607sqm of B use class floorspace to come forward. This figure comprises a net loss of 4,750sqm of B1a use class floorspace and a net gain of 38,357sqm in B1c, B2 or B8 use class space.”

1.12 38,357sqm of B1c, B2 or B8 use class is quite sufficient supply for the plan period and does not justify the need for new development of industrial space on the Green Belt in such areas as Burnt Common. The reality of demand for industrial space is that it is both nationally and locally in decline and this is evidenced by old existing permissions that have not been taken up and developed. The ELNA alludes incorrectly to the poor quality of existing space being a “constraint” on supply and fails to acknowledge that this assertion cannot apply to potential newly developed space e.g. the undeveloped pipeline of 38,357sqm.

1.13 Little regard is still not given to the opportunity of specific B1b space as an opportunity for research and development which needs to be nurtured and preserved without the detrimental and confused clustering with other B classes both in terms of planning and promotion of a research hub.
1.14 I support the concept of seeking increased investment in our local knowledge-based, high technology economy. This will provide well paid, creative jobs and generate the funding necessary to pay for the infrastructure and environment this sort of industry requires.

1.15 We need to distinguish between wanting to increase the added value of the economy and physical expansion, especially given the scarcity of land in Guildford. - Poor evidence base.
- Too much encouragement to low added-value employment that’s needed elsewhere in the country.
- Fails to concentrate general business activity in urban areas or business parks that have the infrastructure.
- Fails to differentiate this from appropriate rural business.
- Too much encouragement of warehousing, for which Guildford is too congested.

Policy E1 Sustainable Employment

We are largely supportive of this policy which seeks to allocate land for employment floor space across the Borough, but this is not enough and reference needs to be made to early delivery due to the backlog of economic need, owing to lack of allocations/releases in recent years. A greater choice and diversity of sites is required, including those in mixed use major allocations such as that proposed at Onslow Park, which can provide a new business hub as part of a sustainable new community as part of an urban extension on a key transport route into Guildford.

1. I object to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

• Business and small commercial premises are not being given the protection they require in this plan. Despite a pledge for ‘protection of commercial premises’ and ‘provision for small business units’ (E2) by GBC and the assurances of policies E3 & E5, small businesses are already finding it difficult to locate suitable spaces. GBC have already indicated its lack of consideration of these important contributors by allowing change of use of commercial units on Ranmore & West Horsley to housing or other than light industry. I support the general aims of policy E1 whilst being concerned about the location of the new spaces and the transport links to them. Perhaps a better use of some the land earmarked for housing would be to provide the help for these SMEs.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

Document:  Proposed Submission Local Plan: strategy and sites 2016 / Policy E1

Do you consider this section of the document; complies with the Duty to Cooperate? ( ), is Sound? ( ), is Legally Compliant? ( )

I am Michael Hamburger and have been both a director and shareholder of the companies occupying the site for over 40 years. I am now aged 72 and spent much of my childhood playing on the site and observed first-hand the industrial use and evolution of the entire site's curtilage since my childhood.

The curtilage of what is known as Send Business Centre comprises the main former works to the north of Tannery Lane of some 80,000 sq.ft of buildings, mainly open storage land to the rear and side of Cheriton; the car and truck park to the south and opposite the main factory complex and the island to the north of the works between the Canal and the New Cut; in all approximately 9 acres. (Cheriton, a dwellinghouse, is now no longer part of the industrial curtilage).

My family's business was initially a tenant of the site and first occupied the land in 1939. The freehold was purchased in 1948 during which time it had operated as a chemical grinding and milling works. This use continued for over 60 years until 2008 when our manufacturing operations moved to Teesside. Since then it has operated as, and is now known as 'Send Business Centre'.

We originally moved to Send at the outbreak of World War 2 on 5th September 1939. This relocation occurred due to an explosion and fire at our previous plant in Arbutus Street, London. The family needed a new factory site and decided on Send, at that time most of the Tannery Lane site operated as a tannery processing rabbit skins. The island section of the site's curtilage was in use from the seventeenth century up to the 1950s for lagoon settlement pits for the fleshings resulting from degreasing the rabbit skins prior to tanning.

Following our purchase of the site's freehold, we gradually closed the original tannery and turned the whole site over to the manufacture and processing of initially gum and resins to meet supply contracts with the MOD, the Admiralty and Ministry of Food. Due to war shortages, goods arrived both by lorry and barge from the London docks and were unloaded along the site's wharf for processing.

The site's current built footprint replaced the outworn wood and brick tannery buildings over a 20- year period terminating in the 1970s. Following the rebuild the site was used for processing agrochemicals such as herbicides and biocides.

The house known as 'Cheriton' was part of the site curtilage since the 1930s. Cheriton's curtilage originally extended down to the canal, but this was much reduced in size when the company decided to excavate and extend the barge dock to receive goods and facilitate barge turnarounds in the 1960s. The former curtilage of Cheriton was also needed to transport Gum Damar to and from the 'island' for processing in one of the company's industrial stills. The iron frame work of the Still is still present on the land forming part of the curtilage of the site between the River Wey Navigation canal and the New Cut (the island site). The Still was operated remotely from the rest of the buildings due to the hazardous nature of the processes as volatile solvents were used in the process.

The brickwork and iron structure of the 'Still' is still visible today on the island

Due to labour shortages during the War, Cheriton was used to provide lodgings for German and Italian prisoners of war working as indent labour on site. When post-war economic conditions improved in the 1970s and housing and labour became more freely available, Cheriton was occupied by our site's security guard and factory foreman as part of the 24/7 manufacturing operations but now on a much reduced curtilage. We retain ownership of the curtilage round Cheriton including the lawn and drive, to enable the new road to be built.

In 1961 the company needed additional land to expand the industrial processes and land immediately to the west of Cheriton was acquired for this purpose, primarily for open storage. Also in 1961 other land was acquired opposite (south) of the main factory complex for parking both of motor cars and the heavy commercial vehicles associated with bringing goods to and from the site. Planning permission was obtained to use this land for parking and it was hard surfaced.

The car park and container storage area, the permitted re-alignment of Tannery Lane runs behind the containers and car park

This part of the industrial curtilage to the south (opposite) the main factory complex of the site has been used for HGV parking as well as for open storage for pallets, chemical drums, and packing and containerised goods for the entire length of time since planning was granted back in 1961. Put simply, the site in its present use as a Business Centre and its previous use as a chemical processing mill would not have been viable without this land since it was the main parking and pallet/container storage area serving the site. The same could be said for the open storage area west of Cheriton.

In 1995 an additional small triangle of land was acquired adjacent to the car park/storage area to enable Tannery Lane to be moved to the south of the car park to improve the site's safe operation. Planning permission was applied for and granted for the realignment of Tannery Lane demonstrating the land to the south of Tannery lane was and remains part of the site's curtilage. The aerial photos below dating from over an extended period of time shows the historic use of the entire site's curtilage.

Note the open storage on the curtilage land west of Cheriton and the temporary structures on the same land in the photo below

[IMAGE 4]

The land acquired in 1961 west of Cheriton had its western boundary planted with cypress trees to screen the open storage and industrial operations from the village in the 1960s (see the photo immediately below showing the cypress tree screen). The road frontage was also fenced shortly after its acquisition. This part of the company's land holdings has consistently been used as part of the site's industrial and business operations to date.

[IMAGE 7]

In the mid-1960s large areas of hardstanding and road planings were laid to enable forklift access to move pallets and redundant packaging out of the works for disposal or to be burnt on the site. This is very evident in the first of the aerial photos above. These operations, together with the periodic renewal and maintenance of the hard surfacing continued up until 2008 when the chemical grinding and milling works relocated to Teesside. The area is subject to low grade non-migratory contamination as the result of its long term continuous use for pallet storage and waste consolidation and disposal and incineration. Since 2010, this part of the site has remained in use as parking and open storage. The hardstanding also provides much needed access to the newly improved barge dock for which planning permission was granted in 2015 to be further enlarged and improved. It also functions as a secure fire escape from the rear of the buildings.

Over the years of ownership, a wide range of planning applications have been made over the entire site's curtilage varying from a helicopter landing pad on the open storage land adjacent to Cheriton to a planning consent to realign Tannery Lane to the site southern boundary so that the entire curtilage can be operated as one unit without Tannery Lane running through the middle. This consent is still extant since the council has subsequently agreed that a lawful start on it was made. The company plans to complete the road re-alignment as soon as it has sufficient funds to do so to complete the consolidation of the site's entire 9 acre curtilage.

It has just occurred to us that you may wish us to explicitly state that in our view the Submission Plan is unsound although that would of course be obvious from the representations we have made. I would also add that we are happy to attend and make oral submissions to the Inspector if he feels that would be helpful to him in considering the points we raise.

POLICY E1 - Meeting employment needs

I OBJECT because -

- The evidence base is unreliable;
- There is unclear differentiation between B class uses;
- Only high value-added business uses, contributing to a modern "knowledge economy" , are desirable, not low-grade, low-employment warehousing which is also land hungry;
- Industrial and commercial businesses must be concentrated in the urban area or existing business parks (e.g. Slyfield) not in the rural environment which the infrastructure is unable to support;

"10 See footnote 3 above.

The rural environment must support micro- or high-tech businesses, agricultural industries, and tourism, and these sectors must not be damaged by general industrial development which is inappropriate.

Land for Employment Use – E1, E2

Far too much potential development land within the town centre is being allocated for retail or commercial development rather than housing. I object to this.

It is not logical. It flies against national trends. It will make the terrible traffic and movement problems and the shortage of affordable housing worse.

The Burnt Common site is not suitable for heavy industry and it is in the Green Belt.

Allocation A58 and Amendments to Policy E1.

3.2 E1(4) identifies the Strategic Employment Sites as making up the borough’s core supply of employment land. A sub class of Strategic Employment Sites are Industrial Strategic Employment Sites. There are 11 existing Industrial SES identified in the policy at D1(7). Industrial SES are treated as suitable for B1(c) light industrial, B2 general industrial and B8 storage and distribution.

3.3 However, paragraph 4.4.32a of the “Reasoned justification” states: “Development involving waste management facilities may be appropriate and will be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites. The Surrey Waste Plan (2006) policy CW5: Location of Waste Facilities gives priority to industrial/employment sites, particularly those in urban areas, and to any other suitable urban sites and then to sites close to urban areas and to sites easily accessible by the strategic road network. Some waste management activities fall within the industrial classes in the Use Classes Order and can be considered to be a B1c, B2 or B8 use. This is particularly the case given the increased move towards enclosing waste management activities in purpose designed buildings. However, some do not fall within specific use classes and are therefore sui generis use.”
3.4 To the existing core of employment sites is proposed the allocation (A58) an additional Industrial Strategic Employment Site at Burnt Common (Amendment 1). The proposal is for 7000 square metres of space within use classes B1(c) (light industrial), B2 General Industrial and B8 Storage and Distribution, and “with potential for further industrial floorspace to meet borough needs”. No justification or criteria are provided to explain its identification or selection but it is assumed that it is based on the existing warehouse on the site having established an employment use of the site.

3.5 The site is currently in the Green Belt and it is proposed that the GB boundary will be amended to exclude the entire site.(Amendment 2).

3.6 Policy E1(8) (as amended) states: “When developed the new employment land at Burnt Common, together with the existing employment floorspace, will be treated as Industrial Strategic Employment Land.”

3.7 These amendments taken together cause a number of specific concerns on the basis of which the Parish Council OBJECTS to the proposed amendments.

3.8 Effectively new Allocation A58 together with the changes to Policy E1 and their associated text in the reasoned justification, provides a clear basis for the provision of a new major strategic site which would be available and treated as suitable for new waste management development on a site currently in the Green Belt.

3.9 The Parish Council considers that such a use on this site would be inappropriate for the following reasons. The site would almost directly adjoin the new housing site at A43 and would be a potential “bad neighbour development”. The open ended nature of the policy which appears to provide no limit on the extent of development depending on “the borough’s needs” adds to the growing sense of alarm that the policy ground is being prepared for industrial or waste use which could have serious environmental consequences for the Parish and its community. The existence of the current warehouse on the site does not justify the intensification of industrial uses on a site of the size proposed in this rural location. Waste management uses would be particularly unwelcome. Other concerns are the lack of specific controls on traffic generation, ensuring that any such development is contingent on appropriate highway improvements (such as the new slip roads to the A3) and to ensure that heavy vehicles associated with the development are not able to access the rural road network.

3.10 If, contrary to the Parish Council’s objection, such an allocation was to proceed to adoption, the need for the protection of the landscape and countryside and local residential amenity would mean that there must be limits on height and footprint of buildings, the scale and nature of circulation and parking areas (especially HGV parking) and other infrastructure, the use of materials, advertising and signage. Lighting would need to be controlled, to prevent intrusive all night floodlighting of the site. Such is the importance of these factors that they should be written into the policy for this site allocation.

3.11 The location for a waste management facility in the countryside ought to be subject to a full sequential site analysis and suitable locations should be identified in the plan making process in an open and transparent way, considering alternative sites higher up the sequential hierarchy, rather than being designated under the guise of a standard industrial allocation.

3.12 The allocation policy should be the subject of a full sequential site assessment in accordance with the Waste Local Plan. Such facilities should be planned on a county wide basis, given their strategic importance and the County level waste authority’s responsibilities.

3.13 If, contrary to the Parish Council’s in principle objection, the allocation was to proceed to adoption, they would promote a modification to specifically rule out waste management, especially any open air or unenclosed waste management, irrespective of whether or not such waste management was to fall within Use Classes B1(c), B2 or B8. The Policy should specifically state that notwithstanding the Use Classes Order 1987, waste management uses shall be considered unsuitable uses on the A58 site and in any case, no such use shall take place on the site without specific grant of planning permission.

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small.

Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

I object to policy E1 sustainable employment I note that there is a significant reduction of between 71% and 79% in the previous job target and resultant 79% reduction in employment space in response to the many objections lodged in 2014 against an unsubstantiated agenda for economic expansion in the last draft and based on new findings by Aecom in the latest ELNA 2015.I have concern as to the ill-informed clustering of all B classes in terms of the clarity of market evidence required to inform effective planning and a failure to provide a clear understanding of business needs required under Section 160 of the NPPF. I also note the dramatic reduction in assessed demand by two Employment Land Needs Assessment Reports carried out under the same terms of reference within a period of 2 years which calls into question the general reliability of the process of collection and interpretation of data in the overall forward planning process by GBC. I am concerned however that the research undertaken by Aecom is generally superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and that no reliable individual analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space. No proper analysis has been made of data held by GBC in respect of different B classes in terms of planning applications granted or evidence gathered by the economic development function at GBC and no robust assessment of local market demand apart from fairly brief references to freely available market research undertaken by commercial estate agents such as Lambert Smith Hampton covering a much wider area.GBC appear to fail to appreciate the fundamental rationale of the Use Classes Order as a planning tool in terms of useful property market research or forward planning. What we are left with is a fairly clumsy and poorly informed plan which clusters B classes without any appreciation of widely different employment impact and economic sustainability. E.g. B1 generates at least 5 times as much employment as B8. The lack of appreciation as to the opportunity for widely different uses being generated within B class clusters defeats the whole point of proper planning of employment uses and can significantly endanger previously good planning put forward in the previous 2003 plan. E.g. the creation of a research and development park linked to the University but now has the threat of being downgraded into a general business park (see

POLICY E1 - Meeting employment needs

We object to this policy.

1. We object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.

2. The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

3. We object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Gosden Hill Farm. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3

Proposals for new industrial, warehousing and storage (use Class B1c, B2 and B8) floorspace will be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites.

Policy E1: Sustainable employment

I OBJECT to this policy

- the evidence base is unreliable
- there is unclear differentiation between B class uses
- only high added-value business uses are desirable, not low grade, low employment warehousing which is land hungry
- industrial and commercial businesses must be concentrated in the urban area, or existing business parks (eg Slyfield) not in the rural environment which the infrastructure is unable to support
- the rural environment must support micro or high tech businesses, agricultural industries, and tourism, and these sectors must not be damaged by general industrial development which is inappropriate.

Policies E1,E2,E5: I object to.

The first two fly in the face of the fact that a Brown Field site already exists to the south of Burnt Common, yet the GB site is recommended to be used for a mix of warehousing, light industrial and general industrial for sustainable employment, next to what is also proposed as a residential site? The latter is still not necessary IMO and it follows that the former is not either; why? Because it can be housed along with over 100 houses if necessary, on the BF site referred to above. So why create an unnecessary strategic employment site on GB, when a BF site exists nearby to accommodate this growth?

It has to be noted further, that the development of Garlick’s Arch would result in the loss of 4 established businesses employing dozens of local people; so IMO this policy is not working in this instance, it is destructive and wasteful as opposed to economic and productive. This is a direct contradiction of the aim of policy E1; again bizarre?

Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.

The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

POLICY E1 Meeting employment needs

GROUNDS FOR OBJECTION

- the evidence base is unreliable
- there is unclear differentiation between B class uses
- only high added-value business uses are desirable, not low grade, low employment warehousing which is land hungry
- industrial and commercial businesses must be concentrated in the urban area, or existing business parks (eg Slyfield) not in the rural environment which the infrastructure is unable to support
• the rural environment must support micro or high tech businesses, agricultural industries, and tourism, and these sectors must not be damaged by general industrial development which is inappropriate

1. POLICY E1

I OBJECT to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Gosden Hill Farm. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.

The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.
If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

I also do not believe that the Council has given sufficient regard to where all these new inhabitants are going to work. There is little or no employment in these villages, there is very little bus transport, the railways are currently crammed in rush hour with no room for extra capacity and the station car parks are not big enough to cater for more cars. And yet how are people meant to get to work in Guildford, Woking and London as the primary employment centres? The answer will be by car, whether this be by way of a short journey to the station (where they will end up parking on the streets) or a full journey into Guildford (which is already rammed in rush hour). I cannot see how this can sit comfortably with the Council's Green agenda. The Council certainly will not be able to force the bus and train companies to extend their services as these are now privately owned businesses operating for profit.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Attached documents:
• The evidence base is unreliable;
• There is unclear differentiation between B class uses;
• Only high value-added business uses, contributing to a modern “knowledge economy”, are desirable, not low-grade, low-employment warehousing which is also land hungry;
• Industrial and commercial businesses must be concentrated in the urban area or existing business parks (e.g. Slyfield) not in the rural environment which the infrastructure is unable to support
• The rural environment must support micro- or high-tech businesses, agricultural industries, and tourism, and these sectors must not be damaged by general industrial development which is inappropriate.

I object to unnecessary industrial growth alongside new housing: Policies E1,E2,E5. It is hard to understand why new industrial, warehousing and storage are being proposed for an industrial strategic employment site at Garlick's Arch. There exists an acceptable Brown Field site to the south at Burnt Common which could be used for this and more; why was this removed from the Plan at very short notice and with little or no prior consultation? The use of the GB as opposed to the the latter BF site will result in the loss of dozens of long established local established jobs.

I OBJECT to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Gosden Hill Farm. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. The parking in this area is limited and public transport poor.

The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

I object to POLICY E1 - Meeting employment needs

- The evidence base is unreliable;
- There is unclear differentiation between B class uses;
- Only high value-added business uses, contributing to a modern “knowledge economy”, are desirable, not low-grade, low-employment warehousing which is also land hungry;
- Industrial and commercial businesses must be concentrated in the urban area or existing business parks (e.g. Slyfield) not in the rural environment which the infrastructure is unable to support;
- The rural environment must support micro- or high-tech businesses, agricultural industries, and tourism, and these sectors must not be damaged by general industrial development which is inappropriate.

I object to the way in which the proposed increase in demand for skilled labour in Guildford makes the plan justify the number of new homes required. The plan does not support these requirements, or at least I could not see the case. There is a lack of Commercial Properties in the area, so where are these jobs going to be created? Also the recent Brexit vote means that the numbers growth need to be scaled back.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Contrary to national trends, too much potential development land within the town centre is being allocated for retail or commercial development rather than housing. High added value businesses are welcome in the borough, but much of the employment land is designated for retail or low added value employment floorspace, which only exacerbates current issues such as lack of low cost housing and heavy traffic. Sites such as Burnt Common Triangle, currently in the Green Belt, are inappropriate for heavy industry.

I OBJECT to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Gosden Hill Farm. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick's Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.

The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.

The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

POLICY E1 SUSTAINABLE EMPLOYMENT

I object to policy E1 sustainable employment.

I note that there is a significant reduction of between 71% and 79% in the previous job target and resultant 79% reduction in employment space in response to the many objections lodged in 2014 against an unsubstantiated agenda for economic expansion in the last draft and based on new findings by Aecom in the latest ELNA 2015.

I have concern as to the ill-informed clustering of all B classes in terms of the clarity of market evidence required to inform effective planning and a failure to provide a clear understanding of business needs required under Section 160 of the NPPF.

I also note the dramatic reduction in assessed demand by two Employment Land Needs Assessment Reports carried out under the same terms of reference within a period of 2 years which calls into question the general reliability of the process of collection and interpretation of data in the overall forward planning process by GBC. I am concerned however that the research undertaken by Aecom is generally superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and that no reliable individual analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space.

No proper analysis has been made of data held by GBC in respect of different B classes in terms of planning applications granted or evidence gathered by the economic development function at GBC and no robust assessment of local market demand apart from fairly brief references to freely available market research undertaken by commercial estate agents such as Lambert Smith Hampton covering a much wider area.

GBC appears to fail to appreciate the fundamental rationale of the Use Classes Order as a planning tool in terms of useful property market research or forward planning.

What we are left with is a fairly clumsy and poorly informed plan which clusters B classes without any appreciation of widely different employment impact and economic sustainability. E.g. B1 generates at least 5 times as much employment as B8.

The lack of appreciation as to the opportunity for widely different uses being generated within B class clusters defeats the whole point of proper planning of employment uses and can significantly endanger previously good planning put forward in the previous 2003 plan. E.g. the creation of a research and development park linked to the University but now has the threat of being downgraded into a general business park (see below).

Little regard has been given in the plan to the economic reality of falling demand for B2 industrial space which is clustered with other B classes almost randomly throughout the plan.

Little regard is given to the opportunity of B1 b space as an opportunity for research and development which needs to be nurtured and preserved without the detrimental and confused clustering with other B classes both in terms of planning and promotion of a research hub.

I note that the past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 derived from VoA analysis and that the calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7% over the plan period up to 2033.

I support the concept of seeking increased investment in our local knowledge-based, high technology economy. This will provide well paid, creative jobs and generate the funding necessary to pay for the infrastructure and environment this sort of industry requires.

We need to distinguish between wanting to increase the added value of the economy and physical expansion, especially given the scarcity of land in Guildford. Guildford is not the place for large space hungry businesses. So I should target high added value small and medium sized enterprises rather than the headquarters of larger corporations.

My comments here would simply reiterate my earlier comments about growth. The pursuit of growth is what is drawing the additional pressures upon Guildford. There should be a reduced emphasis on growth and a greater emphasis on being the best at what we already do.

What we are left with is a fairly clumsy and poorly informed plan which clusters B classes without any appreciation of widely different employment impact and economic sustainability. E.g. B1 generates at least 5 times as much employment as B8. The lack of appreciation as to the opportunity for widely different uses being generated within B class clusters defeats the whole point of proper planning of employment uses and can significantly endanger previously good planning put forward in the previous 2003 plan. E.g. the creation of a research and development park linked to the University but now has the threat of being downgraded into a general business park (see below). Little regard has been given in the plan to the economic reality of falling demand for B2 industrial space which is clustered with other B classes almost randomly throughout the plan. Little regard is given to the opportunity of B1 b space as an opportunity for research and development which needs to be nurtured and preserved without the detrimental and confused clustering with other B classes both in terms of planning and promotion of a research hub. I note that the past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 derived from VoA analysis and that the calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7% over the plan period up to 2033. I support the concept of seeking increased investment in our local knowledge-based, high technology economy. This will provide well paid, creative jobs and generate the funding necessary to pay for the infrastructure and environment this sort of industry requires. We need to distinguish between wanting to increase the added value of the economy and physical expansion, especially given the scarcity of land in Guildford. Guildford is not the place for large space hungry businesses. So I should target high added value small and medium sized enterprises rather than the headquarters of larger corporations.

• Fails to differentiate this from appropriate rural business.

• Too much encouragement of warehousing, for which Guildford is too congested.

I OBJECT to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Gosden Hill Farm. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.

The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

We support the introduction to the economy policies which succinctly set out the role of Guildford’s economy and note that it continues to perform well but there are signs that it could lose its competitiveness to other locations. This section clearly sets out the role of the university and the research park. In our comments on the draft Local Plan (July 2014) we stated that it would be helpful if the supporting text were to include more detailed explanation of what the LEP is and how it operates, that the reference to the role of Guildford as a Growth Town in the LEP’s Strategic Economic Plan could be expanded and that the submission version of the Plan could contain information about the recent Growth Deal projects for the area. We feel that the supporting text should be expanded to include reference to these points.

POLICY E1 - Meeting employment needs

I object to this policy for the following reasons.

1. I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.
1. The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and contains ancient woodland and is unsuitable for development.

1. I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Gosden Hill Farm. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3, an area which already sees severe congestion at both ends of the working day, often tripling journey times through the area.

I OBJECT to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

Policy E1 - Meeting Employment Needs and E2 - Locations of New Employment Floorspace

Guildford has an important economic role in the region which influences Waverley's economy in terms of the provision of jobs for Waverley residents and the strong commercial links with businesses in our Borough. It is therefore important to Waverley that the Guildford Local Plan maintains this role by delivering the employment floorspace and land demonstrated as needed in the Guildford Employment Land Needs Assessment (ELNA).
Policy E1 states that Guildford will provide for an additional 3,200 additional B Class jobs to be delivered through the allocation of between 37,000 and 47,000 sq m of B1a/b floorspace and between 4.7 and 5.3 hectares of industrial (B1c, B2 and B8) land which is the need identified in Guildford's recent Employment Land Needs Assessment (ELNA) and as such we have no objection to this.

Policy E1 – It is noted that as a result of updated evidence on Employment Land Needs, the amount of Classes B1 a and b floorspace and Classes B1c, B2 and B8 land have been reduced, although the number of jobs to be created has been increased from 3,200 to 4,100. We are unclear how such a large increase in jobs is to be achieved whilst reducing the amount of land allocated, but we presume that this is due to higher job/floorspace densities as a result of technological innovation. It would be helpful if this could be explained.

Retail/Employment

Guildford is within commuting distance of MVDC by both car and train. Seeking to create strategic employment sites may be beneficial to Mole Valley residents as it would offer wider employment opportunities.

Economic Policies: I am in support of Policy El "Sustainable employment" but believe that Policy E2 "Location for new employment floorspace" fails to realise that Guildford Town Centre is relatively insignificant in economic value added terms. The University Quarter provides three times as much economic gross value added as the Town Centre yet is prejudiced by this policy. I am supportive of Policy E4 "Surrey Research Park", Policy ES "Rural Economy" and Policy
E6 “The leisure and visitor experience” but caution that Policy E7 “Guildford Town Centre” could lead to overdevelopment of the Town Centre.

I object to policy E1 sustainable employment

I note that there is a significant reduction of between 71% and 79% in the previous job target and resultant 79% reduction in employment space in response to the many objections lodged in 2014 against an unsubstantiated agenda for economic expansion in the last draft and based on new findings by Aecom in the latest ELNA 2015.

I have concern as to the ill-informed clustering of all B classes in terms of the clarity of market evidence required to inform effective planning and a failure to provide a clear understanding of business needs required under Section 160 of the NPPF.

I also note the dramatic reduction in assessed demand by two Employment Land Needs Assessment Reports carried out under the same terms of reference within a period of 2 years which calls into question the general reliability of the process of collection and interpretation of data in the overall forward planning process by GBC. I am concerned however that the research undertaken by Aecom is generally superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and that no reliable individual analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space.

No proper analysis has been made of data held by GBC in respect of different B classes in terms of planning applications granted or evidence gathered by the economic development function at GBC and no robust assessment of local market demand apart from fairly brief references to freely available market research undertaken by commercial estate agents such as Lambert Smith Hampton covering a much wider area.

GBC appear to fail to appreciate the fundamental rationale of the Use Classes Order as a planning tool in terms of useful property market research or forward planning.

What we are left with is a fairly clumsy and poorly informed plan which clusters B classes without any appreciation of widely different employment impact and economic sustainability. E.g. B1 generates at least 5 times as much employment as B8.

The lack of appreciation as to the opportunity for widely different uses being generated within B class clusters defeats the whole point of proper planning of employment uses and can significantly endanger previously good planning put forward in the previous 2003 plan. E.g. the creation of a research and development park linked to the University but now has the threat of being downgraded into a general business park (see below).

Little regard has been given in the plan to the economic reality of falling demand for B2 industrial space which is clustered with other B classes almost randomly throughout the plan.

Little regard is given to the opportunity of B1 b space as an opportunity for research and development which needs to be nurtured and preserved without the detrimental and confused clustering with other B classes both in terms of planning and promotion of a research hub.
I note that the past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 derived from VoA analysis and that the calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7% over the plan period up to 2033.

I support the concept of seeking increased investment in our local knowledge-based, high technology economy. This will provide well paid, creative jobs and generate the funding necessary to pay for the infrastructure and environment this sort of industry requires.

We need to distinguish between wanting to increase the added value of the economy and physical expansion, especially given the scarcity of land in Guildford. Guildford is not the place for large space hungry businesses. So I should target high added value small and medium sized enterprises rather than the headquarters of larger corporations.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
I OBJECT to the sustainable employment policy (Policy E1)

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Gosden Hill Farm. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable locations with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development. Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.

The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. We object to the change in Policy E1 sustainable employment because they have not addressed many of the 32,000 objections made to the 2016 plan.

We object to the inclusion of Send Business Centre/Tannery Studios Tannery Lane, Send in relation to proposed inset from the Green Belt because:

- It is effectively an old non-conforming user in an area of outstanding countryside
- It is adjacent to the beautiful Wey Navigation
- There is highly restricted vehicular access along Tannery Lane in both directions
- Further expansion or development at this location detracts from the openess of the Green Belt and is inappropriate.

We object to the change in Policy E1 of proposed designation of Burnt Common as an Industrial Strategic Employment Site.

- It was deleted from the 2014 draft because of all the local objections made previously and there is no logical reason to go back on this decision
- The word “minimum” is a change from the previous “maximum” in the 2016 plan and since that time there has been a decline in demand for industrial land as shown in the Employment Land Needs Assessment 2017
- There is no need to build industrial or warehouse development in the middle of the Green Belt when Slyfield and Guildford still have many empty sites and industrial units
- The 2017 Employment Land Need Assessment shows a reduction in demand to a low of 3.7 and a high of 4.1 hectares for industrial land for the whole borough not a huge over allocation of 9.26 hectares at Burnt Common in the Green Belt
- There are patently no exceptional circumstances in terms of demand for employment space to build on this important area of Green Belt which effectively separates existing development in Send and Ripley and prevents urban sprawl
- The impact on small surrounding roads will create traffic gridlock
- It will join up existing villages and defeat the purpose of the Green Belt

We also object to the potential inclusion at Burnt Common of a waste management facility mentioned at the change to paragraph 4.423a which lacks sufficient detail for proper consultation and is completely inappropriate We object to the ongoing poor quality of the updated research undertaken by Aecom in the Employment Land Needs Assessment 2017 which generally is superficial and lacks sufficient detail and analysis between B1a, B1b, B1c, B2 and B8 use classes and that no reliable individual analysis has been undertaken of the widely different supply and demand dynamics of office, research and development, light industrial, general industrial and warehousing and distribution floor space.

We object to the fact that no reliable analysis has yet been made of data held by GBC in respect of different B classes in terms of planning applications granted or evidence gathered by the economic development function at GBC and no robust assessment of local market demand apart from fairly brief references to freely available market research undertaken by commercial estate agents such as Lambert Smith Hampton covering a much wider area.
GBC in their role as a Planning Authority appear to fail to appreciate the fundamental rationale of the Use Classes Order as a planning tool in terms of procurement of useful property market research analysis or forward planning.

What we are left with is a fairly clumsy and poorly informed plan which clusters B classes without any appreciation of widely different employment impact and economic sustainability. E.g. B1 generates at least 5 times as much employment as B8. The lack of appreciation by GBC as to the opportunity for widely different uses being generated within B class clusters defeats the whole point of proper planning of employment uses and can significantly endanger previously good planning put forward in the previous 2003 plan. E.g. the creation of a research and development park linked to the University but now has the threat of being downgraded into a general business park (see below). Little regard has been given in the plan to the economic reality of falling demand for B2 industrial space which is clustered with other B classes almost randomly throughout the plan.

The Employment Land Needs Assessment update 2017 (ELNA) states “that the pipeline for employment floorspace defined by planning permissions yet to be implemented and prior approvals suggests the potential for an additional 33,607sqm of B use class floorspace to come forward. This figure comprises a net loss of 4,750sqm of B1a use class floorspace and a net gain of 38,357sqm in B1c, B2 or B8 use class space.” 38,357sqm of B1c, B2 or B8 use class is quite sufficient supply for the plan period and does not justify the need for new development of industrial space on the Green Belt in such areas as Burnt Common. The reality of demand for industrial space is that it is both nationally and locally in decline and this is evidenced by old existing permissions that have not been taken up and developed. The ELNA alludes incorrectly to the poor quality of existing space being a “constraint” on supply and fails to acknowledge that this assertion cannot apply to potentially newly developed space e.g. the undeveloped pipeline of 38,357sqm. Little regard is still not given to the opportunity of specific B1 b space as an opportunity for research and development which needs to be nurtured and preserved without the detrimental and confused clustering with other B classes both in terms of planning and promotion of a research hub.

We support the concept of seeking increased investment in our local knowledge-based, high technology economy. This will provide well paid, creative jobs and generate the funding necessary to pay for the infrastructure and environment this sort of industry requires. Guildford is not the place for large space hungry businesses. So i should target high added value small and medium sized enterprises rather than the headquarters of larger corporations. We need to promote the idea of new knowledge transfer in incubator units and small premises for new start up enterprises. They need to be on the wave of innovative new technology as opposed to older established businesses.

With regard to the proposed levels of employment provision in the Borough over the plan period, we support the fact that 4.7-5.3 hectares of industrial land will be delivered in order to meet the need identified by the 2015 Guildford Borough Employment Land Needs Assessment. We also support the strategy referred to within Policy E1 to deliver new employment floorspace in Send Marsh/ Burnt Common, as the village represents a sustainable location adjacent to the A3, which provides convenient access to other settlements in the Borough and beyond. The provision of additional employment floorspace in this broad area will assist in delivering a sustainable mixed community, locating employment opportunities in close proximity to residents and reducing the need to travel, whilst also boosting the economy of the rural area. This employment floorspace could potentially be provided on the allocation at Garlick’s Arch, as referred to in the policy, subject to further masterplanning work and consideration as to which site within the inset of the village would be most appropriate to accommodate this development.
We would however encourage the Council to reconsider the wording of the policy that specifically refers to the delivery of employment development at Garlick’s Arch being treated as a ‘Strategic Employment Site’. This would appear illogical, given that paragraph 4.4.6 defines Strategic Employment Sites as comprising more than 7,000 sq. m of employment floorspace (with most existing Strategic Employment Sites having more than 10,000 sq. m of floorspace). Conversely, the proposed employment provision at Garlick’s Arch as set out within Policy A43 comprises “up to 7,000 sq. m” of employment floorspace, which even at the upper end, would clearly be below the threshold for Strategic Employment Sites. Furthermore, we would encourage the Council to ensure that sufficient flexibility is built into the policy consistent with the NPPF. Whilst we support the provision of employment floorspace at Send Marsh/ Burnt Common, and consider that the land at Garlick’s Arch could make a welcome contribution towards the Borough’s employment needs sufficient flexibility needs to be built in to allow for 2 scenarios. Firstly (a) if additional employment provision were to be made elsewhere within the inset of the village, and/or (b) a lower level than the maximum quoted 7,000 sq. m of employment floorspace were to be delivered (subject to appropriate masterplanning and further detailed consideration of site constraints) on the Garlick’s Arch allocation in, the existing wording in Policy E1 which makes specific reference to the land at Garlick’s Arch would no longer be relevant or justified.

Having regard to the above, in order to ensure the policy is sufficiently flexible and is consistent with the definition of Strategic Employment Sites set out within the supporting text, we consider that it is important and necessary to retain the ‘up to 7,000 sq. m’ edit and to delete the reference to the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch being treated as a ‘Strategic Employment Site’. This amendment will ensure that the policy is justified and sufficiently flexible to adapt to suitable alternative options.

3.23 We note that the current consultation document includes updated figures for the employment requirements for B1(a)/B1(b) and B1(c)/B2/B8 uses over the plan period, with a reduction in the quantum of floorspace being planned for in both categories. However, this would appear to be consistent with the findings of the latest (2017) Employment Land Needs Assessment, and as such we broadly support the fact that the Council is apparently seeking to meet identified needs in this regard.

3.24 Furthermore, the latest version of Policy E1 no longer includes reference to employment uses at the land at Garlick’s Arch, and instead includes a general reference to employment land at Burnt Common. As discussed in our representations on the previous (June 2016) version of the Local Plan, we consider that the employment floorspace required in Send Marsh/ Burnt Common could potentially be provided on the allocation at Garlick’s Arch (site A43). Whilst the Council’s June 2017 Housing Delivery Topic Paper suggests that some concerns had been raised regarding the compatibility of employment uses with the proposed residential dwellings, we are not aware of any technical reason based on evidence as to why an employment use could not be acceptably accommodated within our client’s site with appropriate masterplanning and mitigation measures where necessary. The proposed amendment inevitably frees up approximately 2 hectares of land previously allocated for employment purposes at Garlick’s Arch, and whilst this could also be appropriate for additional housing or indeed a compatible use such as a Care Home, as part of the allocation set out at Policy A43, as discussed further below, should additional land be required in Send Marsh/ Burnt Common for employment uses, we consider that our client’s site would be suitable and available to accommodate this need.

Contrary to national trends, too much potential development land within the town centre is being allocated for retail or commercial development rather than housing.

High added value businesses are welcome in the borough, but much of the employment land is designated for retail or low added value employment floorspace, which only exacerbates current issues such as lack of low cost housing and heavy traffic.

Sites such as the Burnt Common Triangle, currently in the Green Belt, are inappropriate for heavy industry.

Warehousing, distribution and industrial premises cause considerable commercial traffic, noise, pollution and general disruption. They are not good neighbours for schools and 2000 houses. Many of the jobs will be taken by people outside the area leading to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

I object to the inclusion of a strategic employment site at Garlick’s Arch. It is in a non-sustainable location remote from any facilities of any kind and with poor public transport links. It is unlikely jobs there will be taken by local residents and it is likely all travel to and from work will be by car adding to local congestion. Employment sites should be concentrated on previously developed land in more sustainable location with good transport links where the infrastructure can support development.

The site is in any event subject to frequent flooding and unsuitable for development.

If developed, the new employment site at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/Burnt Common (A43), would be treated as a Strategic Employment Site.

The proposed development of up to 7,000 sq m of either or a mix of light industrial (B1c), general industrial (B2) and storage and distribution (B8) at Garlick’s Arch (A43) is in the scheme of industrial development relatively small. Just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m. The Garlick’s Arch site which is in the Green Belt should not be developed as a Strategic Employment Site when there is a suitable alternative brownfield site very close by, which is far more sustainable.

Refer to the attached reports for evidence why designating Broadford Business Park as a Locally Significant Employment Site is unviable and unsustainable in the medium to long term, thereby meaning that the scope of this policy cannot be delivered. As a result, this policy has not been 'positively prepared', 'justified', 'effective' or 'consistent with national policy' as required by paragraph 182 of the NPPF and associated national guidance.

Policy context

4.1 Paragraph 17 of the NPPF sets out core land-use planning principles that should underpin both plan-making and decision-taking. It requires Local Planning Authorities to:

“Objectively identify and then meet… business and other development needs of an area, and respond positively to wider opportunities for growth. Plans should take account of market signals, such as land prises and housing affordability, and set out a clear strategy for allocating sufficient land which is suitable for development in their areas, taking account of the needs of the residential and business communities.”
4.2 Local Planning Authorities should seek to address the quantity of economic development floorspace needed based on qualitative assessments of each market segment. Assessing development needs should be proportionate and consider only those future scenarios that could be reasonably expected to occur (Paragraph 003, PPG)[11].

4.3 In establishing the Functional Economic Market Area (FEMA) from which a local planning authority should use to determine the employment land needs for a specified area, paragraph 012 of the PPG[12] refers to the following factors that should be taken into account:

“The geography of commercial property markets should be thought of in terms of the requirements of the market in terms of the location of premises, and the spatial factors used in analysing demand and supply – often referred to as the functional economic market area. Since patterns of economic activity vary from place to place, there is no standard approach to defining a functional economic market area, however, it is possible to define them taking account of factors including:

• extent of any Local Enterprise Partnership within the area;
• travel to work areas;
• housing market area;
• flow of goods, services and information within the local economy;
• service market for consumers;
• administrative area;
• Catchment areas of facilities providing cultural and social well-being;
• transport network.

[12] PPG, paragraph: 012 Reference ID: 2a-012-20140306

Suggested Data Source: Office of National Statistics (travel to work areas)”.

4.4 Once the FEMA for an area has been established, which in GBC’s case includes parts of Waverley and Woking Boroughs, the paragraph 030 of the PPG[13] states that in being able to understand the current market in relation to economic and main town centre uses as well as current and future employment land needs, plan makers should:

“…should liaise closely with the business community to understand their current and potential future requirements. Plan makers should also consider:

• The recent pattern of employment land supply and loss to other uses (based on extant planning permissions and planning applications). This can be generated though a simple assessment of employment land by sub-areas and market segment, where there are distinct property market areas within authorities.
• Market intelligence (from local data and discussions with developers and property agents, recent surveys of business needs or engagement with business and economic forums).
• Market signals, such as levels and changes in rental values, and differentials between land values in different uses.
• Public information on employment land and premises required.
• Information held by other public sector bodies and utilities in relation to infrastructure constraints.
• The existing stock of employment land. This will indicate the demand for and supply of employment land and determine the likely business needs and future market requirements (though it is important to recognise that existing stock may not reflect the future needs of business). Recent statistics on take-up of sites should be consulted at this stage, along with other primary and secondary data sources to gain an understanding of the spatial implications of ‘revealed demand’ for employment land.
• The locational and premises requirements of particular types of business.
• Identification of oversupply and evidence of market failure (eg physical or ownership constraints that prevent the employment site being used effectively, which could be evidenced by unfulfilled requirements from business, yet developers are not prepared to build premises at the prevailing market rents)”.

4.5 Using this evidence, local planning authorities should identify sufficient land to satisfy current and future employment needs. Paragraph 22 of the NPPF, however, notes that:
“Planning policies should avoid the long term protection of sites allocated for employment use where there is no reasonable prospect of a site being used for that purpose. Where there is no reasonable prospect of a site being used for the allocated employment use, applications for alternative uses of land or buildings should be treated on their merits having regard to market signals and the relative need for different land uses to support sustainable local communities.”

4.6 Consistent with the above policy context, Zurich is able to provide up to date market intelligence to help inform GBC’s evidence base and soundness of the emerging employment related policy position set out in the GBLP.

Characteristics of Broadford Business Park

4.7 The latest version of the GBLP seeks an increased number of B Class jobs by 2034 (4,100, previously 3,200) as a result of the new Employment Land Needs Assessment (ELNA) (2017). The ELNA has also resulted in adjustments to the amount of land allocated for employment use, as set out in Table 1.

4.8 Zurich supports GBC’s intent, as set out within Policy E1, to deliver new jobs across the borough and to utilise sustainable employment development patterns to achieve this. Zurich, however, strongly objects to GBC’s decision to designate Broadford Business Park as a LSES.

4.9 Paragraph 6.7 of the Briefing Note to GBC’s Borough, Economy and Infrastructure Executive Advisory Board Committee, and repeated in the agenda papers for the subsequent full Council meeting on 16 May 2017, states the reason for change in the planning policy designation is as follows:

“…we are concerned at our ability to provide sufficient and varied office floorspace. Broadford is an established business park and, whilst not sequentially preferable [our emphasis], is considered suitable given our inability to identify sufficient sequentially preferable sites. The vast majority of our office floorspace is proposed to be allocated on the extension to the Surrey Research Park – retention of Broadford will help provide a variety and mix of floorspace.”

4.10 In this statement, GBC acknowledges that Broadford Business Park is not situated in a sequentially preferable location for employment purposes. As illustrated by Table 2, extracted from Table 4-2 of the Guildford Borough Employment Land Needs Assessment (2017), the Site has numerous constraints, including (but not limited to) ‘poor’ access to public transport and ‘very poor’ access to amenities and facilities, that would hamper the ability to secure a long term employment use on the Site.

4.11 GBC have acknowledged Broadford Business Park is not situated in a location that is conducive to employment uses. The buildings at Broadford Business Park have now reached the end of their economic lives, and require substantial investment to bring it up to acceptable standards or redevelop for employment use. Furthermore, the occupants of the existing development are on short term leasehold arrangements that benefit from reduced rental levels to reflect the poor condition of the existing buildings and its relatively remote location that cannot continue. Zurich are therefore concerned that proposed designation of the site as a LSES is unsustainable in the medium to long term and will simply result in vacant floor space that could otherwise be used more effectively i.e. for residential purposes.

4.12 A Commercial Viability Report (CVR) prepared by Savills, has been submitted in support of these representations to evidence the challenges in maintaining employment uses at the Site. The CVR provides an analysis of the current market conditions for the Site, the viability for a new build (employment) proposal, and, the viability of refurbishing the existing units to acceptable standards in order to demonstrate whether Broadford Business Park is sustainable employment site. The key points have been summarised below.

Market commentary
4.13 The development over time of Guildford has rendered it attractive for employers, however, the office supply and development is limited due to the historic nature of the town. This has resulted in purpose built office space to be located away from the centre of the town in business parks such as Surrey Research Park, The Astolat Business Park and Guildford Business Park. These business parks, however, possess key difference to Broadford Business Park in that they benefit from good access to the strategic road network, public transport and/or supporting services and facilities, thus making them more attractive to tenants.

4.14 The CVR notes that the majority of vacant space within a 5 mile radius of Broadford Business Park is within Guildford Town Centre (34 offices) and Godalming Town Centre (9 offices). There is approximately 220,756 sq.ft available which is approximately 28% of office stock. The 5 year average for this is 141,617 sq.ft or 18% of available stock.

4.15 The trend for any new speculative development has been to build close to good transport links with access to a large workforce rather than more isolated locations. Recent surveys and letting activity shows that demand for occupation is located heavily around transport links for staff and amenities as well as the quality of the office accommodation. Thus, take up has been more heavily centred around Guildford town centre with results now showing a 58% town centre to 42% out of town centre share. Previously these levels were at 34% town centre to 66% out of town centre share.

4.16 Consequently, occupiers are looking for modern office space either in the centre of Guildford or to the north, east or west where access to the A3 and mainline train services is more readily available. The Local Plan recognises this and states that new employment uses should have access to transport interchanges. In support of this policy, GBC’s Transport Strategy (2017), sets out several public transport improvements (such as additional rail platforms at Guildford Railway Station, increased frequency bus services and improved cycle parking facilities) as well as enhancements to the A3 trunk road.

4.17 Broadford Business Park, however, is poorly served by public transport, such that workers must rely on private modes of transport to travel to and from the Site. This is recognised by GBC’s ELNA, which rates the Site’s access to public transport as ‘poor’. The Site also lacks direct access to the A3 and the wider strategic road network.

4.18 Although the Site exhibits good quality environment and public realm characteristics, it suffers from poor access to amenities and facilities. Additional services and facilities, such as a coffee station or similar, could be introduced. This would, however, result in higher service charges or increased rent, which would end the competitive rent levels tenants currently benefit from.

4.19 Market sentiment is therefore for modern offices located in the town centres of Guildford, Godalming or the larger business park development in the borough that benefit from good transport links for staff and deliveries, and access to amenities and facilities.

Office to residential permitted development rights

4.20 GBC have indicated that the decision to designate the Site as an employment site was, in part, due to the loss of available office stock through office to residential permitted development right conversions. Paragraph 5.22 of the CVR notes that only 30% of the floor space assumed to be lost to such changes of use has actually taken place in the last three years and as such it is not realistic assumption that the all effected office premises would be lost to residential use.

4.21 In addition, paragraph 5.23 of the CVR notes that GBC are intending on introducing an Article 4 Direction to withdraw office to residential permitted development rights, which is likely to prevent a large number of these changes of use from being able to take place.

4.22 Zurich therefore consider that GBC have exaggerated the effect of the loss of existing office stock to residential uses.

New build viability

4.23 In addition to the market conditions relevant to the Site and surrounding area, the CVR includes a number of appraisals looking at possible new scheme developments for both office and industrial accommodation. The alternative new build office scheme comprises six buildings. One option assumes 2 storeys, another 3 storeys, and a third assumes a double height single storey light industrial scheme on the same floor plates.

4.24 Whilst the appraisals for the new build schemes show that an industrial scheme would be more viable than a three storey office scheme. It is also noted that the location itself is unsuited to heavy goods vehicle activity which inevitably is the case with industrial occupiers. The narrow bridge to the west also restricts access to the A3 and the Site by larger vehicles needed to support a business park or light industrial development and is also sensitively located within close proximity to residential uses.

4.25 All of the development options that have been tested have therefore been found to unviable and would be very unlikely to attract investment from prospective developers. More intensive uses of the Site have been considered but discounted on the basis these would be unviable, there being insufficient space for the car parking levels required to offset the Site’s poor public transport and strategic infrastructure connections and that the semi-rural character of the locality is not suitable for high rise development.

4.26 Several of the existing buildings and plant are reaching the end of their serviceable lives and require substantial investment in the near future to enable them to continue to be lettable commercial tenants. As a reflection of the poor condition of the buildings, current occupiers have benefitted from low rents in recent years. This arrangement is not, however, sustainable in the medium to long term.

4.27 The CVR explains that the cost of refurbishing the existing buildings up to standards commensurate with a modern office and capable of attractive interest from the local market would not be commercially viable, due to the limited rent currently secured on existing tenants and the subsequent upward pressure on rental levels being likely to render the Site uncompetitive in the market place when compared to better serviced town centre locations.

4.28 Based on the inability to justify the level of investment required to refurbish the buildings to acceptable standards, it is likely that if the currently proposed LSES designation were to be maintained the Site would become derelict. Refurbishment of the existing buildings is therefore not a viable proposition.

Vacant possession

4.29 Zurich will gain vacant possession of the majority of the Site by 2019, with the remaining building by 2022. As such there is a reasonable prospect that a residential development (subject to planning permission being granted) could commence from 2019 with Bishopsgate House retained in the first instance and redeveloped as a second phase.

4.30 The removal of the employment designation, would therefore enable Broadford Business Park to deliver housing within the short term, thus improving GBC’s 5YHLS position, whilst bringing forward the benefits of such development and should be considered.

Summary and conclusion

4.31 Broadford Business Park has reached the end of its economic life, and requires significant investment in order to bring it up to acceptable standards. However, as assessed by the CRVR, and recognised by the ELNA, the Site is constrained by a number of factors including:

- Lack of direct access to the A3 and wider strategic road network;
- Poor accessibility to public transport; and
- Very poor accessibility to amenities and facilities.
4.32 These factors, which are beyond the control of Zurich, have contributed towards the low market rents achievable in this location. The rental value of the employment floorspace is further reduced its relatively poor quality. The attractiveness of Broadford Park as a business location is therefore predicated on low rents.

4.33 The buildings and associated plant at Broadford Business Park are reaching the end of their serviceable lives. Significant investment is required in order to bring them up to acceptable standards. However, the market conditions in the south of Guildford render such investments unviable.

4.34 Notwithstanding the inability to secure investment, the Site would continue to suffer from the same issues such as poor transport communication links. To offset any upgrade to the existing buildings required to maintain them at an acceptable standard, rental levels would inevitably need to increase. This would be out of step with the out of town location of the Site and would be unlikely to attract interest from prospective tenants. These factors alone would make the refurbishment or redevelopment unviable with the likely result being that the Site would become derelict.

4.35 On the basis of the above, Zurich considers Policy E1 to not be ‘positively prepared’, ‘justified’, ‘effective’ or ‘consistent with national policy’. As a result, the policy does not comply with paragraph 182 of the NPPF and is regarded as being unsound.

4.36 Zurich therefore strongly recommends that GBC removes the proposed LSES designation of Broadford Business Park.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Refer to the attached reports for guidance on the need to remove Broadford Business Park from the list of Locally Significant Employment Sites.

3.31 Policy E1 has been revised to reflect the change in the lifetime of the Local Plan. However, as a result, the number of class B1 jobs has been increased from 3,200 to 4,100. The reason for this increase is unclear and has not been referenced within the summary of changes to the Local Plan which accompanies the document. However, in direct contradiction to this increase, the amount of floorspace allocated for these jobs has decreased from a range of 37,000-47,000 sq m to a range of 36,100 - 43,700 sq m. Again the reason for this change remains unclear and requires further clarification. GVG recognises and supports the success of the University of Surrey in supporting the formation of a series of technology based industries in the borough. The Plan should recognise the need to support this growth, both at the research park, and elsewhere in borough by the provision of appropriate accommodation.

3.32 GVG believes the allocation of the Walnut Tree Close and Woodbridge Meadows sites as employment zones is consistent with backward-looking planning but not the forward-looking Plan that GVG is seeking. If 10 Ha of employment land from both of these areas was relocated to either the Gosden Hill Farm or Blackwell Farm allocations (both to be served by the SMC and new rail stations), they would displace land for appropriate residential densities at 30-40 dwellings per hectare (DPH) giving a total of up to 400 homes. However, the area which would be created at Walnut Tree Close and Woodbridge Meadows through rezoning would be appropriate for densities of up to 200 DPH delivering up to 2,000 homes. This would deliver a net increase of 1,600 homes across the lifetime of the Plan for an equivalent land take.

Policy E1

I object to this policy insofar as it relates to the Green Belt site at Burnt Common

The reality of demand for industrial space is that it is nationally in decline and this is evidenced in Guildford by the substantial number of planning permissions that have not been implemented (38,000 sq metres). Development, in the uncertain post-Brexit world, should certainly not be directed to a Green Belt site like Burnt Common. An extension to the Slyfield Industrial Estate would be more appropriate.

The stipulation of a ‘minimum’ area of development at Burnt Common means that this could turn into a large and intensive industrial site, quite unsuitable for its semi-rural location.

Transport interchanges: (Ref Policy E2 = page 76, para 4.4.18)

I have reservations on the proposed designation of the on-street town centre bus stops (replacing the bus station) as an integrated public transport interchange. The distance between the furthest bus stops should not be more than (say) 250m - otherwise the fragmented bus stops spread across the town centre cannot really be considered as a reasonable and effective interchange. This will lead to reduced use of public transport.

4.4.15 We sustain our objection to directing development to locations within 500m of a public transport interchange while the list includes stations in residential, school and rural areas (eg London Road, Merrow (ref 4.4.16), West Horsley) unless there is clear guidance on the need to respect character and consider other impacts. E2. Location for new employment floorspace, P67

We are concerned that the policy is to “direct” B1b use to the town centre, and ask that this is qualified as above.

We disagree with the policy for second choice new employment sites to be within 500m of the “transport interchange” of London Road station. The station is a means of joining a train on a linear route, and it cannot be described as an interchange. The 500m radius would mainly cover an established residential area, including part of ours, which should not be converted to business use.

kkk) We have already highlighted that Policy E2 has a sequential test that the land removed from the plan at Flexford and Normandy would have passed (E2(1)(b)). We note at 4.4.15 Wanborough Rail Station has been deleted. Sequentially, in the context of this Policy E2, development of part of the site at A47 (deleted) would be better than some of the other sites included (e.g., at Send), and we do not understand the explanation given.

III) Policy E2(1) and paragraph 4.4.14 give priority to the town centre, but this is not reflected in the site allocations. The issue of specific town centre uses is discussed in 4.4.22 but not resolved.

mmm) Policy E2(2) should continue to include reference to the Research park (Policy E4) because of its importance to the Borough and its economy.

nnn) Policy E2(1) sets the sequential approach which needs to be followed to determinewhere new office and research & development floorspace will be located. Guildford Town Centre has preference then it is given to areas within 500m of a transport interchange, and then to strategic employment sites.

ooo) Policy E2(2) has been changed to now state that the sequential approach does not apply to proposed floorspace included in the site allocations in the Local Plan.

ppp) The inclusion of this part of the policy significantly undermines the overall strategy for the provision of floorspace in the borough. The addition of this wording is in direct contradiction to the first part of the policy which directs development to the town centre. It now demonstrates that there has been little rationale to including employment space on the strategic allocations other than to meet the need specified in Policy E1.

qqq) Paragraph 4.416 within the definitions section of Policy E2 states that: “When developed, the two new rail stations, Guildford East (Merrow) and Guildford West (Park Barn), will each be treated as a transport interchange.”

rrr) Guildford West (Park Barn) as a transport interchange would, if additional land is made available for employment uses nearby, reinforce the rationale of promoting the provision of high density, residential units on Woodbridge Meadows in close proximity to the town centre.

sss) Guildford East (Merrow) station as a transport interchange would, if additional land is made available for employment uses nearby, reinforce the rationale of promoting the provision of high density, residential units on Woodbridge Meadows in close proximity to the town centre.

ttt) Whilst Woodbridge Meadows is zoned for Employment Uses in the Plan, there is no specific allocation or strategic site. This is despite a) the freeholds being in the Council’s ownership, b) significant amounts of land being vacant or underused and c) the need for a comprehensive flood protection scheme to hold water upstream of the constraint caused by the 1930s A25 Guildford Bypass southbound bridge which is low over the river.

EMPLOYMENT - TOPIC PAPER (2017)
We broadly agree with the summary of other sources in the Topic Paper.
At paragraph 4.28, Wanborough is missing from the list of stations – it should, according to the local plan, be in the second list (excluded stations), although the Guildford Society is not convinced by the arguments for removing allocation A47 from the plan whilst retaining less well-connected places in the land allocation schedule.

At paragraph 4.35, there is reference to a solitary 3,000sqm office (B1a) site in the town centre by 2034. We consider this to be a matter of planning choice rather than of fact. In adopting an approach like the Guildford Vision Group plan, it would be possible to generate significantly more office space, albeit some of it would be a like-for-like replacement of demolished buildings.

We have identified the benefits of displacing employment land at, say, Walnut Tree Close and Woodbridge Meadows to one or more of the well-connected urban extension sites.

By allocating more employment at each of Blackwell Farm and Gosden Hill Farm proposed urban extension sites, employment uses can be relocated to sustainable locations and the vacated land used for higher density homes.

The Guildford Society was in support of the use of land to the north of Slyfield Industrial Estate (with a suitable permanent buffer and screen to Jacobs Well) for employment land (rejected in Paragraph 4.63) and also for a Park and Ride facility at the end of the Sustainable Movement Corridor which could be for commuters, shoppers and also serving a SANG at Burpham Court Farm.

We recognise the plans to retain strategic employment sites – although we were of the understanding that some parts of the Bell Court complex were in residential use.

We would like to see special, specific policies in the plan to encourage apprenticeships in areas particularly where the LSOA relative deprivation score for the subdomain ‘Young Persons Education and Skills’ is particularly poor.

POLICY E2: Location for new employment floorspace

Under this policy, areas within 500 metres of a "public transport interchange" play a key role.

Proposals for new office and research and development floor-space are to be directed to firstly Guildford town centre and then to areas within 500 metres of a public transport interchange (PTI).

East Horsley has two railway stations, Horsley Station and Effingham Junction Station, but currently the Draft Local Plan only proposes that Horsley Station should have PTI status.

WHPC is neutral on this Policy but notes that East Horsley Parish Council has submitted detailed comments on this policy.

for a fifth building at the Guildford Business Park, as this falls second in the hierarchy of sequential testing. The policy will, therefore, stagnate development.

Again under Policy E2, there is a heading "All B Class development". Encouragement will be given to business units less than 50 sq m. In reality, this is a tiny amount of accommodation and unlikely to ever be built. Consideration should be given to increasing the size of this.

Under Clause 4.4.22, the Employment Lands Needs Assessment, concludes that there was not enough capacity to accommodate all of their growth in the town centre and on existing strategic employment sites. However, this contradicts the concept of a sequential test where, if there was a site available to be developed in the town centre, nothing outside that could be built.

Para 4.4.23 also contradicts the restrictive policy behind the sequential test, given that there is a desire to ensure that buildings are available. Whilst development in the most sustainable locations is a laudable target, we do not live in a perfect world where this can be created and flexibility within the Local Plan is an important factor.

Monitoring Indicators

Under the monitoring indicator for Bl©, B2 & BS, the target is to have 100% of permitted development on industrial strategic employment sites. This is too restrictive. Under the section for small business units, the target simply states "percentage of B Class development proposals incorporating units of less than 50 sq m". This is not actually a target as a target has to be a proposed figure.

The comments above are self-explanatory but we believe they are very restrictive.

The suggestion of a sequential test is inappropriate in a Borough where employment land is very scarce and if you lie outside the 500m boundary from a transport interchange, the ability to develop a site for a use which surely must be beneficial to the town is restricted.

We believe that the Local Plan is mismatched between theoretical definitions of land uses and the reality of what the market demands but will specifically generate employment. The examples above given on this would be medical D1 use, D2 use, and sui generis uses. To have to market a building for potentially over 2 years to create say 10 jobs, when say 50 jobs could be created tomorrow by an alternative use in the above categories, would seem not only ludicrous but also render the Borough uncompetitive and fail to provide opportunities for not only the existing residents in the Borough, but also those in the new houses that are to be developed during the planned period.

Land is being taken away from employment uses without adequate provision for their replacement and the Borough is putting all its eggs in one basket with its allocation of land at the Research Park.

6.1 OBJECT to the location for new employment floor space at Garlick’s Arch – Site A43 (Policy E2)

Proposals for new industrial, warehousing and storage (use Class B1c, B2 and B8) floor space will be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites.

There is no need for the new employment floor space to be located at Garlick’s Arch, when just to the south, at Burnt Common, there is existing industrial development, with surplus land that could accommodate further development of 7,000 sq m.

I object to policy E2 location for new employment floor space I object to the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm and I do not believe there are exceptional circumstances to justify incursion into this permanent and high quality area of Green Belt.

The Surrey Research Park currently extends to 65,000 sq m. There is already granted consent to expand to a further 9,000 sq m (14%) The past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 based on ELNA 2015 derived from VoA analysis. The ELNA 2015 calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7%. The data point for our analysis is today in 2016 so we have 17 years to go to the end of the plan period. The necessary growth in floor space over the plan period is therefore 17 years x 0.7% = 11.9%. There is currently 14% expansion space already available. The proposal by GBC to expand the 65,000 sq m by 9,000 sq m (existing allocation) with an additional 35,000 sq m amounts to an increase of 67% of the Research Park which is not required.

The Research Park is currently developed at a density of 25% plot ratio. The majority of existing buildings are 2 stories giving a developed floor space plot ratio of 12.5%. The existing Research Park has the opportunity to markedly increase its density without infringing any Green Belt land nearby. Any density increase would be cost effective for the use of all existing infrastructure and would also have the potential to match the existing densities of existing academic buildings on the university campus which are three to four times higher. Together with the existing expansion of 14% through existing consents and the opportunity to increase its density the Research Park has ample capacity to expand to embrace new demand for B1b uses linked to the university.

A preferred location for increased B1a and B1b space would be in the Town Centre close to housing and a convenient transport hub.

4.4.23 I object to the change in policy E2 under paragraph 4.4.23a in relation to development involving waste management facilities to be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites. This fails to provide sufficient public consultation in relation to access and traffic flows. It also fails to provide sufficient public consultation in relation to unpleasant aspects of waste management. Waste sites should, in my view, not be developed near residential areas and if this is followed through, their presence will of course prevent development in the area in the future.

4.4.14 This policy omits Park and Rides as integral to linking business and transport

Waste management facilities are an essential feature but there should be no presumption that they can override public consultation.

The addition of 4.4.23(a) concerning waste management facilities is insufficient in itself. It should be made clear that all such facilities will be subject to full public consultation and scrutiny of their impacts.

Policy E2

I object to this policy because revision of the SHMA to take account of flaws identified in it and the post-Brexit economy will reduce the need for new employment floorspace.

I also object to the inclusion of Garlick’s Arch as a strategic employment site. It is remote from any facilities and has very poor public transport links. Employees are likely to travel by car, adding to congestion on local roads and the A3. It has been described as an ‘enabling development’ for construction of A3 slip roads, but it is not at all clear that Highways England want more junctions on the already very congested A3, or who is going to pay for the road construction.
I also object to Gosden Hill Farm being a strategic employment site. Such sites should be sited in more sustainable locations with good transport links. This proposal will lead to additional congestion in Burpham and on the A3.

The allocation of potential work places is an admirable aspiration.

As can be seen in Walnut Tree Close – the allocation of the land for employment and the building of the units lasted around a decade before they were demolished. Since no company has asked for new land, it is presumptuous to guess the need for work floor space, until it is asked for and type determined. It is also illogical to demolish ‘in use’ work space simply to build workers’ housing on the land. Such process destroys current jobs without creating or replacing the jobs destroyed.

4.4.14

Burnt Common/ Gosden Hill road access non-existent.

Addition: delete as it contradicts policy E1 and implies that the town centre offers most business opportunities. It adds nothing to the Plan.

Recommendation: add “subject to other policies in this plan” because this is too loosely worded at present and could lead to other uses in residential areas.

Two new stations Merrow and Park Barn are not in Wessex Network Rail Plan to 2043. While one paragraph mentions that there was a ‘suggestion’ of new stations, it is ignored throughout both this and all other relevant documents concerning the railway, and can therefore only be considered Aspirational at best.

Surrey waste management plan is in process of being re-written in 2018. This will be a fundamental change of waste handling as it is being contracted out by adjoining boroughs that use GBC sites during the Plan period. Thus site capacity needed throughout the Borough is subject to change in the next three years.

Response

Summary

I OBJECT to this policy as it stands. I am of the opinion that all new office and research and development (use Class B1a and B1b) floor space should be within Guildford town centre. I do not support the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm and I do not believe there are exceptional circumstances to justify incursion into this permanent and high quality area of Green Belt.

Detailed response:

- The Surrey Research Park currently extends to 65,000 sq m
- There is already granted consent to expand to a further 9,000 sq m (14%)
- The past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 based on ELNA 2015 derived from VoA analysis
- The ELNA 2015 calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7%
- The data point for our analysis is today in 2016 so we have 17 years to go to the end of the plan period.
- The necessary growth in floor space over the plan period is therefore 17 years x 0.7% = 11.9%
There is currently 14% expansion space already available

The proposal by GBC to expand the 65,000 sq m by 9,000 sq m (existing allocation) with an additional 35,000 sq m amounts to an increase of 67% of the Research Park which is not required

The Research Park is currently developed at a density of 25% plot ratio. The majority of existing buildings are 2 storeys giving a developed floor space plot ratio of 12.5%.

The existing Research Park has the opportunity to markedly increase its density without infringing any Green Belt land nearby. Any density increase would be cost effective for the use of all existing infrastructure and would also have the potential to match the existing densities of existing academic buildings on the university campus which are three to four times higher.

Together with the existing expansion of 14% through existing consents and the opportunity to increase its density the Research Park has ample capacity to expand to embrace new demand for B1b uses linked to the university.

A preferred location for increased B1a and B1b space should be on other existing sites close to housing and a convenient transport hub.

I support the clear statement in para 4.4.17 that for the purposes of the sequential assessment the train station at Wanborough will not be considered to be a transport interchange because of its location within the Green Belt, and that it is not considered appropriate to direct office development over 100 sq m to this location. The weight that this station was made to carry in the 2016 version of the Plan, and its use to help justify the entirely developer-led Site A46, was completely inappropriate.

Object

I do not support the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm which is high quality Greenbelt and which has recently been identified as of sufficient quality to be included in the Surrey Hills AONB review (see the Land Management Services independent report commissioned by Worplesdon, Compton and Wanborough PC’s - June 2016 in Policy A26).

I object to the change to policy E2 (2), which will direct new office floor space to areas such as the Surrey Research Park, which are less sustainable than the town centre in terms of traffic movements. This policy contradicts the statement in para 4.4.14 that: “Guildford town centre is the preferred location for new office and research & development floorspace due to its size and transport links.”

There is no evidence to suggest that businesses prefer out-of-town locations, in fact the Employment Land Needs Assessment (ELNA), 2016, suggests the opposite is the case:

“Where sites are available the Council could seek to encourage office/R&D development in town centres. The town centre is a more sustainable location and there is evidence of demand from potential occupiers which currently do not necessarily have town centre offices that match their needs.” (ELNA, 2016, 7.3.2)

Furthermore, out-of-town development (whether a business park or a retail centre) is inefficient use of land due to it being used only during office hours and, in the case of the Research Park, with many acres of surface car parks (formerly working farmland) serving no use outside office hours.

[Figure 5] – One New Change, opposite St Paul’s Cathedral shows how it is possible to make efficient use of space available. On a plot of just 1.1 hectares it provides nearly 50% more floor space than the whole of the 27 hectare Research Park and does so with just 7 storeys above ground (and 3 below). Guildford should be exploring similar ideas for its employment land usage.

POLICY E2

I OBJECT to the location for new employment floorspace (Policy E2)

I object to this policy. It would be more sensible to confine new office and research and development floor space to the urban Guildford area. I also oppose the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm. No exceptional circumstances, as defined under the NPPF, have been advanced to justify incursion into this permanent and high-quality area of Green Belt.

Proposals for new industrial, warehousing and storage (use Class B1c, B2 and B8) floorspace will be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites.

There is no need for the new employment floorspace to be located at Garlick’s Arch or Gosden Hill Farm, when near to these sites at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m.

I object to this policy.

There is no need for additional employment land. The need arose only because AECOM adopted an unambitious target for land use efficiency - the target to have a land use efficiency no better than national averages. The borough should be more ambitious in its land use efficiency than this, given that 89% of the borough is green belt and that land costs are high.

I OBJECT to the location for new employment floorspace at Garlick's Arch -Site A43.

Proposals for new industrial, warehousing and storage (use Class B1c, B2 and B8) floorspace will be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites.

There is no need for the new employment floorspace to be located at Garlick's Arch, when just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m.

I object to this policy. It would be more sensible to confine new office and research and development floor space to the urban Guildford area. No exceptional circumstances, as defined under the NPPF, have been advanced to justify incursion into this permanent and high-quality area of Green Belt.

4.4.15 The fact that bus 478 goes close to Horsley station 4 times a day does NOT make Horsley a transport interchange. Bus 478 runs Leatherhead to Guildford and therefore competes directly with the train and achieves little benefit from interchanging with rail, which is why most of the service goes down the A246. You need to address the basic nature of the bus services if you wish to have real interchanges at these stations.

4.4.17 It is the lack of other transport infrastructure at stations like Effingham that prevent them from being interchanges not their “remote” or “rural” location. It is likely that significant traffic from the proposed WISLEY development will use Effingham as a commuter station rather than any other transport. Just as lack of A3 connection will prevent them from travelling to Guildford directly. You should take care not to confuse “interchange” with work destination. This paragraph implies that employment locations are to be considered within 500m of certain stations. This may be but that is separate from a “transport interchange”. What is important is how much office development should be allowed within this radius without altering the nature of the local environment.

4.4.22 Once again we have unrestricted "growth” that has to be accommodated. Why is that?

We are of the opinion that all new office and research and development (use Class B1a and B1b) floor space should be within Guildford town centre.

We object to the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm and do not believe there are exceptional circumstances to justify incursion into this permanent and high quality area of Green Belt.

The proposal to expand the 65,000 sq m by 9,000 sq m (existing allocation) with an additional 35,000 sq m amounts to an increase of 67% of the Research Park which is not required.

The valuable and workable concept of the Research Park should not have its integrity and purpose diluted by being converted into yet another Business Park for office users rather than research organisations.

I object to policy E2 location for new employment floor space.

I object to the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm and I do not believe there are exceptional circumstances to justify incursion into this permanent and high quality area of Green Belt.

The Surrey Research Park currently extends to 65,000 sq m. There is already granted consent to expand to a further 9,000 sq m (14%).

The ELNA 2015 calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7%.

The data point for our analysis is today in 2016 so we have 17 years to go to the end of the plan period. The necessary growth in floor space over the plan period is therefore 17 years x 0.7% = 11.9%.

There is currently 14% expansion space already available.

The proposal by GBC to expand the 65,000 sq m by 9,000 sq m (existing allocation) with an additional 35,000 sq m amounts to an increase of 67% of the Research Park which is not required.

The Research Park is currently developed at a density of 25% plot ratio. The majority of existing buildings are 2 stories giving a developed floor space plot ratio of 12.5%.

The existing Research Park has the opportunity to markedly increase its density without infringing any Green Belt land nearby. Any density increase would be cost effective for the use of all existing infrastructure and would also have the potential to match the existing densities of existing academic buildings on the university campus which are three to four times higher.

Together with the existing expansion of 14% through existing consents and the opportunity to increase its density the Research Park has ample capacity to expand to embrace new demand for B1b uses linked to the university.

A preferred location for increased B1a and B1b space would be in the Town Centre close to housing and a convenient transport hub.

Under this policy, areas within 500 meters of a "public transport interchange" play a key role.

Proposals for new office and research and development floorspace are to be directed to firstly Guildford town centre and then to areas within 500 meters of a public transport interchange ("PTI").

East Horsley has two railway stations, Horsley Station and Effingham Junction Station, but currently the draft Local Plan only proposes that Horsley Station should have PTI status.

The explanation given at 4.4.17 for Effingham Junction Station ("EJS") not enjoying this status is that either it is located within the Green Belt, or it is within an AONB or it is isolated away from the village or centre. It is not clear which of these applies to this particular station, but we believe strongly that none apply and that there is a strong case for EJS deserving PTI status in the same way as Horsley Station.

I will deal firstly with the three alternative reasons given for EJS not supposedly qualifying as a PTI.

Firstly there is the Green Belt aspect. This is not logical since if location within the Green Belt were determinative, this would mean that Horsley Station would also fail to gain PTI status.

Also the draft Local Plan proposes elsewhere at Policy P2 that the whole of East Horsley, including both Horsley Station and EJS, should be inset from the Green Belt. It will be seen elsewhere in these comments that I object strongly to this proposal, but the point remains that if location within the Green Belt were a valid reason for not being given PTI status, the Local Plan itself makes it clear that under Policy P2 this will not apply in the case of both Horsley Station and EJS.

Secondly EJS is not located in an AONB. EJS is within the envelope of the village settlement and will remain as such under the draft Local Plan.

Thirdly EJS is not "isolated" or "away from the village centre."

Effingham Junction (the area immediately south and west of EJS, served by respectively Forest Road south of the railway bridge and Old Lane) may not have the extensive shopping parades enjoyed by East Horsley's two other centres (Station Parade and Bishopsmead Parade) but it is a thriving community with a significant population and also a significant number of active and successful employment floorspaces and sites.

These include in Forest Road a general store (Forest Road General Store), a car sales and car repair business (PJB Car Sales/The Body Shop), a dental health centre and chiropractic clinic (Mortiboys) and on Horsley Road, Cedar Garden Centre, Royce Turf and Irrigation and at the Newmarsh Farm site, a number of businesses including Richmonds Horse Transport, Braye Hydraulic Repairs and TTS Surfacing Ltd.

It is therefore vital that the Local Plan's economy policies affecting the area protect these spaces and sites and create conditions for their sustainable growth and hence job creation.

Since all or most of these businesses are located within 500 meters of EJS, Policy E2 would be an invaluable driver for such growth which could play a major role in ensuring that Effingham Junction maintained and enhanced its position as East Horsley's "third centre" for homes and jobs. On the other hand, to exclude EJS from PTI status could very well stifle its sustainable development and condemn it to a future as a dormitory "backwater" of East Horsley.

It is also counter-intuitive in the extreme to refuse EJS "PTI" status. This is for the simple reason that EJS is clearly a "public transport interchange" as that term would be normally understood. This is for the following reasons:

• as the name "Effingham Junction" indicates, EJS is at an important junction and the railway line from Guildford splits here into two lines which take different routes into London, so many London-bound passengers will change trains here;

• EJS serves not only the Effingham Junction area, but also the many residents of Effingham and Little Bookham for whom EJS is far closer than Bookham Station;

• EJS also serves the many residents of the Cobham area for whom EJS is far closer than Cobham and Stoke d'Abernon station EJS also serves the residents of Ockham and Ripley;

• EJS also serves the considerable numbers who visit local leisure activity sites, including three paintball sites and two clay pigeon shooting sites, for whom EJS is the only viable public transport hub; and

• EJS will be the nearest railway station to the land at the former Wisley Airfield site which is proposed for the building of 2000 homes under Policy A35 of the draft Local Plan and if, despite the objections of many including East Horsley Parish Council, this proceeds, then significant numbers of residents will be taking one form of travel to EJS and then interchanging onto the railway.

I accordingly OBJECT to Policy E2 insofar as it fails to confer "public transport interchange" status on Effingham Junction Station.

I OBJECT to this policy as it stands. I am of the opinion that all new office and research and development (use Class B1a and B1b) floor space should be within Guildford town centre. I do not support the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm and I do not believe there are exceptional circumstances to justify incursion into this permanent and high quality area of Green Belt.
onto Blackwell Farm and I do not believe there are exceptional circumstances to justify incursion into this permanent and high quality area of Green Belt.

- The Surrey Research Park currently extends to 65,000 sq m
- There is already granted consent to expand to a further 9,000 sq m (14%)
- The past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 based on ELNA 2015 derived from VoA analysis
- The ELNA 2015 calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7%
- The data point for our analysis is today in 2016 so we have 17 years to go to the end of the plan period.
- The necessary growth in floor space over the plan period is therefore 17 years x 0.7% = 11.9%
- There is currently 14% expansion space already available
- The proposal by GBC to expand the 65,000 sq m by 9,000 sq m (existing allocation) with an additional 35,000 sq m amounts to an increase of 67% of the Research Park which is not required
- The Research Park is currently developed at a density of 25% plot ratio. The majority of existing buildings are 2 storeys giving a developed floor space plot ratio of 12.5%.
- The existing Research Park has the opportunity to markedly increase its density without infringing any Green Belt land nearby. Any density increase would be cost effective for the use of all existing infrastructure and would also have the potential to match the existing densities of existing academic buildings on the university campus which are three to four times higher.
- Together with the existing expansion of 14% through existing consents and the opportunity to increase its density the Research Park has ample capacity to expand to embrace new demand for B1b uses linked to the university.
- A preferred location for increased B1a and B1b space should be on other existing sites close to housing and a convenient transport hub

I object to the location for new employment floorspace (Policy E2)

I object to this policy. It would be more sensible to confine new office and research and development floor space to the urban Guildford area. I also oppose the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm. No exceptional circumstances, as defined under the NPPF, have been advanced to justify incursion into this permanent and high-quality area of Green Belt.

Proposals for new industrial, warehousing and storage (use Class B1c, B2 and B8) floorspace will be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites. There is no need for the new employment floorspace to be located at Garlick’s Arch or Gosden Hill Farm, when near to these sites at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m.

POLICY E2: Location for new employment floorspace

Under this policy, areas within 500 meters of a "public transport interchange" play a key role.

Proposals for new office and research and development floorspace are to be directed to firstly Guildford town centre and then to areas within 500 meters of a public transport interchange ("PTI").

I OBJECT to Policy E2 - as it fails to confer "public transport interchange" status on Effingham Junction Station.

I object to the employment strategy and impact at Garlick’s Arch (A43) (Policies E2 and E5)

There is no need for new industrial sites at Garlick’s Arch (A43). There is an existing brownfield industrial site at Burnt Common that could easily accommodate the 7,000 sq m proposed. That site was removed from the Plan without any rationale.

Furthermore the development at Garlick’s Arch would result in the loss of four existing successful rural businesses, which have been for there decades employing local people and are therefore clearly sustainable.

- I object to the fact that brownfield land would be disproportionately used for commercial development and quite unnecessary retail expansion. Guildford is an attractive, thriving town. Overdevelopment will put such enormous strain on the limited land area and infrastructure that it will eventually have the negative effect of discouraging businesses and shoppers, who will look elsewhere. Brownfield sites should be used to include housing, not taking the easy option of using Green Belt land for housing development unnecessarily.

I object to policies E2 and E4. Surrey Research Park has already been granted permission to expand by a further 14%. This 14% has not yet been developed. However, The Plan proposes another large expansion even though there is already enough land to last the life time of this Plan. In 2015 Land and Assessment the ‘need’, growth was forecast at 11.9%. There is already permission granted 14%, which is enough to cover the 11.9% growth forecast. It is therefore inappropriate to propose another huge expansion ion green belt when it is not justified or required. Again the existing growth forecast should be reduced due to the referendum.

1. POLICY E2

I OBJECT to the location for new employment floorspace (Policy E2)

I object to this policy. It would be more sensible to confine new office and research and development floor space to the urban Guildford area. I also oppose the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm. No exceptional circumstances, as defined under the NPPF, have been advanced to justify incursion into this permanent and high-quality area of Green Belt.

Proposals for new industrial, warehousing and storage (use Class B1c, B2 and B8) floorspace will be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites.

There is no need for the new employment floorspace to be located at Garlick’s Arch or Gosden Hill Farm, when near to these sites at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m.

I disagree with the policy for second choice new employment sites to be within 500m of the “transport interchange” of London Road station. The station is a means of joining a train on a linear route, and it cannot be described as an interchange. The 500m radius would cover mainly an established residential area, including parts close to where I live, which should not be converted to business use.

POLICY E2: Location for new employment floorspace

Under this policy, areas within 500 meters of a "public transport interchange" play a key role.

Proposals for new office and research and development floorspace are to be directed to firstly Guildford town centre and then to areas within 500 meters of a public transport interchange ("PTI").

East Horsley has two railway stations, Horsley Station and Effingham Junction Station, but currently the draft Local Plan only proposes that Horsley Station should have PTI status.

The explanation given at 4.4.17 for Effingham Junction Station ("EJS") not enjoying this status is that either it is located within the Green Belt, or it is within an AONB or it is isolated away from the village or centre. It is not clear which of these applies to this particular station, but we believe strongly that none apply and that there is a strong case for EJS deserving PTI status in the same way as Horsley Station.

We will deal firstly with the three alternative reasons given for EJS not supposedly qualifying as a PTI.

Firstly there is the Green Belt aspect. This is not logical since if location within the Green Belt were determinative, this would mean that Horsley Station would also fail to gain PTI status.

Also the draft Local Plan proposes elsewhere at Policy P2 that the whole of East Horsley, including both Horsley Station and EJS, should be inset from the Green Belt. It will be seen elsewhere in these comments that EHPC objects strongly to this proposal, but the point remains that if location within the Green Belt were a valid reason for not being given PTI status, the Local Plan itself makes it clear that under Policy P2 this will not apply in the case of both Horsley Station and EJS.

Secondly EJS is not located in an AONB. EJS is within the envelope of the village settlement and will remain as such under the draft Local Plan.

Thirdly EJS is not "isolated" or "away from the village centre."

Effingham Junction (the area immediately south and west of EJS, served by respectively Forest Road south of the railway bridge and Old Lane) may not have the extensive shopping parades enjoyed by East Horsley's two other centres (Station Parade and Bishopsmead Parade) but it is a thriving community with a significant population and also a significant number of active and successful employment floorspaces and sites.

These include in Forest Road a general store (Forest Road General Store), a car sales and car repair business (PJB Car Sales/The Body Shop), a dental health centre and chiropractic clinic (Mortiboys) and on Horsley Road, Cedar Garden Centre, Royce Turf and Irrigation and at the Newmarsh Farm site, a number of businesses including Richards Horse Transport, Braye Hydraulic Repairs and TTS Surfacing Ltd.

It is therefore vital that the Local Plan's economy policies affecting the area protect these spaces and sites and create conditions for their sustainable growth and hence job creation.

Since all or most of these businesses are located within 500 meters of EJS, Policy E2 would be an invaluable driver for such growth which could play a major role in ensuring that Effingham Junction maintained and enhanced its position as East Horsley's "third centre" for homes and jobs. On the other hand, to exclude EJS from PTI status could very well stifle its sustainable development and condemn it to a future as a dormitory "backwater" of East Horsley.

It is also counter-intuitive in the extreme to refuse EJS "PTI" status. This is for the simple reason that EJS is clearly a "public transport interchange" as that term would be normally understood. This is for the following reasons:

- as the name "Effingham Junction" indicates, EJS is at an important junction and interchange. The railway line from Guildford splits here into two lines which take different routes into London, so many London-bound passengers will change trains here;
- EJS serves not only the Effingham Junction area, but also the many residents of Effingham and Little Bookham for whom EJS is far closer than Bookham Station;
- EJS also serves the many residents of the Cobham area for whom EJS is far closer than Cobham and Stoke d'Abernon station EJS also serves the residents of Ockham and Ripley;
- EJS also serves the considerable numbers who visit local leisure activity sites, including three paintball sites and two clay pigeon shooting sites, for whom EJS is the only viable public transport hub; and
- EJS will be the nearest railway station to the land at the former Wisley Airfield site which is proposed for the building of 2000 homes under Policy A35 of the draft Local Plan and if, despite the objections of many including East Horsley Parish Council, this proceeds, then significant numbers of residents will be taking one form of travel to EJS and then interchanging onto the railway.

EHPC accordingly OBJECTS to Policy E2 insofar as it fails to confer "public transport interchange" status on Effingham Junction Station.

A strategic employment site at Ash railway station would allow office buildings of a significant size and other substantial buildings to be erected. The drawing on page 301 clearly shows that such buildings could be erected within 500m of the railway station. If a mistake has been made and the distance is far less than 500m, the mistake should be corrected.

The drawing on page 301 sums up the need for you to withdraw your proposal. You have included the following buildings and land within the 500m area, yet for obvious reasons, offices etc should not be erected in their vicinity.

Ash, North and West of A323

- primary school
- cemetery
- ancient parish church (11th century)
- old house (Hartshorn, 14th century)
- housing (in depth)

Note: The Thames Basin Heaths Special Protection Area is not within the 500m area but it is very close to it.

Ash, South and East of A323

- housing (in depth, existing or about to be developed)
- land needed for a road and pedestrian bridge over the railway (no alternative site)
- land needed for an off street car and cycle park (the existing car park is inadequate)
- manor house with moat (13th century)
- church hall
- old rectory (Elizabethan)
- church

I regret to say that your drawing on page 301 looks somewhat cavalier. It does not fully take into account the need for new development to be in keeping with existing development (which is mainly housing). See Policy D4 on page 119. It fails to protect a historic area, much of which has a pleasant character. There may be scope in the future to improve the character of some of the area (eg where there is a car sales business on the A323) but a significant amount of office development – which is strongly implied by your proposal - would harm the existing character of the general area.

Which buildings do you propose to demolish? Which open space will be used for offices etc?

Is there firm evidence that offices are needed within 500m of Ash railway station now, or during the life of the Local plan, or beyond? Even if there were to be a specific need, it should be borne in mind that it is not uncommon for offices to become empty for long periods. There have been empty offices in Farnborough (only a few miles away) for many years.

For the avoidance of doubt, of course there is no objection to continuation of the present small scale employment immediately next to Ash railway station.

You appear to be misusing the word 'buffer' in a totally inappropriate manner when you show a 500m buffer area. Do you mean that development which is not for offices, will not be allowed? Are you confusing the buffer at a railway station? Are you implying, with the word 'buffer', that residents should not worry about office development near their homes and gardens? The word 'zone' is used in Policy P4 and the word 'zone' would be better than 'buffer'.

Add to 4.4.21: The 500m zone around a transport interchange means that new employment (eg office development) may be allowed anywhere within 500m of the transport interchange.

I object to Policy E1 and E2 because it is nationally recognised there is a down turn in retail within town centres. Employment in this sector is in decline due the rapid rise of internet shopping. It would be better used for mixed housing.

This week I received a leaflet from local supplier Afinity Water, highlighting that ‘After months of low rainfall, water resources are below average’...... ‘after months of low winter rainfall, our groundwater resources remain well below average – despite the rain in May and June’. Here is a good example illustrating that our natural resources have limits and could fail under such large scale excessive demands from new development.

No one seems to be looking at the ‘big picture’ realistically or considering the overall impact that these large developments, in close proximity to each other, will have on the area! It is downright irresponsible that this has not been factored into council plans and the overall housing numbers substantially reduced.

In conclusion I object to the unsustainable, unrealistic levels of homes the Government are pushing on Councils in the South East of England. Our roads are already running above capacity. This whole area is in serious danger of grinding to a complete standstill. The addition of 60,000 cars from new development joining the network (large scale developments in neighbouring Aldershot, Waverly, Woking and Rushmoor) would simply be too much for the area and would destroy our environment.

11. In Policy E2 why, in para 4.4.17 has Effingham Junction been omitted as a public transport interchange with no specific reason given? It is more of an interchange than Clandon or Horsley stations and probably has more businesses within its 500 metre envelope then either of them, especially if retail is excluded.

The University notes the sequential approach proposed through Policy E2 in relation to the location of new office and research and development floorspace in the borough. This policy states that:

“Proposals for new office and research and development (use Class B1a and B1b) floorspace will be directed first to Guildford town centre, then sequentially to:

- locations within 500m of a public transport interchange,
- Office and Research & Development Strategic Employment Sites unless the proposed floorspace is limited in scale (less than 200 sq m or 25% of the existing office/R&D floorspace whichever is the lower) and/or ancillary to the primary use of the site OR the proposed floorspace meets the criteria set out in policy E4 and is appropriate to be located on Surrey Research Park.”

The University does not consider that this approach is the most sustainable way of planning for the delivery of future employment space in the borough. The plan is not sound on this issue and this requires a change.

New development, irrespective of the type of development proposed, should be delivered in the most sustainable locations. The University therefore does not consider that all new office and research and development floorspace should necessarily be directed first to Guildford town centre, because there can be no guarantee that this will in fact be the most sustainable location. For example, the plan proposes the creation of new strategic development sites, such as the urban extension at Blackwell Farm, whilst identifying office and research and development strategic employment sites, both of which would not be deemed priority sites for development according to this policy.

It is therefore considered that the sequential approach proposed through Policy E2 should be replaced and new employment floorspace should be directed to the most sustainable locations in the borough. In some circumstances this may be in the town centre, but in other circumstances it may well be in other locations.

The following change to wording is proposed:

“Proposals for new office and research and development (use Class B1a and B1b) floorspace will be directed to the following locations:

- Guildford town centre
- Office and Research & Development Strategic Employment Sites unless the proposed floorspace is limited in scale (less than 200 sq m or 25% of the existing office/R&D floorspace whichever is the lower) and/or ancillary to the primary use of the site OR the proposed floorspace meets the criteria set out in policy E4 and is appropriate to be located on Surrey Research Park.

3.11 M&G objects to paragraph 4.4.18 of the Plan which makes reference to: “The bus station in Guildford town centre is defined as a public transport interchange. When it is replaced on site or by a suitable alternative arrangement to be located either partly or wholly on or off site these will be defined as a public transport interchanges.”

3.12 There is no scope to replace the existing bus station on site as part of the redevelopment. Previous schemes have been unviable because of the previous requirement to re-provide the bus station on site. A fundamental assumption of the proposed M&G scheme for North Street is that the bus station would be completely redeveloped. The M&G scheme does not include a replacement bus station, but a series of new on-street bus stop facilities can be incorporated into the proposals to change traffic circulation in the town centre.

3.13 Policy E7 outlines that approximately 1,172 new homes, particularly on upper floors as part of a mixed used development should be accommodated by 2033. The North Street development would contribute to this total.

Under this policy, areas within 500 meters of a "public transport interchange" play a key role.

Proposals for new office and research and development floorspace are to be directed to firstly Guildford town centre and then to areas within 500 meters of a public transport interchange ("PTI").

East Horsley has two railway stations, Horsley Station and Effingham Junction Station, but currently the draft Local Plan only proposes that Horsley Station should have PTI status.

POLICY E2 Location for new employment floorspace

OBJECT I am of the opinion that all new office and research and development (use Class B1a and B1b) floor space should be within Guildford town centre. I do not support the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm and we do not believe there are exceptional circumstances to justify incursion into this permanent and high quality area of Green Belt.

I object to the change in policy E2 under paragraph 4.4.23a in relation to development involving waste management facilities to be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites.

This fails to provide sufficient public consultation in relation to access and traffic flows

Policy E2: Location of New Employment Floorspace

Object (not effective in respect of NPPF paragraph 182)

WPI is concerned that draft policy E2 may be in conflict with the proposed strategic allocations, including the Wisley new settlement, which make provision for B Class employment, on-site. Clearly, for proportional employment in excess of 200 sq m, new strategic allocations are sequentially preferable sites. The draft policy should be amended to ensure that it is effective and consistent with the overall GBLP.

I OBJECT to the location for new employment floorspace (Policy E2)

I object to this policy. It would be more sensible to confine new office and research and development floor space to the urban Guildford area. I also oppose the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm. No exceptional circumstances, as defined under the NPPF, have been advanced to justify incursion into this permanent and high-quality area of Green Belt.

Proposals for new industrial, warehousing and storage (use Class B1c, B2 and B8) floorspace will be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites.

There is no need for the new employment floorspace to be located at Garlick’s Arch or Gosden Hill Farm, when near to these sites at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m.

Policy E2: Location for New Employment Floorspace

I OBJECT to this policy on the following grounds:

- Allowing new office and research and development (use Class B1a and B1b) floorspace to be developed within 500m of Horsley station is out of keeping with the existing neighbourhood, and would adversely change the character of the area.
- The proposed expansion of the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm is premature. It is unacceptable to undertake further development on high quality greenfield land while the density of the existing development is relatively low, and while a significant area of the Park is absorbed by surface car parking (as is also the case on a significant area of the main University of Surrey Campus).

Policy E8 states that “District Centres sit in the middle of the retail hierarchy, and the whole of that Policy refers to retail uses. Paragraph 4.4.91 states that “Most ground floor uses in District Centres are within the ‘A Use Class’, that is, they are shopping area uses. Other uses typically found in shopping/ service centres are outside of the ‘A Use Class’, and include health and fitness centres, arts and culture, nail bars, and hotels”.

However, Policy E2 seems to aim to extend the purpose of District Centres so that the draft Local Plan considers them for locations of new employment floorspace, in addition to their main purpose as retail centres – which is at odds with the entire description of Policy E8.

Furthermore, it is extremely odd that Horsley Station is described as a “transport interchange”. The only interchanging that would be possible would be between train and bus services. There is a good train service between London and Guildford, but the bus services at Horsley station are extremely limited:

- four buses run daily (Mon-Fri only) between Guildford and Leatherhead (478 Service).
- five buses run daily (Mon-Fri only) between Leatherhead and Guildford (478 Service).
- The Howard of Effingham school bus service runs once a day in each direction (678 Service).

As In previous drafts of the Local Plan, there is a substantial overemphasis of the facilities in East and West Horsley, which seems to be an attempt to justify the excessive level of development that is proposed.

The “Transport Interchanges (Horsley)” map in Appendix A1 shows that the circle of 500m radius centred on Horsley station encloses only the following (ranked in terms of reducing area):

- Residential homes
- Green space
- Station Parade retail area
- The Village Hall
- The Medical Centre
- Glenesk School
- Two small offices, one housed in the station building, and the other converted from its previous use as a medical centre.

There is no purpose-built office employment space at present, and I am not aware of any need for it in this area.

The rather fanciful categorisation of Horsley station as a “transport interchange” just because it is “in close proximity to [a] district centre”, and the resulting dubious suggestion that the neighbourhood should be considered as suitable for new employment floorspace need to be re-examined. I therefore object to this Policy.

4. ECONOMY POLICIES

POLICY E2: Location for new employment floorspace

East Horsley has two railway stations, Horsley Station and Effingham Junction Station, but currently the draft Local Plan only proposes that Horsley Station should have PTI status (within 500 meters of a public transport interchange).

The explanation given at 4.4.17 for Effingham Junction Station ("EJS") not enjoying this status is that either it is located within the Green Belt, or it is within an AONB or it is isolated away from the village or centre. There is a strong case for EJS deserving PTI status in the same way as Horsley Station.

1. Both stations are within the Green
2. EJS is not located in an AONB. EJS is within the envelope of the village settlement and will remain as such under the draft Local Plan.
3. EJS is not "isolated" or "away from the village centre."

Effingham Junction area of East Horsley is a thriving community with a significant population and also a number of businesses. Including a General Store, car sales and car repair business, Dentist and Chiropractic clinic, Garden Centre, Beautician, Yoga venue, Interior Design business and a Village Hall used by keepfit classes and other groups.

The Local Plan's economy policies affecting this area must protect this site creating conditions for growth and job creation.

Also EJS is clearly a "public transport interchange". This is for the following reasons:

1. EJS is at an important junction and interchange. The railway line from Guildford splits here into two lines which take different routes into London, many London bound passengers will change trains here.
2. EJS also serves residents of Effingham and Little Bookham for whom EJS is closer than Bookham Station.
3. EJS also serves those who visit local leisure activity sites, including three paintball sites and two clay pigeon shooting sites.
4. EJS will be the nearest railway station to the land at the former Wisley Airfield site which is proposed for the building of 2000 homes under Policy A35 of the draft Local Plan.

I therefore OBJECT to Policy E2 where it fails to confer "public transport interchange" status on Effingham Junction Station.

8. I object to the employment strategy and impact at Garlick’s Arch (A43) (Policies E2 and E5) There is no need for new industrial sites at Garlick’s Arch (A43). There is an existing brownfield industrial site at Burnt Common that could easily accommodate the 7,000 sq m proposed. That site was removed from the Plan without any reasoning. Furthermore the development at Garlick’s Arch would result in the loss of four existing successful rural businesses, which have been for there decades employing local people and are therefore clearly sustainable.

6. I OBJECT to the location for new employment floorspace at Garlick's Arch - Site A43 (Policy E2)

Proposals for new industrial, warehousing and storage (use Class Blc, 82 and 88) floorspace will be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites.

1. I OBJECT to the location of new employment floor space at Garlick’s Arch – Site A43 (Policy E2)

The Policy states that:-

“Where net additional floorspace exceeding 200 sq m or 25% of the existing office/R&D floorspace is proposed (whichever is the lower) in the redevelopment or extension of a building in locations other than those set out above, it will need to be demonstrated that there are:

- no sites available in the locations set out above
- there is a demonstrated need, and
- the site is or will be made accessible by sustainable modes of transport.”

There is no need for the new employment floor space to be located at Garlick’s Arch, when just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m.

There is no demonstrable need and the proposed site will create a traffic nightmare for the residents of Ripley, Burnt Common and Send Marsh.

To be precise, it fails on all counts.

1. POLICY E2

I OBJECT to the location for new employment floorspace (Policy E2)

I object to this policy. It would be more sensible to confine new office and research and development floor space to the urban Guildford area. I also oppose the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm. No exceptiona circumstances, as defined under the NPPF, have been advanced to justify incursion into this permanent and high-quality area of Green Belt.

Proposals for new industrial, warehousing and storage (use Class Blc, B2 and B8) floorspace will be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites.

There is no need for the new employment floorspace to be located at Garlick's Arch or Gosden Hill Farm, when near to these sites at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m.

I OBJECT to the location for new employment floorspace (Policy E2)

I object to this policy. It would be more sensible to confine new office and research and development floor space to the urban Guildford area. I also oppose the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm. No exceptional circumstances, as defined under the NPPF, have been advanced to justify incursion into this permanent and high-quality area of Green Belt.

Proposals for new industrial, warehousing and storage (use Class B1c, B2 and B8) floorspace will be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites.

There is no need for the new employment floorspace to be located at Garlick’s Arch or Gosden Hill Farm, when near to these sites at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

POLICY E2

I object to the employment strategy and impact at Garlick’s Arch (A43) (Policies E2 and E5).

There is no need for new industrial sites at Garlick’s Arch (A43). There is an existing brownfield industrial site at Burnt Common that could easily accommodate the 7,000 sq m proposed. That site was removed from the Plan without any rationale.

Furthermore the development at Garlick’s Arch would result in the loss of four existing successful rural businesses, which have been for there decades employing local people and are therefore clearly sustainable.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
Thirdly EJS is not "isolated" or "away from the village centre."

Effingham Junction (the area immediately south and west of EJS, served by respectively Forest Road south of the railway bridge and Old Lane) may not have the extensive shopping parades enjoyed by East Horsley's two other centres (Station Parade and Bishopsmead Parade) but it is a thriving community with a significant population and also a significant number of active and successful employment floorspaces and sites.

These include in Forest Road a general store (Forest Road General Store), a car sales and car repair business (PJB Car Sales/The Body Shop), a dental health centre and chiropractic clinic (Mortiboys) and on Horsley Road, Cedar Garden Centre, Royce Turf and Irrigation and at the Newmarsh Farm site, a number of businesses including Richards Horse Transport, Braye Hydraulic Repairs and TTS Surfacing Ltd.

It is therefore vital that the Local Plan's economy policies affecting the area protect these spaces and sites and create conditions for their sustainable growth and hence job creation.

Since all or most of these businesses are located within 500 meters of EJS, Policy E2 would be an invaluable driver for such growth which could play a major role in ensuring that Effingham Junction maintained and enhanced its position as East Horsley's "third centre" for homes and jobs. On the other hand, to exclude EJS from PTI status could very well stifle its sustainable development and condemn it to a future as a dormitory "backwater" of East Horsley.

It is also counter-intuitive in the extreme to refuse EJS "PTI" status. This is for the simple reason that EJS is clearly a "public transport interchange" as that term would be normally understood. This is for the following reasons:

1. as the name "Effingham Junction" indicates, EJS is at an important junction and The railway line from Guildford splits here into two lines which take different routes into London, so many London-bound passengers will change trains here;
2. EJS serves not only the Effingham Junction area, but also the many residents of Effingham and Little Bookham for whom EJS is far closer than Bookham Station;
3. EJS also serves the many residents of the Cobham area for whom EJS is far closer than Cobham and Stoke d'Abernon station EJS also serves the residents of Ockham and Ripley;
4. EJS also serves the considerable numbers who visit local leisure activity sites, including three paintball sites and two clay pigeon shooting sites, for whom EJS is the only viable public transport hub; and
5. EJS will be the nearest railway station to the land at the former Wisley Airfield site which is proposed for the building of 2000 homes under Policy A35 of the draft Local Plan and if, despite the objections of many including East Horsley Parish Council, this proceeds, then significant numbers of residents will be taking one form of travel to EJS and then interchanging onto the railway.

EHPC accordingly OBJECTS to Policy E2 insofar as it fails to confer "public transport interchange" status on Effingham Junction Station.

It is illogical that Effingham Junction Station should be denied the status of Public Transport Interchange.
Effingham Junction Station (EJS) is within the envelope of the village settlement and will remain as such under the draft Local Plan. It is not "isolated" or "away from the village centre." Effingham Junction (the area immediately south and west of EJS, served by respectively Forest Road south of the railway bridge and Old Lane) is a thriving community with a significant population and also a significant number of active and successful employment floorspaces and sites. It is therefore vital that the Local Plan's economy policies affecting the area protect these spaces and sites and create conditions for their sustainable growth and hence job creation. Since all or most of these businesses are located within 500 meters of EJS, Policy E2 would be an invaluable driver for such growth which could play a major role in ensuring that Effingham Junction maintained and enhanced its position as East Horsley's "third centre" for homes and jobs. I OBJECT to the location for new employment floorspace (Policy E2)

I object to this policy. It would be more sensible to confine new office and research and development floor space to the urban Guildford area. I also oppose the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm. No exceptional circumstances, as defined under the NPPF, have been advanced to justify incursion into this permanent and high-quality area of Green Belt.

Proposals for new industrial, warehousing and storage (use Class B1c, B2, and B8) floorspace will be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites.
There is no need for the new employment floorspace to be located at Garlick’s Arch or Gosden Hill Farm, when near to these sites at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

I object to policy E2 location for new employment floor space I object to the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm and I do not believe there are exceptional circumstances to justify incursion into this permanent and high quality area of Green BelThe Surrey Research Park currently extends to 65,000 sq m. There is already granted consent to expand to a further 9,000 sq m (14%). The past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 based on ELNA 2015 derived from VoA analysis. The ELNA 2015 calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7%. The data point for our analysis is today in 2016 so we have 17 years to go to the end of the plan period. The necessary growth in floor space over the plan period is therefore 17 years x 0.7% = 11.9%. There is currently 14% expansion space already available. The proposal by GBC to expand the 65,000 sq m by 9,000 sq m (existing allocation) with an additional 35,000 sq m amounts to an increase of 67% of the Research Park which is not required. The Research Park is currently developed at a density of 25% plot ratio. The majority of existing buildings are 2 stories giving a developed floor space plot ratio of 12.5%. The existing Research Park has the opportunity to markedly increase its density without infringing any Green Belt land nearby. Any density increase would be cost effective for the use of all existing infrastructure and would also have the potential to match the existing densities of existing academic buildings on the university campus which are three to four times higher. Together with the existing expansion of 14% through existing consents and the opportunity to increase its density the Research Park has ample capacity to expand to embrace new demand for B1b uses linked to the university. A preferred location for increased B1a and B1b space would be in the Town Centre close to housing and a convenient transport hub.

My comments relate to Horsley and Effingham Junction Stations.

Effingham Junction station is an interchange as it connects local buses and two train lines. Whilst its usage is lower than that of Horsley, according to the National Passenger Survey numbers and the number of Season Tickets originating at the station, it is well used by the population of Bookham and Effingham and it is within 0.5km of its own parade of shops including a Dental Surgery and a Goods Yard for special purpose railway equipment. It is also used by three local paintball facilities and by staff and others accessing the Drift Golf Club. It does not seem to reflect conjoined thinking if you are planning 2000 homes at Wisley and then not considering its nearest local station as an interchange. If that development should occur then it clearly will be.
Horsley is an interchange and we note the plans for further development at Ockham Road North and also in West Horsley. Some consideration should be given to the needs of the Parish in defining how this interchange is developed in the future.

Policy E2 (1) and 4.4.14 give priority to the town centre, but this is not reflected in site allocations. It should be, for example as regards the station site and North Street. The issue is discussed in 4.4.22 but is not resolved.

Policy E2 (2) should continue to include reference to the Research Park (Policy E4) because of its importance to the Borough.

1. POLICY E2

I OBJECT to the location for new employment floorspace (Policy E2)

I object to this policy. It would be more sensible to confine new office and research and development floor space to the urban Guildford area. I also oppose the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm. No exceptional circumstances, as defined under the NPPF, have been advanced to justify incursion into this permanent and high-quality area of Green Belt.

Proposals for new industrial, warehousing and storage (use Class B1c, B2 and B8) floorspace will be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites.

There is no need for the new employment floorspace to be located at Garlick’s Arch or Gosden Hill Farm, when near to these sites at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m.

I object to the employment strategy and impact at Garlick’s Arch (A43) (Policies E2 and E5)

There is no need for new industrial sites at Garlick’s Arch (A43). There is an existing brownfield industrial site at Burnt Common that could easily accommodate the 7,000 sq m proposed. That site was removed from the Plan without any reasoning. In addition there was discussion of more at Slyfield rather than around Burnt Common.
Furthermore the development at Garlick’s Arch would result in the loss of four existing successful rural businesses, which have been here for decades employing local people and are therefore clearly sustainable. If this plan were to go ahead would the GBC sufficiently help these businesses to move into suitable local alternatives?

• The council plans for the town and employment (E1 & E2) take no account of modern trends highlighted in previous consultations. The public seem better informed than the council and its consultants about these. The council want to waste space with low-value and land-hungry enterprises, such as warehouses, that employ few people and just add to heavy traffic, ignoring Guildford’s comparative economic advantages of a well-educated labour force and location for high-value businesses, which will therefore go elsewhere. They also want to fill the town with shops, ignoring the general global trend away from town-centre shopping and the opportunity to regenerate the decaying town centre with low-cost housing, as has happened in central London. The plan fails to make any arguments for putting commercial development instead on green-field sites such as Burnt Common, which is introduced for the first time in this version of the plan without any supporting rationale.

I object to the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm and I do not believe there are exceptional circumstances to justify incursion into this permanent and high-quality area of Green Belt.

The Surrey Research Park currently extends to 65,000 sq m. There is already granted consent to expand to a further 9,000 sq m (14%) The past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 based on ELNA 2015 derived from VoA analysis. The ELNA 2015 calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7%. The data point for our analysis is today in 2016 so we have 17 years to go to the end of the plan period. The necessary growth in floor space over the plan period is therefore 17 years x 0.7% = 11.9%. There is currently 14% expansion space already available.

The proposal by GBC to expand the 65,000 sq m by 9,000 sq m (existing allocation) with an additional 35,000 sq m amounts to an increase of 67% of the Research Park which is not required. The Research Park is currently developed at a density of 25% plot ratio. The majority of existing buildings are 2 stories giving a developed floor space plot ratio of 12.5%. The existing Research Park has the opportunity to markedly increase its density without infringing any Green Belt land nearby. Any density increase would be cost effective for the use of all existing infrastructure and would also have the potential to match the existing densities of existing academic buildings on the university campus which are three to four times higher. Together with the existing expansion of 14% through existing consents and the opportunity to increase its density the Research Park has ample capacity to expand to embrace new demand for B1b uses linked to the university.

A preferred location for increased B1a and B1b space would be in the Town Centre close to housing and a convenient transport hub.

Walnut Tree Close and Woodbridge Meadows, in particular, should be given over to well-planned housing and the scattered light industrial provision should be relocated to an expanded Slyfield where infrastructure and communications would be better.

D OBJECTION TO POLICY E2: LOCATION OF NEW EMPLOYMENT FLOORSPACE

43. The objectives of Policy E2 are inconsistent with the objectives of Policy E In relation to Locally Significant Employment Sites, Policy E1 (as drafted, not what is proposed above) says:

"The Locally Significant Employment Sites will be protected and within these sites changes of use to non-employment uses resisted. The retention and regeneration of these sites is encouraged and intensification where possible will be considered to be appropriate”.

There is therefore a clear indication in Policy E1 that regeneration is encouraged and intensification - where possible - considered to be appropriate.

44. This contrasts with the phraseology of Policy E2 which directs intensification and expansion to strategic sites and where only 200sqm of additional floorspace (an entirely arbitrary and unexplained figure) would constrain the expansion/intensification of Locally Significant Employment Sites Moreover, the policy goes on to say:

"The expansion of existing offices in locations outside town centres and Strategic Employment Sites should be limited and any development not limited in scale is to be directed to sequentially preferable locations”.

45. These sentiments clearly do not align with the Policy support given in Policy E2 is then contradicted with its reasoned justification as expressed at para 4.4.23:

"To ensure the supply of premises is suitable for modern business needs, renewal including redevelopment of existing offices is encouraged.”

46. An informed reader is therefore left with contradictory policy statements as to how a specific site should be considered. In particular, the arbitrary limit of increases in floor area of 200 sqm should be deleted. That figure may be appropriate for a small employment site but is a totally unrealistic figure when assessing the needs of a site such as Send Business Centre with over 8000 sqm existing floorspace. Accordingly, Policy E2 should be re-casted to take account of the anomalies identified above.

We are concerned with the inference given in Policy E2 that there will be some form of ‘sequential test’ in considering proposals for employment development on designated Strategic Employment Sites (unless it is for development of less than 200sqm). This is at odds with other parts of the Employment policies. If otherwise acceptable proposals come forward on a Strategic Employment Site, why should such proposals need to be ‘sequentially tested’?

For example, Send Business Centre provides for the creation and development of small and local businesses by encouraging a range of types and sizes of new premises including incubator units, managed workspace and serviced office accommodation – precisely the type of business accommodation identified under Policy E1(3) that the Plan says: ‘will be supported’.

Similarly, Policy E5(1)(a) says the sustainable growth and expansion of all types of business and enterprise in rural areas will be supported, through inter alia provision of well-designed new buildings of appropriate scale, provided they are in accordance with (where relevant, green belt policy) and other policies in the plan.

Furthermore, it is noted that Industrial, warehousing and storage development is not ‘sequentially tested’. (see Policy E2(5).

We believe that if employment proposals otherwise meet with other policies in the Plan, then there is no need to sequentially test employment development on Strategic Employment Sites.

POLICY E2 - Location for new employment floorspace

I OBJECT . It would be more sensible to confine all new office and research and development (use Class B1a and B1b) floor space to Guildford town centre. I oppose the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm (see my reference to “regulatory capture” of local public policy by the University, Policy H1, above). No exceptional circumstances, as defined under the NPPF, have been advanced to justify incursion into this permanent and high-quality area of Green Belt.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
POLICY E2: Location for new employment floorspace

Under this policy, areas within 500 meters of a "public transport interchange" play a key role.

Proposals for new office and research and development floorspace are to be directed to firstly Guildford town centre and then to areas within 500 meters of a public transport interchange ("PTI").

East Horsley has two railway stations, Horsley Station and Effingham Junction Station, but currently the draft Local Plan only proposes that Horsley Station should have PTI status.

The explanation given at 4.4.17 for Effingham Junction Station ("EJS") not enjoying this status is that either it is located within the Green Belt, or it is within an AONB or it is isolated away from the village or centre. It is not clear which of these applies to this particular station, but we believe strongly that none apply and that there is a strong case for EJS deserving PTI status in the same way as Horsley Station.

I will deal firstly with the three alternative reasons given for EJS not supposedly qualifying as a PTI.

Firstly there is the Green Belt aspect. This is not logical since if location within the Green Belt were determinative, this would mean that Horsley Station would also fail to gain PTI status.

Also the draft Local Plan proposes elsewhere at Policy P2 that the whole of East Horsley, including both Horsley Station and EJS, should be inset from the Green Belt. It will be seen elsewhere in these comments that I object strongly to this proposal, but the point remains that if location within the Green Belt were a valid reason for not being given PTI status, the Local Plan itself makes it clear that under Policy P2 this will not apply in the case of both Horsley Station and EJS.

Secondly EJS is not located in an AONB. EJS is within the envelope of the village settlement and will remain as such under the draft Local Plan.

Thirdly EJS is not "isolated" or "away from the village centre."

Effingham Junction (the area immediately south and west of EJS, served by respectively Forest Road south of the railway bridge and Old Lane) may not have the extensive shopping parades enjoyed by East Horsley's two other centres (Station Parade and Bishopsmead Parade) but it is a thriving community with a significant population and also a significant number of active and successful employment floorspaces and sites.

These include in Forest Road a general store (Forest Road General Store), a car sales and car repair business (PJB Car Sales/The Body Shop), a dental health centre and chiropractic clinic (Mortiboys) and on Horsley Road, Cedar Garden Centre, Royce Turf and Irrigation and at the Newmarsh Farm site, a number of businesses including Richmonds Horse Transport, Braye Hydraulic Repairs and TTS Surfacing Ltd.

It is therefore vital that the Local Plan's economy policies affecting the area protect these spaces and sites and create conditions for their sustainable growth and hence job creation.

Since all or most of these businesses are located within 500 meters of EJS, Policy E2 would be an invaluable driver for such growth which could play a major role in ensuring that Effingham Junction maintained and enhanced its position as East Horsley's "third centre" for homes and jobs. On the other hand, to exclude EJS from PTI status could very well stifle its sustainable development and condemn it to a future as a dormitory "backwater" of East Horsley.

It is also counter-intuitive in the extreme to refuse EJS "PTI" status. This is for the simple reason that EJS is clearly a "public transport interchange" as that term would be normally understood. This is for the following reasons:

1. As the name "Effingham Junction" indicates, EJS is at an important junction and interchange. The railway line from Guildford splits here into two lines which take different routes into London, so many London-bound passengers will change trains here;
2. EJS serves not only the Effingham Junction area, but also the many residents of Effingham and Little Bookham for whom EJS is far closer than Bookham Station;
3. EJS also serves the many residents of the Cobham area for whom EJS is far closer than Cobham and Stoke d'Abernon station EJS also serves the residents of Ockham and Ripley;
4. EJS also serves the considerable numbers who visit local leisure activity sites, including three paintball sites and two clay pigeon shooting sites, for whom EJS is the only viable public transport hub; and
5. EJS will be the nearest railway station to the land at the former Wisley Airfield site which is proposed for the building of 2000 homes under Policy A35 of the draft Local Plan and if, despite the objections of many including East Horsley Parish Council, this proceeds, then significant numbers of residents will be taking one form of travel to EJS and then interchanging onto the railway.

I accordingly OBJECT to Policy E2 insofar as it fails to confer "public transport interchange" status on Effingham Junction Station.

I object to the location for new employment floorspace at Garlick’s Arch - Site A43 (Policy E2)

Proposals for new industrial, warehousing and storage (use Class B1c, B2 and B8) floorspace will be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites.

There is no need for the new employment floorspace to be located at Garlick’s Arch, when just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m.

We object to policy E2 location for new employment floor space. We object to the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm and I do not believe there are exceptional circumstances to justify incursion into this permanent and high quality area of Green Belt. The Surrey Research Park currently extends to 65,000 sq m. There is already granted consent to expand to a further 9,000 sq m (14%) The past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 based on ELNA 2015 derived from VoA analysis. The ELNA 2015 calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7%. The data point for our analysis is today in 2016 so we have 17 years to go to the end of the plan period. The necessary growth in floor space over the plan period is... therefore 17 years x 0.7% = 11.9%. There is currently 14% expansion space already available. The proposal by GBC to expand the 65,000 sq m by 9,000 sq m (existing allocation) with an additional 35,000 sq m amounts to an increase of 67% of the Research Park which is not required. The Research Park is currently developed at a density of 25% plot ratio. The majority of existing buildings are 2 stories giving a developed floor space plot ratio of 12.5%. The existing Research Park has the opportunity to markedly increase its density without infringing any Green Belt land nearby. Any density increase would be cost effective for the use of all existing infrastructure and would also have the potential to match the existing densities of existing academic buildings on the university campus which are three to four times higher. Together with the existing expansion of 14% through existing consents and the opportunity to increase its density the Research Park has ample capacity to expand to embrace new demand for B1b uses linked to the university. A preferred location for increased B1a and B1b space would be in the Town Centre close to housing and a convenient transport hub.

We object to this policy.

It would be more sensible to confine new office and research and development floor space to the urban Guildford area. We also oppose the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm. Under this policy, areas within 500 meters of a "public transport interchange" play a key role.

Proposals for new office and research and development floorspace are to be directed to firstly Guildford town centre and then to areas within 500 meters of a public transport interchange ("PTI").

East Horsley has two railway stations, Horsley Station and Effingham Junction Station, but currently the draft Local Plan only proposes that Horsley Station should have PTI status.

The explanation given at 4.4.17 for Effingham Junction Station ("EJS") not enjoying this status is that either it is located within the Green Belt, or it is within an AONB or it is isolated away from the village or centre. It is not clear which of these applies to this particular station, but we believe strongly that none apply and that there is a strong case for EJS deserving PTI status in the same way as Horsley Station.
I will deal firstly with the three alternative reasons given for EJS not supposedly qualifying as a PTI.

Firstly there is the Green Belt aspect. This is not logical since if location within the Green Belt were determinative, this would mean that Horsley Station would also fail to gain PTI status.

Also the draft Local Plan proposes elsewhere at Policy P2 that the whole of East Horsley, including both Horsley Station and EJS, should be inset from the Green Belt. It will be seen elsewhere in these comments that I object strongly to this proposal, but the point remains that if location within the Green Belt were a valid reason for not being given PTI status, the Local Plan itself makes it clear that under Policy P2 this will not apply in the case of both Horsley Station and EJS.

Secondly EJS is not located in an AONB. EJS is within the envelope of the village settlement and will remain as such under the draft Local Plan.

Thirdly EJS is not "isolated" or "away from the village centre."

Effingham Junction (the area immediately south and west of EJS, served by respectively Forest Road south of the railway bridge and Old Lane) may not have the extensive shopping parades enjoyed by East Horsley's two other centres (Station Parade and Bishopsmead Parade) but it is a thriving community with a significant population and also a significant number of active and successful employment floorspaces and sites.

These include in Forest Road a general store (Forest Road General Store), a car sales and repair business (PJB Car Sales/The Body Shop), a dental health centre and chiropractic clinic (Mortiboys) and on Horsley Road, Cedar Garden Centre, Royce Turf and Irrigation and at the Newmarsh Farm site, a number of businesses including Richmonds Horse Transport, Braye Hydraulic Repairs and TIS Surfacing Ltd.

It is therefore vital that the Local Plan's economy policies affecting the area protect these spaces and sites and create conditions for their sustainable growth and hence job creation.

Since all or most of these businesses are located within 500 meters of EJS, Policy E2 would be an invaluable driver for such growth which could play a major role in ensuring that Effingham Junction maintained and enhanced its position as East Horsley's "third centre" for homes and jobs. On the other hand, to exclude EJS from PTI status could very well stifle its sustainable development and condemn it to a future as a dormitory "backwater" of East Horsley.

It is also counter-intuitive in the extreme to refuse EJS "PTI" status. This is for the simple reason that EJS is clearly a "public transport interchange" as that term would be normally understood. This is for the following reasons:

- as the name "Effingham Junction" indicates, EJS is at an important junction and The railway line from Guildford splits here into two lines which take different routes into London, so many London-bound passengers will change trains here;

EJS serves not only the Effingham Junction area, but also the many residents of Effingham and Little Bookham for whom EJS is far closer than Bookham Station;

- EJS also serves the many residents of the Cobham area for whom EJS is far closer than Cobham and Stoke d'Abernon station EJS also serves the residents of Ockham and Ripley;
• EJS also serves the considerable numbers who visit local leisure activity sites, including three paintball sites and two clay pigeon shooting sites, for whom EJS is the only viable public transport hub; and

• EJS will be the nearest railway station to the land at the former Wisley Airfield site which is proposed for the building of 2000 homes under Policy A35 of the draft Local Plan and if, despite the objections of many including East Horsley Parish Council, this proceeds, then significant numbers of residents will be taking one form of travel to EJS and then interchanging onto the railway.

I accordingly OBJECT to Policy El insofar as it fails to confer "public transport interchange " status on Effingham Junction Station.

4.4.23a A potential site for a Waste Management Facility is mentioned (tucked away in the hope that it will not be noticed?). It is hardly a sensible option to plan to build so many houses and then put a Waste Disposal Site so close. With even the best of intentions these sites smell (especially in hot weather and with global warming happening, we are promised more heat) and to place them in residential areas is not reasoned. It would also be within 'striking distance' of the RHS Wisley - a world renowned enterprise - which would be highly sensitive to any malfunction of a waste disposal unit.

It is not worth the risk of the possible damage to people's physical and mental health to use this site.

It seems that far from taking into consideration the responses of the communities to the original local plan you have perversely altered the plan to build even more housing and industrial development.

Policies E1,E2,E5: I object to.

The first two fly in the face of the fact that a Brown Field site already exists to the south of Burnt Common, yet the GB site is recommended to be used for a mix of warehousing, light industrial and general industrial for sustainable employment, next to what is also proposed as a residential site? The latter is still not necessary IMO and it follows that the former is not either; why? Because it can be housed along with over 100 houses if necessary, on the BF site referred to above. So why create an unnecessary strategic employment site on GB, when a BF site exists nearby to accommodate this growth?

It has to be noted further, that the development of Garlick’s Arch would result in the loss of 4 established businesses employing dozens of local people; so IMO this policy is not working in this instance, it is destructive and wasteful as opposed to economic and productive. This is a direct contradiction of the aim of policy E1; again bizarre?

12. I object to the employment strategy and impact at Garlick’s Arch (A43) (Policies E2 and E5)

There is no requirement for a new industrial site at Garlick’s Arch (A43). There is an existing brownfield industrial site at Burnt Common that could easily accommodate the 7,000 sq m proposed. That site was removed from the Plan without any reasoned argument or consultation.

Furthermore the development at Garlick’s Arch would result in the loss of four existing successful rural businesses, which have been on site for many decades employing local people and are therefore clearly sustainable. These businesses do not wish to relocate to new premises.

Proposals for new industrial, warehousing and storage (use Class B1c, B2 and B8) floorspace will be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites.

There is no need for the new employment floorspace to be located at Garlick’s Arch or Gosden Hill Farm, when near to these sites at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m.

1. I object to the employment strategy and impact at Garlick's Arch (A43) (Policies E2 and E5)

   There is no need for new industrial sites at Garlick's Arch (A43). There is an existing brownfield industrial site at Burnt Common that could easily accommodate the 7,000 sq m proposed. That site was removed from the Plan without any reasoning.

   Furthermore the development at Garlick's Arch would result in the loss of four existing successful rural businesses, which have been for there decades employing local people and are therefore clearly sustainable.

   I OBJECT to the location for new employment floorspace (Policy E2)

   I object to this policy. It would be more sensible to confine new office and research and development floor space to the urban Guildford area. I also oppose the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm. No exceptional circumstances, as defined under the NPPF, have been advanced to justify incursion into this permanent and high-quality area of Green Belt.

I object to this policy. It would be more sensible to confine new office and research and development floor space to the urban Guildford area. I also oppose the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm. No exceptional circumstances, as defined under the NPPF, have been advanced to justify incursion into this permanent and high-quality area of Green Belt.

Proposals for new industrial, warehousing and storage (use Class B1c, B2 and B8) floorspace will be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites.

There is no need for the new employment floorspace to be located at Garlick’s Arch or Gosden Hill Farm, when near to these sites at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Under this policy, areas within 500 meters of a "public transport interchange" play a key role.

Proposals for new office and research and development floorspace are to be directed to firstly Guildford town centre and then to areas within 500 meters of a public transport interchange ("PTI").

East Horsley has two railway stations, Horsley Station and Effingham Junction Station, but currently the draft Local Plan only proposes that Horsley Station should have PTI status.

The explanation given at 4.4.17 for Effingham Junction Station ("EJS") not enjoying this status is that either it is located within the Green Belt, or it is within an AONB or it is isolated away from the village or centre. It is not clear which of these applies to this particular station, but we believe strongly that none apply and that there is a strong case for EJS deserving PTI status in the same way as Horsley Station.

I will deal firstly with the three alternative reasons given for EJS not supposedly qualifying as a PTI.

Firstly there is the Green Belt aspect. This is not logical since if location within the Green Belt were determinative, this would mean that Horsley Station would also fail to gain PTI status.

Also the draft Local Plan proposes elsewhere at Policy P2 that the whole of East Horsley, including both Horsley Station and EJS, should be inset from the Green Belt. It will be seen elsewhere in these comments that I object strongly to this proposal, but the point remains that if location within the Green Belt were a valid reason for not being given PTI status, the Local Plan itself makes it clear that under Policy P2 this will not apply in the case of both Horsley Station and EJS.

Secondly EJS is not located in an AONB. EJS is within the envelope of the village settlement and will remain as such under the draft Local Plan.

Thirdly EJS is not "isolated" or "away from the village centre."

Effingham Junction (the area immediately south and west of EJS, served by respectively Forest Road south of the railway bridge and Old Lane) may not have the extensive shopping parades enjoyed by East Horsley's two other centres (Station Parade and Bishopsmead Parade) but it is a thriving community with a significant population and also a significant number of active and successful employment floorspaces and sites.

These include in Forest Road a general store (Forest Road General Store), a car sales and car repair business (PJB Car Sales/The Body Shop), a dental health centre and chiropractic clinic (Mortiboys) and on Horsley Road, Cedar Garden Centre, Royce Turf and Irrigation and at the Newmarsh Farm site, a number of businesses including Richmonds Horse Transport, Braye Hydraulic Repairs and TTS Surfacing Ltd.

It is therefore vital that the Local Plan's economy policies affecting the area protect these spaces and sites and create conditions for their sustainable growth and hence job creation.

Since all or most of these businesses are located within 500 meters of EJS, Policy E2 would be an invaluable driver for such growth which could play a major role in ensuring that Effingham Junction maintained and enhanced its position as East Horsley's "third centre" for homes and jobs. On the other hand, to exclude EJS from PTI status could very well stifle its sustainable development and condemn it to a future as a dormitory "backwater" of East Horsley.

It is also counter-intuitive in the extreme to refuse EJS "PTI" status. This is for the simple reason that EJS is clearly a "public transport interchange" as that term would be normally understood. This is for the following reasons:

• as the name "Effingham Junction" indicates, EJS is at an important junction and interchange. The railway line from Guildford splits here into two lines which take different routes into London, so many London-bound passengers will change trains here;

• EJS serves not only the Effingham Junction area, but also the many residents of Effingham and Little Bookham for whom EJS is far closer than Bookham Station;

• EJS also serves the many residents of the Cobham area for whom EJS is far closer than Cobham and Stoke d'Abernon station EJS also serves the residents of Ockham and Ripley;

• EJS also serves the considerable numbers who visit local leisure activity sites, including three paintball sites and two clay pigeon shooting sites, for whom EJS is the only viable public transport hub; and
• EJS will be the nearest railway station to the land at the former Wisley Airfield site which is proposed for the building of 2000 homes under Policy A35 of the draft Local Plan and if, despite the objections of many including East Horsley Parish Council, this proceeds, then significant numbers of residents will be taking one form of travel to EJS and then interchanging onto the

I object to Policy E2 insofar as it fails to confer “public transport interchange” status on Effingham Junction Station.

I object to the employment strategy and impact at Garlick’s Arch (A43) (Policies E2 and E5)
There is no need for new industrial sites at Garlick’s Arch (A43). There is an existing brownfield industrial site at Burnt Common that could easily accommodate the 7,000 sq m proposed. That site was removed from the Plan without any reasoning.

Furthermore the development at Garlick’s Arch would result in the loss of four existing successful rural businesses, which have been for there decades

6. I OBJECT to the location for new employment floorspace at Garlick’s Arch – Site A43 (Policy E2).

Proposals for new industrial, warehousing and storage (use Class B1c, B2 and B8) floorspace will be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites.

There is no need for the new employment floorspace to be located at Garlick’s Arch, when just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m.

I OBJECT to the location for new employment floorspace (Policy E2)

I object to this policy. It would be more sensible to confine new office and research and development floor space to the urban Guildford area. I also oppose the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm. No exceptional circumstances, as defined under the NPPF, have been advanced to justify incursion into this permanent and high-quality area of Green Belt.

Proposals for new industrial, warehousing and storage (use Class B1c, B2 and B8) floorspace will be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites.

There is no need for the new employment floorspace to be located at Garlick’s Arch or Gosden Hill Farm, when near to these sites at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m.

I OBJECT due to the congestion that development will cause to the trunk roads, A3/M25 (Policy I2)

I object to this policy as it is too vague and optimistic. Significant improvements to the road infrastructure are like to be many years away even if they ever happen. The draft plan, however, commits to building massive housing estates in the countryside before any of these road improvements are in place. This is inappropriate and will lead to massive traffic disruption during the construction phase and will add permanently to an already congested network (about 3,000 private cars from the 2,100 new homes at Wisley Airfield alone). Road infrastructure represents a major constraint that should have been applied to the housing target at a much earlier stage in the plan process and not left as an unresolved difficulty in the draft plan.

There is no certainty that either the A3 or M25 in the borough will be improved to increase capacity and reduce congestion during the Plan period. Highways England has no plans to even examine improving the A3 before 2020. I have considerable concerns that development of the large residential sites identified at Wisley Airfield (A35), Garlick’s Arch (A43) and Gosden Hill (A25), will take place before any improvements are made to the trunk road network. The A3
& M25 are already at capacity during peak hours and any development prior to improvement of these roads will only make the situations worse.

POLICY E2: LOCATION OF EMPLOYMENT FLOORSPACE

I object to policy E2 location for new employment floor space.

I object to the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm and I do not believe there are exceptional circumstances to justify incursion into this permanent and high quality area of Green Belt.

The Surrey Research Park currently extends to 65,000 sq m. There is already granted consent to expand to a further 9,000 sq m (14%).

The ELNA 2015 calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7%.

The data point for our analysis is today in 2016 so we have 17 years to go to the end of the plan period. The necessary growth in floor space over the plan period is therefore 17 years x 0.7% = 11.9%.

There is currently 14% expansion space already available.

The proposal by GBC to expand the 65,000 sq m by 9,000 sq m (existing allocation) with an additional 35,000 sq m amounts to an increase of 67% of the Research Park which is not required.

The Research Park is currently developed at a density of 25% plot ratio. The majority of existing buildings are 2 stories giving a developed floor space plot ratio of 12.5%.

The existing Research Park has the opportunity to markedly increase its density without infringing any Green Belt land nearby. Any density increase would be cost effective for the use of all existing infrastructure and would also have the potential to match the existing densities of existing academic buildings on the university campus which are three to four times higher.
Together with the existing expansion of 14% through existing consents and the opportunity to increase its density the Research Park has ample capacity to expand to embrace new demand for B1b uses linked to the university.

Policy E2

“The NPPF requires planning authorities to plan proactively to meet the development needs of business and support an economy fit for the 21st century. Paragraph 21 requires the Council to “support existing business sectors” and to “plan positively for the location, promotion and expansion of clusters or networks of knowledge driven, creative or high technology industries”. This has already been done. It needs to go no futher. Just because there is a demand from profit-motivated organisations does not mean that the public sector has to respond – i.e. give way. The identified need at the University is for student accommodation. The land being sought for research development should be set aside for that accommodation and thereby ease the pressure on the Green Belt.

But believe that Policy E2 “Location for new employment floorspace” fails to realise that Guildford Town Centre is relatively insignificant in economic value added terms. The University Quarter provides three times as much economic gross value added as the Town Centre yet is prejudiced by this policy.

I OBJECT to the location for new employment floorspace (Policy E2)

I object to this policy. It would be more sensible to confine new office and research and development floor space to the urban Guildford area. I also oppose the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm. No exceptional circumstances, as defined under the NPPF, have been advanced to justify incursion into this permanent and high-quality area of Green Belt.

Proposals for new industrial, warehousing and storage (use Class B1c, B2 and B8) floorspace will be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites.

There is no need for the new employment floorspace to be located at Garlick’s Arch or Gosden Hill Farm, when near to these sites at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m.

I object to policy E2 location for new employment floor space I object to the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm and I do not believe there are exceptional circumstances to justify incursion into this permanent and high quality area of Green BelThe Surrey Research Park currently extends to 65,000 sq m. There is already granted consent to expand to a further 9,000 sq m (14%)The past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 based on ELNA 2015 derived from VoA analysis.The ELNA 2015 calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7%.The data point for our analysis is today in 2016 so we have 17 years to go to the end of the plan period. The necessary growth in floor space over the plan period is therefore 17 years x 0.7% = 11.9%.There is currently 14% expansion space already available.The proposal by GBC to expand the 65,000 sq m by 9,000 sq m (existing allocation) with an additional 35,000 sq m amounts to an increase of 67% of the Research Park which is not required.The Research Park is currently developed at a density of 25% plot ratio. The majority of existing buildings are 2 stories giving a developed floor space plot ratio of 12.5%. The existing Research Park has the opportunity to markedly increase its density without infringing any Green Belt land nearby. Any density increase would be cost effective for the use of all existing infrastructure and would also have the potential to match the existing densities of existing academic buildings on the university campus which are three to four times higher. Together with the existing expansion of 14% through existing consents and the opportunity to increase its density the Research Park has ample capacity to expand to embrace new demand for B1b uses linked to the university. A preferred location for increased B1a and B1b space would be in the Town Centre close to housing and a convenient transport hub

I object to the employment strategy and impact at Garlick’s Arch (A43) (Policies E2 and E5)

There is no need for new industrial sites at Garlick’s Arch (A43). There is an existing brownfield industrial site at Burnt Common that could easily accommodate the 7,000 sq m proposed. That site was removed from the Plan without any reasoning.

Furthermore the development at Garlick’s Arch would result in the loss of four existing successful rural businesses, which have been for there decades employing local people and are therefore clearly sustainable.

No exceptional circumstances, as defined under the NPPF, have been advanced to justify incursion into this permanent and high-quality area of Green Belt.

Proposals for new industrial, warehousing and storage (use Class B1c, B2 and B8) floorspace will be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites.

There is no need for the new employment floorspace to be located at Garlick’s Arch or Gosden Hill Farm, when near to these sites at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m.

Policy E2 - Location for New Employment Floor-space

I object to development in the rural areas of the Greenbelt when Guildford brownfield sites area available.

I object to policy E2 location for new employment floor space I object to the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm and I do not believe there are exceptional circumstances to justify incursion into this permanent and high quality area of Green Belt.

The Surrey Research Park currently extends to 65,000 sq m. There is already granted consent to expand to a further 9,000 sq m (14%) The past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 based on ELNA 2015 derived from Voa analysis. The ELNA 2015 calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7%. The data point for our analysis is today in 2016 so we have 17 years to go to the end of the plan period. The necessary growth in floor space over the plan period is therefore 17 years x 0.7% = 11.9%. There is currently 14% expansion space already available. The proposal by GBC to expand the 65,000 sq m by 9,000 sq m (existing allocation) with an additional 35,000 sq m amounts to an increase of 67% of the Research Park which is not required. The Research Park is currently developed at a density of 25% plot ratio. The majority of existing buildings are 2 stories giving a developed floor space plot ratio of 12.5%. The existing Research Park has the opportunity to markedly increase its density without infringing any Green Belt land nearby. Any density increase would be cost effective for the use of all existing infrastructure and would also have the potential to match the existing densities of existing academic buildings on the university campus which are three to four times higher. Together with the existing expansion of 14% through existing consents and the opportunity to increase its density the Research Park has ample capacity to expand to embrace new demand for B1a and B1b uses linked to the university. A preferred location for increased B1a and B1b space would be in the Town Centre close to housing and a convenient transport hub.

Economic Policies: Iam in support of Policy El "Sustainable employment” but believe that Policy E2 "Location for new employment floorspace” fails to realise that Guildford Town Centre is relatively insignificant in economic value added terms. The University Quarter provides three times as much economic gross value added as the Town Centre yet is prejudiced by this policy. I am supportive of Policy E4 "Surrey Research Park”, Policy ES "Rural Economy” and Policy E6 "The leisure and visitor experience” but caution that Policy E7 "Guildford Town Centre” could lead to overdevelopment of the Town Centre.

I object to the employment strategy and impact at Garlick’s Arch (A43) (Policies E2 and E5)

There is no need for new industrial sites at Garlick’s Arch (A43). There is an existing brownfield industrial site at Burnt Common that could easily accommodate the 7,000 sq m proposed. That site was removed from the Plan without any reasoning.

Furthermore the development at Garlick’s Arch would result in the loss of four existing successful rural businesses, which have been for there decades employing local people and are therefore clearly sustainable.

1.  Policy E1, E2: employment land

I OBJECT that too much land in the urban centre in the revised Plan is allocated for retail or commercial use. Too much of that, in turn, is designated for land-hungry retail of low-value-added commercial floorspace such as warehousing. This will:

- Discourage the building of much-needed housing (especially low-cost homes) in convenient locations (especially urban brownfield sites) in accordance with national trends and Government policy;
- Deter the promotion of high-value-added businesses more in keeping with the declared aims of the local authorities and Enterprise Partnership;
- Aggravate town-centre traffic problems and the current decay of independent high-street businesses that reflects a pronounced, national shift away from town-centre shopping towards online trade; and
- Encroach needlessly on the Green Belt at inappropriate sites such as Burnt Common.

Policy E2: Locations for new employment floorspace

This representation is made on behalf of BOC Limited who is a major employer both across the UK and within Guildford specifically as their UK headquarters are based on the Surrey Research Park.

BOC is strongly supportive of the general thrust of the plan and specifically welcome the designation of the Surrey Research Park (SRP) as a Strategic Employment Site under policy E1, the extension of SRP under policy E4 and the job targets set out across the other employment policies. These clearly reflect the evidence base (including the ELNA 2017) which confirms the importance of SRP to the local economy.

However, there are elements of Policy E2: locations of new employment floorspace which BOC are concerned are at risk of being found 'unsound'.

Whilst criterion (2) confirms that 'the sequential approach does not apply to proposed employment floorspace included in the Site allocations in the Local Plan', such as the extension to the SRP under policy E4 (A26), the policy as currently worded would require any site wide employment redevelopment proposals for existing Sites within the SRP to meet the sequential test.

BOC is concerned that this unnecessarily restricts the expansion and investment plans of those businesses already located on SRP, who are equally allocated within the proposed Strategic Employment Site under draft policy E2. This would be contrary to the NPPF, notably the following objectives:

1. -building a strong, competitive economy is a key policy objective and there is a clear commitment to ‘securing economic growth in order to create jobs and prosperity, building on the country’s inherent strengths’ (para 18 – 22);
2. -‘Planning should operate to encourage and not act as an impediment to sustainable growth’. (Para. 19);
3. -investment in business should not be ‘over-burdened by the combined requirements of planning policy expectations’ (para. 21); and,
4. -local planning authorities are expected to ‘support existing business sectors, taking account of whether they are expanding or contracting’, whilst ensuring that policies are ‘flexible enough to accommodate needs not anticipated in the plan and to allow for a rapid response to changes in economic circumstances’ (para. 21, bullet point 3).

BOC is also concerned at the definition of transport interchanges at paragraph 4.4.15 which limits the definition to ‘rail stations and bus stations within the urban areas or in close proximity to the district centres and Strategic Employment Sites.’ They are concerned that this definition has overlooked the combined public transport node of the Royal Surrey County Hospital, the SRP and the Manor Park Campus which are served by a combination of 11 bus services of which three run at least every 20 minutes in the AM peak including the following:

- route 5
- route 14
- route 17/17A
- route 26
- route 27
- route 36/37
- route 38
- route 520
- route 697
- route PT5

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
Policy changes sought:

BOC request that criterion 2 to policy E2 is amended to confirm that the sequential approach will not apply to proposals for the site wide redevelopment or intensification of existing employment premises within the defined strategic employment sites (including the SRP).

BOC request that the definition of public transport interchanges at paragraph 4.4.15 is amended to include the public transport node of the Royal Surrey County Hospital / Surrey Research Park / Manor Park Campus.

Land for Employment Use - E1, E2

Too much potential development land within the town centre is allocated for retail or commercial development instead of for housing. I object to this. It is not logical. It is against national trends and will serve to make the shortage of affordable housing and the appalling traffic and movement problems worse.

The Burnt Common site is not suited to heavy industry and it is in the Green Belt.

POLICY E2 - Location for new employment floorspace

3.33 The first part of policy E2 sets the sequential approach which needs to be followed to determine where new office and research & development floorspace will be located. Guildford town centre has given preference to areas within 500m of a transport interchange, and then to strategic employment sites.

3.34 The second part of policy E2 has been changed to now state that the sequential approach does not apply to proposed floorspace included in the site allocations in the Local Plan.

3.35 The inclusion of this part of the policy significantly undermines the overall strategy for the provision of floorspace in the borough. The addition of this wording is in direct contradiction to the first part of the policy which directs development to the town centre. It now demonstrates that there has been little rationale to including employment space on the strategic allocations other than to meet the need specified in policy E1.

3.36 Paragraph 4.416 within the definitions section of policy E2 states that:

When developed, the two new rail stations, Guildford East (Merrow) and Guildford West (Park Barn), will each be treated as a transport interchange.

3.37 GVG has considered the impact of Guildford West (Park Barn) being considered as a transport interchange. This would reinforce the rationale of GVG promoting the provision of high density, residential units on Woodbridge Meadows with provision of health, retail and leisure facilities alongside the amenity of the River Wey navigation. It is the most sustainable and arguably deliverable site in close proximity to the town centre where the freehold is mostly owned by the council. GVG identifies the ability to provide 1,300 dwellings at this location in addition to 5,000 sq m of other uses including retail, health care and sports facilities.

3.38 GVG has also considered the impact of the proposed Guildford East (Merrow) station being considered as a transport interchange. It supports this proposal as it enables access to employment both in the town centre and in the research park via the rail network (Guildford West). GVG notes careful phasing of rail station development, and associated rail services, is required to bring the infrastructure into operation before housing and commercial space is made available in large quantities.

3.39 Whilst Woodbridge Meadows is zoned for Employment Uses in the Plan, there is no specific allocation or strategic site. This is despite the freeholds being in the Council’s ownership significant amounts of land being vacant or underused and the need for a comprehensive flood protection scheme to hold water upstream of the constraint caused by the 1930s A25 Guildford Bypass southbound bridge which is low over the river.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Attached documents:
1. In Policy E1, E2 there is too much emphasis on providing retail and commercial premises in Guildford town centre, when the pattern of business is changing and more town centre housing is needed. This would ease the pressure on housing on the Green Belt.

This states that GBC would maintain employment capacity and improve employment floor space. As stated above, this is not catered for in the B1c, B2 & B8 categories. Policy E3 strengthens retention of employment land, but the loss of Kernel Court to residential flies in the face of this new Policy. This is notwithstanding that the Policy against loss of employment land is undertaken on a sequential test; i.e. those closest to the town are protected most. Kernal Court is on the border with the town centre and close to the major transport interchange of the railway station.

There has been no attempt to market the site for employment purposes, nor to offer the premises to the tenant who wishes to remain.

The site is in a sustainable position allowing the employer to recruit staff using public transport.

I trust that the above comments will be taken into account when considering changes to The Local Plan.

Para 4.4.25 states that the Policy "seeks to protect floor space to accommodate existing and future demand". This is contrary to many of the proposals to take employment sites away in the town centre and examples such as Broadford Park at Shalford.

Within Policy E3, any change of use on a strategic employment site has to be backed up by marketing "for a continuous period of least two years". This effectively is discretionary by virtue of the words "at least". The Borough Council are, therefore, in total control, whether this is 3, 4 or indeed 5 years or indeed even more. We suggest that the words "at least" should be removed.

In relation to locally significant employment sites, the same comments apply, where there is a requirement for at least 18 months and in relation to general floor space again the words "at least" should be removed.

The penultimate paragraph in the greyed out section of Policy E3, reference is made to "once the period of comprehensive and active marketing is achieved, any other suitable employment use should be considered before change of use to residential or other use will be permitted".

We are advised by Guildford Borough Council that the definition of employment use is specific and limited to B1(a), B1(b), B1(c), B2 & B8. In reality, therefore, there are no other suitable employment uses.

However, this is an area in which we have highlighted a serious practical concern over the Local Plan. In reality, there are multiple Planning Applications each year for sui generis uses which, by definition, fall outside the definition of employment land and examples of which include all of the car showrooms located on the Slyfield Industrial Estate. A warehousing building on the Slyfield Industrial Estate would need at least 2 years' marketing, could be 3, could be 4, could be 5 and could be 10, depending on an individual Planning Officer's view. There is no specific allocation for sui generis uses in the Local Plan and yet they typically come from employment land and typically employ large numbers of people. Their loss from their technical use of employment land to the sui generis use, does not, in our view, create issues. The buildings are likely to be capable of re-use for alternative employment uses in the future and this requires to be dealt with under the Local Plan.

Similarly, the Borough has always accepted the importance of the leisure industry. There are numerous buildings which are dedicated to health and fitness and entertainment, which have come from previous employment uses. Examples of these include the Borough Council's own building in Midleton Road, which is now a trampolining centre, the Rock Climb on Cobbett Park on the Slyfield Industrial Estate, the gymnastics facility at Pew Corner on the Portsmouth Road and various private fitness gyms and pilates premises in the town centre. In a world where obesity is described as a huge problem, these facilities should be actively encouraged and specific provision made for a change of use from employment land. Other examples include The Guildford School of Acting and PPA (Performance Preparation Academy), both of whom employ large numbers of people and the provision of which is regarded as good for the Borough.

Further examples would include medical uses, which we have seen on the Research Park and which surely must be an increasingly important part of the UK's future. There is no specific allocation of land for these uses and they will occur on an ad hoc basis, but will need to be derived from employment land. Again, large numbers of people are employed in such facilities and they have to be regarded as good for the town. Why, therefore, is the Local Plan lacking in consideration of such matters?

There seems to be a desire for Guildford to aim for higher added value jobs. On paper, this is fine, but you do not have the tools within this Local Plan to facilitate that.

Within the Guildford Business Forum, we believe that the UK following the vote to leave the European Union must be flexible and adaptable and buildings and land should not remain empty whilst owners seek tenants that may not exist when demand for other uses that will employ people does exist. How can this possibly be in the interests of the Borough and critically, the residents within this Borough? The use categories do not reflect fully the world we live in and do not have the flexibility to cater for not only today's real world uses, but also future uses.

Para 4.4.27

In relation to evidence of active marketing, there is a requirement to offer premises at a competitive rate and a reasonable market rate. Who is to decide what is competitive and what is a reasonable market rate? The Borough should also bear in mind that owners of buildings will very often have mortgages where the lender's view and the Borough's view may be at odds.

There is also a requirement to demonstrate that there has been flexibility in space offered, including dividing up larger areas of floor space where this is possible and making alternative layouts. If you take Guildford Borough Council's own building at Midleton Road, which was let to a non employment use by the Borough, this would have required them to divide this space up, to let off offices separately at the front of the building. The Policy goes even further advising that Guildford Borough Council in that above example should have looked at alternative marketing strategies, including management of the space by specialist third party providers. The suggestion behind this, therefore, is that if a 20,000 sq ft building could attract demand from a 1,000 sq ft tenant, then the land owner would be expected to make that space available on competitive terms and potentially prejudice the rest of the building. This is draconian as a policy.

Given how restrictive and demanding this Policy is, it should be very carefully considered in terms of implications.

Policy 4.4.31 advises that "employment floor space would be protected and the release of existing sites would be managed". The word managed has huge implications. Firstly, please advise how the Borough intends to manage the release of sites, as this implies a controlled process and also it advises that the Borough Council will ensure, by this management, that there is sufficient supply to accommodate existing and future demand. We do not believe that the Borough Council has the ability to do this and would wish to understand what their proposals are.

Para 4.4.32 advises that "there is no specific guidance on an appropriate period for marketing...... ".

The Policy on the previous page no. 70 does give specific guidance on the appropriate period of marketing and we feel that this clause is, therefore, contradictory.

I believe that proof of a business being non viable before change of use, should remain (this has been removed) as easing the way to change of use increases value and restricts stock. This should not prevent business premises from being re-housed, where housing is a priority or where new transport hubs improve economic viability.

I can see no reason why restrictions on change of use should not apply to other classes of business?

There is no employer-based evidence, other than from the university, thus any future need cannot be reliably predicted from the data presented; thus there is no informed and reasoned justification.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
The Loseley Estate has a number of employment sites in its ownership that make an important contribution to employment in the area. Over the life of the plan it anticipated that a number of existing business units may need to be redeveloped. We therefore support the last paragraph of this policy, which supports the redevelopment of outmoded employment floorspace to cater for modern business needs.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

I object to Policy E3

GBC’s desire to promote and retain Office space within the town is commendable but naïve

I am a joint owner of office space in Guildford and along with others find it hard to let it when it becomes vacant. Up to date working methods make very good use of the internet. Modern working practices involve hot desking cloud storage of documents Telephone conferencing and other up to date methods of communication which reduce the need for office space down to that of a hub rather than a work place. My own business has halved the need for office space in Guildford yet increased our range for provision of services to 4 counties instead of 2.Factors include time and cost of travel, difficulties with public transport and car use, none of which will be addressed sufficiently by the plan. My own property was put on sale for over 6 months and has had to be provided instead on a short term let to the new occupants. (this month 7/16) The office is modern and well connected and sited with car parking! The idea that office owners would have to advertise consistently for up to 2 years would detract from the desire to build and provide space. Pop up offices in fully serviced provision is the way forward and there is already no shortage of that. There is a slow turnover of office space in the urban area and town centre and I object to Policies B1-8

I also object to the amount of warehousing space set aside at B8

We are in an age where supply and delivery is dealt with in a sophisticated manner using IT/barcoding/robotics all of which are more and more centralised. We do not need to dedicate acres of development land to this when the urgent need for Guildford Town is housing

Response

Summary

I OBJECT. I do not support the policy of resisting change of use from B1a to residential because it flies in the face of positive property market solutions for the regeneration of brownfield land and is contrary to current government policy which has recently been reaffirmed and permits a change of use from B1a (offices) to C3 (residential).

Detailed response:

- I believe that the existing government policy which has recently been made permanent of allowing change of use from B1a to C3 is sound
- Many office buildings reaching an age of more than 30/50 years become redundant in terms of energy compliance making them illegal to occupy for employment purposes and the cost of refurbishment makes them redundant and uneconomic
- The reality of market demand is that the gross development value of refurbished residential space is in excess of the gross development value of refurbished old office space in many locations (this gross development value assessment is supported by the analysis by property consultants GVA in the supporting evidence within the Allies and Morrison Masterplan for Guildford dated 2015)
- Office space is available and the turnover of office space in Guildford is slow, which would seem to indicate that there is excess office capacity relative to demand
- To resist change from B1a to C3 is contrary to the concept of brownfield first for residential development schemes
- To resist change from B1a to C3 in Strategic or Significant Employment Sites is contrary to the concept of integrated mixed use communities whereby the journey to work is minimised
- London has led the way with significant residential schemes being created from redundant office stock. A good example is the South Bank in London adjacent to Waterloo Station where in 2005 the Shell Centre has been converted into flats. Another early example is the 2000 scheme at Metro Central Heights at Elephant and Castle where the old Alexander Fleming House was converted to 435 flats by St George. GBC needs to adopt more modern trends and policies.
- Guildford is in dire need of increasing town centre residential development
- The feared loss of employment will be marginal and impractical to resist. Empty office blocks are not the answer.
- I regard the evidence base (Employment Land Needs Assessment 2015 and the Guildford Borough Economic Strategy 2013-31) as flawed and inconsistent and therefore unreliable evidence
- In relation to the targets and monitoring indicators, I do not consider that the targets are desirable or sound, and therefore do not consider that the monitoring indicators are valid. Why should Guildford target 3200 additional B class jobs when it has almost full employment? Why should no employment floorspace be lost, when some of it is inappropriate and not fit for purpose? Why is it desirable to increase B1/B2/B8 floorspace?

We object to Policy E3 maintaining employment capacity

We support the concept and aim but object on the grounds that the practicalities of sustainable transport have not been properly considered.

It is not sustainable to build dormitory towns and call them sustainable.

How can large developments outside the town centre maximise sustainable travel? This is a matter for the planning process - the further from the town centre, the less sustainable the development will be.

Reliance on cycling discriminates against vulnerable members of the community. How can the disabled, those with small children, or the very old, or the infirm, or those who are ill, cycle outside the town in order to commute, or even inside the town? Only some people cycle - and Guildford has some steep hills, especially going out of town. Park and rides are slow – how can those with a 3 hour commute add 1 hour to their journey from using park and rides?

The only sustainable mechanism for new developments is to have them in the town centre close to the railway and the main shopping links where a hoppa bus can provide satisfactory links for those who cannot walk or cycle.

While we welcome the intention to encourage rail travel by adding two new stations there could unintended consequences.

Once again we see the word “expect” used which means the policy has no teeth. The word “expect” must be replaced with the word “require” so that this policy is enforceable.

There are a number of problems with this policy.

Congestion is a widely recognised factor in the local area of Guildford, and this is a major factor in the public response to the proposed housing numbers, which represents more than a 25% increase in housing numbers in a borough that is already profoundly congested. [Source: SHMA p61: itself sourced from ONS for 2013.] Residents recognise that to increase the population by this level within the existing transport provision is not feasible, and this informs much of the public response to the proposed level of housing accommodation.

It is not clear that this recognition, which is widespread through the borough, is shared by those who have drafted the Local Plan.

Guildford is a commuter town, which (compared to London) offers better quality of life and lower house prices, so it will continue to be a commuter town for the foreseeable future. As a result, access to the stations for commuting is of significance. It is not realistic to assume that traffic to stations for commuters can be replaced either by bus services (slow, intermittent, expensive, and in many cases absent completely) or by cycle. There is a capacity issue of car parking at the station, which effectively creates an absolute constraint on the feasibility of commuting from Guildford.

Cycling is attractive, and, for the urban young, especially students, it is both practical and cheap, and can be quick. However, as noted, those en route to work cannot be assumed to be able to cycle in working clothes. Elderly members of the community, those transporting small children, and the disabled cannot participate in cycling except to a limited extent. Effectively the “average” person deemed to be capable of cycling to substitute for car trips is an able-bodied adult not travelling to somewhere where smart clothing is required, not needing to arrive clean (or with showering facilities on arrival, not provided by all employers); this is not sufficiently widespread in terms of the local demographic for travellers.
that it should be allowed to determine policy – and of course, not needing to transport, for example, supermarket shopping after the trip. What about the disabled? the elderly? those looking after more than one child? Are they to be housebound? This is not a reasonable strategy. Before transport and buildings are determined on the basis of such a policy, it is also imperative that safe cycle routes are implemented through the borough. Cycling in winter on rural roads is inherently more dangerous. Upgrading these roads would not be feasible in terms of cost nor desirable in terms of local character.

Cycle lanes which disappear into normal traffic lanes, which travel over potholes and which allow cyclists to be threatened by HGVs are not conducive to wider cycle usage, nor should wider cycle usage be encouraged until it can be demonstrated that it is safe, which currently, locally, it is not. The A25 cycle corridor scheme (Part of LRN1) will exchange the risk between cyclists and vehicles sharing space for the risk between cyclists and pedestrians sharing space. Much of the A25 has no pedestrian area anyway outside the urban space. Many cyclists travel at high speed and they will be put into conflict with pedestrians including mothers with very young children and schoolchildren many of whom need to cross the road and hence cross the cycleway. This is likely to lead to accidents and pedestrians are being disadvantaged.

Road capacity reduces as average speeds come down due to congestion. Where proper cycle lanes or off-road lanes are not provided then it is inevitable that safe driving will lead to reduced average motor vehicle speeds and gap development in the traffic stream. Both these effects act to reduce the capacity of our local road network. This loss of capacity has not been recognised in the Transport Strategy.

The concept of the park and ride with access into the town limited for those who live outside the town, is similarly flawed. Park and Ride is expensive, cumbersome and slow. It should be noted that in Oxford it has had a disastrous impact on small local retailers which is a retail segment that it is important to retain and support.

Use of park and rides increases the use of the strategic road network by local users, which is not what it is designed to do.

This proposal is combined with aggressive exclusion from the town of those who are living in peripheral communities, which will increasingly resemble housing estates. This is a strategy for sink estates through Surrey instead of the Green Belt - this is not a strategy for growth. Head offices will choose to go elsewhere, because highly skilled staff and management in the cutting edge industries that GBC wants to encourage, will not choose to live in a dense housing estate.

The existing extent of traffic congestion has not been fully recognised. As a consequence the impact of the various development scenarios has been understated and the infrastructure costs are an understatement.

The transport studies are incomplete and unpublished and this should have led to deferral of consideration of the Local Plan consultation process until it was possible to revise the plan post publication of the studies. This matter was raised by a number of councillors at the Full Council meeting on 24 May 2016 when the consultation was approved, but a motion to defer was overturned by the majority party.

Cross-subsidy in terms of infrastructure is envisaged. The infrastructure deficit needs to be resolved before there are large numbers of new residents exacerbating the current congestion. The funding of the new developments through CIL and S 106 is expected to contribute to the transport impacts across the borough, and there is negligible concern for the transport problems created within those new developments or in areas adjacent to them. This is not acceptable to existing residents and is likely to cause some problems with the future residents too, who may arguably feel aggrieved that the road funding associated with their developments is being subverted to other areas. While this may be permissible under the revised CIL regulations it is questionable whether it is morally acceptable to grant planning permission to build on the Green Belt in order to cross subsidise the building of roads or other infrastructure in the town centre or elsewhere across the borough or outside it.

Insetting of villages and the proposed relaxation of planning restrictions anywhere outside settlements (Green Belt or not), implied in P2, will lead to substantial infilling that will not require traffic assessment but will contribute a highly significant amount of additional car journeys overall - by a more insidious process than the large developments proposed.
Costs for rail or bus travel could be substantially reduced and would incentivise their use; but these are outside the remit of GBC and so cannot be encouraged by them.

It remains to be seen whether the proposed new stations will be delivered as they are not entirely within the council’s control. While we welcome the intention to encourage rail travel by adding two new stations there could be unintended consequences as the roads local to both sites are heavily congested. If parking facilities are inadequate this could lead to a need for onerous parking restrictions on roads nearby – possibly affecting small businesses adversely.

If parking facilities are adequate this will encourage more traffic onto local roads and commuters tend to be hurrying to catch a train or anxious to return home after a day at work. That does not bode well for the safety of pedestrians needing to cross those roads. House prices near to stations tend to attract higher prices and this will increase the profit motive to developers wanting to build on greenfield sites nearby. It will also mean that so-called affordable housing will be even less affordable at these sites. It may also lead, over time, to an undesirable loss of social-rented housing in the vicinity. A minor issue is that stopping at the additional stations will increase the train journey times to and from Guildford town centre on the lines affected.

Detail in Policy wording – flawed drafting:

The policy begins and ends with the weak and totally ineffective word, in planning terms, “expect”.

Contributing through CIL will not necessarily address needs local to the development concerned, and created by it, but may involve solving existing problems elsewhere in the Borough.

Bullets 4 & 5 – improvements to park and ride facilities imply increased car usage from outside the town and the parking provision acknowledges that most journeys will be by car.

Bullet 6 - Has the Vehicle parking Supplementary Planning Document been published? It is not listed as key evidence but the policy refers. How can a policy have been determined with reference to a non-existent part of the evidence base?

Bullets 7,8, 9 & 10 are weak & aspirational with let-out words such as “facilitate the use of”, “wherever possible”, “contribute” and “where appropriate” (and poorly bulleted!). How will the use of ultra low emission vehicles be facilitated? This is such a vague aspiration as to be meaningless.

The policy only “expects” new developments to contribute, demonstrate adequate provision, etc – it should enforce them. A transport statement AND assessment ought to be a fixed requirement – not a matter for negotiation – while the policy implies that this might be waived even for sites that generate significant amounts of movement.

The construction traffic, noise and pollution generated by meeting the proposed housing number will be excessive. It will have a highly significant impact on the amenity and health of those residents living close to the development sites and those who live on the routes that will be taken by the construction traffic.

The last paragraph says nothing new in planning terms but does mean that the Local Plan has not fully and properly considered the traffic impacts of the proposed sites. We have experience of how misleading the TAs produced by developers can be – using averaging techniques and understated baseline figures, days when schools are not operating and many other devices to pull the wool over the eyes of planning authorities. This aspect is a denial of responsibility by GBC. The result is that Green Belt and countryside will be released for development when fuller consideration of traffic impacts at the Local Plan stage should have prevented that. If the planning authority is taken in by developers’ TAs then wholly unsuitable developments will be permitted.

Introduction:

The spatial development strategy (paragraph 4.6.20 and Policy S2) does not address the development needs of the borough ensuring distances are practical; this is certainly not the case with all the development sites. For example, the Wisley airfield site will generate a massive increase in vehicle journeys; developments in West Horsley will lead to greater car use, as will the proposed developments at Garlick’s Arch and in Send. The obvious site choice for sustainable development would be on brownfield sites in the town but the Local Plan proposes allocating those sites to the declining retail industry instead.

Paragraph 4.6.21 suggests that sustainable transport is promoted. Far from providing sustainable transport this Plan will generate a massive increase in motor vehicle journeys. The Plan cannot force residents to ride bicycles or walk everywhere.

Justification:

Paragraph 4.6.22 seeks to set out a reasoned justification and alleges that development should offer real travel choice by sustainable transport modes. There is little sign that this is being taken seriously enough now.

Paragraph 4.6.23 proposed to bring forward a Vehicle Parking Supplementary Planning Document. It is not clear what to make of this. Failure to provide off-street vehicle parking will not prevent residents owning cars and finding somewhere else to park but it may make life difficult for key workers to commute to their place of work. How can a consultation take place relying on non-existent background documents which are key parts of the Evidence Base? How can anyone comment on non-existent documents, and even if brought forward part-way through the consultation, any comments will be prejudiced by the absence of this informing the start of the consultation.

Paragraph 4.6.24 refers to the Sustainable Movement Corridor. Bus services are aspirational but economic reality may mean that they fail to persist. There is not enough detail published on how the SMC will be delivered – suggesting that it is aspirational rather than fully thought through.

Paragraph 4.6.26 refers to reviewing existing transport facilities and likely transport generation as part of assessing the amount of incremental travel demand. That consideration should have taken place in a robust and detailed manner on a site-by-site basis before the sites were allocated in the Local Plan. It is not sufficient to leave that until the planning application stage as intended by GBC and SCC, given that all sites will be subject to “permission in principle” under the Housing and Planning Act 2016 and so will not be capable of subsequent rejection on these grounds.

Paragraph 4.6.27 notes that Development must mitigate its transport impacts. The measures described rely entirely on people taking them up and not dumping their travel information packs in the nearest bin. It is clear that GBC, in response to concerns about elderly and disabled people failing to be coerced into riding bicycles are now suggesting tricycles to overcome this obstacle to their aspirations. They should be aware that while tricycles may help with balance issues they are heavier and harder to ride uphill. While the policy (unusually) notes that mitigation must be provided, in fact this is then diluted to suggest that facilities for electric car charging points and encouragement to car-share can be sufficient; all are optional and therefore meaningless.

However well designed a development is it will make matters worse during construction and if on a greenfield site, it is hard to see how it will achieve environmental benefits. On the other hand, replacing inefficient buildings on a brownfield site could lead to benefits in the long term.

Paragraph 4.6.28 notes “Developers should have regard” to the “Infrastructure Schedule at Appendix C”. The only thing that developers have regard for is forcing their application through and maximising their profit – that is the business they are in. Appendix C is lacking in detail. It notes, for example that there will be new town centre bus facilities at a cost of £5-10million – such vagueness make it clear that no real costing or analysis of proposals has been prepared, and that the Infrastructure improvements proposed have not been properly considered. Having regard to fluid and uncertain proposals is effectively meaningless as a constraint or a requirement.

Paragraph 4.6.29 requires that applications need to address the transport implications of the proposed development. Experience with recent planning applications suggests that developers will do everything in their power to understate transport impacts and we have no faith in GBC and SCC taking a sufficiently robust line on this.

Key Evidence is missing or inadequate.

The Strategic Transport Assessment (SCC 2016) is listed as “forthcoming”, but this plan has been produced in the absence of any strategic transport review.
There are further inadequacies in the Evidence Base, highlighted in the following annexes, which include examples of deficiencies, ambiguities and inadequacies in the transport and infrastructure evidence. This is not a comprehensive list of deficiencies, but serves as an illustration of the poor evidence on which decisions have been based.

Comments on Guildford Borough Transport Study 2016

Page 2 – “address the historic infrastructure deficit” - developers are not required to do this?

Page 2 – It is wrong to claim that the cycle infrastructure along the A25 is good – and many cyclists are not careful, so putting them in contention with pedestrians is not a good idea.

Page 5 – The decision on Heathrow or Gatwick has yet to be taken but airport expansion in the south-east cannot be regarded as sustainable development and, although GBC has no control over such external decisions, its own growth agenda will drive a need for that expansion.

Page 6 An additional weakness is alternative “road closure diversion” routes for the SRN on the LRN

Page 6 Are the “Committed Improvements” actually committed and guaranteed to be delivered?

Page 7 The rail strategy does not provide for Wisley (residents would drive to stations)

Page 7 How long will it take to deliver Crossrail 2? “We hope that Crossrail 2 could be operational by 2030, but we are in the very early stages of planning and no decision to build it has been made.”

Page 7 Guildford platform capacity still many years away if ever.

Page 7 The rail strategy anticipates many improvements that have not been secured and may have unintended consequences if they proceed (see above)

Page 7 The Southern Rail Access to Heathrow #see the feasibility study dated December 2015 – although other proposals may be put forward (e.g. by Hounslow) is still in its early stages and would have significant impacts on open space beyond our Borough. For example, all options in the feasibility study would use Staines Moor SSSI and Option 4 would use Bedfont Lakes Country Park (a Local Nature Reserve and SNCI).

The various options would use existing commercial, residential and highways land in varying degrees. It seems unlikely that a solution will be delivered within the Plan period and removal of highly valued open space with high biodiversity (wherever it is in South-east England) cannot be regarded as sustainable.

Page 10 and 13 There is a stark contrast between the plans for the town centre which involve encouraging a reduction in traffic by reducing roadspace and the plans for the SRN and parts of the LRN which involve increasing capacity. While increasing capacity may reduce some areas of congestion in the short term, history suggests that traffic will rapidly grow until the improved roads are congested once again. This can hardly be regarded as sustainable. A sustainable option would be to apply a very substantial traffic infrastructure constraint on the housing number.

Page 10 While the A3 Guildford Tunnel aspiration has some environmental advantages over widening (in particular for residents living close to the A3), the environmental burden of the construction phase will be far higher and aspects such as location of ventilation stacks and their local effect (in all weather conditions) do not appear to have been considered.

Page 14 Under Weaknesses the point about A roads in Guildford Town also applies to surrounding areas in the Borough and beyond. The anticipated improvements ignore existing congestion to the south and east of Guildford – presumably because SCC’s transport assessment methodology only identifies the tip of the iceberg. The current Plan will see increased congestion and a resultant reduction in air quality in many areas beyond the town centre.
Page 16 “Largely commercial bus services” is seen as a strength whereas it should be seen as a weakness with a trend to reduced subsidies and the provision of bus services, especially in rural areas, being increasingly dependent on commercial gain. It is difficult to see this changing under the current Government cuts philosophy. The point “Subject to business case including funding” under Aspirations demonstrates this point.

Page 18 We welcome the aspiration to “Expand the public realm through significantly extended pedestrian-priority areas”

Page 19 Guildford is well behind other areas in monitoring air quality let alone attempting to reduce it.

The introduction talks about reductions in some pollutants. This may be the case for pollutants such as Sulphur Dioxide, which contributed to the visible London smogs, but it is not true of diesel vehicle emissions which have increased as a result of Government policy including its aggressive growth agenda and population increase through immigration.

30 accessible electric vehicle charging points are only an aspiration and will be nowhere near enough if there is a real shift to electric vehicles.

It is clear from the “Strategy outcomes” that GBC would prefer not to follow other areas in pro-actively tackling air quality.

Page 22/23/24 The timescales indicate that the main rail improvements (Including the two new stations) are unlikely to be delivered until the end of the Plan period or even later. The sites that are supposedly justified by their inclusion will generate a major increase in road traffic in the interim and it may be more difficult to achieve this aspect of modal shift in the longer term. The same can be said about the other traffic infrastructure proposals. Residential development is being scheduled before the infrastructure that it will need.

Page 24 Monitoring – “Increase” needs to be in proportion to population growth as otherwise failure will taken as success. “An Increase in average vehicle speeds” is inconsistent with the desire to reduce the number of persons killed or seriously injured. For example, some A roads pass through residential areas where pedestrians, including schoolchildren, are trying to cross the road at peak times. It is noted that increase in vehicle speeds is only desired in the morning. Going home from work does not seem to matter!

GTAMS

NPPF and NPPG The Plan ignores the points concerning Green Belt and protecting the environment. GBC have tried to get round this by spinning their messages and using misleading statistics including a major understatement of the area of Green Belt to be removed.

Planning Update (March 2015) – The point in this update concerning Green Belt has been ignored

Monitoring Indicators:

Ten years is far too long to wait for information on whether the approach is working or not. The target requires only an increase. This would permit an increase less than that in line with any population growth to be regarded as success. The bar has been set well within the failure range.

I object to Surrey University dictating how and where they may develop and extend the Research Park into an even larger Business Park.

There is a conflict between the University’s public role as a University and it’s private intention to be profit-making.

The University should not be permitted to extend their Research Park onto land at Blackwell Farm, which is visible for miles around. Development here will ruin views of the Hogs Back for ever.

I object to the employment strategy and impact on Garlicks Arch (A43)

The development will result in the loss of existing local successful businesses, which have been employing local people over many decades, and are therefore sustainable.

Policy E3 is laudable in that it seeks to mitigate the creation of a "dormitory" town. However, this does nothing to alleviate the pressure on housing by restricting potential supply. Perhaps policy H2 should be altered to have a higher content of affordable homes? Are statistics available that show the breakdown of employment location for each class of dwelling? This could form a basis for % affordable homes in H2.

To resist change from B1a to C3 in Strategic or Significant Employment Sites is contrary to the concept of integrated mixed use communities whereby the journey to work is minimised and contrary to the concept of brownfield first for residential development schemes. I object to Policy E3 maintaining employment capacity.

I object to the ill-informed policy of resisting change of use from B1a to residential because it flies in the face of positive property market solutions for the regeneration of brownfield land. It is also contrary to current government policy which has recently been reaffirmed and permits a change of use from B1a (offices) to C3 (residential).

I believe that the existing government policy which has recently been made permanent of allowing change of use from B1a to C3 is sound.

Many office buildings reaching an age of more than 30/50 years become redundant in terms of energy compliance making them illegal to occupy for employment purposes and the cost of refurbishment makes them redundant and uneconomic.

The reality of market demand is that the gross development value of refurbished residential space is in excess of the gross development value of refurbished old office space in many locations (this gross development value assessment is supported by the analysis by property consultants GVA in the supporting evidence within the Allies and Morrison Masterplan for Guildford dated 2015).

To resist change from B1a to C3 is contrary to the concept of brownfield first for residential development schemes.

To resist change from B1a to C3 in Strategic or Significant Employment Sites is contrary to the concept of integrated mixed use communities whereby the journey to work is minimised.

London has led the way with significant residential schemes being created from redundant office stock. A good example is the South Bank in London adjacent to Waterloo Station where in 2005 the Shell Centre has been converted into flats. Another early example is the 2000 scheme at Metro Central Heights at Elephant and Castle where the old Alexander Fleming House was converted to 435 flats by St George. GBC needs to adopt more modern trends and policies.

I OBJECT to the expansion of employment space in the Local Plan.

The Employment Land Needs Assessment 2015 shows an 80% reduction in employment space from the previous ELNA carried out in 2013. Many industrial trading estates such as the Sheerwater Estate in Woking and Watchmoor Park in Camberley have vast units which remain unoccupied. This means that the addition of new industrial spaces, such as at Site A43, are not needed.

I object to Policy E3 maintaining employment capacity I object we should be changing use from B1a to residential as this is in line with positive property market solutions for the regeneration of brownfield land and is in line with government policy of change of use from B1a (offices) to C3 (residential). Many office buildings are 30/50 years old and the cost of refurbishment makes them redundant and uneconomic. In the present market situation the need for development to residential space is in excess of the value and need of refurbished old office space in many locations. This would also increase the concept of integrated mixed use communities whereby the journey to work is minimised. If the need for housing is so great that 70% is being proposed on the protected Green Belt then the first port of call is more sustainable brownfield sites such as tired xs offices closer to employment and transport hubs - Guildford is in dire need of increasing town centre residential development.

I object to Policy E3 maintaining employment capacity
I support the concept and aim but object on the grounds that the practicalities of sustainable transport have not been properly considered.

It is not sustainable to build dormitory towns and call them sustainable.

Not everyone can cycle all the time.

How can large developments outside the town centre maximise sustainable travel? This is a matter for the planning process— the further from the town centre, the less sustainable the development will be.

Reliance on cycling discriminates against vulnerable members of the community. How can the disabled, those with small children, or the very old, or the infirm, or those who are ill, cycle outside the town in order to commute, or even inside the town? Only some people cycle—and Guildford has some steep hills, especially going out of town. Park and rides are slow – how can those with a 3 hour commute add 1 hour to their journey from using park and rides?

The only sustainable mechanism for new developments is to have them in the town centre close to the railway and the main shopping links where a hoppa bus can provide satisfactory links for those who cannot walk or cycle.

While I welcome the intention to encourage rail travel by adding two new stations there could be unintended consequences.

Once again we see the word “expect” used which means the policy has no teeth. The word “expect” must be replaced with the word “require” so that this policy is enforceable.

There are a number of problems with this policy.

Congestion is a widely recognised factor in the local area of Guildford, and this is a major factor in the public response to the proposed housing numbers, which represents more than a 25% increase in housing numbers in a borough that is already profoundly congested. [Source: SHMA p61: itself sourced from ONS for 2013.] Residents recognise that to increase the population by this level within the existing transport provision is not feasible, and this informs much of the public response to the proposed level of housing accommodation.

It is not clear that this recognition, which is widespread through the borough, is shared by those who have drafted the Local Plan.

Guildford is a commuter town, which (compared to London) offers better quality of life and lower house prices, so it will continue to be a commuter town for the foreseeable future. As a result, access to the stations for commuting is of significance. It is not realistic to assume that traffic to stations for commuters can be replaced either by bus services (slow, intermittent, expensive, and in many cases absent completely) or by cycle. There is a capacity issue of car parking at the station, which effectively creates an absolute constraint on the feasibility of commuting from Guildford.

Cycling is attractive, and, for the urban young, especially students, it is both practical and cheap, and can be quick. However, as noted, those en route to work cannot be assumed to be able to cycle in working clothes. Elderly members of the community, those transporting small children, and the disabled cannot participate in cycling except to a limited extent. Effectively the “average” person deemed to be capable of cycling to substitute for car trips is an able-bodied adult not travelling to somewhere where smart clothing is required, not needing to arrive clean (or with showering facilities on arrival, not provided by all employers); this is not sufficiently widespread in terms of the local demographic for travellers that it should be allowed to determine policy – and of course, not needing to transport, for example, supermarket shopping after the trip. What about the disabled? the elderly? those looking after more than one child? Are they to be housebound? This is not a reasonable strategy. Before transport and buildings are determined on the basis of such a policy, it is also imperative that safe cycle routes are implemented through the borough. Cycling in winter on rural roads is inherently more dangerous. Upgrading these roads would not be feasible in terms of cost nor desirable in terms of local character.
Cycle lanes which disappear into normal traffic lanes, which travel over potholes and which allow cyclists to be threatened by HGVs are not conducive to wider cycle usage, nor should wider cycle usage be encouraged until it can be demonstrated that it is safe, which currently, locally, it is not. The A25 cycle corridor scheme (Part of LRN1) will exchange the risk between cyclists and vehicles sharing space for the risk between cyclists and pedestrians sharing space. Much of the A25 has no pedestrian area anyway outside the urban space. Many cyclists travel at high speed and they will be put into conflict with pedestrians including mothers with very young children and schoolchildren many of whom need to cross the road and hence cross the cycleway. This is likely to lead to accidents and pedestrians are being disadvantaged.

Road capacity reduces as average speeds come down due to congestion. Where proper cycle lanes or off-road lanes are not provided then it is inevitable that safe driving will lead to reduced average motor vehicle speeds and gap development in the traffic stream. Both these effects act to reduce the capacity of our local road network. This loss of capacity has not been recognised in the Transport Strategy.

The concept of the park and ride with access into the town limited for those who live outside the town, is similarly flawed. Park and Ride is expensive, cumbersome and slow. It should be noted that in Oxford it has had a disastrous impact on small local retailers which is a retail segment that it is important to retain and support.

Use of park and rides increases the use of the strategic road network by local users, which is not what it is designed to do.

This proposal is combined with aggressive exclusion from the town of those who are living in peripheral communities, which will increasingly resemble housing estates. This is a strategy for sink estates through Surrey instead of the Green Belt - this is not a strategy for growth. Head offices will choose to go elsewhere, because highly skilled staff and management in the cutting edge industries that GBC wants to encourage, will not choose to live in a dense housing estate.

The existing extent of traffic congestion has not been fully recognised. As a consequence the impact of the various development scenarios has been understated and the infrastructure costs are an understatement.

The transport studies are incomplete and unpublished and this should have led to deferral of consideration of the Local Plan consultation process until it was possible to revise the plan post publication of the studies. This matter was raised by a number of councillors at the Full Council meeting on 24 May 2016 when the consultation was approved, but a motion to defer was overturned by the majority party.

Cross-subsidy in terms of infrastructure is envisaged. The infrastructure deficit needs to be resolved before there are large numbers of new residents exacerbating the current congestion. The funding of the new developments through CIL and S 106 is expected to contribute to the transport impacts across the borough, and there is negligible concern for the transport problems created within those new developments or in areas adjacent to them. This is not acceptable to existing residents and is likely to cause some problems with the future residents too, who may arguably feel aggrieved that the road funding associated with their developments is being subverted to other areas. While this may be permissible under the revised CIL regulations it is questionable whether it is morally acceptable to grant planning permission to build on the Green Belt in order to cross subsidise the building of roads or other infrastructure in the town centre or elsewhere across the borough or outside it.

In-setting of villages and the proposed relaxation of planning restrictions anywhere outside settlements (Green Belt or not), implied in P2, will lead to substantial infilling that will not require traffic assessment but will contribute a highly significant amount of additional car journeys overall - by a more insidious process than the large developments proposed.

Costs for rail or bus travel could be substantially reduced and would incentivise their use; but these are outside the remit of GBC and so cannot be encouraged by them.

It remains to be seen whether the proposed new stations will be delivered as they are not entirely within the council’s control and run counter to the Railways intent to speed up journey something adding stations would prevent. While we welcome the intention to encourage rail travel by adding two new stations there could be unintended consequences as the roads local to both sites are heavily congested. If parking facilities are inadequate this could lead to a need for onerous parking restrictions on roads nearby – possibly affecting small businesses adversely.

If parking facilities are adequate this will encourage more traffic onto local roads and commuters tend to be hurrying to catch a train or anxious to return home after a day at work. That does not bode well for the safety of pedestrians needing to cross those roads. House prices near to stations tend to attract higher prices and this will increase the profit motive to developers wanting to build on greenfield sites nearby. It will also mean that so-called affordable housing will be even less affordable at these sites. It may also lead, over time, to an undesirable loss of social-rented housing in the vicinity. A minor issue is that stopping at the additional stations will increase the train journey times to and from Guildford town centre on the lines affected.

Detail in Policy wording – flawed drafting:

The policy begins and ends with the weak and totally ineffective word, in planning terms, “expect”.

Contributing through CIL will not necessarily address needs local to the development concerned, and created by it, but may involve solving existing problems elsewhere in the Borough.

Bullets 4 & 5 – improvements to park and ride facilities imply increased car usage from outside the town and the parking provision acknowledges that most journeys will be by car.

Bullet 6 - Has the Vehicle parking Supplementary Planning Document been published? It is not listed as key evidence but the policy refers. How can a policy have been determined with reference to a non-existent part of the evidence base?

Bullets 7, 8, 9 & 10 are weak & aspirational with let-out words such as “facilitate the use of”, “wherever possible”, “contribute” and “where appropriate” (and poorly bulleted!). How will the use of ultra low emission vehicles be facilitated? This is such a vague aspiration as to be meaningless.

The policy only “expects” new developments to contribute, demonstrate adequate provision, etc – it should enforce them. A transport statement AND assessment ought to be a fixed requirement – not a matter for negotiation – while the policy implies that this might be waived even for sites that generate significant amounts of movement.

The construction traffic, noise and pollution generated by meeting the proposed housing number will be excessive. It will have a highly significant impact on the amenity and health of those residents living close to the development sites and those who live on the routes that will be taken by the construction traffic.

The last paragraph says nothing new in planning terms but does mean that the Local Plan has not fully and properly considered the traffic impacts of the proposed sites. We have experience of how misleading the TAs produced by developers can be – using averaging techniques and understated baseline figures, days when schools are not operating and many other devices to pull the wool over the eyes of planning authorities. This aspect is a denial of responsibility by GBC. The result is that Green Belt and countryside will be released for development when fuller consideration of traffic impacts at the Local Plan stage should have prevented that. If the planning authority is taken in by developers’ TAs then wholly unsuitable developments will be permitted.

Introduction:

The spatial development strategy (paragraph 4.6.20 and Policy S2) does not address the development needs of the borough ensuring distances are practical; this is certainly not the case with all the development sites. For example, the Wisley airfield site will generate a massive increase in vehicle journeys; developments in West Horsley will lead to greater car use, as will the proposed developments at Garlick’s Arch and in Send. The obvious site choice for sustainable development would be on brownfield sites in the town but the Local Plan proposes allocating those sites to the declining retail industry instead.

Paragraph 4.6.21 suggests that sustainable transport is promoted. Far from providing sustainable transport this Plan will generate a massive increase in motor vehicle journeys. The Plan cannot force residents to ride bicycles or walk everywhere.
Paragraph 4.6.22 seeks to set out a reasoned justification and alleges that development should offer real travel choice by sustainable transport modes. There is little sign that this is being taken seriously enough now.

Paragraph 4.6.23 proposed to bring forward a Vehicle Parking Supplementary Planning Document. It is not clear what to make of this. Failure to provide off-street vehicle parking will not prevent residents owning cars and finding somewhere else to park but it may make life difficult for key workers to commute to their place of work. How can a consultation take place relying on non-existent background documents which are key parts of the Evidence Base? How can anyone comment on non-existent documents, and even if brought forward part-way through the consultation, any comments will be prejudiced by the absence of this informing the start of the consultation.

Paragraph 4.6.24 refers to the Sustainable Movement Corridor. Bus services are aspirational but economic reality may mean that they fail to persist. There is not enough detail published on how the SMC will be delivered – suggesting that it is aspirational rather than fully thought through.

Paragraph 4.6.26 refers to reviewing existing transport facilities and likely transport generation as part of assessing the amount of incremental travel demand. That consideration should have taken place in a robust and detailed manner on a site-by-site basis before the sites were allocated in the Local Plan. It is not sufficient to leave that until the planning application stage as intended by GBC and SCC, given that all sites will be subject to “permission in principle” under the Housing and Planning Act 2016 and so will not be capable of subsequent rejection on these grounds.

Paragraph 4.6.27 notes that Development must mitigate its transport impacts. The measures described rely entirely on people taking them up and not dumping their travel information packs in the nearest bin. It is clear that GBC, in response to concerns about elderly and disabled people failing to be coerced into riding bicycles are now suggesting tricycles to overcome this obstacle to their aspirations. They should be aware that while tricycles may help with balance issues they are heavier and harder to ride uphill. While the policy (unusually) notes that mitigation must be provided, in fact this is then diluted to suggest that facilities for electric car charging points and encouragement to car-share can be sufficient; all are optional and therefore meaningless.

However well designed a development is it will make matters worse during construction and if on a greenfield site, it is hard to see how it will achieve environmental benefits. On the other hand, replacing inefficient buildings on a brownfield site could lead to benefits in the long term.

Paragraph 4.6.28 notes “Developers should have regard” to the “Infrastructure Schedule at Appendix C”. The only thing that developers have regard for is forcing their application through and maximising their profit – that is the business they are in. Appendix C is lacking in detail. It notes, for example that there will be new town centre bus facilities at a cost of £5-10million – such vagueness make it clear that no real costing or analysis of proposals has been prepared, and that the Infrastructure improvements proposed have not been properly considered. Having regard to fluid and uncertain proposals is effectively meaningless as a constraint or a requirement.

Paragraph 4.6.29 requires that applications need to address the transport implications of the proposed development. Experience with recent planning applications suggests that developers will do everything in their power to understate transport impacts and we have no faith in GBC and SCC taking a sufficiently robust line on this.

Key Evidence is missing or inadequate.

The Strategic Transport Assessment (SCC 2016) is listed as “forthcoming”, but this plan has been produced in the absence of any strategic transport review.

There are further inadequacies in the Evidence Base, highlighted in the following annexes, which include examples of deficiencies, ambiguities and inadequacies in the transport and infrastructure evidence. This is not a comprehensive list of deficiencies, but serves as an illustration of the poor evidence on which decisions have been based.

Annexe 1
Comments on Guildford Borough Transport Study 2016

Page 2 – “address the historic infrastructure deficit” - developers are not required to do this?

Page 2 – It is wrong to claim that the cycle infrastructure along the A25 is good – and many cyclists are not careful, so putting them in contention with pedestrians is not a good idea.

Page 5 – The decision on Heathrow or Gatwick has yet to be taken but airport expansion in the south-east cannot be regarded as sustainable development and, although GBC has no control over such external decisions, its own growth agenda will drive a need for that expansion.

Page 6 An additional weakness is alternative “road closure diversion” routes for the SRN on the LRN

Page 6 Are the “Committed Improvements” actually committed and guaranteed to be delivered?

Page 7 The rail strategy does not provide for Wisley (residents would drive to stations)

Page 7 How long will it take to deliver Crossrail 2? “We hope that Crossrail 2 could be operational by 2030, but we are in the very early stages of planning and no decision to build it has been made.”

Page 7 Guildford platform capacity still many years away if ever.

Page 7 The rail strategy anticipates many improvements that have not been secured and may have unintended consequences if they proceed (see above)

Page 7 The Southern Rail Access to Heathrow [see the feasibility study dated December 2015 – although other proposals may be put forward (e.g.by Hounslow)] is still in its early stages and would have significant impacts on open space beyond our Borough. For example, all options in the feasibility study would use Staines Moor SSSI and Option 4 would use Bedfont Lakes Country Park (a Local Nature Reserve and SNCI).

The various options would use existing commercial, residential and highways land in varying degrees. It seems unlikely that a solution will be delivered within the Plan period and removal of highly valued open space with high biodiversity (wherever it is in South-east England) cannot be regarded as sustainable.

Page 10 and 13 There is a stark contrast between the plans for the town centre which involve encouraging a reduction in traffic by reducing roadspace and the plans for the SRN and parts of the LRN which involve increasing capacity. While increasing capacity may reduce some areas of congestion in the short term, history suggests that traffic will rapidly grow until the improved roads are congested once again. This can hardly be regarded as sustainable. A sustainable option would be to apply a very substantial traffic infrastructure constraint on the housing number.

Page 10 While the A3 Guildford Tunnel aspiration has some environmental advantages over widening (in particular for residents living close to the A3), the environmental burden of the construction phase will be far higher and aspects such as location of ventilation stacks and their local effect (in all weather conditions) do not appear to have been considered.

Page 14 Under Weaknesses the point about A roads in Guildford Town also applies to surrounding areas in the Borough and beyond. The anticipated improvements ignore existing congestion to the south and east of Guildford – presumably because SCC’s transport assessment methodology only identifies the tip of the iceberg. The current Plan will see increased congestion and a resultant reduction in air quality in many areas beyond the town centre.

Page 16 “Largely commercial bus services” is seen as a strength whereas it should be seen as a weakness with a trend to reduced subsidies and the provision of bus services, especially in rural areas, being increasingly dependent on commercial gain. It is difficult to see this changing under the current Government cuts philosophy. The point “Subject to business case including funding” under Aspirations demonstrates this point.

Page 19 Guildford is well behind other areas in monitoring air quality let alone attempting to reduce it.
The introduction talks about reductions in some pollutants. This may be the case for pollutants such as Sulphur Dioxide, which contributed to the visible London smogs, but it is not true of diesel vehicle emissions which have increased as a result of Government policy including its aggressive growth agenda and population increase through immigration.

30 accessible electric vehicle charging points are only an aspiration and will be nowhere near enough if there is a real shift to electric vehicles.

It is clear from the “Strategy outcomes” that GBC would prefer not to follow other areas in pro-actively tackling air quality.

Page 22/23/24 The timescales indicate that the main rail improvements (Including the two new stations) are unlikely to be delivered until the end of the Plan period or even later. The sites that are supposedly justified by their inclusion will generate a major increase in road traffic in the interim and it may be more difficult to achieve this aspect of modal shift in the longer term. The same can be said about the other traffic infrastructure proposals. Residential development is being scheduled before the infrastructure that it will need.

Page 24 Monitoring – “Increase” needs to be in proportion to population growth as otherwise failure will taken as success. “An Increase in average vehicle speeds” is inconsistent with the desire to reduce the number of persons killed or seriously injured. For example, some A roads pass through residential areas where pedestrians, including schoolchildren, are trying to cross the road at peak times. It is noted that increase in vehicle speeds is only desired in the morning. Going home from work does not seem to matter!

NPPF and NPPG The Plan ignores the points concerning Green Belt and protecting the environment. GBC have tried to get round this by spinning their messages and using misleading statistics including a major understatement of the area of Green Belt to be removed.

Planning Update (March 2015) – The point in this update concerning Green Belt has been ignored

Monitoring Indicators:

Ten years is far too long to wait for information on whether the approach is working or not. The target requires only an increase. This would permit an increase less than that in line with any population growth to be regarded as success. The bar has been set well within the failure range.

14.1 I object to the changes in relation to Policy E3 maintaining employment capacity which do not take account of my previous objections to this policy
14.2 I object to the ill-informed policy of resisting change of use from B1a to residential because it flies in the face of positive property market solutions for the regeneration of brownfield land. I do not support the policy of resisting change of use from B1a to residential because it flies in the face of positive property market solutions for the regeneration of brownfield land and is contrary to current government policy which has recently been reaffirmed and permits a change of use from B1a (offices) to C3 (residential).

- I believe that the existing government policy which has recently been made permanent of allowing change of use from B1a to C3 is sound
- Many office buildings reaching an age of more than 30/50 years become redundant in terms of energy compliance making them illegal to occupy for employment purposes and the cost of refurbishment makes them redundant and uneconomic
- The reality of market demand is that the gross development value of refurbished residential space is in excess of the gross development value of refurbished old office space in many locations (this gross development value assessment is supported by the analysis by property consultants GVA in the supporting evidence within the Allies and Morrison Masterplan for Guildford dated 2015)
- Office space is available and the turnover of office space in Guildford is slow, which would seem to indicate that there is excess office capacity relative to demand
- To resist change from B1a to C3 is contrary to the concept of brownfield first for residential development schemes
- To resist change from B1a to C3 in Strategic or Significant Employment Sites is contrary to the concept of integrated mixed use communities whereby the journey to work is minimised
- London has led the way with significant residential schemes being created from redundant office stock. A good example is the South Bank in London adjacent to Waterloo Station where in 2005 the Shell Centre has been converted into flats. Another early example is the 2000 scheme at Metro Central Heights at Elephant and Castle where the old Alexander Fleming House was converted to 435 flats by St George. GBC needs to adopt more modern trends and policies.

- Guildford is in dire need of increasing town centre residential development
- The feared loss of employment will be marginal and impractical to resist. Empty office blocks are not the answer.
- I regard the evidence base (Employment Land Needs Assessment 2015 and the Guildford Borough Economic Strategy 2013-31) as flawed and inconsistent and therefore unreliable evidence
- In relation to the targets and monitoring indicators, I do not consider that the targets are desirable or sound, and therefore do not consider that the monitoring indicators are valid. Why should Guildford target 3200 additional B class jobs when it has almost full employment? Why should no employment floorspace be lost, when some of it is inappropriate and not fit for purpose? Why is it desirable to increase B1/B2/B8 floorspace?

Proposals for new industrial, warehousing and storage (use Class B1c, B2 and B8) floorspace will be directed to the Industrial Strategic Employment Sites.

There is no need for the new employment floorspace to be located at Garlick’s Arch, when just to the south of the site at Burnt Common there is an existing industrial development, with ample surplus land that could accommodate a further development of 7,000 sq m.

I object to E3 because some office space has been empty for years. Some has been pulled down and left for years as derelict land. This suggests there is lack of demand or they need to be refurbished in line with safety regulations to bring them back into use. Government guidance encourages B1a offices be changed to C3 residential. If office space is redundant it needs to be recycled and regenerated, or changed into homes.

<td>The University fully understands the Council’s concerns over any potential future loss of employment floorspace in the borough and is supportive of the proposed measures set out within this policy to resist the loss of employment floorspace. However, it is considered important to clarify within the wording of the policy that it is only applicable to proposals that are not captured by permitted development rights that allow the change of use without planning permission, such as offices into residential accommodation, provided an Article 4 direction is not in place. 3.14 M&G objects to this policy as it is not compliant with national policy on permitted development and, as currently worded, could frustrate the comprehensive redevelopment of the North Street site as proposed in Policy A6. M&G recommends a more flexible approach where redevelopment for alternative uses would assist wider redevelopment objectives in accordance with other Local Plan policies such as Policy A6.

On balance, Enterprise M3 LEP is supportive of Guildford’s Proposed Submission Local Plan and welcomes the strategy put forward to allow Guildford to continue to play a pivotal role in the economic prosperity of the M3 Corridor as one of the LEPs key Growth Towns. As mentioned above we would encourage the Council to give further consideration on how additional employment sites to meet the demand for office space within the town centre can be incorporated to support the continued growth and prosperity of the town centre going forward. We are very supportive of the increased housing target and would very much welcome the opportunity to work with you to ensure its delivery and to continue to work with you in the positive way which we have done to date.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Attached documents:
Royal Mail possess long leases on the two properties in Guildford with no plans to relocate their operations in the near future. The East Horsley Delivery Office site is within freehold ownership and similarly, there are no plans to relocate in the foreseeable future.

Representation

Cushman & Wakefield have reviewed Guildford Borough Council’s Proposed Submission Local Plan: Strategy & Sites 2016 in the context of its impact on the operations of the Royal Mail properties within the Borough. The delivery offices are of strategic importance to Royal Mail in ensuring they are able to continue to fulfil their statutory duty for mail collection and delivery.

Protection of Employment Uses

All three Royal Mail sites are well established, having operated successfully for a number of years, serving a wide catchment area. Due to the nature of use, operations extend well beyond the normal working day, including associated vehicular movements. The potential juxtaposition of alternative, possibly sensitive land uses particularly residential uses adjacent or within close proximity to the sites is therefore of direct concern to our client. Given the business functions of Royal Mail, operations often take place in sensitive hours in the early mornings and late evenings which sees delivery times and the constant movement of delivery vehicles and would therefore result in significant residential / general amenity issues should sensitive land uses/new dwellings be located nearby.

It is therefore suggested that the wording of the following statement should be altered to afford greater protection to existing businesses and, therefore, the protection of employment uses more generally.

The current wording of Policy E3 (Maintaining Employment Capacity and Improving Employment Floorspace) states the following:

In order to sustain and enhance employment capacity (including land, floorspace and/or jobs):

- Employment floorspace will be protected and the loss strongly resisted on the Strategic Employment Sites, which are defined in policy E Change of use will only be acceptable if evidence is provided of active and comprehensive marketing of the site for its current use (offices, research and development or industrial) for a continuous period of at least two years;
- Employment floorspace will be protected and the loss resisted on the Locally Significant Employment Sites, which are defined in policy E Change of use will only be acceptable if evidence is provided of active and comprehensive marketing of the site for its current use (offices, research and development or industrial) for a continuous period of at least 18 months;
- Employment floorspace will be protected in line with latest needs assessment and the loss be resisted outside designated employment sites. Change of use will only be acceptable if evidence is provided of active and comprehensive marketing of the site for its current use (offices, research and development or industrial) for a continuous period of at least 12 months.

Once the period of comprehensive and active marketing is achieved, any other suitable employment use should be considered before change of use to residential or other use will be permitted.

The redevelopment of outmoded employment floorspace will be permitted to cater for modern business needs. The provision of improved ICT infrastructure will be encouraged in refurbished and redeveloped sites.

It is requested that supplementary wording be added to provide robust, ongoing safeguarding to the operations of existing businesses. Suggestive text is provided below:

“Development of a non-employment use will only be permitted when it would not detract from the employment use of the remaining sites in the area and; whether new development or changes of use impact on existing businesses, adequate mitigation measures are designed into the new site”.

In this context, it is considered vital that any new uses in the vicinity of the Delivery Office are designed and managed so that they are both cognisant of, and sensitive to, Royal Mail’s operations. Should sites adjacent to Royal Mail’s operations come forward for non-employment uses, such as residential or a hotel, they must be designed to attenuate the noise/amenity impact of any existing uses including Royal Mail’s operations and which can include working outside normal working hours. For example, scheme requirements may include amongst other things, triple glazing and due regard to the positioning of windows and private amenity space.

In addition, it may be necessary to manage potential adverse impacts through appropriate planning conditions.

This approach accords with adopted Government guidance set out in the National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF) (March 2012) which advises that local planning authorities should help achieve economic growth by planning proactively to meet the development needs of business and support an economy fit for the 21st century. The NPPF also advises that local planning authorities should support existing business sectors, taking account of whether they are expanding or contracting.

Furthermore, paragraph 123 of the NPPF states that planning policies should aim to recognize that existing businesses wanting to develop in continuance of their business should not have unreasonable restrictions put on them because of changes in nearby land uses since they were established. This is further supported by paragraph 9 of the NPPF, which provides amplification of what might be construed to be circumstances that lead to unreasonable restrictions:

“The planning system should contribute to the natural and local environment by preventing both new and existing development from contributing to or being put at unacceptable risks from or being adversely affected by, a range of factors including noise pollution.”

POLICY E3 - Maintaining employment capacity and improving employment floorspace

I OBJECT. The policy of resisting change of use from B1a to residential flies in the face of positive property market solutions for the regeneration of brownfield land and is contrary to national Government policy which been permits changes of use from B1a (offices) to C3 (residential) and has recently been reaffirmed.

5. I object to the claims made regarding sustainable employment policy
To pretend that the proposed development at Garlick’s Arch will engender significant employment opportunities is disingenuous. There is already an industrial development south of Burnt Common with brownfield land and infrastructure making it more suitable for development without the stark impact on environment and community.

Full response

- We believe that the existing government policy which has recently been made permanent of allowing change of use from B1a to C3 is sound
- Many office buildings reaching an age of more than 30/50 years become redundant in terms of energy compliance making them illegal to occupy for employment purposes and the cost of refurbishment makes them redundant and uneconomic
- The reality of market demand is that the gross development value of refurbished residential space is in excess of the gross development value of refurbished old office space in many locations (this gross development value assessment is supported by the analysis by property consultants GVA in the supporting evidence within the Allies and Morrison Masterplan for Guildford dated 2015)
- Office space is available and the turnover of office space in Guildford is slow, which would seem to indicate that there is excess office capacity relative to demand
- To resist change from B1a to C3 is contrary to the concept of brownfield first for residential development schemes
- To resist change from B1a to C3 in Strategic or Significant Employment Sites is contrary to the concept of integrated mixed use communities whereby the journey to work is minimised
- London has led the way with significant residential schemes being created from redundant office stock. A good example is the South Bank in London adjacent to Waterloo Station where in 2005 the Shell Centre has been converted into flats. Another early example is the 2000 scheme at Metro Central Heights at Elephant and Castle where the old Alexander Fleming House was converted to 435 flats by St George. GBC needs to adopt more modern trends and policies.
• Guildford is in dire need of increasing town centre residential development
• The feared loss of employment will be marginal and impractical to resist. Empty office blocks are not the answer.
• We regard the evidence base (Employment Land Needs Assessment 2015 and the Guildford Borough Economic Strategy 2013-31) as flawed and inconsistent and therefore unreliable evidence
• In relation to the targets and monitoring indicators, we do not consider that the targets are desirable or sound, and therefore do not consider that the monitoring indicators are valid. Why should Guildford target 3200 additional B class jobs when it has almost full employment? Why should no employment floorspace be lost, when some of it is inappropriate and not fit for purpose? Why is it desirable to increase B1/B2/B8 floorspace?

Comments on Guildford Borough Transport Study 2016

Page 2 – “address the historic infrastructure deficit” - developers are not required to do this?

Page 2 – It is wrong to claim that the cycle infrastructure along the A25 is good – and many cyclists are not careful, so putting them in contention with pedestrians is not a good idea.

Page 5 – The decision on Heathrow or Gatwick has yet to be taken but airport expansion in the south- east cannot be regarded as sustainable development and, although GBC has no control over such external decisions, its own growth agenda will drive a need for that expansion.

Page 6 An additional weakness is alternative “road closure diversion” routes for the SRN on the LRN

Page 6 Are the “Committed Improvements” actually committed and guaranteed to be delivered?

Page 7 The rail strategy does not provide for Wisley (residents would drive to stations)

Page 7 How long will it take to deliver Crossrail 2? “We hope that Crossrail 2 could be operational by 2030, but we are in the very early stages of planning and no decision to build it has been made.”

Page 7 Guildford platform capacity still many years away if ever.

Page 7 The rail strategy anticipates many improvements that have not been secured and may have unintended consequences if they proceed (see above)

Page 7 The Southern Rail Access to Heathrow #[(see the feasibility study dated December 2015 – although other proposals may be put forward (e.g. by Hounslow)]# is still in its early stages and would have significant impacts on open space beyond our Borough. For example, all options in the feasibility study would use Staines Moor SSSI and Option 4 would use Bedfont Lakes Country Park (a Local Nature Reserve and SNCI).

The various options would use existing commercial, residential and highways land in varying degrees. It seems unlikely that a solution will be delivered within the Plan period and removal of highly valued open space with high biodiversity (wherever it is in South-east England) cannot be regarded as sustainable.

Page 10 and 13 There is a stark contrast between the plans for the town centre which involve encouraging a reduction in traffic by reducing roadspace and the plans for the SRN and parts of the LRN which involve increasing capacity. While increasing capacity may reduce some areas of congestion in the short term, history suggests that traffic will rapidly grow until the improved roads are congested once again. This can hardly be regarded as sustainable. A sustainable option would be to apply a very substantial traffic infrastructure constraint on the housing number.

Page 10 While the A3 Guildford Tunnel aspiration has some environmental advantages over widening (in particular for residents living close to the A3), the environmental burden of the construction phase will be far higher and aspects such as location of ventilation stacks and their local effect (in all weather conditions) do not appear to have been considered.
Under Weaknesses the point about A roads in Guildford Town also applies to surrounding areas in the Borough and beyond. The anticipated improvements ignore existing congestion to the south and east of Guildford – presumably because SCC’s transport assessment methodology only identifies the tip of the iceberg. The current Plan will see increased congestion and a resultant reduction in air quality in many areas beyond the town centre.

“Largely commercial bus services” is seen as a strength whereas it should be seen as a weakness with a trend to reduced subsidies and the provision of bus services, especially in rural areas, being increasingly dependent on commercial gain. It is difficult to see this changing under the current Government cuts philosophy. The point “Subject to business case including funding” under Aspirations demonstrates this point.

We welcome the aspiration to “Expand the public realm through significantly extended pedestrian-priority areas” Guildford is well behind other areas in monitoring air quality let alone attempting to reduce it.

The introduction talks about reductions in some pollutants. This may be the case for pollutants such as Sulphur Dioxide, which contributed to the visible London smogs, but it is not true of diesel vehicle emissions which have increased as a result of Government policy including its aggressive growth agenda and population increase through immigration.

30 accessible electric vehicle charging points are only an aspiration and will be nowhere near enough if there is a real shift to electric vehicles.

It is clear from the “Strategy outcomes” that GBC would prefer not to follow other areas in pro-actively tackling air quality.

The timescales indicate that the main rail improvements (Including the two new stations) are unlikely to be delivered until the end of the Plan period or even later. The sites that are supposedly justified by their inclusion will generate a major increase in road traffic in the interim and it may be more difficult to achieve this aspect of modal shift in the longer term. The same can be said about the other traffic infrastructure proposals. Residential development is being scheduled before the infrastructure that it will need.

Monitoring – “Increase” needs to be in proportion to population growth as otherwise failure will taken as success. “An Increase in average vehicle speeds” is inconsistent with the desire to reduce the number of persons killed or seriously injured. For example, some A roads pass through residential areas where pedestrians, including schoolchildren, are trying to cross the road at peak times. It is noted that increase in vehicle speeds is only desired in the morning. Going home from work does not seem to matter!

NPPF and NPPG The Plan ignores the points concerning Green Belt and protecting the environment. GBC have tried to get round this by spinning their messages and using misleading statistics including a major understatement of the area of Green Belt to be removed.

Planning Update (March 2015) – The point in this update concerning Green Belt has been ignored

Monitoring Indicators :

Ten years is far too long to wait for information on whether the approach is working or not. The target requires only an increase. This would permit an increase less than that in line with any population growth to be regarded as success. The bar has been set well within the failure range.

I object to the ill-informed policy of resisting change of use from B1a to residential because it flies in the face of positive property market solutions for the regeneration of brownfield land. The recent Employment Land Need Assessment shows a reduction in demand of 3.9 hectares for industrial land for the whole borough, so the allocation of 10 hectares at Send, in the Green Belt, is not required in the countryside.

The word 'maximum' in the 2016 plan has been changed to 'minimum', which could permit unlimited industrial development in the Green Belt.

Industrial development in this area will create a great deal of additional car and heavy vehicle traffic and cause frequent gridlocks on the local roads.

I object to Policy E3 maintaining employment capacity I object to the ill-informed policy of resisting change of use from B1a to residential because it flies in the face of positive property market solutions for the regeneration of brownfield land. It is also contrary to current government policy which has recently been reaffirmed and permits a change of use from B1a (offices) to C3 (residential). I believe that the existing government policy which has recently been made permanent of allowing change of use from B1a to C3 is sound Many office buildings reaching an age of more than 30/50 years become redundant in terms of energy compliance making them illegal to occupy for employment purposes and the cost of refurbishment makes them redundant and uneconomic The reality of market demand is that the gross development value of refurbished residential space is in excess of the gross development value of refurbished old office space in many locations (this gross development value assessment is supported by the analysis by property consultants GVA in the supporting evidence within the Allies and Morrison Masterplan for Guildford dated 2015) To resist change from B1a to C3 is contrary to the concept of brownfield first for residential development schemes. To resist change from B1a to C3 in Strategic or Significant Employment Sites is contrary to the concept of integrated mixed use communities whereby the journey to work is minimised. London has led the way with significant residential schemes being created from redundant office stock. A good example is the South Bank in London adjacent to Waterloo Station where in 2005 the Shell Centre has been converted into flats. Another early example is the 2000 scheme at Metro Central Heights at Elephant and Castle where the old Alexander Fleming House was converted to 435 flats by St George. GBC needs to adopt more modern trends and policies.

Representation
Part 1: Policy E3 - Employment Policy

Policy E3 of the emerging Local Plan considers employment capacity. This policy protects employment floorspace within the Borough, this includes Strategic Employment Sites, Locally Significant Employment Sites and existing employment sites that are not specifically allocated for employment use. This could potentially apply to the existing Site given the historic and present employment use which remains on part of the Site.

The Policy sets a requirement for a 12 month active and comprehensive marketing period for the current employment use of the site if it is proposed to change the use of the existing employment site. TCG objects to this Policy as it adds unnecessary barriers for the redevelopment of existing employment sites that are more suited for alternative uses.

Sites that are in an existing employment use, but allocated within the emerging Local Plan for an alternative use, should not be protected by this policy and subject to the requirement of a 12 month marketing period as the site allocation confirms the acceptability of the site for the alternative use. In this regard, the Evidence Base’s identification of the Site for alternative use should offer sufficient justification to override the submission of any further suitability evidence. As such, Policy E3 should be amended to exclude the marketing requirement for existing employment sites allocated for an alternative use within the Local Plan. The third bullet point of Policy E3 relating to employment floorspace outside designated employment sites should be reworded as follows (our additions):

"Employment floorspace will be protected in line with latest needs assessment and the loss be resisted outside designated employment sites, unless the site is allocated for an alternative use. Change of use will only be acceptable if evidence is provided of active and comprehensive marketing of the site for its current use (offices, research and development or industrial) for a continuous period of at least 12 months. If the site is allocated for an alternative use within the Local Plan, the marketing period is not required”.

This is considered acceptable as it will deliver sites that have been allocated as suitable for alternative uses and required to deliver the overall plan strategy. It will also ensure the deliverability of the site allocation and the important contribution it makes towards the Plan’s residential targets.

The NPPF (Paragraph 22) highlights that planning policy should avoid the long term protection of sites for employment use where there is no reasonable prospect of the site being used for that purpose. Therefore to ensure the emerging Local Plan is consistent with National Policy in terms of being ‘sound’ (NPPF, Paragraph 182), flexibility should be applied to this policy to allow the release of employment sites where there is not considered to be a reasonable prospect of the Site being used for that purpose.

It is not considered that Policy E3 as worded is sound on the basis it is not compliant with NPPF paragraph 22.

NPPF paragraph 22 states that planning policies should avoid the long term protections of sites allocated for employment use where there is no reasonable prospect of a site being used for that purpose. The proposed current wording does not provide enough flexibility to avoid the forced protection of sites which are no longer considered suitable for employment use.

The third bullet of the policy (which relates to resisting the loss of all employment uses outside of Strategic Employment Sites and Locally Significant Employment Sites, as defined in Policy E1) and requiring evidence of marketing will also cover sites within Guildford Town Centre. This blanket approach is unreasonable and unrealistic, and would serve to prevent prompt redevelopment in response to fast-moving markets demands for ‘Town Centre’ uses that are encouraged and supported by the NPPF. Town Centre uses normally generate employment and other economic benefits in their own right. With the third bullet applying as at present to town centres it will also present a barrier to residential development in a sustainable location which will also support town centre vitality and viability. Re-population of town centres is generally considered a desirable; adding to the activity in the centre, facilitating the redevelopment or re-use of under-used or vacant sites and buildings; in a sustainable location. The NPPF recognises the need for planning policy to react quickly to the changing economic climate, which will be prevented with the policy as currently worded. It therefore runs counter to the NPPF.

19 POLICY E3 MAINTAINING EMPLOYMENT CAPACITY
19.1 I object to Policy E3 maintaining employment capacity
19.2 I object to the ill-informed policy of resisting change of use from B1a to residential because it flies in the face of positive property market solutions for the regeneration of brownfield land. 19.3 I believe that the existing government policy which has recently been made permanent of allowing change of use from B1a to C3 is sound
19.4 Many office buildings reaching an age of more than 30/50 years become redundant in terms of energy compliance making them illegal to occupy for employment purposes and the cost of refurbishment makes them redundant and uneconomic.

19.5 The reality of market demand is that the gross development value of refurbished residential space is in excess of the gross development value of refurbished old office space in many locations (this gross development value assessment is supported by the analysis by property consultants GVA in the supporting evidence within the Allies and Morrison Masterplan for Guildford dated 2015).

19.6 To resist change from B1a to C3 is contrary to the concept of brownfield first for residential development schemes.

19.7 To resist change from B1a to C3 in Strategic or Significant Employment Sites is contrary to the concept of integrated mixed use communities whereby the journey to work is minimised.

GBC needs to adopt more modern trends and policies.

19.9 Guildford is in dire need of increasing town centre residential development.

19.10 The feared loss of employment will be marginal and impractical to resist. Empty office blocks are not the answer.

Policy E3 seeks to maintain employment capacity through the protection of employment land. Three categories of employment floor space are specified related to Strategic Employment Sites, Locally Significant Employment Sites and other employment floor space outside designated employment sites.

Whilst we acknowledge the Council’s desire to protect employment floor space within the designated employment areas, we consider that protection of undesignated floor space, in particular office floorspace, with evidence of marketing expected over at least a 12 month period is too onerous having regard to the balance of need for alternative uses.

Paragraph 22 of the National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF) indicates that planning policies should avoid the long term protection of sites allocated for employment use where there is no reasonable prospect of a site being used for that purpose. The NPPF notes that where there is no reasonable prospect, applications for alternative uses of land and buildings should be treated on their merits having regard to market signals and the relative need for different land uses to support sustainable local communities.

On 13 October 2015, the Government announced that the temporary permitted development rights allowing change of use from offices to residential would be made permanent and these rights have since been confirmed through amendments to the General Permitted Development Order. The Housing and Planning Minister, Brandon Lewis, said at the time of the announcement: “We’re determined that, both in Whitehall and in town halls, everything is done to get the homes we need built. Today’s measures will mean we can tap into the potential of underused buildings to offer new homes for first-time buyers and families long into the future, breathing new life into our neighbourhoods and at the same protecting our precious green belt”.

Such an approach is particularly pertinent to an area such as Guildford which is surrounded by green belt and which currently only has a 2.4 year supply of specific deliverable housing sites based on the Council’s latest Annual Monitoring Report for 2014/2015 published in October 2015.

Having regard to the above, we consider that the policy as currently drafted is unsound on the basis that it is not justified. It does not provide the most appropriate strategy having regard to the clear need to deliver new housing within the Borough.

POLICY E3 MAINTAINING EMPLOYMENT CAPACITY

I object to Policy E3 maintaining employment capacity.

I object to the ill-informed policy of resisting change of use from B1a to residential because it flies in the face of positive property market solutions for the regeneration of brownfield land. It is also contrary to current government policy which has recently been reaffirmed and permits a change of use from B1a (offices) to C3 (residential).

I believe that the existing government policy which has recently been made permanent of allowing change of use from B1a to C3 is sound.

Many office buildings reaching an age of more than 30/50 years become redundant in terms of energy compliance making them illegal to occupy for employment purposes and the cost of refurbishment makes them redundant and uneconomic.

The reality of market demand is that the gross development value of refurbished residential space is in excess of the gross development value of refurbished old office space in many locations (this gross development value assessment is supported by the analysis by property consultants GVA in the supporting evidence within the Allies and Morrison Masterplan for Guildford dated 2015).

To resist change from B1a to C3 is contrary to the concept of brownfield first for residential development schemes.

To resist change from B1a to C3 in Strategic or Significant Employment Sites is contrary to the concept of integrated mixed use communities whereby the journey to work is minimised.

London has led the way with significant residential schemes being created from redundant office stock. A good example is the South Bank in London adjacent to Waterloo Station where in 2005 the Shell Centre has been converted into flats. Another early example is the 2000 scheme at Metro Central Heights at Elephant and Castle where the old Alexander Fleming House was converted to 435 flats by St George. GBC needs to adopt more modern trends and policies.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

1. I OBJECT to the loss of rural employment (Policy E3)

Policy E3 supports the retention and development of local services and community facilities in our inset and identified villages. Yet the development at Garlick’s Arch (A43) would result in the loss of four existing successful rural businesses, which have been in existence for over 30 years and another two businesses for over 9 years. These businesses employ dozens of people; none of them want to leave their premises. The Plan does not promote rural employment; rather it will result in the loss of existing local rural businesses.

It advises that employment floorspace will be protected across the Borough, particularly on the Strategic Employment Sites and Locally Significant Employment Sites, unless marketing evidence (varying levels of detail dependent on the site’s employment status) is provided to justify its loss. Zurich supports GBC’s intent within Policy E3 however considers that the policy is too rigid and should be more flexibly worded to allow for other forms of evidence (such as: viability, building/structural survey evidence, local market assessment and employment land study) to justify the loss of employment floorspace. Each proposal should be considered on a site by site basis. Furthermore, sites that are in an existing employment use, but allocated within the emerging Local Plan for an alternative use (such as Broadford Business Park), should not be protected by this policy and subject to the marketing requirement, as the site allocation confirms the acceptability of the site for the alternative use. The policy wording should be changed to reflect this.</td>

<td>This policy places an unnecessary level of restriction in proposing to place significant restrictions on the loss of floorspace outside of ‘designated employment sites.’ The best employment sites have been assessed as part of the Evidence Base and are specifically protected. Policies E1 and E2 also reflect the guidance of the NPPF and are positively worded. Policy E3, however, goes too far and does not reflect the guidance set out at paragraph 22 of the NPPF. The reliance on marketing for a period of 12 months will stifle redevelopment for other uses, in particular residential development. The prescriptive guidance at paragraph 4.4.27 is also too draconian and has no place in positive plan making.

Any restrictions on designated sites should also allow for a balanced judgement to be made including impact on neighbouring uses and other considerations, including the Council’s current housing supply position.

Alternative use should also not be prejudiced by the need to assess any other suitable employment use prior to residential use.

Importantly, the policy should make it explicitly clear that these restrictions should not apply to any Site Allocations.

1.68 The revised policy wording continues to place an unnecessary level of restriction on the loss of floorspace outside of ‘designated employment sites.’

1.69 The best employment sites have been assessed as part of the Evidence Base and it is proposed will be subject to extensive protection.

1.70 Policies E1 and E2 reflect the guidance of the NPPF and are positively worded. Policy E3, however, goes too far and does not reflect the guidance set out at paragraph 22 of the NPPF. The subtext, paragraph 4.4.25 refers specifically to the loss of office space as a driver for retaining employment land, however, the Council could consider other more specifically targeted mechanisms to protect office space e.g. An Article 4 direction.

1.72 The quality and location of employment land should also play a role in decision making and the Council must also allow for a balanced judgement to be made to include an assessment of the impact on neighbouring uses and the pressing need for other forms of development, most notably housing.

1.73 As set out in the Guildford Borough Employment Land Needs Assessment 2017 (Page ii) there is a healthy existing pipeline of 38,357 sqm of consented floorspace for B1c, B2 and B8 uses.

1.74 Alternative use should also not be prejudiced by the need to assess any other suitable employment use prior to residential use.

1.75 Most crucially, the policy still fails to make it explicitly clear that these restrictions will not apply to Site Allocations where these are designated for alternative uses.

UNSOUND: The wording of the Third Bullet point should be amended as follows:
• Employment floorspace which is not otherwise allocated for development in the Plan will be protected in line with latest need assessments. Redevelopment to alternative use will, be permitted where it can be demonstrated that; there is no longer a requirement for employment use, the site is no longer suitable for employment uses or the site has a negative impact on surrounding uses.

Refer to attached report for confirmation of our client's support for the proposed revisions to Policy E3.
5.1 Policy E3 seeks to “sustain and enhance” employment capacity (land, floorspace and jobs) in the Borough. It advises that employment floorspace will be protected across the Borough, particularly on the Strategic Employment Sites and Locally Significant Employment Sites, unless marketing evidence (varying levels of detail dependent on the site’s employment status) is provided to justify its loss.

5.2 Zurich supports the flexibility that has been included in the revised wording of Policy E3 and the clear guidance provided in Appendix A2, particularly in terms of the evidence required to justify the loss of an employment use. The proposed checklist included within a new SPD to appraise evidence of marketing and to ensure a consistent approach is taken for all application is equally welcome.

24. We repeat our previous representation in July 2016 in relation to draft Policy E3. Draft Policy E3 of the emerging Local Plan considers employment capacity. This policy protects employment floorspace within the Borough, this includes Strategic Employment Sites, Locally Significant Employment Sites and existing employment sites that are not specifically allocated for employment use. This could potentially apply to the existing Site given the historic and present employment use which remains on part of the Site.

25. The Policy sets a requirement for a 12 month active and comprehensive marketing period for the current employment use of the site if it is proposed to change the use of the existing employment site. TCG objects to this Policy as it adds unnecessary barriers for the redevelopment of existing employment sites that are more suited for alternative uses.

26. Sites that are in an existing employment use, but allocated within the emerging Local Plan for an alternative use, should not be protected by this Policy and subject to the requirement of a 12 month marketing period as the site allocation confirms the acceptability of the site for the alternative use. In this regard, the Evidence Base’s identification of the Site for alternative use should offer sufficient justification to override the submission of any further suitability evidence. As such, Policy E3 should be amended to exclude the marketing requirement for existing employment sites allocated for an alternative use within the Local Plan. The third bullet point of Policy E3 relating to employment floorspace outside designated employment sites should be reworded as follows (our additions):

• Employment floorspace will be protected in line with latest needs assessment and the loss be resisted outside designated employment sites, unless the site is allocated for an alternative use. Change of use will only be acceptable if evidence is provided of active and comprehensive marketing of the site for its current use (of offices, research and development or industrial) for a continuous period of at least 12 months. If the site is allocated for an alternative use within the Local Plan, the marketing period is not required.

27. This is considered acceptable as it will deliver sites that have been allocated as suitable for alternative uses and required to deliver the overall plan strategy. It will also ensure the deliverability of the site allocation and the important contribution it makes towards the Plan’s residential targets.
28. The NPPF (Paragraph 22) highlights that planning policy should avoid the long term protection of sites for employment use where there is no reasonable prospect of the site being used for that purpose. Therefore to ensure the emerging Local Plan is consistent with National Policy in terms of being ‘sound’ (NPPF, Paragraph 182), flexibility should be applied to this policy to allow the release of employment sites where there is not considered to be a reasonable prospect of the Site being used for that purpose.

Proposed Submission Local Plan Regulation 19 representations (2016 and 2017)

Document part: Policy E4 - Surrey Research Park
The Guildford Society supports the protection of the Surrey Research Park in Policy E4, and recognises the need to expand the park by 10Ha, even though we regret the incursion onto Green Belt land. We believe there needs to be sufficient expansion space for the Research Park in this plan and safeguarded for subsequent plans.

The Society agrees that Surrey Research Park is a critical economic resource for the borough. It is aware that the Research Park is in danger of suffering from limits being placed on its growth due to infrastructure issues, e.g. access to A3, difficulties getting to airports etc. We believe it is important to ensure the park is well linked to high quality space in the town centre, Pirbright and other centres. We therefore support the Guildford West station as one means to create a sustainable transport link to the town centre. We note the plan is silent on how Surrey Research Park to Pirbright links might be supported.

POLICY E4: Surrey Research Park

WHPC has no comments on this policy.

I object to policy E4 Surrey research Park. I support the maintenance of research, development and design activities, in any science, including social science, that is complementary to the activities of the University of Surrey at the Surrey Research Park. I object however to the completely unnecessary expansion of the Research Park into a larger Business Park. I believe that the planning policy going forward for the Surrey Research Park should be to maintain and enhance the integrity of its research base allowing for the economic value add to the local economy of knowledge and technology transfer from the University. I believe that B1b should be the primary use class for the Research Park and that applications for B1a should be resisted due to the danger of dilution of the core purpose and reputation of the park. I object to the inclusion of B1c uses which is inappropriate and unnecessary. Research parks based on the early UK technology transfer exemplars of the Cambridge and Oxford need careful monitoring, nurturing and protection to ensure the integrity and quality of the park is maintained and the park continues to be a destination for innovation and enterprise. There is a danger for research parks to be overwhelmed by short sighted development opportunities being taken by park managers provided by standard office activities and administrative functions which in time turn them into standard business parks which can be found anywhere in the country. Their relative low density and attractiveness make them targets for “any other” office user. Research parks that lose their way stop being the location of choice for new innovative enterprises.

I hope the Surrey Research Park in Guildford remains focussed on a broad spectrum of scientific research including computer science, bio-chemistry, design, space-science, eco-science, health science, software development, laser technology, media-science, artificial intelligence, robotics and super-manufacturing. Monitoring indicators should include new start-ups and new patents created. Facilities should be provided whereby new small businesses can secure premises under subsidised licence fee arrangements with no onerous rent or lease commitments! I support the idea of a variety of sizes of unit including some small units (between 15 – 80 sq m) bearing in mind one workstation is 10 sq m. Consideration should be given to the concept of shared “enterprise hubs” where individuals can take pay as you go workstations in shared spaces similar to touch down business centres similar to the “enterprise village” concept! I object to the policy of any new extension of the research park more than the existing 14% already provided for within the park or within the footprint of the park. The Surrey Research Park currently extends to 65,000 sq m. There is already granted consent to expand to a further 9,000 sq m (14%) This space has been available for 10 years and is still to find a taker. The past trend of expansion of Office/R & D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 based on ELNA 2015 derived from VoA analysis. The ELNA 2015 calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7% The data point for our analysis is today in 2016 so we have 17 years to go to the end of the plan period. The necessary growth in floor space over the plan period is therefore 17 years x 0.7 = 12% which is less than the current expansion space of 14%. The research park is developed at a plot ratio of 25%. This could be increased to 50% within the same footprint of the existing park without damage to its amenity. The actual current land use for development in the park is in fact only 12.5% because most buildings are 2-storey.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Attached documents:
| Policy | E4 4 | I believe that proof of a business being non viable before change of use, should remain (this has been removed) as easing the way to change of use increases value and restricts stock. This should not prevent business premises from being re-housed, where housing is a priority or where new transport hubs improve economic viability.

I can see no reason why restrictions on change of use should not apply to other classes of business? |
| E4 Surrey Research Park | | |
| 4.4.34 The NPPF | A sentence is included from the NPPF that supports local business. This however must be balanced with all other parts of the NPPF, including the protection of the Greenbelt, historic environment and development or growth must be sustainable. I strongly object to the use of what was Greenbelt land being used for 'low density' business. Permitting low rise office and research space with vast levels of landscape and surface car park puts huge pressure on the borough to release more Greenbelt and this is not sustainable. |
| 4.4.38 Omission | The plan notes the Park's location in relation to the A3, Sports centre and Holiday Inn but omits to include two key sites that lead to high volume traffic, namely the Tesco super store and the Hospital. |
| 4.4.40 removal of detail relating to the new extension | The plan could retain this information. 'Mixed use' development is far too generic. |
| 4.4.40 | I would like to see further detail relating to floor space used, density and use of other space such as car parks and landscaping. I am concerned that this land is not being used efficiently. The Local Plan must include policies that ensure space is well used ie multi-storey or subterranean car parking, medium density building and type of business. Failure to do so, could see the research park being used for other types of business which would not necessarily be in keeping with the overall ethos and direction that Guildford aspires to. |
| 4.4.37 omission | The original planning permission also stipulated that traffic should not increase by more than 5%. An independent review is needed to verify traffic flows as data produced by the University is not impartial and has manipulated results by removing sections of traffic deemed to be excluded? I attach a clip from Surrey mail 1988 in which the University seeks to prevent planning permission for the Tesco development on the basis of traffic issues. In almost 30 years, traffic is markedly worse than it was then and forecasters of congestion at this point have been proven correct. Traffic is a major issue at this point and failure to effectively deal with it as well as deal with | future growth will affect the integrity of the whole Plan and put other businesses at risk (as many will leave due to congestion) as was proven by the evidence base.

| Policy E4 | Proposals should be designed and landscaped to maximize use of land as well as complementing the setting. |

| 4.4.1 | The density usage of 30,000 sq m in 10 hectares is an outrageous waste of space. 30,000 sq m could be incorporated into existing space whilst maintaining its character and without releasing more Greenbelt land at this stage. The existing site is now brownfield and must be optimally utilized before spread is permitted. I strongly oppose plans for low lying sprawl especially for commercial use. Land must be used wisely. Any plan that focuses on delivering timescales as a mark of success but does not monitor the quality or quantity against the wider plan and NPPF cannot be sustainable. Permitting sprawl on this scale will reduce scope for development and ability to enjoy our countryside setting for future generations. This is against the principals of sustainability and the NPPF |

The current Surrey Research Park boundary expands into Blackwell Farm (site A26). The Research Park boundary needs to be re-defined to keep the special nature of the area; the map should be re-drawn to show the changes.

Policy E4 - Surrey Research Park

I support the Research Park and its specialism, but I object to the current need to expand. The land hungry current ground level car parking for Research Park should be utilised for shared multi-storey or underground parking and the freed-up car parks used for the Park development. All new Research Park development should include underground car parking, as in other countries.

Policy E4: Surrey Research Park

Summary

I support the maintenance of research, development and design activities, in any science, including social science, that is complementary to the activities of the University of Surrey at the Surrey Research Park. I do not believe that there is a need to expand the Research Park into a larger Business Park. I believe that the planning policy going forward for the Surrey Research Park should be to maintain and enhance the integrity of its research base allowing for the economic value add to the local economy of knowledge and technology transfer from the University. I believe that B1b (should be the primary use class for the Research Park and that applications for B1a should be resisted due to the danger of dilution of the core purpose and reputation of the park. I do not believe the inclusion of B1c uses is appropriate or necessary.
Detailed response:

- Research parks based on the early UK technology transfer exemplars of the Cambridge and Oxford need careful monitoring, nurturing and protection to ensure the integrity and quality of the park is maintained and the park continues to be a destination for innovation and enterprise.

- There is a danger for research parks to be overwhelmed by short-sighted development opportunities being taken by park managers provided by standard office activities and administrative functions which in time turn them into standard business parks which can be found anywhere in the country. Their relative low density and attractiveness make them targets for “any other” office user.

- Research parks that lose their way stop being the location of choice for new innovative enterprises.

- The Surrey Research Park in Guildford needs to be focused on a broad spectrum of scientific research including computer science, bio-chemistry, design, space-science, eco-science, health science, software development, laser technology, media-science, artificial intelligence, robotics and super-manufacturing.

- Monitoring indicators should include new start-ups and new patents created.

- Facilities should be provided whereby new small businesses can secure premises under subsidised licence fee arrangements with no onerous rent or lease commitments.

- I support the idea of a variety of sizes of unit including some small units (between 15 – 80 sq m) bearing in mind one workstation is 10 sq m.

- Consideration should be given to the concept of shared “enterprise hubs” where individuals can take pay as you go workstations in shared spaces similar to touch down business centres similar to the “enterprise village” concept.

- I do not support the policy of a new extension of the research park more than the existing 14% already provided for within the park.

- The Surrey Research Park currently extends to 65,000 sq m.

- There is already granted consent to expand to a further 9,000 sq m (14%) This space has been available for 10 years and is still to find a taker.

- The past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 based on ELNA 2015 derived from VoA analysis.

- The ELNA 2015 calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7%.

- The data point for our analysis is today in 2016 so we have 17 years to go to the end of the plan period.

- The necessary growth in floor space over the plan period is therefore 17 years x 0.7 = 12% which is less than the current expansion space of 14%.

Nature Conservation value of the site is protected or improved.

In relation to the Target there is no evidence of a justified need for additional B1a and c use. I consider that the existing land, used efficiently, will accommodate realistic expansion of B1b uses for high tech added value purposes. Existing planning permissions must be built before any additional green belt land is earmarked for development. The target of 35,000 sq metres of additional employment land are not justified by the evidence base.

I regard the evidence base (Employment Land Needs Assessment 2015) as flawed and inconsistent and therefore unreliable evidence.

POLICY E4 - Surrey Research Park
I OBJECT. The Council are required by the NPPF to facilitate commercial science and technology clusters. But, as with Policies H1 and E2 above, this policy seems to be dictated more by the ambitions of Surrey University than the public interest. In an extremely tangled sentence, it says that the Research Park will be “protected for business use… in any science… that is complementary to the activities of the University of Surrey.”

This fails to distinguish adequately between the University’s public role as a state-funded, academic institution and its private, financial interest in profit-making business spin-offs. It ignores enterprises that might be commercial rivals of the University. And it fails to consider the public harm done by turning the Research Park into a larger Business Park, such as the loss of Green Belt social and environmental capital.

B1b should be the primary use class for the Research Park and applications for B1a should be resisted given the danger of diluting the core purpose and reputation of the park. The inclusion of B1c uses is inappropriate and unnecessary.

I find this policy very strange, when there is none on other business parks or (and of much greater concern due to history) the University.

I do not support the policy of expanding the Research Park onto Blackwell Farm which is high quality Greenbelt and which has recently been identified as of sufficient quality to be included in the Surrey Hills AONB review (see the Land Management Services independent report commissioned by Worplesdon, Compton and Wanborough PC’s - June 2016)

We find this policy very strange to be included, when one on the University is not (and was removed from the 2003 plan in the 2007 review by the secretary of state. If inclusion of this type of policy is sound then we would expect the reintroduction of a policy on the university area of Manor Park (next door).

- Expansion of the Research Park onto green belt and the setting to the AONB requires exceptional circumstances, which have not been outlined in the plan. This policy does not therefore comply with planning law

- There is ample opportunity for the Research Park to grow without increasing its existing footprint - there is already capacity for the growth predicted in the ELNA and, if further growth were needed, it could build more densely by utilising space above its extensive surface car parks.

- Expansion of the Research Park at Blackwell Farm is not sound as there is no viable access to Blackwell Farm, and it would not be possible to provide such an access that was viable from an economic or highways point of view

- GBC has shown no Duty to cooperate in planning for an extension of the Research Park

- GBC has not explored in detail any joined-up approaches to providing employment land across the region, dismissing off-hand such ideas on the basis that “we don’t want Guildford to be a dormitory town”. [Stephen Mansbridge, April 1, 2014].
In particular GBC is ignoring Bordon Eco-town, a brownfield site outside the Green Belt, which is less than 30 minutes from Guildford by road, and is looking for high quality businesses to locate there. This is exactly the right area for expansion of some of Guildford’s businesses (particularly those on the Research Park).

There is also opportunity to develop rail links using existing lines and disused MOD lines.

In the Whitehill and Bordon Inward Investment Strategy 2012 Consultation Draft the masterplan recognises that “the town does not operate in isolation of its neighbouring business centres, such as Alton, Petersfield and Farnham and larger economic centres such as Portsmouth, Farnborough, Basingstoke and Guildford.”

I object to changes in policy E4 Surrey Research Park, ,which is earmarked for a 10-11 Ha expansion that is not supported by the findings of the ELNA 2017.

Neither is this expansion justified by the Research Park’s own growth, which has stagnated over the past 20 years, growing by just 14,000 sqm since 1996.

According the University of Surrey[8]:

“The original timescale for the development of the Surrey Research Park was 10 years. However, it has taken nearly 30 years to achieve 90% developed. Only sites for larger building still remain undeveloped after this period. The areas originally designated to micro and small companies was completed within the original planned 10 years. The slower rate of developments for larger companies reflects the fact that today many larger companies are not locating their R&D effort in a single large building but are looking to deploy their research activities as small specialist groups close to specific host organisations that have defined technology competencies.”

After 30 years, the Surrey Research Park still has capacity 6,769 sqm of R&D office space on its original 71,250 sqm site, and uptake on the Park has declined. This, together with Dr Parry’s statement that the demand is now for “small specialist groups close to host organisations” suggests that there is no need to extend the Research Park further. Small specialist groups can be located in the town centre, which is more sustainable in terms of traffic movements.

[Figure 6] – Cumulative gross built space on the Surrey Research Park since its inception (sq m) by year. Source The Surrey Research Park; A Case Study of Strategic Planning for Economic Development, Parry M, September 2012 Were it necessary for GBC to find 30,000 sqm of B1b office space, there are other options that do not require any intrusion into the green belt or onto land that forms the setting to an AONB. For example:

A. It would be possible to provide this on the existing low-density Surrey Research Park. The existing Research Park, (which provides 65,000 sq m2 of office space on 27 hectares of land) is developed at a plot ratio of 25%. This could be increased to 50% within the footprint of the existing park without any adverse impact. The University Estates Strategy shows that the University is planning to build up to 323,200 sqm across a smaller area of Manor Park (24.6 hectares) – this is six times the plot ratio of the Research Park, and still at the low end for a typical development in a major town such as Guildford. GBC’s approach shows a clear desire to maintain low-density development and to extend this low-density development onto neighbouring countryside.

B. It would be possible (and more sustainable in terms of reduced traffic movements) to provide this 30,000 sqm of office space within the town centre, on sites that have currently been allocated for retail space. Much of this space is closer to the University of Surrey than Blackwell Farm.

There is no evidence that the retail space within the town centre needs to be expanded by 41,000 sqm at North Street. There is falling demand for retail space in Guildford and other town centres, due to the rise in online shopping (which jumped 16 per cent between January 2015 and January 2016).

The Centre for Retail Research Report[9] forecasts that by 2018:
• Total store numbers will fall by 22%
• The share of online retail sales will rise from 12.7% (2012) to 21.5% by 2018 or the end of the decade
• 41% of town centres will lose 27,638 stores in the next five years

There is no evidence to support GBC’s assumption that Guildford will buck these trends. Its ability to do so won’t be helped by increased congestion, resulting from proposals on Blackwell Farm.

C. A further option would be to expand the Surrey Research Park at Whitehill & Bordon, a former army barracks and brownfield site located 30 minutes south of Guildford by car. This new eco-town is seeking to attract exactly the sort of businesses that currently operate on the Surrey Research Park. The masterplan[10] for this ecotown recognises that:

“... the town does not operate in isolation of its neighbouring business centres, such as Alton, Petersfield and Farnham, and larger economic centres, such as Portsmouth, Farnborough, Basingstoke and Guildford. Links to these locations present opportunities to capture investment from important business sectors, such as defence, aerospace and communications, and higher education and research and from the Universities of Surrey, Portsmouth and Creative Arts at Farnham”

Duty to cooperate with Whitehill & Bordon clearly does suit the landowner and a local authority which wants to generate tax revenues within its own borough. There is a conflict of interest here, which means that GBC isn’t keen to promote this option. What is perceived by the Council to be good for them is bad in terms of planning, and bad for the environment.

Any arguments for expanding the Surrey Research Park by 30,000 sqm at its current location (sandwiched between the A31, A3 and A323) are untenable from a traffic point of view. The Surrey Research Park is in the wrong place and has contributed significantly to the traffic problems on the west of Guildford since its inception.

Problems with developing a business park at this location were identified in the 1980s at the time permission for the Research Park was first sought, and again when the University expanded onto what was then Manor Farm. The University and Hospital both objected to the nearby Tesco development in 1988 on the grounds of the traffic impact the superstore would have on their operations. Since then, the widening of Gill Avenue has provided some relief to traffic in this area, but congestion continues to be a chronic problem on the surrounding road network at morning and evening peak hours, with traffic backing up along local, residential roads and onto the A3. This problem would be further compounded by the addition of 35,000 sqm of offices, not to mention 1,800 residences and two schools proposed at the adjacent Blackwell Farm, and a new station at Park Barn.

I also object to the continued proposal to extend the Research Park to classes B1a and B1c (light industrial). This is both inappropriate and contrary to the original outline planning permission for the Research Park (as acknowledged in para 4.4.37 of the draft Plan). The land on which the Research Park sits was funded in part by Surrey County Council on behalf of the people of Surrey for educational purposes. It was not intended to become an industrial estate.

Low-density and surface car parks on the Surrey Research Park demonstrate wasteful use of space.

The University has plenty of space on the existing Surrey Research Park for expanding its buildings. The current site is full of surface car parking, huge empty plots, extensive greenery and landscaping.

The University markets this site as Low Density and should do very much more to EFFICIENTLY use its land before taking more of our countryside for development. They should invest in building out the huge empty plots, filling the empty offices and building over their car parks.

This proposed extension will also damage a very important Wildlife corridor, which is Ancient Woodland. It will also increase flooding in Wood Street, Fairlands, Park Barn and Guildford.

POLICY E4 - Surrey Research Park

I OBJECT. The Council are required by the NPPF to facilitate commercial science and technology clusters. But, as with Policies H1 and E2 above, this policy seems to be dictated more by the ambitions of Surrey University than the public interest. In an extremely tangled sentence, it says that the Research Park will be “protected for business use… in any science… that is complementary to the activities of the University of Surrey.”

This fails to distinguish adequately between the University’s public role as a state-funded, academic institution and its private, financial interest in profit-making business spin-offs. It ignores enterprises that might be commercial rivals of the University. And it fails to consider the public harm done by turning the Research Park into a larger Business Park, such as the loss of Green Belt social and environmental capital.

B1b should be the primary use class for the Research Park and applications for B1a should be resisted given the danger of diluting the core purpose and reputation of the park. The inclusion of B1c uses is inappropriate and unnecessary.

Policy E4 - Surrey Research Park

OBJECTION. This appears to allow the expansion of the Research Park into a more general Business Park. It should certainly not be allowed to take up Green Belt. It has already had a very detrimental impact on the views towards Guildford from the A31 Hogs Back route.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?
I object to this proposal. Extension of the Research Park in to Blackwell Farm is wholly inappropriate in the greenbelt.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

The Surrey Research needs to be focussed on a broad spectrum of scientific research including computer science, biochemistry, design, space-science, eco-science, health science, software development, laser technology, media-science, artificial intelligence, robotics and super-manufacturing

We do not believe that there is a need to expand the Research Park into a larger Business Park. We believe that the planning policy going forward for the Surrey Research Park should be to maintain and enhance the integrity of its research base allowing for the economic value add to the local economy of knowledge and technology transfer from the University.

Class B1b should be the primary use class for the Research Park and applications for B1a should be resisted due to the danger of dilution of the core purpose and reputation of the Park. We do not believe the inclusion of B1c uses is appropriate or necessary.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Key parts of the evidence are still missing, flawed or based on withheld assumptions. The Strategic Housing Market Assessment overstates need, the Green Belt and Countryside Study uses a flawed approach, and the Transport Assessment is too late and incomplete to be relied upon to inform the Plan.

The Plan excludes the Town Centre Master Plan, which plays a pivotal role and fails to address the results of infrastructure difficulties, or use these and Greenbelt to constrain the level of development.
This document omits many important points that are to be addressed at a future stage. The information is, however, very relevant and necessary and without it the document is weak on evidence. The overview given does not assess the capacity of existing supply to accommodate future growth. The paper acknowledges that almost 9% of commercial premises are empty and this somewhat flies in the face of arguments to vastly increase the volume until the reasons are understood. Around 30% of businesses are considering leaving Guildford (congestion being cited as a reason). There are also issues with planning permissions being granted to convert office space to residential, whilst at the same time it is argued that more offices are needed? The contradictions appear to indicate that policies related to this need firming up and that the evidence is incomplete.

I disagree with 40% of land in the town centre being given over to retail as there is no evidence that Guildford will 'buck the national trend' in terms of declining high-street sales, as has been suggested by Cllr Furniss. Guildford urban area ranks no 1 in terms of being the most sustainable location in the borough and, as housing is a priority, there should be more than 1,172 residences in the town centre.

I object to Policy E4 (expansion of the Surrey Research Park into the Blackwell Farm) The existing Research Park has been built at a very low density (25% plot ratio), which is very low for an urban extension. The majority of existing buildings are 2 storeys giving a developed floor space plot ratio of only 12.5%.

The existing Research Park has acres of surface car parking, which provides it with the opportunity to markedly increase its density without infringing any Green Belt land nearby. Any density increase would be cost effective for the use of all existing infrastructure and would also have the potential to match the existing density of the neighbouring academic buildings on the university campus at Manor Park, which is five times higher.

Together with the existing expansion of 14% through existing consents and the opportunity to increase its density, the Research Park has ample capacity to expand to embrace new demand for B1b uses linked to the university, without utilising additional land.

The strategic highway assessment requires a great deal more work and hence I OBJECT to the inclusion of this as evidence.

The B3000 runs through Compton, a small village with many listed buildings, most of which are very close to the road. The road already carries in excess of 5 million vehicles a year with average flow rates exceeding most A roads. It is the only settlement area in the borough where pollution levels exceed EU regulations and it is close to capacity now, with tailbacks at peak times, which add to the pollution problem. [see legal section]

The study is highly misleading. It refers to a figure of zero additional traffic from scenario 3, which includes the traffic from the strategic sites, one of which is partly in Compton. The assessment does not make it clear that the modelling is extremely limited and only includes impact on developments within the immediate area. Blackwell Farm is excluded from Area 107 (part of Compton) as false boundaries have been set. I believe that the impact from the strategic sites will be far-reaching and will most certainly impact Compton and beyond. Each village needs to be able to see the impact that development will have. The Highways Assessment concentrates on peak time traffic only and gives no indication of overall volume increases or traffic type using specific routes outside peak hours. Understanding of the overall increase is important, as there is a bridge on the B3000 between Artington and Compton, which has a width restriction and may also require a weight restriction as it needs replacing within the next 2 years and no funding has been set aside for this. Instead Network Rail, SCC, GBC and Waverley BC continue to battle over responsibility for, and scope of, the project.

It appears that traffic data has been collected at different times of the year and over varying time scales in order to provide averages. This method of data collection can underestimate measurements by at least 30%.

Furthermore, I have been told that the person responsible for ratifying traffic data at Surrey County Council (SCC) has been off sick for over a year and that, whilst the daily data boxes continue to collect data, that data has not been collected or analysed for 2015. The data put forward for Compton's B3000 was based on a 3-week period in January and, as this was not representative, we understand it was removed. That said, the year-on-year data is for different periods and different times, varying from a few weeks in winter to longer periods over many months. I would like a more robust approach to traffic data collation. Indeed it does not correspond to the statistics generated by the Vehicle Activated Signals which have been monitoring traffic speeds through Compton for a number of years.
The cumulative effect of the additional traffic generated by the developments in the proposed submission Local Plan will be to increase congestion, even with the proposed highway improvement schemes in place. More detailed analysis of the junctions and queuing is required. We question the conclusion that the developments would have an acceptable impact on the capacity of the highway networks in terms of the policy test set in paragraph 32 of NPPF. We do not believe that the impact on the B3000 will be acceptable, as it is already operating beyond capacity, and this situation will be made much worse following the mitigation proposed for the A3.

The Highways Assessment is limited to 30 results. Roads have been omitted from the report and it is unclear whether findings for the B3000 (also referred to as The Street B3000) are in fact from the Street or the roundabout from which there is a feeder road to Godalming via Priorsfield Road.

The table comparing scenarios and the impact on traffic is difficult to decipher. Scenario 1 includes current planning permissions plus Waverley’s strategic sites. This shows an increase of just 9 vehicles per hour at peak times on the B3000. The next scenario 2 is the same, but includes GBC’s strategic sites. Given that there is a strategic site in Compton of 1,800 homes and another of 1,000 at Normandy, the expectation would be for the volume to be not only higher, but considerably higher. The result is however, ZERO. We understand that this is because the impact measured is only from the immediate area and, as Blackwell Farm has been removed from the village for modelling terms, this does not give a realistic result. The omission of the Town Centre Master Plan and its impact on the roads further diminishes the integrity of this Highways Assessment.

Even without the full impact being understood, it is clear from the scale of development on the west of Guildford (1,800 homes at Blackwell Farm, 1,000 homes at Normandy, 1,300 homes at Ash, 3,800 homes in the Aldershot urban area, 1,200 homes at Borden) that the increase in traffic on the B3000 and other main routes would be severe.

The Highways Assessment shows that as a result of the proposals put forward in this draft of the Local Plan the B3000 will suffer the highest increase in flow rates at peak times (after the M25, A320 and A25. It also reveals that traffic flows would increase if the A3 was widened, as the A3 would then attract more traffic via the B3000. Despite this, there are no solutions planned to mitigate the situation and we are therefore strongly objecting to the level of development and in particular strategic development at Blackwell Farm as outlined in the Local Plan.

The proposal to introduce a new route to Guildford town centre from the west via Blackwell Farm has been ill-thought out. The volume of traffic that will use this new ‘rat run’ through the new development and the university campus/business park, has been underestimated. There will be problems for traffic wishing to exit the new development in both directions during peak hours - traffic is frequently queuing for miles along the A31, and the Tesco roundabout is one of the worst bottlenecks in Guildford. The knock-on effect on the Egerton Road/Gill Avenue junction would impede emergency vehicles getting to and from the hospital.

The 4-way junction on the A31 has no detail at all and the concern is that permission in principle will be given to the site in the hope that these problems are surmountable. If they are insurmountable, which I believe they are, then enormous amounts of Green Belt land within the setting of the Surrey Hills AONB will have been sacrificed for nothing. The 4-way junction, if it goes ahead, is likely to be huge and, due to its elevated position, will cause significant harm to the AONB in terms of landscape and light pollution.

The Highways Assessment has many limitations, not least being the absence of the Town Centre Master Plan, which includes potential road closure and re-routing. Compton is likely to be very much affected by any reduction in road capacity in the town centre and it is important that we are presented with the whole picture.

The Assessment acknowledges that not all impacts of proposed Blackwell Farm development have been modelled and that, due to the emphasis on the A31 and the A3, not all roads were included.

The report concludes that the improvements to the A3 are necessary to maintain adequate flow rates on the strategic network. Further work is needed to determine what impact any widening or junction improvements will have on local roads, and what will be done to mitigate against the increased flows through Compton, particularly given that a section of the B3000 though the Village is anticipated to become an Air Quality Management Area. GBC has resisted requests by members of the PC to have the northern end of The Street made an AQMA, but readings of nitrous oxide in this area are well above EU legal limits.
There is little information about the tunnel but the map indicates that one access / egress point will be in Compton near the A3, although no land has been safeguarded for this purpose. This is likely to have the same impact as the improvements to the A3, i.e. increased traffic (and pollution) through Compton.

The ‘objectively assessed need’ figure of 693 homes a year is too high.

A professional review by NMSS has concluded that, even basing the calculations on a period of stronger economic and student growth, the housing need figure should be revised down to 510 homes a year and the SHMA method should be changed to consider student housing need separately due to the distorting effects of students on the figures.

The current SHMA inflates the proposed housing figure due to:

- failure to correct for errors in the historical data for international migration flows,
- issues with the way it considers students and affordability, and
- flaws in the method for estimating the number of homes needed to support job growth.

It is unacceptable that demographic and economic model assumptions have been withheld and cannot be checked making the process unaccountable.

Two additional reviews of the SHMA reach similar conclusions, one having been produced by CPRE and the other by Cllr. David Reeve.

The exclusion of sites of 5 dwellings or fewer from the list might make administration easier, but the addition of these sites plus windfalls and outstanding (but current) permissions gives rise to a higher number of dwellings than is actually needed. There is therefore no justification for release of all the Green Belt put forward.

The criteria used to include or exclude sites because of this study lack consistency, with many sites excluded as ‘unsuitable’ with no further explanation offered (many of which were in the urban area of Ash). The assessment lacks objectivity and detail.

I object to policy E4 Surrey Research Park.

I support the maintenance of research, development and design activities, in any science, including social science, that is complementary to the activities of the University of Surrey at the Surrey Research Park. I object however to the completely unnecessary expansion of the Research Park into a larger Business Park. I believe that the planning policy going forward for the Surrey Research Park should be to maintain and enhance the integrity of its research base allowing for the economic value add to the local economy of knowledge and technology transfer from the University.

Research parks based on the early UK technology transfer exemplars of the Cambridge and Oxford need careful monitoring, nurturing and protection to ensure the integrity and quality of the park is maintained and the park continues to be a destination for innovation and enterprise.
There is a danger for research parks to be overwhelmed by short sighted development opportunities being taken by park managers provided by standard office activities and administrative functions which in time turn them into standard business parks which can be found anywhere in the country. Their relative low density and attractiveness make them targets for ‘any other’ office user.

Research parks that lose their way stop being the location of choice for new innovative enterprises.

I hope the Surrey Research Park in Guildford remains focussed on a broad spectrum of scientific research including computer science, bio-chemistry, design, space-science, eco-science, health science, software development, laser technology, media-science, artificial intelligence, robotics and super-manufacturing

Monitoring indicators should include new start-ups and new patents created.

Facilities should be provided whereby new small businesses can secure premises under subsidised licence fee arrangements with no onerous rent or lease commitments.

I support the idea of a variety of sizes of unit including some small units (between 15 – 80 sq m) bearing in mind one workstation is 10 sq m.

Consideration should be given to the concept of shared ‘enterprise hubs’ where individuals can take pay as you go workstations in shared spaces similar to touch down business centres similar to the ‘enterprise village' concept.

I object to the policy of any new extension of the research park more than the existing 14% already provided for within the park or within the footprint of the park.

The Surrey Research Park currently extends to 65,000 sq m.

There is already granted consent to expand to a further 9,000 sq m (14%) This space has been available for 10 years and is still to find a taker.

The past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 based on ELNA 2015 derived from VoA analysis.

The ELNA 2015 calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7%.

The data point for our analysis is today in 2016 so we have 17 years to go to the end of the plan period.

The necessary growth in floor space over the plan period is therefore 17 years x 0.7 = 12% which is less than the current expansion space of 14%.

The research park is developed at a plot ratio of 25%. This could be increased to 50% within the same footprint of the existing park without damage to its amenity. The actual current land use for development in the park is in fact only 12.5% because most buildings are 2-storey.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

The density of development on the existing research park (glorified business park) would enable expansion for the next 25 years without spreading onto adjacent greenbelt land and dissecting the ancient woodland. Our MP Anne Milton has made this point very strongly to the University.

The University have acres of surface car parking which could be located below ground and office and accommodation could be provided above.

In relation to the Target there is no evidence of a justified need for additional B1a and C use. We consider that the existing land, used efficiently, will accommodate realistic expansion of B1b uses for high tech added value purposes. Existing planning permissions must be built before any additional green belt land is earmarked for development. The target of 35 000 sq metres of additional employment land are not justified by the evidence base.

I regard the evidence base (Employment Land Needs Assessment 2015) as flawed and inconsistent and therefore unreliable evidence.

15 POLICY E4: SURREY RESEARCH PARK
15.1 I object to changes in policy E4 Surrey Research Park which is still earmarked for excessive expansion which is not supported by the findings of the Employment Land Needs Assessment 2017

The University is very pleased to see the value that the Council attributes to the Surrey Research Park, as outlined in its decision to introduce a policy that specifically covers the Research Park.

As explained earlier, the presence of the University and the Surrey Research Park have helped to diversify the region’s economic base by adding technology jobs to the public, retail and service sector employment in the region. The University and its Research Park have mitigated impacts on Guildford with investment in public transport, with onsite accommodation for students and by together putting about £1.7 billion into the UK economy every year. This includes about £950 million in Guildford borough.

The University is supportive of this policy as well as the proposed extension to the Surrey Research Park, which will enable the Research Park to grow and to continue to deliver a range of benefits to the borough.

It also proposes more office space to an extended business park [policyE4] which will increase peak time congestion, particularly around the hospital and A&E, and will encourage rat-running through residential areas. This proposal also ignores independent traffic studies, which show the impact of the Blackwell Farm development on the local network, and question the viability of the scheme[2.14a]. This proposed development will add to air pollution in neighbouring areas, which already exceeds safe EU limits for nitrous oxide.

POLICY E4: SURREY RESEARCH PARK

I object to changes in policy E4 Surrey Research Park which is still earmarked for excessive expansion which is not supported by the findings of the Employment Land Needs Assessment 2017.

I support the maintenance of research, development and design activities, in any science, including social science, that is complementary to the activities of the University of Surrey at the Surrey Research Park. We object however to the completely unnecessary expansion of the Research Park into a larger Business Park.

I object to the extension to the Research Park of over 10 hectares will be delivered. This I understand will provide a total capacity of around 35,000 sq m of additional floorspace, of which 30,000 sq m is expected to be delivered in the plan period. This expansion is not effectively supported by evidence for an increase in B1b use class under the Employment Land Needs Assessment 2017.
I also believe that B1b (should be the primary use class for the Research Park and that applications for B1a should be resisted due to the danger of dilution of the core purpose and reputation of the park. We also object to the inclusion of B1c light industrial uses which is inappropriate and unnecessary.

Research parks based on the early UK technology transfer exemplars of the Cambridge and Oxford need careful monitoring, nurturing and protection to ensure the integrity and quality of the park is maintained and the park continues to be a destination for innovation and enterprise.

There is a danger for research parks to be overwhelmed by short sighted development opportunities being taken by park managers provided by standard office activities and administrative functions which in time turn them into standard business parks which can be found anywhere in the country. Their relative low density and attractiveness make them targets for “any other” office user.

Monitoring indicators should include new start-ups and new patents created.

Facilities should be provided whereby new small businesses can secure premises under subsidised licence fee arrangements with no onerous rent or lease commitments.

The Surrey Research Park currently extends to 65,000 sq m.

The research park is developed at a plot ratio of 25%. This could be increased to 50% within the same footprint of the existing park without damage to its amenity. The actual current land use for development in the park is in fact only 12.5% because most buildings are 2-storey.

In 2016 Enterprise M3 LEP commissioned Regeneris to undertake a review of their 2013 Commercial Property Market Study. The final report is due to be considered at Enterprise M3’s Board Meeting in July 2016. Information relating to this is not yet in the public domain but for the purposes of this consultation has been referenced to help support our response. In light of this, Enterprise M3 requests that this response is only made public once the Commercial Property Market Study has been published.

The Enterprise M3 Commercial Property Market Study, 2016 highlights that Guildford is a highly sought after office location. Its highly skilled labour, market and transport connections to London mean that office development attracts some of the highest rental values in the LEP area and that speculative office development is therefore commercially viable. Future developments, such as the planned expansion of the University of Surrey will further enhance the appeal of Guildford as a location for inward investment.

The Commercial Property Market Study, 2016 highlights that the challenge facing Guildford is that it has a major shortage of office space within the town centre and a very limited pipeline of sites. The few vacant sites in the town centre are also under growing pressure to be converted to residential uses. It therefore follows that Enterprise M3 is therefore very supportive of employment allocations for quality, grade A office space within Guildford town centre which meets this demand.

Although within the Proposed Submission Local Plan we have noted that there are a limited number of allocations for employment development within the town centre, Enterprise M3 is supportive of the Draft Guildford Town Centre Masterplan, 2015 and look forward to seeing the proposals and working with Guildford Borough Council to bring it forward. In particular, the ability of the Bedford Wharf area to provide much needed employment space within the town centre would be very much welcomed.

Nevertheless, given the recognised shortage of office space within the town centre we encourage further consideration to be given to ensuring that there is sufficient land allocated for quality office development within the town centre in order to prevent the loss of existing and new major users in the future finding no suitable land in Guildford and subsequently locating elsewhere to the economic detriment of the wider Enterprise M3 area.

Enterprise M3 is very supportive of policy E4, which makes provision for a 10 ha extension to Surrey Research Park. This is one of the Borough’s largest employment areas and a centre of excellence in technology, science health and engineering. This extension is expected to provide up to 35,000 sq m of additional office and R&D floor space, which added to the remaining 9,000 sq m provides a significant amount of employment space for research, development and design activities that are complimentary to those activities undertaken at the University of Surrey. This extension will ensure the continued growth and success of the Research Park and the businesses within it, which aligns strongly within our ambitions for innovation and enterprise across the Enterprise M3 LEP area, particularly around the development of 5G technology for which the University of Surrey is playing a key part.

The Commercial Property Market Study, 2016 also highlights that demand for industrial sites in Guildford has been strong, evidenced by the take up and development at Henley Business Park. Since 2013 the business park has achieved one pre-let and is also speculatively building out two units, with only 6,000 sq m of development space remaining.

However, the Commercial Property Market Study, 2016 recognises that there remains persistent shortage of both available industrial space and land with development potential in most market areas within the LEP. This includes light industrial space which is suitable for SMEs, but particularly for large scale warehousing which could attract new investment to the LEP area in light of recent upwards trends in e-commerce. This undersupply of B8 space transcends LEP boundaries, with very strong demand evident for any sites that can serve the London market. We would therefore encourage further consideration to be given in planning for storage & distribution employment space to meet the needs of the warehousing/logistics sector in the South East, a region which has been recognised as experiencing a particular shortage.
Policy E1 makes reference to the need to plan for between 4.7ha and 5.3ha of industrial land (B1c, B2, and B8 uses) within Guildford during the plan period 2013 - 2033. From looking through the Site Allocations section of the Proposed Submission Local Plan, the majority of this requirement for industrial land can be met through the development of the Slyfield Regeneration Area (Allocation A24), a 40 ha site allocated for light industrial uses as well as 1,000 homes, 4 traveller pitches, a new waste management depot and sewage treatment works and community facilities. A further 7,000 sq m of land for industrial and storage & distribution uses can also be accommodated at Garlick’s Arch, Send Marsh/ Burnt Common and Ripley (Allocation A43) and as aforementioned, 6,000 sq m of development space for storage & distribution uses also remains at Henley Business Park. This indicates that there is enough supply to meet the requirements for industrial development as set out in Guildford’s Employment Lands Needs Assessment, 2015 and we are supportive of this approach.

POLICY E4 - Surrey Research Park

I OBJECT. The Council are required by the NPPF to facilitate commercial science and technology clusters. But, as with Policies H1 and E2 above, this policy seems to be dictated more by the ambitions of the University of Surrey than the public interest. In an extremely tangled sentence, it says that the Research Park will be “protected for business use… in any science… that is complementary to the activities of the University of Surrey.”

This fails to distinguish adequately between the University’s public role as a state-funded, academic institution and its private, financial interest in profit-making business spin-offs. It ignores enterprises that might be commercial rivals of the University. And it fails to consider the public harm done by turning the Research Park into a larger Business Park, such as the loss of Green Belt capital.

B1b should be the primary use class for the Research Park and applications for B1a should be resisted given the danger of diluting the core purpose and reputation of the park. The inclusion of B1c uses is inappropriate and unnecessary.

Nature Conservation value of the site is protected or improved.

In relation to the Target there is no evidence of a justified need for additional B1a and c use. We consider that the existing land, used efficiently, will accommodate realistic expansion of B1b uses for high tech added value purposes. Existing planning permissions must be built before any additional green belt land is earmarked for development. The target of 35,000 sq metres of additional employment land are not justified by the evidence base.

We regard the evidence base (Employment Land Needs Assessment 2015) as flawed and inconsistent and therefore unreliable evidence.

This expansion is not effectively supported by evidence for an increase in B1b use class under the Employment Land Needs Assessment 2017.

1.4 I also believe that B1b (should be the primary use class for the Research Park and that applications for B1a should be resisted due to the danger of dilution of the core purpose and reputation of the park. I also object to the inclusion of B1c light industrial uses which is inappropriate and unnecessary.

1.5 Research parks based on the early UK technology transfer exemplars of the Cambridge and Oxford need careful monitoring, nurturing and protection to ensure the integrity and quality of the park is maintained and the park continues to be a destination for innovation and enterprise.

1.6 There is a danger for research parks to be overwhelmed by short sighted development opportunities being taken by park managers provided by standard office activities and administrative functions which in turn turn them into standard business parks which can be found anywhere in the country. Their relative low density and attractiveness make them targets for “any other” office user.

1.7 Research parks that lose their way stop being the location of choice for new innovative enterprises.

1.8 The Surrey Research Park in Guildford needs to be focussed on a broad spectrum of scientific research including computer science, bio-chemistry, design, space-science, eco-science, health science, software development, laser technology, media-science, artificial intelligence, robotics and super-manufacturing.

1.9 Monitoring indicators should include new start-ups and new patents created.

1.10 Facilities should be provided whereby new small businesses can secure premises under subsidised licence fee arrangements with no onerous rent or lease commitments.

1.11 The Surrey Research Park currently extends to 65,000 sq m.

1.12 The research park is developed at a plot ratio of 25%. This could be increased to 50% within the same footprint of the existing park without damage to its amenity. The actual current land use for development in the park is in fact only 12.5% because most buildings are 2-storey.

I object to policy E4 Surrey research Park.

I support the maintenance of research, development and design activities, in any science, including social science, that is complementary to the activities of the University of Surrey at the Surrey Research Park. I object however to the completely unnecessary expansion of the Research Park into a larger Business Park. I believe that the planning policy going forward for the Surrey Research Park should be to maintain and enhance the integrity of its research base allowing for the economic value add to the local economy of knowledge and technology transfer from the University.

I support the idea of a variety of sizes of unit including some small units (between 15 – 80 sq m) bearing in mind one workstation is 10 sq m.

Consideration should be given to the concept of shared “enterprise hubs” where individuals can take pay as you go workstations in shared spaces similar to touch down business centres similar to the “enterprise village” concept.

I object to the policy of any new extension of the research park more than the existing 14% already provided for within the park or within the footprint of the park.

The Surrey Research Park currently extends to 65,000 sq m.

There is already granted consent to expand to a further 9,000 sq m (14%) This space has been available for 10 years and is still to find a taker.

The past trend of expansion of Office/R &D is 0.43% pa over the period from 2004 to 2012 based on ELNA 2015 derived from VoA analysis.

The ELNA 2015 calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7%.

The data point for our analysis is today in 2016 so we have 17 years to go to the end of the plan period.

The necessary growth in floor space over the plan period is therefore 17 years x 0.7 = 12% which is less than the current expansion space of 14%.

The research park is developed at a plot ratio of 25%. This could be increased to 50% within the same footprint of the existing park without damage to its amenity. The actual current land use for development in the park is in fact only 12.5% because most buildings are 2-storey.

1 POLICY E4: SURREY RESEARCH PARK

1.1 I object to changes in policy E4 Surrey Research Park which is still earmarked for excessive expansion which is not supported by the findings of the Employment Land Needs Assessment 2017.
1.2 I support the maintenance of research, development and design activities, in any science, including social science, that is complementary to the activities of the University of Surrey at the Surrey Research Park. I object however to the completely unnecessary expansion of the Research Park into a larger Business Park.

1.3 I object to the extension to the Research Park of over 10 hectares will be delivered. This I understand will provide a total capacity of around 35,000 sq m of additional floorspace, of which 30,000 sq m is expected to be delivered in the plan period. This expansion is not effectively supported by evidence for an increase in B1b use class under the Employment Land Needs Assessment 2017.

1.4 I also believe that B1b (should be the primary use class for the Research Park and that applications for B1a should be resisted due to the danger of dilution of the core purpose and reputation of the park. I also object to the inclusion of B1c light industrial uses which is inappropriate and unnecessary.

The existing Research Park has acres of surface car parking, which provides it with the opportunity to markedly increase its density without infringing any Green Belt land nearby.
I object to Policy E4 (expansion of the Surrey Research Park into the Blackwell Farm) The existing Research Park has been built at a very low density (25% plot ratio), which is very low for an urban extension. The majority of existing buildings are 2 storeys giving a developed floor space plot ratio of only 12.5%.

The existing Research Park has acres of surface car parking, which provides it with the opportunity to markedly increase its density without infringing any Green Belt land nearby. Any density increase would be cost effective for the use of all existing infrastructure and would also have the potential to match the existing density of the neighbouring academic buildings on the university campus at Manor Park, which is five times higher.

Together with the existing expansion of 14% through existing consents and the opportunity to increase its density, the Research Park has ample capacity to expand to embrace new demand for B1b uses linked to the university, without utilising additional land.

I OBJECT TO POLICY E4 (SURREY RESEARCH PARK):

- Subordinates public planning policy to the University of Surrey’s private, commercial enterprises (not its public academic purpose).
- No cost/benefit analysis of harm to Green Belt involved in extending research park.
- Waters down research purpose of park, turning into a general business park.

POLICY E4- Surrey Research Park

I OBJECT. The Council are required by the NPPF to facilitate commercial science and technology clusters. But, as with Policies H1 and E2 above, this policy seems to be dictated more by the ambitions of Surrey University than the public interest. In an extremely tangled sentence, it says that the Research Park will be "protected for business use... in any science... that is complementary to the activities of the University of Surrey."

This fails to distinguish adequately between the University's public role as a state-funded, academic institution and its private, financial interest in profit-making business spin-offs. It ignores enterprises that might be commercial rivals of the University. And it fails to consider the public harm done by turning the Research Park into a larger Business Park, such as the loss of Green Belt social and environmental capital.

B1b should be the primary use class for the Research Park and applications for B1a should be resisted given the danger of diluting the core purpose and reputation of the park. The inclusion of B1c uses is inappropriate and unnecessary.

POLICY E4 (SURREY RESEARCH PARK) – I object. This seems to have been written by Surrey University’s business arm, in their own private interests. Where is the analysis of the cost to Green Belt amenities or services in enlarging the research park? The policy would encourage it to go down-market and become a general business park.

Directs more office space to an extended business park [Policy E4], which will increase peak time congestion – particularly around the hospital and A&E – and will also encourage rat-running through residential areas.

Ignores independent expert traffic studies, which show the impact of development at Blackwell Farm on the local network and question the viability of the development [2.14a].

Adds to air pollution in neighbouring areas, which already exceed safe EU limits.

If expansion is required, the first options would surely to be to increase density. There is a lot of wasted space over Surrey Research Park.

20.16 The ELNA 2015 calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7%

20.17 The data point for our analysis is today in 2016 so we have 17 years to go to the end of the plan period.

20.18 The necessary growth in floor space over the plan period is therefore 17 years x 0.7 = 12% which is less than the current expansion space of 14%.

20.19 The research park is developed at a plot ratio of 25%. This could be increased to 50% within the same footprint of the existing park without damage to its amenity. The actual currecnt land use for development in the park is in fact only 12.5% because most buildings are 2-storey.

1.1 I object to changes in policy E4 Surrey Research Park which is still earmarked for excessive expansion which is not supported by the findings of the Employment Land Needs Assessment 2017.

1.2 I support the maintenance of research, development and design activities, in any science, including social science, that is complementary to the activities of the University of Surrey at the Surrey Research Park. I object however to the completely unnecessary expansion of the Research Park into a larger Business Park.

1.3 I object to the extension to the Research Park of over 10 hectares will be delivered. This I understand will provide a total capacity of around 35,000 sq m of additional floorspace, of which 30,000 sq m is expected to be delivered in the plan period. This expansion is not effectively supported by evidence for an increase in B1b use class under the Employment Land Needs Assessment 2017.

1.4 I also believe that B1b should be the primary use class for the Research Park and that applications for B1a should be resisted due to the danger of dilution of the core purpose and reputation of the park. I also object to the inclusion of B1c light industrial uses which is inappropriate and unnecessary.

1.5 Research parks based on the early UK technology transfer exemplars of the Cambridge and Oxford need careful monitoring, nurturing and protection to ensure the integrity and quality of the park is maintained and the park continues to be a destination for innovation and enterprise.

1.6 There is a danger for research parks to be overwhelmed by short sighted development opportunities being taken by park managers provided by standard office activities and administrative functions which in time turn them into standard business parks which can be found anywhere in the country. Their relative low density and attractiveness make them targets for “any other” office user.

1.7 Research parks that lose their way stop being the location of choice for new innovative enterprises.

1.8 The Surrey Research Park in Guildford needs to be focussed on a broad spectrum of scientific research including computer science, bio-chemistry, design, space-science, eco-science, health science, software development, laser technology, media-science, artificial intelligence, robotics and super-manufacturing.

1.9 Monitoring indicators should include new start-ups and new patents created.

1.10 Facilities should be provided whereby new small businesses can secure premises under subsidised licence fee arrangements with no onerous rent or lease commitments.

1.11 The Surrey Research Park currently extends to 65,000 sq m. The research park is developed at a plot ratio of 25%. This could be increased to 50% within the same footprint of the existing park without damage to its amenity. I support the Research Park and its specialism, but I object to the current need to expand. Utilise the land hungry current ground level parking for Research Park employment development and build shared multi-storey or underground parking. What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

I object to Guildford Borough Council's changes to the draft Local Plan and the inclusion of Blackwell Farm as a development site [Policy A26 & para. 4.1.9], which:

- disregards an independent expert landscape study, which demonstrates that part of the site merits Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty status following Natural England’s forthcoming boundary review [para. 4.3.8].

- directs more office space to an extended business park [Policy E4], which will increase peak time congestion - particularly around the hospital and A&E - and will also encourage rat-running through residential areas such as Compton village.

- ignores independent expert traffic studies, which show the impact of development at Blackwell Farm on the local network and question the viability of the development [2.14a]. Accessing the A31 from the top end of Down lane will become impossible.

- adds to air pollution in neighbouring areas, which already exceeds safe EU limits for Nitrous Oxide.

POLICY E4: SURREY RESEARCH PARK

I object to policy E4 Surrey research Park.

I support the maintenance of research, development and design activities, in any science, including social science, that is complementary to the activities of the University of Surrey at the Surrey Research Park. I object however to the completely unnecessary expansion of the Research Park into a larger Business Park. I believe that the planning policy going forward for the Surrey Research Park should be to maintain and enhance the integrity of its research base allowing for the economic value add to the local economy of knowledge and technology transfer from the University.

I believe that B1b (should be the primary use class for the Research Park and that applications for B1a should be resisted due to the danger of dilution of the core purpose and reputation of the park. I object to the inclusion of B1c uses which is inappropriate and unnecessary.

Research parks based on the early UK technology transfer exemplars of the Cambridge and Oxford need careful monitoring, nurturing and protection to ensure the integrity and quality of the park is maintained and the park continues to be a destination for innovation and enterprise.

There is a danger for research parks to be overwhelmed by short sighted development opportunities being taken by park managers provided by standard office activities and administrative functions which in time turn them into standard business parks which can be found anywhere in the country. Their relative low density and attractiveness make them targets for ‘any other’ office user.

Research parks that lose their way stop being the location of choice for new innovative enterprises.

I hope the Surrey Research Park in Guildford remains focussed on a broad spectrum of scientific research including computer science, bio-chemistry, design, space-science, eco-science, health science, software development, laser technology, media-science, artificial intelligence, robotics and super-manufacturing

Monitoring indicators should include new start-ups and new patents created.

Facilities should be provided whereby new small businesses can secure premises under subsidised licence fee arrangements with no onerous rent or lease commitments.

I support the idea of a variety of sizes of unit including some small units (between 15 – 80 sq m) bearing in mind one workstation is 10 sq m.

The ELNA 2015 calculated annual floor space demand is 0.7%.

The data point for our analysis is today in 2016 so we have 17 years to go to the end of the plan period.

The necessary growth in floor space over the plan period is therefore 17 years x 0.7 = 12% which is less than the current expansion space of 14%.
The research park is developed at a plot ratio of 25%. This could be increased to 50% within the same footprint of the existing park without damage to its amenity. The actual current land use for development in the park is in fact only 12.5% because most buildings are 2-storey.

Policy E4 - Surrey Research Park

I support the Research Park and its specialism, but I object to the current need to expand. The land hungry current ground level car parking for Research Park should be utilised for shared multi-storey or underground parking and the freed-up car parks used for the Park development. All new Research Park development should include underground car parking, as in other countries.

As stated in the supporting text, the original outline planning permission for the Surrey Research Park includes a restriction limiting use to “research that is complimentary to the activities of the University of Surrey.” To monitor this policy there is a need to include the definition of this term from the original outline planning permission or to define what ‘complimentary to the activities of the University of Surrey’ means in terms of Standard Industrial Classification (SIC)

Economic Policies: I am in support of Policy E1 "Sustainable employment" but believe that Policy E2 "Location for new employment floorspace" fails to realise that Guildford Town Centre is relatively insignificant in economic value added terms. The University Quarter provides three times as much economic gross value added as the Town Centre yet is prejudiced by this policy. I am supportive of Policy E4 "Surrey Research Park", Policy E5 "Rural Economy" and Policy E6 "The leisure and visitor experience" but caution that Policy E7 "Guildford Town Centre" could lead to overdevelopment of the Town Centre.

ANGLE wrote to the Council during the last consultation of the Local Plan. I should like to reiterate our support for the University of Surrey/Surrey Research Park (SRP). Our support reflects the fact that we believe the University and SRP are very well placed to continue to achieve major economic impacts on the area and we are concerned that capacity constraints could have a negative impact in retaining and attracting highly skilled workers.

We support:

- Improved access to the west from the SRP - there are few negatives about working at SRP but access and traffic congestion is one of
- Future expansion of the Research Park will ensure for us and many other companies on the Park the potential for continuity as we
- Additional affordable housing would help with the development and retention of the young science graduates ANGLE needs to employ in the development of its revolutionary cancer diagnostic
- While acknowledging any changes to the green belt are contentious, the company supports the necessary planning processes and strategies to achieve these features of the proposed plan

The fundamental traffic problems around the Surrey Hospital, Research Park and through into Guildford town centre are essentially choking business in the area and driving people out … we are one such company happy to be leaving! Policy E4

The University supports the changes to this policy.

Para 4.4.41
The University supports the change to reflect the number of homes now being provided at the Blackwell Farm site (Policy A26; up from 1650 to 1800).

An amount to be provided in the plan period (1500) is also mentioned, but the University understands that this not a constraint and is included for the robustness of GBCs phasing proposals. It is understood that the plan is not seeking to prevent the full 1800 from coming forward in the plan period if infrastructure provision and market conditions allow.

The reference to the 1500 homes in para 4.4.41 should therefore make this point clear.

The University notes that para 4.4.41 refers to 35,000 sq m of employment land in total at the site, of which 30,000 will be in the plan period. However policy A26 now refers to only 30,000 sq m in full.

The University therefore considers that there is possibly an error in this statement in para 4.4.41. The text in this paragraph should be consistent with Policy A26 and refer only to 30,000 sq m.

Policy E4: Surrey Research Park

This representation is made on behalf of BOC Limited who is a major employer both across the UK and within Guildford specifically as their UK headquarters are based on the Surrey Research Park.

BOC is strongly supportive of the general thrust of the plan and specifically welcome the designation of the Surrey Research Park (SRP) as a Strategic Employment Site under policy E1, the extension of SRP under policy E4 and the job targets set out across the other employment policies. These clearly reflect the evidence base (including the ELNA 2017) which confirms the importance of SRP to the local economy.

However, there are elements of Policy E4: Surrey Research Park which BOC is concerned are at risk of being found 'unsound'.

Part 1 of policy E4 seeks to restrict the existing SRP and the proposed extension detailed in A26 to: ‘business use comprising offices, research, development, design and innovation activities, in any science, including social science, falling within Use Classes B1 (a), (b) and (c) of the Town and Country Planning (use Classes) Order 1987 (as amended), that is complementary to the activities of the University of Surrey’.

Whilst BOC is supportive of the overall policy objectives and broad thrust of this policy there is concern that the restriction of business uses to those ‘in any science...that is complementary to the activities of the University of Surrey’ is potentially overly restrictive and inflexible.

This is considered to particularly be the case for those businesses operating on the existing SRP, some of whom have been in place for a number of years and who require the flexibility to amend or expand their operations in response to their particular corporate requirements.
Whilst the existing flexibility of criterion (3) is appreciated, it is considered that the policy would best be reformulated to be more reflective of the differences between the needs of existing established businesses operating from the SRP, and the new businesses which would be attracted to the SRP extension.

What changes (2016)/further amendments (2017) do you suggest should be made to the document?

Policy changes sought:

BOC request that Policy E4 is simplified and amended such that the policy deals solely with the extension to SRP as shown in policy A26, with restrictive provisions on new businesses uses within this area as appropriate. This would allow the existing businesses on the existing SRP to be governed by policies E1 and E2, with a less onerous restriction to general B1 uses, particularly head office functions.

We object to policy E4 Research Park expansion and we object to policy A26 Blackwell Farm.

The Council are proposing development on AONB, AGLV and Greenbelt land where there is no special circumstances and where such development will add to congestion and air quality issues which are already of serious concern to Residents and Businesses.

The Council objected to Waverley Plans for development at Dunsfold siting the impact of extra traffic, congestion etc to the A3 and also the Council object to development of a School and Housing at Fairlands (Rokers) in Worpleston as inappropriate development which failed to mitigate its impact on infrastructure and the impact on the habitat of flora and fauna and the Council planning officers referred to the fact that the site was in the Greenbelt where there is a general presumption against inappropriate development. The Council Officers further stated that large scale residential development and a new school are inappropriate development which could only be approved in very special circumstances where the benefits outweigh the harm the development would cause. The Council Officers stated a school and housing do not amount to the very special circumstances necessary to justify grant of a planning application. However the Council include in their draft plan building on Blackwell Farm an area of outstanding natural beauty, Area of great landscape value and all in the Green Belt a school or schools and housing. No special circumstances are associated with this proposed development. Any attempt to argue economic necessity for expansion of the Research Park is negated as there is sufficient land and surface car parking at the existing Research Park and Manor Farm to allow expansion for the next 25 years without allocating more greenbelt land. The Research Park is a name only as many businesses on the existing park are just that businesses and with no great attachment to the University or research.

We therefore find it hypocritical of the Council to include Blackwell Farm in the revised Draft Local Plan. The extra traffic, congestion, delays and further damage to the air quality development at Blackwell Farm which would directly impinge on the two most congested junctions in Guildford at Egerton Road / A3 and A31 /A3.

Proposed Submission Local Plan Regulation 19 representations (2016 and 2017)

Document part: Policy E5 - Rural Economy
POLICY E5: Rural Economy

The Guildford Society has no objection in principle to the amendments to Policy E5.

We agree the Council’s plans to support the local economy. We note, however, that the plan is silent on the planned frequency increase on the North Downs Railway Line which we believe provides an opportunity to bring small scale enterprises in the Dorking to Guildford and Ash to Guildford corridors into good contact with the Town Centre and Surrey Research Park on a sustainable basis. The plan highlights that stations such as Shalford will not be transport interchanges, whereas we believe some minor development of bus services and parking may be desirable.

I object to policy E5 Rural Economy. In my opinion, this policy should only apply to small-scale development in rural areas which means development of less than 100 sq m (gross) which is in keeping with and the permanence and amenity of the green belt. Use of rural areas for town centre uses without applying the sequential approach is against the principles of localism that require local people to be consulted and heeded, not ignored. Villages need protecting in terms of both design and scale and character. Previous commitments to improved high-speed broadband and mobile phone coverage have now been diluted, despite general support. This disregards the responses from the 2014 public consultation.

The consultation process was not well publicized; many Parish Councils had no idea of this. The emphasis on voluntary efforts and greater community efforts is far removed from reality for this 'solution' was presented for almost every aspect of rural life from managing crime to looking after elderly to education and more besides. Villages by nature are usually small and the percentage of the population who are able to do voluntary work is smaller still. The solution is therefore unworkable. The results of the consultation were not publicized but were instead collated and summarized and bore no resemblance to the submissions I had sight of.

Rural Economy

Throughout this policy there is an assumption in favour of sustainable rural development in order to support economic need, as stated in the NPPF. It should also be noted that the NPPF guidance states:

- support sustainable rural tourism and leisure developments that benefit businesses in rural areas, communities and visitors, and which respect the character of the countryside. This should include supporting the provision and expansion of tourist and visitor facilities in appropriate locations where identified needs are not met by existing facilities in rural service centres
- promote the retention and development of local services and community facilities in villages, such as local shops, meeting places, sports venues, cultural buildings, public houses and places of worship

This policy is driven by rural businesses. The main stakeholders are rural businesses and even the forum at which findings are represented is at a paid ticket event for local business. Communities have been largely removed from the policymaking, and tourist's views are represented by a relatively small and select sector. Parish Councils were contacted very late in the day and hence had little time to respond. On gathering their submissions, I am able to see that their views were not included in the summary findings and neither were views of residents groups (as they were not included at all).

I believe that the consultation process fell short of what would be expected and hence I object to this policy.
The creation of new business opportunities must be balanced with the needs of the farming industry. I support this statement but feel it should also include the rural community. It seems that residents have been completely disenfranchised under this strategy? Whilst I agree with the need for balance, I fail to see how this is reflected when 3 very large good grade agricultural sites (Wisley, Blackwell Farm & Gosden Hill) have been put forward for development?

The Council will also work with partners to support the provision of small-scale business incubation centres in rural areas. I support the ethos behind this, however new business ventures must be truly sustainable and this means on a regular bus or train route to avoid the introduction of more cars into rural areas that are ill equipped to cope. The buildings must also be in keeping with the vernacular and on an appropriate scale.

(5) Proposals that would result in the loss of shops and services that provide for everyday needs (within Use Class A1) located in rural areas but outside of Local and District Centres, will only be acceptable if evidence is provided of active and comprehensive marketing of the site for its current use for a minimum of 12 prior to submission of a planning application.

I agree with this in principal but cannot see why this does not also apply to local or district centres? The policy has omitted to say 12 what? Ie weeks, months? The strategy is most definitely not aimed at protecting natural and built heritage.

If it were it would make more of the ancient monument at Blackwell farm and the enormous amount of history and heritage that accompanies the area. The area has a vineyard a horse sanctuary and of course Watts Gallery, Limnerslease and Chapel. It was once a royal park and much more could be made of the combined heritage assets, yet this has not been considered. If it has been looked at and rejected, then please send the report to Compton Parish Council and to me.

I object to the lack of consultation on this policy.

Most Parish Councils knew nothing about it and I had to request an extension to the deadline to enable them to take part. As the launch date for the publication of the policy had already been set (only weeks away from the dead line at a ticket only conference) it is likely that many felt this policy was a 'fait accompli'.

This does not result in 'balance' but in 'imbalance' as policies have been weakened and the strategy is not reciprocated ie businesses such as the University do not have conservationists on their team? I cannot find any details about the Guildford Business Forum? Who are they, how were they elected, are the meetings public and if so where are they advertised and where are the minutes? I object

69. This appears to be a policy to encourage growth in rural areas regardless of actual local needs and opinions. The last sentence appears to apply small-scale town centre uses to rural areas but with less consideration regarding location. This rather sums up Guildford Borough Council’s current unsatisfactory attitude towards its rural areas.

70. I am concerned about the emphasis on accepting agricultural developments regardless without consideration for their impact on the natural environment. The North Downs is an extremely important area for biodiversity but this policy could encourage landowners to destroy our chalk grasslands in favour of vineyards and other crops. Chalk grassland is a scarce habitat in international terms and Guildford has a duty to conserve what is left in the Borough.

I have serious concerns about the Rural Economic Strategy and involvement of Enterprise M3 LEP mentioned in the new paragraphs 4.4.51a and 4.4.51b. For example, the Strategy regards opposition and resistance to proposals as “Threats” implying that development has priority over genuine objections.

I OBJECT to the loss of rural employment (Policy E5)

Policy E5 supports the retention and development of local services and community facilities in our inset and identified villages. Yet the development at Garlick’s Arch (A43) would result in the loss of four existing successful rural businesses, which have been in existence for over 30 years and another two businesses for over 9 years. These businesses employ dozens of people; none of them want to leave their premises. The Plan does not promote rural employment; rather it will result in the loss of existing local rural businesses.

Policy E5: Rural Economy

Summary

This policy should only apply to small-scale development in rural areas which means development of less than 100 sq m (gross) which is in keeping with and the permanence and amenity of the green belt.

Use of rural areas for town centre uses without applying the sequential approach is against the principles of localism which mean that local people should be consulted – and heeded (not ignored!). Villages need protecting both in terms of design and in terms of scale.

Previous commitments to improved high-speed broadband and mobile phone coverage have now been diluted, despite general support. This is disregarding the responses from the previous consultation.

Detailed response:

It should be noted that the NPPF “provides a framework within which local people and their accountable councils can produce their own distinctive local and neighbourhood plans which reflect the needs and priorities of their communities.” (NPPF 1).
Guildford becoming a Growth Hub was NOT in the election manifesto. This policy was mentioned only tangentially in the corporate plan. Given Guildford’s poor transport links, noted congestion and the problems that this is perceived to cause for existing businesses, this does not seem an appropriate decision.

This radical, unsupported policy change is apparently in order to generate "growth" - although the possibility is that too much building over the areas that make Guildford Borough attractive will actually generate damage and stagnation, and cause a net decline in local affluence and growth. This risk has been highlighted by some local business leaders in the press.

In addition to NPPF 1, the Core Planning Principles set out in NPPF 17 include, as the FIRST (and therefore most important) principle, that “planning should:

- Be genuinely plan-led, empowering local people to shape their surroundings, with succinct local and neighbourhood plans setting out a positive vision for the future of the area”.

Furthermore, if this were not enough, in the section on Plan-making, NPPF 155 states:

“Early and meaningful engagement and collaboration with neighbourhoods, local organisations and businesses is essential. [It is not clear that early collaboration with prospective developers is either required or legal]. A wide section of the community should be proactively engaged so that Local Plans, as far as possible, reflect a collective vision and a set of agreed priorities for the sustainable development of the area, including those contained in any neighbourhood plans that have been made”.

Local People are supposed to be represented within the NPPF, and any plan which does not meet with the consent of local people is arguably unsound. The failure to amend a plan following consultation, and to take the points made into account, is arguably in breach of NPPF and is therefore at risk of consequential challenge. A policy that is unsupported by the local community should be considered to be unsound.

It is arguable that GBC is arguing aggressively for a pro-development strategy in relation to villages and the Green Belt and mis-stating national policy as a result.

Many of the proposed “main town centre” uses would not be appropriate either to the Green Belt or villages within it - indoor bowling, casinos, warehouses etc. would not be appropriate for most villages in Surrey.

The provision and take up of reliable and high speed broadband, and the increased impact of home working and smart working are welcomed. Access to high speed broadband as a priority is welcomed and this is one of few aspects of the LEP’s policy that is welcomed in relation to the rural environment.

In this context, it seems entirely inappropriate that a monitoring indicator is net additional employment floorspace completed by category. “Smart” and home-working do not involve incremental floorspace and to evaluate incremental economic growth by the size of floorspace allocated is an inappropriate measure in the Green Belt. By definition such work uses do not require space. It is important to recognize – as this Local Plan does not – that the main employment within the countryside is related to that countryside, whether due to agriculture, tourism (so that “unproductive” or open space land has a positive economic impact too), film, or ancillary activities related to the above, and that to reduce the countryside footprint by building sites is to reduce economic land. The only use of land that has no ongoing positive impact for the community is to use it as a building site, whereupon it is lost in terms of ongoing economic benefit to all except the future owners.

NPPF 17 requires that local authorities “always seek to secure high quality design and a good standard of amenity for all existing and future occupants of land and buildings”, and that they “take account of the different roles and character of different areas, promoting the vitality of our main urban areas, protecting the Green Belts around them, recognizing the intrinsic character and beauty of the countryside and supporting thriving communities within it”. To appraise building within the Green Belt merely in terms of numbers of buildings or net additional floorspace does not meet the requirements of those principles.
The rural areas currently have a vibrant and strong economy, and building should not be regarded as a major objective. Existing agriculture, food production, tourism and film industries rely on our existing countryside, and to substitute these by building warehouses, commercial space or even processing space for ancillary agricultural processing will be to damage the environment for no economic gain. The loss of agricultural land is to be avoided; food security is an increasingly important factor in a congested island with an increasingly population based in the temperate zone so that it can supply food without climate stress; as noted by Cambridge University we will need more food producing land, not less, over the next few decades (see study attached to previous submission, disregarded).

Villages should be protected; new building in villages should be within the existing settlement boundaries, and new settlement boundaries should only reflect the historic changes of the settlement areas; building should not extend into the open countryside of the Green Belt; and new building should focus on brownfield sites within the urban areas.

I support the proposal for high speed broadband but are disappointed that the previous reference to this specifically “Provision and take-up of reliable and high speed broadband has been a major issue reported by rural businesses. Access to key services vital for economic growth is often poor in rural areas. Slow broadband and inadequate and slow mobile phone coverage are constraints to economic development” has now been modified to refer only to “provision of internet services where needed in rural areas and enhance digital inclusion in such areas”. This must be modified to read “provision of high speed internet services and reliable mobile phone coverage to all rural areas etc”. In the prior consultation, a matter that was warmly welcomed by most respondents has now been significantly weakened.

I agree that high speed broadband is a desirable attribute for the wider economy, and that this is particular lacking in the rural areas of Guildford. However, its introduction should lead to an increase in smart home-working, rather than the building of additional employment space. The policy needs to include a commitment to get super fast broadband accessible by all residents in the borough as this will provide much greater support to rural industry than anything else.

In this context, a monitoring indicator of “Number of sq m of B Class floorspace permitted and completed in rural wards” is fundamentally wrong; the indicator used for monitoring should be independent of land use, or this creates a perverse incentive to build on land. It should be related to real economic growth – for example, incremental corporation and personal tax income generated by businesses and individuals based within the borough.

Furthermore, as ever, the urban-guided planning philosophy also entirely fails to recognize the real phenomenon of rural employment. Some of this is genuine “smart” growth of the kind that the council ought to be promoting, and states that they are keen to encourage. Faster broadband, where it exists, is a genuinely useful tool which allows remote working for the highly educated populace. The University of Surrey generates a significant proportion of this highly skilled group. It also boasts about the highly skilled external population and the high calibre of local residents in its publicity material. The Surrey Hills AONB is proud to be classified by government as an “Elite Employment Enclave” where a high proportion of around 40% of households include a company director; such groups can often work flexibly. However, too much industrialization, commercialization and physical building in a rural environment will result in a change in the environment that attracts these flexible and affluent members of the community, and would result in these same groups moving to a more desirable and pleasant location. This would have a negative impact on the local economy. This consideration, while noted in public meetings in relation to the Surrey Hills by the Surrey Hills AONB board, has a general application to the borough as a whole.

In addition to smart-working among an educated group, and its economic upside, there is the fact that the rural area is founded on an agricultural framework that has persisted for two thousand years and is a viable, successful and profitable series of businesses. The land on which GBC proposes to build is viable and profitable agricultural land which supports existing businesses. Some of these are simple farms, producing food which our country needs. This should not be underestimated. The University of Cambridge has noted a significant decline in the UK’s food security or ability to feed itself – a significant factor in an era of increased climate change and global insecurity. This report, produced in conjunction with a number of other groups including CLA (Country Landowners’ Association), NFU (National Farmers’ Union), Sainsbury’s, Asda and Nestlé noted that the UK would require up to 7 million hectares more agricultural land to meet the country’s needs for food by 2030, roughly the period covered by the plan. To replace valuable and necessary agricultural land with storage depots or warehouses which will make the environment unpleasant for residents, destroy viable agricultural businesses, and that are likely to remain empty and unprofitable unless they undercut existing viable depots elsewhere, seems to benefit only those who build the depots.

While there is ostensible recognition of the importance of agriculture, this is subverted by suggesting that the provision of new and larger buildings is essential to agriculture and forestry. I would dispute this contention.

In addition to the essential business of food production, an increasing number of our farmers are engaged in high added value food processing and delivery, which is also an extremely profitable business and of growing local interest. This does not, however, necessitate large scale building. The Surrey Hills label is helpful in this regard, as is noted in the context of the policy. Silent Pool gin and sparkling wine, The Tillingbourne Trout Farm, the Kingfisher Watercress beds, the raising of beef, lamb, pork, and poultry in the Surrey Hills at Drydown Farm or Manor Farm; the Hog’s Back brewery, fruit grown throughout the borough and many other businesses are of enormous significance to the borough and should be encouraged. It will be harder to cultivate a label advertising premium quality organic food from the North Downs if Guildford becomes known principally as a storage or warehousing area.

Economic growth is indeed needed by the country. Some of that growth is perhaps needed in Surrey, although we already produce a disproportionate share of the national wealth and are the most densely populated rural county. Many would argue that this is not an appropriate destination for economic pump-priming and that areas which have more need of employment, (for example in the Black Country, the North West, the North East or Wales) would be better recipients of public finance to encourage economic growth. We don’t particularly want it; we don’t particularly need it; and we are trying to cope with the organic growth we have, we certainly don’t need to stimulate it further. The unelected and undemocratic M3 LEP has a stated agenda, evidenced by its minutes (subsequently expurgated), of actively influencing government policy in relation to housebuilding; and this is perhaps because house builders sit on the Land and Property Group of the M3 LEP. This constitutes an unacceptable conflict of interest.

The ability to generate wealth is not related to the size or number of warehouses built. This is unintelligent and old thinking – wealth is not related to the size of storage space. The monitoring of sq m of B class floorspace completed in rural wards is entirely inappropriate.

The Key Evidence summary notes that the evidence base includes the Guildford Borough Rural Economic Strategy which is yet to be published and therefore (by definition) cannot have informed this policy or the decisions which have been taken in order to arrive at it. To determine a policy on the basis of a non-existent evidence base, which is only provided (or indeed drafted) post hoc, must be legally indefensible.

The rural areas currently have a vibrant and strong economy, and building should not be regarded as a major objective. Existing agriculture, food production, tourism and film industries rely on our existing countryside, and to substitute these by building warehouses, commercial space or even processing space for ancillary agricultural processing will be to damage the environment for no economic gain. The loss of agricultural land is to be avoided; food security is an increasingly important factor in a congested island with an increasingly population based in the temperate zone so that it can supply food without climate stress; as noted by Cambridge University we will need more food producing land, not less, over the next few decades (see study attached to previous submission, disregarded).

Villages should be protected; new building in villages should be within the existing settlement boundaries, and new settlement boundaries should only reflect the historic changes of the settlement areas; building should not extend into the open countryside of the Green Belt; and new building should focus on brownfield sites within the urban areas.

We support the proposal for high speed broadband but are disappointed that the previous reference to this specifically “Provision and take-up of reliable and high speed broadband has been a major issue reported by rural businesses. Access to key services vital for economic growth is often poor in rural areas. Slow broadband and inadequate and slow mobile phone coverage are constraints to economic development” has now been modified to refer only to “provision of internet services where needed in rural areas and enhance digital inclusion in such areas”. This must be modified to read “provision of high speed internet services and reliable mobile phone coverage to all rural areas etc”. In the prior consultation, a matter that was warmly welcomed by most respondents has now been significantly weakened.

We agree that high speed broadband is a desirable attribute for the wider economy, and that this is particular lacking in the rural areas of Guildford. However, its introduction should lead to an increase in smart home-working, rather than the building of additional employment space. The policy needs to include a commitment to get superfast broadband accessible by all residents in the borough as this will provide much greater support to rural industry than anything else.

In this context, a monitoring indicator of “Number of sq m of B Class floorspace permitted and completed in rural wards” is fundamentally wrong; the indicator used for monitoring should be independent of land use, or this creates a perverse incentive to build on land. It should be related to real economic growth – for example, incremental corporation and personal tax income generated by businesses and individuals based within the borough.

Furthermore, as ever, the urban-guided planning philosophy also entirely fails to recognize the real phenomenon of rural employment. Some of this is genuine “smart” growth of the kind that the council ought to be promoting, and states that they are keen to encourage. Faster broadband, where it exists, is a genuinely useful tool which allows remote working for the highly educated populace. The University of Surrey generates a significant proportion of this highly skilled group. It also boasts about the highly skilled external population and the high calibre of local residents in its publicity material. The Surrey Hills AONB is proud to be classified by government as an “Elite Employment Enclave” where a high proportion of around 40% of households include a company director; such groups can often work flexibly. However, too much industrialization, commercialization and physical building in a rural environment will result in a change in the environment that attracts these flexible and affluent members of the community, and would result in these same groups moving to a more desirable and pleasant location. This would have a negative impact on the local economy. This consideration, while noted in public meetings in relation to the Surrey Hills by the Surrey Hills AONB board, has a general application to the borough as a whole.
In addition to smart-working among an educated group, and its economic upside, there is the fact that the rural area is founded on an agricultural framework that has persisted for two thousand years and is a viable, successful and profitable series of businesses. The land on which GBC proposes to build is viable and profitable agricultural land which supports existing businesses. Some of these are simple farms, producing food which our country needs. This should not be underestimated. The University of Cambridge has noted a significant decline in the UK’s food security or ability to feed itself – a significant factor in an era of increased climate change and global insecurity. This report, produced in conjunction with a number of other groups including CLA (Country Landowners’ Association), NFU (National Farmers’ Union), Sainsbury’s, Asda and Nestlé noted that the UK would require up to 7 million hectares more agricultural land to meet the country’s needs for food by 2030, roughly the period covered by the plan. To replace valuable and necessary agricultural land with storage depots or warehouses which will make the environment unpleasant for residents, destroy viable agricultural businesses, and that are likely to remain empty and unprofitable unless they undercut existing viable depots elsewhere, seems to benefit only those who build the depots.

While there is ostensible recognition of the importance of agriculture, this is subverted by suggesting that the provision of new and larger buildings is essential to agriculture and forestry. We would dispute this contention.

In addition to the essential business of food production, an increasing number of our farmers are engaged in high added value food processing and delivery, which is also an extremely profitable business and of growing local interest. This does not, however, necessitate large scale building. The Surrey Hills label is helpful in this regard, as is noted in the context of the policy. Silent Pool gin and sparkling wine, The Tillingbourne Trout Farm, the Kingfisher Watercress beds, the raising of beef, lamb, pork, and poultry in the Surrey Hills at Drydown Farm or Manor Farm; the Hog’s Back brewery, fruit grown throughout the borough and many other businesses are of enormous significance to the borough and should be encouraged. It will be harder to cultivate a label advertising premium quality organic food from the North Downs if Guildford becomes known principally as a storage or warehousing area.

Economic growth is indeed needed by the country. Some of that growth is perhaps needed in Surrey, although we already produce a disproportionate share of the national wealth and are the most densely populated rural county. Many would argue that this is not an appropriate destination for economic pump-priming and that areas which have more need of employment, (for example in the Black Country, the North West, the North East or Wales) would be better recipients of public finance to encourage economic growth. We don’t particularly want it; we don’t particularly need it; and we are trying to cope with the organic growth we have, we certainly don’t need to stimulate it further. The unelected and undemocratic M3LEP has a stated agenda, evidenced by its minutes (subsequently expurgated), of actively influencing government policy in relation to housebuilding; and this is perhaps because housebuilders sit on the Land and Property Group of the M3 LEP. This constitutes an unacceptable conflict of interest.

The ability to generate wealth is not related to the size or number of warehouses built. This is unintelligent and old thinking – wealth is not related to the size of storage space. The monitoring of sq m of B class floorspace completed in rural wards is entirely inappropriate.

The Key Evidence summary notes that the evidence base includes the Guildford Borough Rural Economic Strategy which is yet to be published and therefore (by definition) cannot have informed this policy or the decisions which have been taken in order to arrive at it. To determine a policy on the basis of a non-existent evidence base, which is only provided (or indeed drafted) post hoc, must be legally indefensible.

I OBJECT to the loss of rural employment (Policy E5)

Policy E5 supports the retention and development of local services and community facilities in our inset and identified villages. Yet the development at Garlick’s Arch (A43) would result in the loss of four existing successful rural businesses, which have been in existence for over 30 years and another two businesses for over 9 years. These businesses employ dozens of people; none of them want to leave their premises. The Plan does not promote rural employment; rather it will result in the loss of existing local rural businesses.

E5 Rural Economy

I object to the fact that localism is being ignored.

Villages need to be protected from inappropriate development, not swamped with semi-urban housing estates as GBC proposes.
The Rural character of many villages will be lost; especially West Horsley.

The building of the new Theatre in the Woods (Opera House) and the accompanying Arts Centre in the adjoining barns and outbuildings at West Horsley Place, will rely for its success on bringing tourists and visitors from far and wide, who will not appreciate its position in a village full of ticky-tacky, over-dense housing estates

I much welcome the new statement in this Policy (para 3) that "Agricultural land will be protected as set out in national policy and the economic and other benefits of the best and most versatile agricultural land will be taken into account." Previous versions of the Plan have not sufficiently acknowledged the importance of agriculture in an age when the UK needs to become more self-sufficient in food production and reduce the harmful environmental effects of 'food miles'.

POLICY E5 - Rural economy

I OBJECT. Use of rural areas for town centre uses without applying the sequential approach is against the principles of localism that require local people to be consulted and heeded, not ignored. Villages need protecting in terms of both design and scale.

Most of the economic activities listed in 4.4.44 depend on maintaining the rural character of our villages which would be endangered by the wholesale “insetting”, boundary expansion and house building proposed in other parts of the plan. This applies also to new and projected enterprises in the Green Belt (e.g. Grange Park Opera’s Theatre in the Woods in West Horsley, which requires a protected, rustic setting to be a success, not housing estates and congested roads). Policy E5 is incompatible with the high housing numbers proposed.

Previous commitments to improved high-speed broadband and mobile phone coverage have now been diluted, despite general support. This disregards the responses from the 2014 public consultation.

This policy should only apply to small-scale development in rural areas i.e. less than 100 sq m which is in keeping with and the permanence and amenity of the green belt. The policy needs to protect villages from overdevelopment and include good design, especially in light of insetting proposals.

I support the addition of policy E5 (3), which states that “Agricultural land will be protected as set out in national policy and the economic and other benefits of the best and most versatile agricultural land will be taken into account.” However, this policy has not been applied in the Plan, and the true extent of agricultural land classifications 2 and 3a has not been accurately disclosed.

Blackwell Farm (policy A26) has both land classifications 2 and 3a (Figure 8) and yet there is no mention of its existence or extent in the Plan or accompanying evidence base. Furthermore, the site assessment criteria devised for agricultural land assessment do not mirror NPPF definitions of best and most versatile land and in their current form and application to sites do not reflect the true proportion of each grade within sites. It is unsound to present inaccurate and misleading information in documentation released for public consultation.

Any business development in rural areas must be limited to businesses with maximum 100 m2 floor space such as high tech businesses and be confined within the current village boundaries. High speed broadband should be made available to these sites. It is important to continue to support all forms of agricultural business.

I OBJECT to the loss of rural employment (Policy E5)

Policy E5 supports the retention and development of local services and community facilities in our inset and identified villages. Yet the development at Garlick’s Arch (A43) would result in the loss of four existing successful rural businesses, which have been in existence for over 30 years and another two businesses for over 9 years. These businesses employ dozens of people; none of them want to leave their premises. The Plan does not promote rural employment; rather it will result in the loss of existing local rural businesses.

POLICY E5 - Rural economy
I OBJECT. Use of rural areas for town centre uses without applying the sequential approach is against the principles of localism that require local people to be consulted and heeded, not ignored. Villages need protecting in terms of both design and scale.

Most of the economic activities listed in 4.4.44 depend on maintaining the rural character of our villages which would be endangered by the wholesale “inserting”, boundary expansion and house building proposed in other parts of the plan. This applies also to new and projected enterprises in the Green Belt (e.g. Grange Park Opera’s Theatre in the Woods in West Horsley, which requires a protected, rustic setting to be a success, not housing estates and congested roads). Policy E5 is incompatible with the high housing numbers proposed.

Previous commitments to improved high-speed broadband and mobile phone coverage have now been diluted, despite general support. This disregards the responses from the 2014 public consultation.

6. I Object to the omission of any qualification at the end of Policy E5 - Rural Economy that small scale rural offices and small scale rural development should accord with other policies in the plan. The supporting text to the policy should include reference to rural employment development only being acceptable where:

- it would support local community facilities or,
- it would assist the wellbeing of local communities or
- it would support the continued viability of the agricultural landscape, and
- where unacceptable additional traffic on unsuitable rural lanes would not be generated, and
- the landscape and scenic beauty of the AONB would be respected.

7. Objection 6 - AONB/AGLV rural economy considerations:

Surrey Hills AONB Management Plan 2014-2019 Policy LU4 includes development assisting the economic and social well being of residents. It reads as follows:

“Policy LU4 - Proposals that would assist in the continuation of direct agricultural and forestry businesses or benefit the social and economic well being of residents, including small scale affordable housing, will be supported, providing they do not conflict with the aim of conserving and enhancing the natural beauty of the landscape.”

The last sentence in Policy E5 – Rural Economy states without any qualification “the sequential approach will not be applied to applications for small scale rural offices or other small scale rural development.”
Just as the first bullet point in the policy includes a qualification so it is asked that the words “provided they accord with other policies in the plan” be added to this last sentence.

It will be for the Council and Inspector to consider the approach to be taken to development associated with the rural economy outside the AONB/AGLV. However, a section along the following lines would be applicable to the AONB/AGLV and could be adapted to take into account other rural areas as well. Consequently, the supporting text to Local Plan Policy E5 on the Rural Economy should include the following.

“In considering whether employment generating development might assist the rural economy in the AONB/AGLV account will be given to the degree to which the development would contribute towards supporting local community facilities and the continued viability of the agricultural landscape. New employment not assisting the well being of local communities but generating jobs likely to be occupied by those needing to commute by private car and along unsuitable rural lanes, will be avoided. Employment generating development that would not conserve landscape and scenic beauty will not be permitted.”

Use of rural areas for town centre uses without applying the sequential approach is against the principles of localism which mean that local people should be consulted. Villages need protecting both in terms of design and in terms of scale.

Use of rural areas for town centre uses without applying the sequential approach is against the principles of localism that require local people to be consulted and heeded, not ignored. Villages need protecting in terms of both design and scale and character.

Previous commitments to improved high-speed broadband and mobile phone coverage have now been diluted, despite general support. This disregards the responses from the 2014 public consultation.

The consultation process was not well publicized; many Parish Councils had no idea of this. The emphasis on voluntary efforts and greater community efforts is far removed from reality for this ‘solution’ was presented for almost every aspect of rural life from managing crime to looking after elderly to education and more besides. Villages by nature are usually small and the percentage of the population who are able to do voluntary work is smaller still. The solution is therefore unworkable. The results of the consultation were not publicized but were instead collated and summarized and bore no resemblance to the submissions I had sight of.

This policy should only apply to small-scale development in rural areas which means development of less than 100 sq m (gross) which is in keeping with and the permanence and amenity of the green belt.

Use of rural areas for town centre uses without applying the sequential approach is against the principles of localism which mean that local people should be consulted – and heeded (not ignored!). Villages need protecting both in terms of design and in terms of scale.

Previous commitments to improved high-speed broadband and mobile phone coverage have now been diluted, despite general support. This is disregarding the responses from the previous consultation.

It should be noted that the NPPF “provides a framework within which local people and their accountable councils can produce their own distinctive local and neighbourhood plans which reflect the needs and priorities of their communities.” (NPPF 1).

Guildford becoming a Growth Hub was NOT in the election manifesto. This policy was mentioned only tangentially in the corporate plan. Given Guildford’s poor transport links, noted congestion and the problems that this is perceived to cause for existing businesses, this does not seem an appropriate decision.

This radical, unsupported policy change is apparently in order to generate "growth" - although the possibility is that too much building over the areas that make Guildford Borough attractive will actually generate damage and stagnation, and cause a net decline in local affluence and growth. This risk has been highlighted by some local business leaders in the press.

In addition to NPPF 1, the Core Planning Principles set out in NPPF 17 include, as the FIRST (and therefore most important) principle, that “planning should:

- Be genuinely plan-led, empowering local people to shape their surroundings, with succinct local and neighbourhood plans setting out a positive vision for the future of the area”.

Furthermore, if this were not enough, in the section on Plan-making, NPPF 155 states:

“Early and meaningful engagement and collaboration with neighbourhoods, local organisations and businesses is essential. [It is not clear that early collaboration with prospective developers is either required or legal]. A wide section of the community should be proactively engaged so that Local Plans, as far as possible, reflect a collective vision and a set of agreed priorities for the sustainable development of the area, including those contained in any neighbourhood plans that have been made”.

Local People are supposed to be represented within the NPPF, and any plan which does not meet with the consent of local people is arguably unsound. The failure to amend a plan following consultation, and to take the points made into account, is arguably in breach of NPPF and is therefore at risk of consequential challenge. A policy that is unsupported by the local community should be considered to be unsound.

It is arguable that GBC is arguing aggressively for a pro-development strategy in relation to villages and the Green Belt and mis-stating national policy as a result.

Many of the proposed “main town centre” uses would not be appropriate either to the Green Belt or villages within it - indoor bowling, casinos, warehouses etc. would not be appropriate for most villages in Surrey.
The provision and take up of reliable and high speed broadband, and the increased impact of home working and smart working are welcomed. Access to high speed broadband as a priority is welcomed and this is one of few aspects of the LEP’s policy that is welcomed in relation to the rural environment.

In this context, it seems entirely inappropriate that a monitoring indicator is net additional employment floorspace completed by category. “Smart” and home-working do not involve incremental floorspace and to evaluate incremental economic growth by the size of floorspace allocated is an inappropriate measure in the Green Belt. By definition such work uses do not require space. It is important to recognize – as this Local Plan does not – that the main employment within the countryside is related to that countryside, whether due to agriculture, tourism (so that “unproductive” or open space land has a positive economic impact too), film, or ancillary activities related to the above, and that to reduce the countryside footprint by building sites is to reduce economic land. The only use of land that has no ongoing positive impact for the community is to use it as a building site, whereupon it is lost in terms of ongoing economic benefit to all except the future owners.

NPPF 17 requires that local authorities “always seek to secure high quality design and a good standard of amenity for all existing and future occupants of land and buildings”, and that they “take account of the different roles and character of different areas, promoting the vitality of our main urban areas, protecting the Green Belts around them, recognizing the intrinsic character and beauty of the countryside and supporting thriving communities within it”. To appraise building within the Green Belt merely in terms of numbers of buildings or net additional floorspace does not meet the requirements of those principles.

The rural areas currently have a vibrant and strong economy, and building should not be regarded as a major objective. Existing agriculture, food production, tourism and film industries rely on our existing countryside, and to substitute these by building warehouses, commercial space or even processing space for ancillary agricultural processing will be to damage the environment for no economic gain. The loss of agricultural land is to be avoided; food security is an increasingly important factor in a congested island with an increasingly population based in the temperate zone so that it can supply food without climate stress; as noted by Cambridge University we will need more food producing land, not less, over the next few decades (see study attached to previous submission, disregarded).

Villages should be protected; new building in villages should be within the existing settlement boundaries, and new settlement boundaries should only reflect the historic changes of the settlement areas; building should not extend into the open countryside of the Green Belt; and new building should focus on brownfield sites within the urban areas.

We support the proposal for high speed broadband but are disappointed that the previous reference to this specifically “Provision and take-up of reliable and high speed broadband has been a major issue reported by rural businesses. Access to key services vital for economic growth is often poor in rural areas. Slow broadband and inadequate and slow mobile phone coverage are constraints to economic development” has now been modified to refer only to “provision of internet services where needed in rural areas and enhance digital inclusion in such areas”. This must be modified to read “provision of high speed internet services and reliable mobile phone coverage to all rural areas etc”. In the prior consultation, a matter that was warmly welcomed by most respondents has now been significantly weakened.

We agree that high speed broadband is a desirable attribute for the wider economy, and that this is particular lacking in the rural areas of Guildford. However, its introduction should lead to an increase in smart home-working, rather than the building of additional employment space. The policy needs to include a commitment to get superfast broadband accessible by all residents in the borough as this will provide much greater support to rural industry than anything else.

In this context, a monitoring indicator of “Number of sq m of B Class floorspace permitted and completed in rural wards” is fundamentally wrong; the indicator used for monitoring should be independent of land use, or this creates a perverse incentive to build on land. It should be related to real economic growth – for example, incremental corporation and personal tax income generated by businesses and individuals based within the borough.
Furthermore, as ever, the urban-guided planning philosophy also entirely fails to recognize the real phenomenon of rural employment. Some of this is genuine “smart” growth of the kind that the council ought to be promoting, and states that they are keen to encourage. Faster broadband, where it exists, is a genuinely useful tool which allows remote working for the highly educated populace. The University of Surrey generates a significant proportion of this highly skilled group. It also boasts about the highly skilled external population and the high calibre of local residents in its publicity material. The Surrey Hills AONB is proud to be classified as an “Elite Employment Enclave” where a high proportion of around 40% of households include a company director; such groups can often work flexibly. However, too much industrialization, commercialization and physical building in a rural environment will result in a change in the environment that attracts these flexible and affluent members of the community, and would result in these same groups moving to a more desirable and pleasant location. This would have a negative impact on the local economy. This consideration, while noted in public meetings in relation to the Surrey Hills by the Surrey Hills AONB board, has a general application to the borough as a whole.

In addition to the essential business of food production, an increasing number of our farmers are engaged in high added value food processing and delivery, which is also an extremely profitable business and of growing local interest. This is particularly true for the production of premium quality organic food. Some of these are simple farms, producing food which our country needs. This should not be underestimated. The University of Cambridge has noted a significant decline in the UK’s food security or ability to feed itself – a significant factor in an era of increased climate change and global insecurity. This report, produced in conjunction with a number of other groups including CLA (Country Landowners’ Association), NFU (National Farmers’ Union), Sainsbury’s, Asda and Nestlé noted that the UK would require up to 7 million hectares more agricultural land to meet the country’s needs for food by 2030, roughly the period covered by the plan. To replace valuable and necessary agricultural land with storage depots or warehouses which will make the environment unpleasant for residents, destroy viable agricultural businesses, and that are likely to remain empty and unprofitable unless they undercut existing viable depots elsewhere, seems to benefit only those who build the depots.

While there is ostensible recognition of the importance of agriculture, this is subverted by suggesting that the provision of new and larger buildings is essential to agriculture and forestry. We would dispute this contention.

In addition to smart-working among an educated group, and its economic upside, there is the fact that the rural area is founded on an agricultural framework that has persisted for two thousand years and is a viable, successful and profitable series of businesses. The land on which GBC proposes to build is viable and profitable agricultural land which supports existing businesses. Some of these are simple farms, producing food which our country needs. This should not be underestimated. The University of Cambridge has noted a significant decline in the UK’s food security or ability to feed itself – a significant factor in an era of increased climate change and global insecurity. This report, produced in conjunction with a number of other groups including CLA (Country Landowners’ Association), NFU (National Farmers’ Union), Sainsbury’s, Asda and Nestlé noted that the UK would require up to 7 million hectares more agricultural land to meet the country’s needs for food by 2030, roughly the period covered by the plan. Economic growth is indeed needed by the country. Some of that growth is perhaps needed in Surrey, although we already produce a disproportionate share of the national wealth and are the most densely populated rural county. Many would argue that this is not an appropriate destination for economic pump-priming and that areas which have more need of employment, (for example in the Black Country, the North West, the North East or Wales) would be better recipients of public finance to encourage economic growth. We don’t particularly want it; we don’t particularly need it; and we are trying to cope with the organic growth we have, we certainly don’t need to stimulate it further. The unelected and undemocratic M3LEP has a stated agenda, evidenced by its minutes (subsequently expurgated), of actively influencing government policy in relation to housebuilding; and this is perhaps because housebuilders sit on the Land and Property Group of the M3 LEP. This constitutes an unacceptable conflict of interest.

The ability to generate wealth is not related to the size or number of warehouses built. This is unintelligent and old thinking – wealth is not related to the size of storage space. The monitoring of sq m of B class floorspace completed in rural wards is entirely inappropriate.

The Key Evidence summary notes that the evidence base includes the Guildford Borough Rural Economic Strategy which is yet to be published and therefore (by definition) cannot have informed this policy or the decisions which have been taken in order to arrive at it. To determine a policy on the basis of a non-existent evidence base, which is only provided (or indeed drafted) post hoc, must be legally indefensible.

This policy should only apply to small-scale development in rural areas which means development of less than 100 sq m (gross) which is in keeping with and the permanence and amenity of the green belt.

Use of rural areas for town centre uses without applying the sequential approach is against the principles of localism which mean that local people should be consulted – and heeded (not ignored!). Villages need protecting both in terms of design and in terms of scale.

Previous commitments to improved high-speed broadband and mobile phone coverage have now been diluted, despite general support. This is disregarding the responses from the previous consultation.
It should be noted that the NPPF “provides a framework within which local people and their accountable councils can produce their own distinctive local and neighbourhood plans which reflect the needs and priorities of their communities.” (NPPF 1).

Guildford becoming a Growth Hub was NOT in the election manifesto. This policy was mentioned only tangentially in the corporate plan. Given Guildford’s poor transport links, noted congestion and the problems that this is perceived to cause for existing businesses, this does not seem an appropriate decision.

This radical, unsupported policy change is apparently in order to generate “growth” - although the possibility is that too much building over the areas that make Guildford Borough attractive will actually generate damage and stagnation, and cause a net decline in local affluence and growth. This risk has been highlighted by some local business leaders in the press.

In addition to NPPF 1, the Core Planning Principles set out in NPPF 17 include, as the FIRST (and therefore most important) principle, that “planning should:

- Be genuinely plan-led, empowering local people to shape their surroundings, with succinct local and neighbourhood plans setting out a positive vision for the future of the area”.

Furthermore, if this were not enough, in the section on Plan-making, NPPF 155 states:

“Early and meaningful engagement and collaboration with neighbourhoods, local organisations and businesses is essential. [It is not clear that early collaboration with prospective developers is either required or legal]. A wide section of the community should be proactively engaged so that Local Plans, as far as possible, reflect a collective vision and a set of agreed priorities for the sustainable development of the area, including those contained in any neighbourhood plans that have been made”.

Local People are supposed to be represented within the NPPF, and any plan which does not meet with the consent of local people is arguably unsound. The failure to amend a plan following consultation, and to take the points made into account, is arguably in breach of NPPF and is therefore at risk of consequential challenge. A policy that is unsupported by the local community should be considered to be unsound.

It is arguable that GBC is arguing aggressively for a pro-development strategy in relation to villages and the Green Belt and mis-stating national policy as a result.

In addition to the essential business of food production, an increasing number of our farmers are engaged in high added value food processing and delivery, which is also an extremely profitable business and of growing local interest. This does not, however, necessitate large scale building. The Surrey Hills label is helpful in this regard, as is noted in the context of the policy. Silent Pool gin and sparkling wine, The Tillingbourne Trout Farm, the Kingfisher Watercress beds, the raising of beef, lamb, pork, and poultry in the Surrey Hills at Drydown Farm or Manor Farm; the Hog’s Back brewery, fruit grown throughout the borough and many other businesses are of enormous significance to the borough and should be encouraged. It will be harder to cultivate a label advertising premium quality organic food from the North Downs if Guildford becomes known principally as a storage or warehousing area.

Economic growth is indeed needed by the country. Some of that growth is perhaps needed in Surrey, although we already produce a disproportionate share of the national wealth and are the most densely populated rural county. Policy E5 supports the retention and development of local services and community facilities in our inset and identified villages. Yet the development at Garlick’s Arch (A43) would result in the loss of four existing successful rural businesses, which have been in existence for over 30 years and another two businesses for over 9 years. These businesses employ dozens of people; none of them want to leave their premises. The Plan does not promote rural employment; rather it will result in the loss of existing local rural businesses.
